ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Cnoference of the Woman's Missionary Society met in Boyce on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1, with Mrs. T. W. Hardee presiding. Mrs. M. N. James, of Boyce, gave the welcome address, with Mrs. T. W. Hardee responding. The devotional was given by Mrs. R. C. Kirkpatrick, and a beautiful interpretation was made. The roll was called and the following charges were represented: Alexandria, First Church Adults; Alexandria Gleaners; Alco, Boyce, Elizabeth, Kurthwood, Marthaville, Natchitoches, Oakdale, Pleasant Hill, Pineville, White Chapel.

Miss Bradt, of Alexandria, gave a splendid report from the State meeting that was held in Mansfield. Brother Thomason, pastor at Boyce, was introduced and gave the ladies a cordial welcome to their town. Mrs. O. E. Grant, of Boyce, gave a most wonderful report on the Council meeting that was held in Shreveport in March.

After the morning service the Boyce ladies served a delicious dinner.

Brother C. C. Wier, presiding elder, led the devotional of the afternoon meeting.

The zone work was then presented in a clear and forceful way by Mrs. T. L. Owen, of Alexandria. Mrs. T. W. Hardee explained the Gibson Circle, and quite an interesting discussion of the same followed.

The bill for souvenirs that were used at the Council meeting was discussed, and it was moved that each auxiliary in the district take their share of the same and in that way the $24.50 could be raised very easily. Mmes. Fontaine, Brunson and James were appointed to have charge of same.

Mrs. Brunson, of Natchitoches, gave an interesting paper on "What the Woman's Missionary Society Means to the Church."

The following auxiliaries made interesting reports of the work done this year: Adults and Gleaners of Alexandria; Adults of Boyce; Marthaville, Natchitoches, Oakdale, Pineville, Pleasant Hill, White Chapel, and Elizabeth.

The Young People's work was discussed by Mrs. Kirkpatrick, of Boyce, and Mrs. T. L. Owen, of Alexandria. Mrs. Powers, of Alexandria, spoke on and explained the work of the hospital woman.

Thursday Morning Session, Sept. 1.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. T. W. Hardee. After a song service Mrs. Harper, of Cheneyville, led the devotional. Miss Emma Hickman, of Alexandria, sang a beautiful solo. Mrs. Dees, District Secretary, of Lake Charles District, gave a splendid talk, stressing the importance of reports, social service, mission study, etc. Mrs. Cain and Mrs. Bennett, of De Ridder, gave heart-searching talks on the Young People's work, bringing home to us the importance of training in youth.

Mrs. Hardee thanked the ladies of Boyce for their hospitality during the district conference. Natchitoches and Oakdale both asked for the district conference for next year. Natchitoches was chosen as our next place.

Mrs. Brunson, chairman of the souvenir committee, said that the committee had taxed each auxiliary $1.25, asking that it be sent to Mrs. Hardee this quarter.

A delicious lunch was again served at the close of the morning session.

At the afternoon session, Cheneyville gave their auxiliary report of the work done this year; also of their zone meeting. Miss Emma Hickman read a history of the Gleaners of Alexandria, which was fine. Mrs. James, of Boyce, was appointed to write a history of Alexandria District. Mrs. Owen, State Superintendent of Children's Work, was introduced and showed and explained a chart on the children's work.

Mrs. McKenzie, of Cheneyville, then sang, "Lord, Speak to Me," and Mrs. Cain dismissed the conference with a prayer.

MRS. C. D. ATKINSON,
Secretary.

FROM HIGH POINT, MISS.

We are about to come to the close of our first year on the High Point charge, of the Columbus District. We have had a very pleasant year, considering everything.

We began our revival at High Point the second Sunday in July with an all-day program, brought to us by our efficient District Lay Leader of Ackerman and his co-workers of the laity.

Outline of the program:

Devotional.

1. "The One Task of the Church."
2. "The Laymen's Responsibility to the Sunday School and Prayer Meeting."
3. "The Need of Laborers in Christ's Vineyard."
4. "The Laymen's Work As Related to Winning Souls."
5. "The Laymen's Duty and Responsibility to the Benevolences of the Church."
6. How We May Rebuild the Home Altar and Its Value."

This program was a great treat to all who came out, and a good start to our meeting. Brother Guy D. Burt preached for us in our meeting here. We also had Brother E. M. Sharp to teach a Cokesbury Training School. We had eleven taking the course and eleven credits awarded.

On the fifth Sunday in July, we began a five weeks' campaign, starting out at Owen's Chapel, with Brother S. W. Hemphill preaching and Miss Thelma McKeithen teaching a Cokesbury training school and playing the organ for use in the meeting. Only three credits were awarded here.

From here we went to Center Ridge, with Brother T. H. Lipscomb helping us. Then we went to Macedonia, with our local preacher, Brother J. A. Hall, helping us. Then we went to White Hall, with Brother C. A. Northington with us. Then we went to Rural Hill, with Brother W. C. McKey.

We had good meetings, good preaching, and twenty-three additions on profession of faith.

Our finances are badly behind, but the people seem hopeful since Providence has favored with good cotton prices.

C. M. RAY, P. C.

FROM PLEASANT HILL, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Will write you a few lines to let you know we are having a great year at Pleasant Hill.

We are spending our third year on the work, and it has been the happiest and in many ways the most prosperous of the three.

The storm passing near our town in the early part of the year caused much sorrow and destitution.

The flood situation, reaching very near us, affected the work some, but in all of these conditions the people responded liberally and received a good crop, and a good price as an added blessing.

Every department of our church at all points has made progress. We have good Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, prayer meetings, Missionary Societies doing excellent work.

Rev. B. L. Sutherland, of the Mississippi Conference, assisted me in revivals at Robeline and Marthaville.

These meetings were both great successes. The people came from all points, crowding the church at Robeline and the great tabernacle at Marthaville.

Brother Sutherland won his way into the hearts of the people with his masterful sermons, and his Spirit-filled life.

The churches were greatly strengthened spiritually, and there were twelve additions to the membership.

Rev. Dan E. Kelly, with Brother Otis Spinks, assisted in the revival at Pleasant Hill. This meeting was conducted in a large tent in the midst of the town. People from the countryside and other towns who had heard Brother Kelly before thronged the grounds, and we could never seat them all.

We have heard Uncle Dan preach all our life; but we have never heard him do such preaching as he did in this meeting.

The power was felt from the first service, increasing continually, with a regular Pentecost resulting on last Sunday, at the morning service, a great love feast in the afternoon, a crowd of at laast fifteen hundred Sunday night. There were eighty additions to the two churches—sixty to the Methodist and twenty to the Baptist.

We set our goal for 100 members, and have gone over the top. Hope to report everything in full at Conference.

D. F. ANDERS.

FROM MERRYVILLE, LA.

We held Sunday School Day by having a program given by the scholars, and a dinner on the ground, which was a great success. Promotion Day and Children's Week have been planned.

Our Senior Epworth League, that now numbers forty members, gave a welcome party to the entire teaching staff of the High School last Friday It was held in the parsonage. Over fifty guests were there. The local paper's account of it said it was the crowning event of the year.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held last Sunday night. There was a report from every department of the church. The presiding elder had a large congregation and preached a powerful sermon. He was accompanied by Mrs. Doss, and they both were delighted with the wonderful improvements made in the parsonage—it is beauitful and comfortable.

As is usual with a lumber mill town, many families come and go, yet the church attendance was never better, and the prospect of winding up the year seems good.

F. B. HILL.

WHICH IS YOUR CLASS?

Do you belong to the jawbone class,
the class of folks who talk About the many things they'll do, the paths of fame they'll walk,
Who boast about their conquered worlds and deeds right nobly done,
While yet their efforts end with words, no task is e'er begun?

Do you belong to the wishbone class,
the class of folks who long
That wealth and fame might flow to them for just a little song,
Who wish that ease would be their lot and praise their fortune, too,
While all the while they nod and smile and naught but nothing do?

Do you belong to the backbone class,
the class of folks who work
From early morn till late at night and never duty shirk,
Who dig right in and fight their way toward the grand success
That waits ahead for folks who give and always do their best?

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

In our exhibit of items that show the progress we are making in giving religious instruction, training in worship, and service, we would like to have a clear picture of all the new buildings, pictures of classes that have done notable work, classes of teachers, hand-work by pupils, etc. We shall collect all these we can, but will need the help of many we can not visit. This exhibit will be arranged by districts, so it can be seen what progress has been made.

The new interpretation of the Program of Work has been sent to a number of pastors and superintendents, that we may see where the different schools stand. If your school is not represented in this exhibit you will have no one to blame except yourself. We want as large a number as possible—the larger, the more interesting.

We shall be busy checking up schools until the session of the Annual Conference. In checking up we find that all the schools are paying more attention to the worship services, are more interested in reading approved books, and in making surveys. In some instances we find that the Sunday schools are paying for coal, paying for the services of the janitor, and other incidentals that should be cared for by the stewards of the church. To be plain, the children are supporting their parents.

Three months since we taught a class of teachers at Bethel, on the Sardis circuit. The attendance up to the time this class was taught was around forty, who attended irregularly. Since the class was taught the attendance is eighty. By the time these teachers take training in two more courses they will have not less than two hundred in this school. The hope of the rural church is in training local leaders to that extent and in sufficient numbers that they may be able to teach all the people the way of righteous living. The right kind of religious education given to a sufficient number of men and women will settle any kind of problem, rural or urban.

Recently we have checked up Sardis, Ruleville, Doddsville, and Sunflower. All these schools have made progress during the year and are preparing to do more extensive work another year. From present indications a larger number of schools will observe Children's Week than usual. We have sent literature to fifty-two schools. After Promotion Day, then comes the installation of officers and teachers. You will find two excellent installation services in the October number of the Workers' Council. If you do not receive that magazine, send for sample copies and give it a trial. You often judge a workman by the kind of tools he uses. What kind of tools are you using?

"What is Religious Education?" by William Myers, price 85 cents, to be had of Lamar & Whitmore, Nashville, Tenn., is a book you might put into the hands of every Sunday school superintendent with the assurance of furnishing him with material that will make him put a larger estimate upon his task. Give the book a trial.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By C. D. Atkinson.

Our week-end trip included visits to Leesville and Natchitoches, with short stops en route at Many and Robeline. At Leesville I visited the Sunday school and preached at the 11 o'clock hour. Both services were well attended and the interest was fine.

At 3 o'clock a sub-district meeting was held with a splendid attendance of Sunday school leaders. The meeting was organized with Mr. J. H. Cain as chairman; Prof. Smith, vice chairman; Mr. George Ferguson, Jr., secretary; Mr. R. J. O'Neal, treasurer. The presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., and the District Secretary, Mr. A. M. Mayo, were both present, with several others from Lake Charles. The meeting was splendidly handled, and the date set for the next meeting to be held on Nov. 20.

Leaving Leesville at 3:50 p. m., we made short stops at Many and Robeline. At Many we had a nice visit with Dr. J. M. Middleton, former Sunday school superintendent, who is ill suffering with rheumatism. From Robeline we had the pleasure of driving to Natchitoches with Craff Caldwell, who kindly offered his services in this connection, and enjoyed both the drive and the visit with this fine young chap, a grandson of Mr. J. H. Caldwell, a layman of Robeline noted for his hospitality to ministers.

We reached Natchitoches in time for the opening of the Standard Training School. Although the attendance at this school is not as large as it has been in the past, the spirit was fine and the type of work being accomplished is most excellent. Tuesday night we attended a meeting of the Board of Managers. This is the third Standard Training School in the Alexandria District this year, and is the largest of the three, with several young ladies from the Normal College taking courses, and Campti and Pleasant Hill charges co-operating. The pastors of both the co-operating charges, Brother P. O. Lowrey and Brother D. F. Anders, are taking courses.

"Something new under the sun" was a district conference held in September. This happened in the Monroe District on last Tuesday, at Delhi. This delay was brought about by reason of the flood conditions in the spring. Leaving Natchitoches at 4 o'clock in the morning, the writer reached Delhi in time to hear the 11 o'clock message delivered by Dr. Monk, of Monroe. A fine dinner was served at noon by the ladies of the Delhi church, and at 1 o'clock in the afternoon we met with the Sunday school committee. The followig officers were elected to serve the district: Superintendent, S. M. Collins; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. C. W. Scates; Adolescent Superintendent, Mrs. J. A. Alford; Adult Superintendent, Rev. S. W. B. Colvin; Missions, Mrs. C. L. Barmore; Parent-Teacher, Mrs. N. E. Joyner; Teacher Training, Dr. Marion Monk. Much interest was shown in the approaching Standard Training School to be held in Monroe early in October.

On Wednesday, the 21st instant, the writer had the pleasure of attending a meeting of the Conference Board of Missions, held at First Church, Alexandria. In issuing a call for this meeting the chairman, Brother J. G. Snelling, invited the presiding elders to meet with the Board, and all of them were present with the exception of Brother Dodson. We noted among the members of the Board present Rev. A. W. Turner, Rev. H. W. Rickey, Messrs. P. K. Abel, S. A. Mayo. Mr. T. W. Holloman, Conference Lay Leader, was present at the invitation of the chairman. The writer appreciates the courtesy extended to him as Sunday School Superintendent to attend the meeting, and participate in the luncheon served at noon.

The Broad Street Methodist Church of Lake Charles has issued an invitation to its commencement exercises on Sept. 25. This is a very unique invitation, similar to the invitations issued from colleges and high schools, giving the aim of the Sunday school, and a complete list of graduates from each department.

Mansfield will observe Promotion Day on the 25th instant also, and the writer has received an appreciated invitation to participate in this program. No doubt other schools are planning for Promotion Day.

There is a gratifying increase in interest in our training work, and the Parent-Teacher or Home Work is receiving more and more recognition in our church schools. Mrs. Cora Trawick Court, who is connected with this department at Nashville, recently said: "I feel that Louisiana is making a distinct contribution to parent-education."

Request comes from Mrs. F. C. Wren, of Winnfield, Elementary Superintendent of the Minden District, for report blanks. Mrs. Wren states that she is anxious to get these reports out, and we trust that all superintendents have gotten the necessary supplies.

An interesting letter from J. O. Kim, Conference Superintendent of Sunday School Work in Korea, has been forwarded to the office by Dr. Cook, Secretary of Missionary Education and Foreign Extension, in which Mr. Kim tells most interestingly of his recent Standard Training School for teachers held at Diamond Mountains. We quote the letter in part:

"We had ninety-two Sunday school delegates and eleven teachers and speakers. It was the largest training school in our church since the school has been started. * * * The Korea Annual Conference will be opened on Sept. 8. I am praying that God may bless the Conference meeting."

SUMMER SUNDAY SCHOOL AT SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

Sunday, Sept. 18, marked the closing day for the Sunday school at the Seashore Camp Ground, at Biloxi, Miss. Early in the summer Mrs. George S. Brown organized the school, and she acted as superintendent during the three and a half months of its tenure, being ably assisted by a corps of ten officers and teachers. During the entire session it was said that only two absences were noted among the teachers. The attendance during the summer averaged over 100; and included in the attendance were representatives of every denomination except the Jews. The total collection amounted to $140, of which $70 was given to missions, and the balance used in defraying the expenses of the Sunday school and paying for literature. Missionary Sunday was appropriately observed once a month.

At 7 o'clock each Sunday evening a Story Hour was conducted by Mrs. Brown. The hour was designed especially for the children, but the programs proved so interesting and instructive that the grown-ups joined with the children and enjoyed the lessons. In fact, the Story Hour became so popular that the attendance reached an average of 200 souls, who took part in the singing, studying the Scriptures and listening to the story-telling.

H. P. LEWIS, Treas.

FROM GREENWOOD SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: You will please give notice through the columns of the dear old Advocate of the results of our revival campaign. We began our meetings here at Greenwood Springs on July 17, using the Gilmore tent of Amory, Miss. Brother J. A. George, of Ripley, Miss., did the preaching for us after the order of the old-time camp meeting, with the use of the old-time altar service, calling sinners to the mourners' bench. Brother George preached the old-time gospel until the Holy Spirit came with conviction upon the church and sinners alike. God honored his word. The church was edified and built up spiritually, and sinners were converted and saved. As a result, seventeen were added to the church membership on profession of faith.

Our meeting followed next at New Hope church, with our son, the Rev. Carl L. Oakes, from Lambert, Miss., doing the preaching for us. God also honored his word in this meeting, giving us a fine spiritual feast and five accessions to the church.

The pastor held the next two meetings, with fine results in manifestings of the Holy Spirit's presence, and three accessions to the church.

Then on the 2d day of August, our church joined in with the Presbyterians of Hamilton, Miss., in a union meeting of eleven days' duration, using again the Gilmore tent. Under the strong and inspiring gospel messages of Dr. Oliver G. Jones, pastor-evangelist of the Presbyterian church of Pontotoc, Miss., each church received seven members, and both churches were built up in the faith, and unity and harmony prevails.

We closed out our last meeting on the work last week at Quincy, Miss., with a fine spirit. All told, we have had fine co-operation from the membership of all the churches, and a fine spirit prevails among all. We have received to date on profession of faith thirty, and four by certificate, making a grand total of thirty-four. We are happy in the work, and now shall take a few days off in a well earned vacation, we feel.

Mr. Editor, when you feel that you can spare the time from your office, please run up here, and we will show you that we have natural gas, just lots of fine prospects for oil, lots of the finest water in the world, and lots and lots of the finest folks to be found anywhere in all the world. Later we hope to be able to say, "We have had a good year, Bishop—everything in full."

FROM THE PACHUTA CHARGE.

The Pachuta charge has been very fortunate in having good preaching during our revival seasons. We have just closed the last meeting for the year.

We had Brother Marvin Miller in four of our meetings, and he is fine and did a great work for us. Brother Miller is a strong and able preacher and will be a credit ot any congregation.

I had Brother Paul Grice with me in July for one meeting, and I don't know when I enjoyed a meeting more than this one. As a preacher and pastor you've got to go a long way to find a better than you find in Brother Grice. He did a work that will stand as time goes by.

Brother Claude Jones, with his able party, consisting of Mrs. Jones, pianist, and Brother H. M. Scott, soloist, held our meeting at Pachuta, and I will say that I have never had an evangelist and party to do better work than they did. They organized the church into a working unit. The children, young people and older ones were all put to work in a way that will build up any church. Yes, we are glad that they came our way, and feel safe in recommending them to any church that is looking for a real live preacher and evangelistic party.

I am looking forward to rounding out one of my best year's work and to the making of the best report of my ministry.

I have much that to me is worthy of telling to the readers of the Advocate, but if the work done will not tell for itself, what's the use?

Yours in the background trying to do a worthy work.

GOOD HEALTH NECESSARY

Many Busy Women Owe Their Health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught school, some did housework, some found work to do at home and a few took up nursing.

Today there are very few occupations not open to women. Today they work in factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are also women architects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators. But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chamberlain who works in the Unionall factory making overalls writes that she got "wonderful results" from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Chamberlain lives at 500 Monmouth St., Trenton, N. J. She recommends the Vegetable Compound to her friends in the factory and will gladly answer any letters she gets from women asking about it.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

Varicose Veins
Reduced or Money Back
Simple Home Treatment That is Giving Amazing Results.

The world progresses. To-day ailments that took weeks to cure can now be ended in a few days. If you have varicose veins or bunches you can start to-day to bring them back to normal size, and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning as directed to the enlarged veins. It is very powerful and penetrating, and only a little is required.

After a few days' treatment the veins will begin to grow smaller and by regular use will soon reduce to normal.

People who want to reduce varicose veins, or get rid of running sores and ulcers, should not hesitate to get a bottle at once. It is so powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time. Any pharmacy can supply you.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

A Member of Crawford Street Church Commends League.

A member of the Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, writes the following splendid commendation of the League work in that church:

"Our Epworth League is the 'livest' organization in our church. The attendance is very fine. One Sunday recently there were eighty-seven in attendance. They are doing splendid work and take the highest honors at headquarters. Mr. Carl Christmas, a live, wide-awake young man, has charge."

As editor we wish to congratulate this League upon the splendid reports that we have been receiving of their wide-awake Leagues and the work they are doing.

The Capsule Idea.

The above is a plan that has recently been carried out with a great measure of success. The names of the Leaguers were put into a capsule and placed in a box (boys and girls in separate boxes). The boys drew the name of a girl, and the girls the name of a boy. These names were kept a secret so that no one knew the name of his capsule. A kind deed must be done for the "capsule" every week over a period of two months—a letter written, a gift sent or something to give pleasure. This resulted in increased attendance and greater interest in League work.

Petal League Holds Memorial Service Honoring Maximo Suggs.

On Friday afternoon, Sept. 2, one of Petal's dearest Leaguers was taken from them. Maximo was one who could always be depended on to help the League over the difficult places. It was with great regret and a greater determination to live "All for Christ" that these Leaguers met for a memorial service in memory of this beloved Leaguer. Mr. B. F. Harrell, of Hattiesburg, conducted this beautiful service. He made us realize that we must carry on, though we are few in number, for this is what Maximo would have done.

On the following Tuesday, at our business meeting, we voted to name our chapter the Maximo Suggs Memorial Chapter, and adopted as our motto "Carry On." Yes, Maximo has gone, and we miss him so, but we are more determined to "Carry On" and live even more "All for Christ."

Gulf Coast Union Meeting.

A description of the conditions in Cuba and the activity of Epworth Leagues there was given by Miss Clara Chalmers, teacher and Methodist missionary, at a meeting of the Mississippi Coast Epworth League Union held at Wesley Memorial Church, Biloxi, Friday night, Sept. 10. More than sixty young people, representing five League chapters, were present at the outdoor meeting and heard Miss Chalmers express appreciation for contributions to Cuban welfare work being made by the Epworth League.

On a basis of general efficiency, Ocean Springs and Wesley Memorial tied for first place among the chapters of the Union. At the suggestion of the Wesley Memorial president, host at the meeting, the banner was awarded Ocean Springs. The next meeting will be held at Handsboro, which League is the newest member of the organization.

The Union includes Gulfport, Biloxi, Main Street and Wesley Memorial, Handsboro, and Ocean Springs. The meetings enable the young people to get acquainted and also to learn new methods of carrying on League work. Any innovations tried in any of the chapters are discussed at the union meetings and their advantages and demerits brought out. After the devotional and business meetings, a social hour of recreation promotes a friendliness among the young people.

Georgia Lady Could Not Sleep Nights, But After Taking Cardui She Was "Like a Different Person."

Comer, Ga.—Mrs. C. H. Smith, of this place, related the following interesting experience:

"I was weak and nervous and run-down. I couldn't sleep at night. I felt tired and not in condition to do my work. I had Cardui recommended to me, but always thought I could out-do most sickness, but this was one time I needed help. I was so weak I could hardly lift my hand.

"I can't express how bad I felt.

"I know I improved after taking Cardui. I was like a different person. I was built up and was stronger and better than in a long time.

"I have a young daughter who had the 'flu,' and after she got up she would once in a while have such severe cramping spells, just suffer terribly. I knew there was a weakness and, hoping Cardui would reach this trouble, I had her take it, and the first bottle helped her so much she was able to leave it off and does not have this trouble now."

Cardui has been in use for more than 50 years.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HI LEAGUE ENCAMPMENT RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, officers of the Epworth League have seen the need of, and the benefit to be derivel from, more attention to training in Christian leadership, and have successfully carried through the first Hi League camp; be it resolved:

1. That we express our appreciation to Miss Nall for her untiring efforts and unequaled skill in organizing the camp, planning programs, superintending the preparation of wholesome and enjoyable meals, and for her Christ-like attitude toward every one during the entire camp;

To Mr. B. Frank Pim, our Hi League Secretary of the General Office, who has been our leader in every phase of our camp life, leading us in our recreation, leading us closer to our Savior, and by his own example teaching us the wonderful possibility of a life consecrated to God;

To Mr. and Mrs. Weems and Mr. Truman Lewis, who have so unselfishly put aside their own interests to give our camp the same discipline and order of an ideal big home;

To other members of the faculty—Misses Helen Sells, Lilybeck Phillips, Frances Harrell, Ina B. Anderson, Frances Ulmer, and the bugler, Jack Flowers—who have served loyally and efficiently, not only without remuneration but on their own finances;

To Rev. Joseph A. Smith, who has added so much to our program by his inspirational vesper services, and to our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Harrel, who have added to our entertainment, and other friends in Hatttiesburg and Petal;

To the Y. M. C. A. of Hattiesburg, who have kindly permitted us to use the camp, to Mr. Bryant for his interest and help.

2. That since the spirit of the campers has been so fine, and so much good, physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually has been derived, we ask that the Hi League camp be a permanent organization.

3. That a copy be sent to the Advocate, one to the Hattiesburg American, and one recorded in the minutes.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

"By so many roots as the marsh grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me ahold on the greatness of God."

ZONE MEETING, MIZPAH.

A most pleasant and profitable day was spent by the ladies of zone 5, Vicksburg District, at Mizpah church, Sept. 7, Chairman Mrs. T. H. Fore, of Natchez, presiding, and Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Natchez, pastor, leading the singing.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. E. D. Simpson; he also spoke words of welcome, and commended the Mizpah Missionary Society for their support and material help to the church.

Roll call response was given in Scripture verse, thirty-six being present, only nine of whom had been present at the previous meeting. We regretted the absence of Mrs. McKeown, District Secretary.

Minutes were read, and a card from Miss Rosa McNeil, stating that she sails for Belgium Oct. 15. Mrs. Fore outlined the program for the day, which proved to be splendid, well planned and well carried out.

Rev. Mr. Assaf, who for seventeen years was a successful busiess man before he joined the ministry and became a home missionary, gave an earnest and inspiring address at the 11 o'clock hour. He told of his successful evangelistic work over the State, and we were made to feel ashamed of our half-hearted service when we realized what his one man is doing because he is really in earnest and filled with the Spirit. We felt that we were only playing at religion as compared to this consecrated man of God.

He pictured the nominal Christians who are members of the Missionary Societies, some who attend just for the social feature (and we all have them), and asked, "How are you going to stand before Jesus Christ when you do his work just for ice cream and cake?" We were told that a member of the Missionary Society ought always to be ready to visit the sick and pray with them; he added: "If you can't pray in public or talk for the Lord, you need to study your Bible, for 'The truth will make you free.'" We were told to read Matt. 25, and live up to the truths taught therein, and to practice our religion every day. To be a real missionary member, "you must have a heart full of love, mind clear, your lamp full of preparation for the Lord's work and your life full of service to him." His parting admonition was: "Study your Bible, make it your partner—we need men and women who know the Lord."

At the noon hour, a sumptuous repast was served out under the oaks.

Afternoon session was opened by Mrs. Cammack, of Fayette, in her own sweet, earnest manner, using John 14; then a reading by Mrs. Wilkinson, three things to do for the Master—pray, or, give, or go.

We enjoyed Mrs. Puffer in a comprehensive talk on the Golden Jubilee, and Mrs. Beecher in "How to be a good officer and a good member of the Woman's Missionary Society." "Reports" were discussed by Mrs. E. D. Simpson, and each of the five auxiliaries of our zone resolved that from now on we would try to send reports from each officer.

"Mission and Bible Study" was presented by Miss Murphy, of Natchez, and that ever imperative subject, 'The Voice," by Mrs. Dennis, Mrs. Cammack adding some very pointed remarks and song.

"Present Situation in Missions" was handled in a masterly way by Brother Lewis. We now have eleven fields; outlook in Mexico at present is good; backset in China, but the work will yet triumph; young Moslem is finding that the Koran is not all true; this is Christianity's opportunity. We must learn to counteract the influence of evil picture shows. The religion that we present to foreign nations must be real, genuine, must be seen in the lives lived before those about us; we must break down our "caste."

A rising vote of thanks was given the Mizpah ladies for this splendid day. Next meeting to be in Natchez.

In closing, we were favored with a beautiful duet by Brother Lewis and his sweet daughter, Ann Stephen, then dismissed by Mrs. Assaf.

A FINE MEETING AT TANGIPAHOA, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: An eight-day revival meeting was held in August at Tangipahoa, La., Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Bogalusa, doing the preaching.

From beginning to end the attendance was fine, and Brother Tucker never presented the gospel in a happier mood. A dozen names were added to the roster.

The hospitality of the community could hardly be surpassed.

Early in October another evangelistic effort will be led by Rev. Martin Hebert at Kentwood.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE LESSER LIGHT.

The other night we watched a great swarm of beetles, bugs, and moths of various kinds swarming around an arc light on a street corner. The sky was clear and the stars were shining brightly, while the beautiful crescent of the new moon was hanging some distance above the horizon. But these beetles, bugs, and moths were beating their lives out against a lesser light. The trouble was in their failure to "see things sanely and see them whole." They had no conception of proper proportions. A light on a street corner was the big thing in their lives—and it led to their death. Blessed is the man who does not wear his life out by a tragic struggle with the incidentals and accidentals of life.

THE ITINERANCY.

With all its faults—and it probably has some faults—we believe the Methodist itinerancy is the best system yet devised for the proper distribution of preachers among churches. Its strongest point is that it gives every church a pastor and every pastor a church. We have no unemployed preachers and no vacant churches. This system, administered by godly men, comes just about as near making satisfactory appointments all around as it is possible to make. If mistakes are made—as they sometimes are—an adjustment can normally be made in not more than a year; and if an emergency should arise, immediate action can be had. Both preachers and people are the beneficiaries of this fine system.

THE "MUD TURTLE" PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE.

The "mud turtle" philosophy of life is a false philosophy. The mud turtle is, if we may be permitted to say so, a "peculiar cuss." He is hatched from an egg—but he comes into the world with a harder shell than that from which he was hatched; his shell grows with him—and the older he grows, the thicker it becomes; he is an omnivorous feeder—and most of what he eats goes to make shell; he is entirely surrounded by shell—except for small openings through which he projects, upon occasion, his head, legs, and tail; and to suit his convenience he can withdraw all these organs, close these openings, and present the appearance of a solid shell. In fact, he is mostly shell.

It is the favorite occupation of the mud turtle to sit on a log on a sunshiny day and enjoy the weather. What he is thinking about, we do not know. We have often wondered what is in his mind as he sits there so serenely. Of one thing we are pretty sure—he is content. We have seen thousands of them—but we have never seen one that seemed to have any nervous affection or that was in the least bit worried. We never saw one that seemed to have any concern about those that had gone before or those that were to come after. As far as appearances go, the past, the present, and the future are all the same to him. He just sits there letting the sun shine on his shell.

But in one way the mud turtle's reaction to his environment is immediate and complete: shy a rock at him, or turn loose a .22 in his direction, or make any unusual noise or commotion near him, and he promptly slides off his log into the water. He does not cast an enquiring eye in the direction from which the disturbance came; he does not linger to make an investigation; he betrays no sign of annoyance; he simply slips out of sight.

Having slipped out of sight, the mud turtle stays out of sight until he thinks the coast is clear again. We should like to know what he does while he is out of sight. Whether he swims aimlessly about under the water, or settles peacefully to the bottom, being as happy in the mud as he is in the sunshine, we cannot say. We have an idea that he is happy wherever he is and whatever he is doing.

By what process he measures time, we do not know; but we do know that, having slipped off his log for reasons satisfactory to himself, presently he reappears, clambers on the log again, and sits there until another disturbance brings about another reaction, and he responds in exactly the same way.

The mud turtle is not industrious; he has no inventive genius; he has no artistic sense; he is not ambitious; he has no sense of humor; there is no melody in his soul; he is not vain. He is just a mud turtle with a hard shell. One log to him is just as good as another, and it is just as good in one place as another. His philosophy of life may be simply stated: "Whatever is, is all right, and it suits me exactly."

The "mud turtle" philosophy is both false and dangerous. It is false because everything is not always all right, and it is dangerous because its acceptance by the individual or the race means stagnation, decay, and ultimate destruction. It is the philosophy of inaction—and the philosophy of inaction is always in danger of becoming the philosophy of reaction. Reactionary thinking inevitably produces reactionary leaders and reactionary movements. The fewer mud turtles there are, the better off the world is.

FINE CHURCHES.

We have been passing through an era of church building—perhaps we are still in that era. Some magnificent temples of worship have been erected, and others are in prospect. The cost of these buildings runs, in the aggregate, into the millions. We believe that we should have fine churches, and we do not know of very many upon which we think the expenditure has been too great. But we do think a congregation should be careful in its planning not to project a plant that will cost more than will be for the greater glory of God. As long as the building is wholly for the glory of God, the cost does not matter; but when the congregation is building also for its own glory, too much money can be spent. Perhaps God does not feel especially honored by services in a church over which hangs an almost intolerable burden of debt.

SPIRITUAL CONFERENCES.

We have always believed that Annual Conferences should be occasions of spiritual refreshing to those in attendance. Perhaps they always are; but sometimes it seems that vrey little time is available for spiritual exercise. We are glad to note, therefore, that special provision has been made for devotional services at the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference, as will be seen from the announcement on page 6 of this issue of the Advocate. No time is lost that is spent in meditation, prayer, and Christian fellowship.

WORK DAY FOR THE MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

According to the announcement of Superintendent Lewis, Sunday, Oct. 9, will be Work Day for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage. It is earnestly to be hoped that the members of the church and the friends of the orphan children in the great institution at Jackson will make a liberal offering on that day for the support of these wards of the church. Those who have the responsibility of maintaining a private home know that it takes a good deal of money to provide for the needs of all its inmates; it is only reasonable, therefore, that the maintenance of a great institution requires the constant supply of adequate resources. The claims of orphan children are both important and appealing. Very few persons will refuse a contribution when the cause is properly presented. In spite of the losses caused by the overflow in some sections of the State, we believe there is money enough in the hands of the people to supply all the needs of the Orphanage, and we believe it will be forthcoming for this sacred cause. May it be so! The day is Sunday, Oct. 9.

PRAYING.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Jesus taught fully and largely about praying. He urged the strongest motives—he gave minute directions—he dedicated a matchless prayer-model—he spake a parable to the end that "men ought always to pray."

God is both a tender Father and a majestic Sovereign. As a Father he would pour blessings upon us, his human children, lavishly; but as a sovereign he must be strictly just, and will bestow blessings that have to do with moral agency only upon suitable conditions. Praying meets these conditions or leads the soul up to some act that does fully meet them. "Ask, and ye shall receive. seek, and ye shall find, knock, and it shall be opened unto you," said Jesus. The very highest reason demands that we should be grateful for the blessings God bestows. Praying expresses a sense of dependence, and intensifies that sense; and gratitude is a natural result when the prayed-for blessing comes.

Some blessings God bestows alike upon "the just and the unjust," the prayerful and the prayerless. There are other blessings which come only when prayed for. Pardon for sin comes only upon repentance and faith in Christ—such blessings are granted conditionally, and hence are asked for. All the blessings we need ought to be asked for, and gratefully received. "Men ought always to pray." The Christ said so.

If men were not weak and ignorant, the slaves of sin and suffering—if they could conquer life's difficulties, still all of life's storms and dispel its darkness, and all unaided by divine power—if they could lift themselves out of the depths of ignorance and sin, then they would not need to call upon a higher power for help. Can they do it? Did any man or woman of all the millions that throng the long vista of human history ever do it? Alexander and Caesar and Napoleon, each in his era, conquered the world: did either of them conquer sin or self or rise above the common ills and fate of men, and stand with his heel on the neck of death? A wild revel at Babylon ending in the death of a royal drunkard, the dagger of a Brutus, and the lone rocks of St. Helena give answer and the whole world has heard that answer. It is most reasonable that ignorance-cursed, sorrow-burdened creatures of weakness such as we are, should pray.

Some one has said: "Races of men have been found without houses, without raiment; but never without prayer, any more than without speech." It is true; and no real scientist denies it. There are prayerless individuals here and there; but no prayerless tribe or nation. Another has said: "The flow of prayer is just as natural as the flow of water; and the prayerless man has become an unnatural man." A philosopher has said: "The feeling of dependence is the instinct that urges us to pray;" praying, therefore, is instinctive. "Spontaneous feeling," says one, "is a kind of inspiration." This means that our feelings are often but the impressions which God makes upon our souls. Our truest instincts, our deepest, truest feelings tell us that we are weak and ignorant and sinful by nature, and that God is our Father, and loves and will help us. Hence it is but a natural outflow of the soul that asks God for the blessings we need. This consciousness of need, this sense of dependence, and this instinctive reaching up toward God by needy souls, this Godward feeling in man, is as universal as the race is widespread. Whittier sings a touching story:

"A woman all in black arrayed,
Close-veiled, between the kneeling host,
With gliding motion of a ghost,
Passed to the desk and laid thereon
A scroll which bore these words alone:
'Pray for me.'

"Back from the place of worshiping
She glided like a guilty thing.

* * * * * * * *

Back to the night from which she came,
To unimagined grief or shame."

The preacher read her request, and then prayed for her. The poet continues:

"Glide on, poor ghost of woe or sin—
Thou leavest a common need within;
Each bears, like thee, some nameless weight,
Some misery inarticulate,
Some secret sin, some shrouded dread,
Some household sorrow all unsaid.
Pass on! the type of all thou art,
Sad witness of the common heart;
With face in veil and seal on lips,
In mute and strange companionship,
Dumbly implering as we go:
Pray for me!"

Every heart has its aches, every life its troubles; and to one and all whispers the love-plea of the Christ: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest;" and our hearts respond in prayer.

The would-be scientist, vain of his learning, may question it; the infidel in his insane infatuation may sneer at it; the man of the world pursuing fleeting wealth or vanishing pleasures may ignore it; the purblind Christian overburdened with care may neglect it; but down in all of their hearts, at the very basis of life's truest instincts, is to be found the strong, true instinct of praying—and we feel it when some sudden danger stares us in the face—and we all feel it—soon or late there comes a time when we must feel it. This feeling is a kind of inspiration—it is God speaking to our hearts and calliing us to himself.

"We feel it when we sorrow most"—

Christ constructed this magnificent argument: "What man is there of you, who if his son ask for bread will give him a stone? or if he ask for a fish will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father give good things to them that ask him?" The argument is complete and resistless. Christ elsewhere adds a strong sweet statement meant specially for all who trust and love him: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Still elsewhere he adds: "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

The Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, throbs with this lesson. It pictures the first father of our race even in Eden talking with God; it tells us that Enoch walked and talked with God until he was translated; it tells of Noah building a prayer altar on the flood-washed world as its first edifice; it tells us of Abraham who prayed until the world named him "the friend of God;" it tells of the weak, erring Jacob, so human, and yet he prayed until God named him Israel, "the Prince of God;" it tells of Elijah on Carmel praying until celestial fire came down and wrapped the sacrifice; it tells of Hezekiah on his deathbed praying until God, in answer, lengthened his lease of life; it tells of Daniel praying in defiance of all prohibition until he rises to honor next to the throne, and defies all the caged lions of Darius; it tells of the hundred and twenty in Jerusalem praying until the empowering chrism of Pentecost came; it tells of the infant church of Jerusalem praying for the imprisoned Peter until an angel went from heaven and released him; it tells of a heathen, Cornelius, who knew neither God nor Christ, but who prayed until God sent visions and angels and an apostle to tell him of the Christ; it tells of Paul and Silas, stocked and manacled in the depths of a Roman prison, praying until God sent an earthquake to set them free. Time would fail me to tell of Gideon, the deliverer of Israel; and of Samuel the prophet; of Solomon dedicating God's Temple with prayer; of David, king and psalmist; of many others whose praying became history in the sacred records. The Bible throbs with precept and example enforcing this dictum, "men ought always to pray." It is sung in the Psalms; it is written in the Law; it is urged in the Prophets; it is illustrated in the Gospels; it is reiterated in the Acts; it is argued in the Epistles.

"God gave me my brother Melancthon back in direct answer to prayer," said Luther; and who dares contradict him? A boy returned from years of wicked wandering to his praying mother among the green hills of New England and told her that God, in answer to her prayers, had strangely wooed him from sin back to his long-forsaken home and mother; who would dare to tell that mother that her praying was all useless? "Your praying for her saved my baby's life," said a mother to me, whose baby, supposed to be at death's door, I had baptized. I do not presume to claim that what the mother said was all true; but I dare not say that she was mistaken.

"There is an eye that never sleeps
Beneath the wing of night;
There is an ear that never shuts
When sink the beams of light;
There is an arm that never tires,
When human strength gives way;
There is a love that never fails,
When earthly loves decay.

"That eye is fixed on Seraph throngs;
That ear is filled with angel songs;
That arm uplifts the world on high;
That love is throned above the sky.

"But there's a power man can wield,
When mortal aid is vain,
That eye, that arm, that love to reach
That listening ear to gain:
That power is prayer"—

"Men ought to pray."

God says so—universal human consciousness says so universally—all history says so—our own hearts say so—it must be so.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Deeds of daring, of noble endeavor for a great cause, to overthrow tyranny and achieve liberty for a people oppressed or enslaved by cruel rulers, have ever commanded admiration. History furnishes many examples of sacrifice of some of the best and noblest of the race on the altar of human freedom. But to give one's life for notoriety or fame, or money as a reward for perilous ventures over trackless miles of stormy seas, is, to my mind, bordering on folly; and really, if the end is accomplished, is but of little use in developing the art of flying. Courage is an admirable trait, but courage without good judgment cannot overcome the stern, unrelenting laws and conditions of physical phenomena. An airplane dropped into the maw of a tempestuous sea has but the remotest chance of life. Man at his best is but a puny, frail creature when combatting the forces of nature. Only divine power incarnated in Christ has ever stilled a raging sea. Sometimes even the stoutest ships go forth from their havens and no return is recorded, no news comes back from the trackless seas. I recall the names of two such vsessels—the "Evening Star" and the "President." With the hungry sea beneath, the viewless air above and the dark night about them, the Argonauts of this twentieth century sail on wilder voyages than ever tempted a Columbus or Magellan, and the hearts of many friends and sympathizers are saddened when no tidings come, and the ocean wails a requiem. I am glad that these disasters have swung the thought of the world around to an interrogation point. The two great oceans, east and west, have swallowed too many. Let it stop.

Language is the best vehicle for conveying and communicating thought we posses; whether written, spoken or its meanings signified by signs or symbols, this statement holds good. Telepathy is yet a dream unrealized. The doctrines of the Bible come to us through written words. No other book known to us has been more carefully translated, more assiduously studied, more diligently read. It bears its own credentials, and to the open mind unbiased by prejudice, its lessons of faith, duty and righteousness are as plain as an open road on a sunny day. It is not what men read from, or out of, the Bible that unsettles faith and brings doubt, but what they try to read into this plain old book. So if the demon of doubt assails you on any of the salient doctrines of Christianity, don't try to bolster up a lame, staggering faith by reading what some famous modern thinker has to say on the question, but study carefully the original record. Go back to the source, and then do your own thinking. Moses, Paul, and Jesus are mighty apt to be right, and they knew what they were talking about. I am not so sure about some of the modern prophets. Not long since I was studying the subject of the divine sonship and virgin birth of our blessed Lord, when I read the first chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, and if language means anything, it is there unequivocally taught that his conception and sonship are of God, and by the Father. Prophecy and history blend together, and I shall live and die believing that our Savior was divine by birth and in all the marvelous deeds of his life.

CHRIST THE BIGOT.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

If I at all comprehend the meaning of words, Jesus is the most dogmatic bigot that ever articulated. He did not hesitate to declare in unmistakable terms: "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." He said further: "All who go into the sheepfold except by the door; are thieves and robbers." He then further declared: "I am the door of the sheepfold." He is of course herein referring to mankind's approach unto God.

Authority must be lodged somewhere, else we can but have chaos in all teaching concerning spiritual truth. He who assumes to speak with authority should furnish evidence of the fact that he does speak with authority. The Scribes and Pharisees spoke with the same apology with which Modernists speak to-day. Jesus spoke as one having authority, and not as the Scribes. When I was but a lad, and for many years afterwards, I was at a loss as to just what was meant by the expression, "For he spoke as one having authority, and not as the Scribes." But since hearing a Modernist speak with apologetic manner, words and tone, I no longer am in doubt as to what the writer of sacred Writ meant. Jesus gave evidence for the authority with which he spoke. He said: "If I had not spoken unto them the words which no other man spake, they had not had sin. If I had not done among them the things which no other man did, they had not had sin, but now they have no cloak for their sins, for they have both seen and hated both me and my Father." The words that Jesus spoke and the deeds he performed were of that nature that only one who came from God could have spoken and performed. Again, the fruit produced in the life of believers is of that type that is peculiar alone to Christianity.

Jesus is the only hope of mankind. Jesus is the only hope of mankind because it is alone through him that a living soul can come to know God and find the needed cleansing of soul by which selfishness is destroyed from the life and the individual is made to actually believe and trust the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. In the life of the Christian, Jesus is his all and in all. Self is abased and Jesus is exalted. In the life of the Modernist self is set up along by the side of Christ and one's intellect is worshiped along with the devotion patronizingly doped out to Christ. To be sure, Jesus is worshiped and praised, but so is Buddha and other great religious teachers. Jesus, with the Modernist, is just one among the mighty. The Modernists will sometimes set Jesus at the head of the great religious teachers of earth, but they deny to him the distinction of being mankind's only Redeemer. And in their hypnotic words, manners and tones they so strut and perform before the gaze of the unsophisticated that the unwary swallow their teaching, hook, line, pole and all, and leave the class room, or church, to speak and talk of the wonderful greatness of their Modernistic teacher, while Jesus is left unsung, unknown and unworshiped. By their glossy words of deception they rob God of praise due to his great name, while they attract unto themselves the love, worship and adoration of lost souls who will in hell curse their Modernistic teachers throughout eternity.

I said in the beginning: "If I at all comprehend the meaning of words, Jesus is the most dogmatic bigot that ever articulated." Jesus will brook no opinion contrary to his announced doctrine of life. In the eyes of the world such an attitude is unreasonable, unthinkable and absurd. The world is perfectly willing to concede to Jesus a place among the mighty of earth, but the world emphatically and dogmatically refuses to give to Christ the place of pre-eminence among men. Yet, until a human has completely surrendered to the Christ and come to put the Christ's feeling, thinking and volition above his own, it is impossible for said human to come into the glories of the glorious end toward which he was created. If he fails thus to let the bigot Jesus Chrsit rule in his feelings, his thinking and his volitons, he will be forced to grope in spiritual darkness throughout all eternity. Either that, or Jesus is an imposter. Are you ready to pronounce Christ as an imposter? If you are not, then let your teaching and preaching anent Jesus ring with that authority that will forever put to flight all Modernistic teaching.

When any hypothesis, scientific or otherwise, runs counter to the teachings of Jesus Christ as to God, the divine origin of mankind, the fall, heaven, hell, sin and redemption by way of the atonement in Jesus Christ, I at once, unhesitatingly, and with malice of forethought cast all such rubbish and chaff overboard and draw the closer to my Christ, my Saviour, my Lord and my God. I thank God for the fact that Jesus could speak with the voice of a bigot. I thank God, too, for the glorious experience that comes to all who worship the Bigot Jesus. In that very readable pamphlet, "The Rebirth of Protestantism in Europe," Elmer T. Clark tells of the experience of an educated Belgian who sought to find satisfaction for his hungry soul in the Protestantism of Europe, in Romanism and in Philosophy, but failed and had about reached the depths of despair, when in a Methodist mission he found Christ. Christ satisfied his soul-hunger and gave him that peace of mind and joy of soul for which he had vainly sought in Romanism and Philosophy. Why should I hesitate or refuse to fall down before and worship a Christ like that? Christ lifts the believer above the power, the thralldom and dominion of sin and temptation and gives him power to let grow and develop within himself the glorious God-attributes of life. Christ comforts amid the deep sorrows incident to this mortal life. Christ promises to go with his saints through the valley of the shadow of death. Somehow Jesus has breathed into the heart and life of millions of the human family a sweet faith and trust in himself by which the lives of millions have been transformed and made into the glorious image of his own great personality. He never touches a life but to uplift and glorify said life. All, of every age, clime, color and race who have put their trust in him, have found in him that soul and life satisfaction which is obtained nowhere else under the sun. Who am I, or who are you, that we have the right to question such an authority as is found in Jesus Christ?

Let the world call him a bigot, let the world say he is dogmatic, but I worship him as my Saviour and my God. I gladly bow to his authority and desire to know nothing, concerning spiritual truth, beyond what he reveals in and through divine revelation as found in the Bible. The world has rebelled against all authority, divine and otherwise, but the world's only safety lies in obedience to Divine authority as revealed in Jesus Christ. Others can call themselves Christians and pussy-foot around, while they apologetically bow and scrape to worldly-wise scholarship, but as for me I care not for the friendship and association of any man, or set of men, who either have set Jesus aside from their serious consideration or have outgrown him. I will at least be as loyal to my Saviour and Redeemer as is a common man to his dog. The man of the world, who loves his dog, will not accept of your friendship if you cannot respect his dog. All right, brother, if you have no respect for my Christ and must insult him whenever you are about me, then I desire not your friendship. Jesus means too much to me to desire the friendship of any human who is capable of insulting Jesus. I am proud to be the slave of Jesus Christ.

HE BLOCKED THE ROAD TO SING SING.

What Does the Minister Contribute to the Welfare of the Community? Read This Father's Story for One Answer to That Question.

By Alvin C. Goddard.

In my travels through the Maine Conference in behalf of the Conference claimants' cause, I chanced to spend the night with an aged father and mother living in a little out-of-the-way village in a humble and unpretentious home. I soon learned after entering the home that they had an only son who was in the banking business in New York City. It was easy to see that they were extremely proud of this son, as he was the center of conversation a good deal of the time. It was also very evident that the father, especially, was interested in the subject of the "value of the church to the moral welfare of the community." He used that expression many times during the evening, and, in the course of conversation, frequently referred to the influence of the preacher in molding the character of the boys and girls of the community. We talked along this line until late at night.

Not long after I went to my room to retire, the old gentleman knocked on the door, asked permission to come in and tell me a little story. He began by saying, "The church kept my boy out of Sing Sing prison," and then related the following story:

"After wife and I were married, we moved to this town from an adjoining town and settled in this house, where we have lived ever since. My wife was a member of the church in her home town and moved her membership to the church here. She and the pastor were very anxious that I join the church the Sunday her transfer was announced. I refused to do so, having no faith in the church and having for years taken an antagonistic stand against the church. I believed the church to be useless and preachers parasites. I cursed both my wife and the preacher, and denounced the whole business of religion. I was not an atheist, but I did not think the Christian religon taught the truth about God.

"The years passed by. My wife went regularly to church; I, as regularly, stayed at home, prepared the Sunday dinner, and never missed an opportunity to say mean things about the church as an organization, the church people, and the ministers.

"After our boy came to the home, I took care of him and permitted my wife to go to church and Sunday school—not because I was willing, but because she, being of Scotch descent, and persistently religious and faithful to her church, was determined that she would go. When our son was old enough to go to Sunday school, she said one Sunday morning that she was going to take him. I went into another rage; cursed her; cursed the church, the ministry, and everybody that had anything to do with the church. But my wife, loyal and faithful to her church, and conscientious in her faith in spite of my protests, took the boy and went to church and Sunday school. This, she continued to do as long as the boy was at home. He became very much interested, and was not only willing but anxious to go to the church and take part in its activities.

"When our son reached high school age, there was appointed to our church a pastor about middle age who took a great deal of interest in the boys of the community. He organized a Sunday school class and club of high school boys. Our son was one of its most interested and active members. I talked against such organization and tried to persuade my boy to turn against his mother's teaching. I had no use for the Boy Scouts, to which our son belonged when of Scout age, and made myself a constant nuisance in the home because he persisted in being active in such organizations.

"When our boy reached the third year of high school, this pastor, who had been the teacher of this class since its organization, went through the community with a subscription paper to raise money to repair the old church, which now needed a new roof and repainting. He came to our home one evening just as I returned from work. His presence annoyed me greatly, but the kindly reception given him by my wife and son annoyed me more. When he told us the purpose of his visit, I went into another rage. I told him that preachers were useless, and that they were parasites and an economic drain on the community; that they were interested in nothing but to secure all the money they possibly could from the people who needed it for their own homes. I told him that he spent his time scheming how he could get every dollar the people of the town had. I told him the world would be better off without his kind; that he broke up my home every Sunday morning when I should like to put my family into the car and drive out into the open and enjoy a day of outing and recreation; that his cursed old church and its services took the time and strength of my wife and son, and the day was gone before they were at liberty to go with me. I told him the church served no good purpose; that it drained the poor people, catered to the rich, and did nothing practical; that he, as a minister, talked about a world nobody has ever seen, and certainly one that nobody knows anything about; that he was going around in a circle and arriving nowhere. I told him that it would be the joy of my life to untie my son from his mother's apron strings and from his pesky old Sunday school that was making out of him a weakling, rather than a strong, virile man; that I was ashamed that he was not following closely after his father.

"The minister remarked that he hoped the boy never would. I told him I considered such remarks a positive insult; that I did not need his help in raising my son, and that there were no words in the English language capable of conveying the feelings of contempt I had for him, for all preachers, and for the whole church. I then threatened to kick him out of my house bodily, if he did not go. He then left, whereupon I told my wife and son that they should never go to the church again. My wife, in her firm Scottish manner, told me that they would go, that our son would continue to be acitve in the church, and that I should not disown and disinherit him, as I had threatened.

"Both mother and son continued to go to the church. Finally, our son graduated from high school and went to New York, where he took a course in banking. In a year or two, he returned home to spend a holiday vacation. His mother and I were more than delighted, and his first evening at home we spent around the old hearthstone and recalled pleasant evenings of other days when son was but a lad.

"During the evening, his mother asked him if he had been loyal to the church while in the great city. I went into another rage. When my rage had subsided, my son turned and said, 'Father, I am glad that mother took me to the church and that I received the religious instruction of the church.' He then asked me if I had read in the paper about a young man's being convicted of forgery in New York and sent to Sing Sing prison. I told him that I remembered reading about such an incident. He then said. 'Father, I came very near being that young man.'

"His mother and I were both surprised at this statement, and earnestly requested further explanation. He then told us of a visit of three men to his room one midnight; how they had placed on the table $40,000, which was to be his if he would sign a contract to enter into a conspiracy with them to defraud the bank where he was working. He, being a trusted employee and on the inside, was to do the forging. He said the plan was well laid; that it seemed impossible for any one ever to find the offender. He told us how his heart failed him when he tried to sign the agreement; how he walked up and down the room, and, finally, told the men they would have to go, that he could not enter into such a conspiracy. The men left, he said, and he saw them no more.

"I went over to my son, put my arm around him, hugged him close to my heart, and told him that I was very proud of him; that I was proud of his manly conduct, and was sure he would never disgrace his parents, but always live an honorable life."

Here the old father paused, laid his head upon my shoulder and wept as though his heart would break. Finally he continued:

"I never shall forget how my son drew away from me, and turned with a look of disgust upon his face and said, 'Father, you contemptible old scoundrel! If I had done what you wanted me to do, I should now be in Sing Sing prison.' I said, 'Why, my son, what do you mean?' He then said:

" 'That night when those men visited me and I was tempted to sign that contract I was kept true, not by what you taught me, not by any of your instructions, but by the instruction of that preacher whom you cursed and drove from our home, and by my mother's prayers. When I picked up the pen to sign that document, that preacher's face appeared before me; I heard his voice; he was telling that class of high school boys about honorable living, and how clean living would win in the race of life; I heard my mother's voice in prayer and was saved from yielding to the temptation.

" 'You, dad, wanted me to be honest and upright, but you wanted me to stay away from the fountain source of righteousness and virtue. If I had followed your advice, I should this night be in Sing Sing prison. That preacher's instruction and my mother's prayers blocked the road.' "

The father leaned over on the table with his face in his hand—and there was a long silence. Then he said: "I asked my son if I had understood him correctly; if I had actually been in his way, and if it was true that the church and the ministers so much despised and hated by me, and his mother's prayers, which I considered foolishness, had saved him from a life of shame. He laid his hand upon my shoulder and said, 'Father, I am sorry, but it is true.' "

Another long silence followed—then the old father told how he had gone out from his hearthstone into the village park in view of the old church, which he could see in outline against the evening sky with its spire pointing heavenward. Said he: "Only God and myself will ever know the agony of that night. It would have been a relief had the rocks and the mountains fallen upon me and I could have had assurance that I should forever be hidden from the face of the Lord and never see again any of those who were true to him. I fell upon the ground and covered my face in shame. I wept aloud; a vision passed before my eyes; I saw my son under my own influence starting on the road toward Sing Sing prison; I saw that preacher, supported by my wife, block the way; I saw them lead him to the foot of a cross which I seemed to see standing uopn a hill, and I saw my son an honorable, upright man under the influence of his mother's prayers and this preacher that I had hated—but, I saw also how the doors of Sing Sing prison would have swallowed him up had he done what I wanted him to do.

"I came to myself, and remained in deep meditation until the early hours of morning. The night was cold, but my fevered brow knew it not. I then went home, confessed my sins, and declared my purpose to live a new life. I wanted to send for that preacher and tell him that I wished I could crown him as the one standing on the right hand of God, representing God upon earth, and who as a loyal follower of the Christ was the means of salvation to the rising generation.

"My son went back to New York; the winter months slipped by; the Easter time arrived. There were special services at the little church in our town. On Easter Sunday morning, when all nature seemed to be bursting into new life, I went with my wife and son—who had come home for that very occasion—to the Easter services, confessed my sins, was baptized, and joined the church."

Then the old father—after a long pause—turned and said, "For the sake of my son, tell not his name, but let the story be told afar, for the real value of the church and the ministry to the community can never be overestimated."

Now the young man of this story is a prosperous young banker of New York City. He has not yet accumulated great wealth, but is on the road to prosperity and financial security. The bank where he is employed considers him trustworthy and dependable. His present prosperity and his future success were made possible by the preacher of this story, who is still in active service in the Maine Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The last three moves the preacher has made have been to his financial disadvantage—twice to a church of the same salary, paying his own moving expenses, once to a church paying a little less salary.

It is for such men as this, men who have laid the foundations of civilization in the depths of the hearts and minds of boys and girls, men who have blocked the roads that lead youth downward, men who during the days of their earning power have toiled for the cause of righteousness without thought or purpose of financial gain, that the Methodist Episcopal Church plans a comfortable retirement in old age.—(Copyright, 1927, Alvin C. VICKSBURG DISTRICT RESOLUTIONS.

In view of the fact that the Vicksburg District has never paid in full its benevolent obligations and there was a marked decrease in the percentage of the assessment paid last Conference year; and,

Because a large part of the northern portion of the district suffered a disastrous overflow this year and has been unable to grow any crops this season; be it

Resolved, That it is the purpose of this group gathering to emphasize a greater need than ever before that we in the hill portion of the district, who have been particularly blessed this year, give more liberally to these causes than ever before in order that these obligations be met in full;

That we urge every member of this group to adopt the system of tithing;

That the stewards of the churches of this group be earnestly requested to adopt modern business methods of conducting the affairs of the church, by getting personal pledges from every member, from the least to the greatest, and by collecting on the pledges monthly;

That there be held in the various churches congregational meetings at which well informed ministers or laymen explain to the membership what these benevolences really are and what the church is doing in the way of spreading the Gospel of Christ.

We feel greatly encouraged because of the splendid attendance at each of these group meetings, and believe that because of this there is an awakening upon the part of the membership of the church to the needs which have been stressed to-day.

We congratulate our group president upon the way he has conducted the two meetings of this group and upon the interest which he has been enabled to arouse in the various churches.

We wish to thank the good people of Utica for their splendid entertainment, and also Brother Higginbotham, of this church, for his untiring efforts to make the day a success.

We also note with pleasure the presence of Brother Horn, pastor of the Baptist church of Lorman. Such fine fellowship as shown by him tends to give us a wider vision of the mission of our Savior.

MEETING OF PASTORS AND LAYMEN OF MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

At the call of the presiding elder, Rev. Robert Selby, there was held at Central Church, Meridian, at 9:30, Sept. 27, a meeting of the pastors and lay leaders of Meridian District.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss plans and methods of paying the benevolences in full. All the pastors were present except three. Two of these were sick and the other was engaged in a revival. There were from one to three laymen from nine of the charges. The district lay leader and one of the associates were present. The other associate was sick.

Each church, through its pastor and lay leader, made a report on how much had been paid on the benevolences, what plans were being used for the collection, and what the prospects were for payment in full. Many of the pastors said they would pay their benevolences in full, and some others were hopeful of doing this, and the remainder felt that they would pay more than they paid last year.

The presiding elder emphasized the need of meeting all our obligations in full, and his remarks found a sympathetic hearing on the part of all present. Another very interesting part of the meeting was conducted by Rev. W. B. Alsworth, assisted by Dr. A. F. Watkins and Rev. W. B. Jones, showing how a pastor should make his report to the Annual Conference.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolutions.

Whereas, the world's need, as that need is recognized in the benevolent causes fostered by our church, was never more insistent than at the present time; and, whereas, the response of the membership of the church to this need has not measured up to the requirements as set forth by the General and Conference Boards charged with administering the various benevolences of our church; and, whereas, we are pained to note our shortcomings in this regard in the past as shown by the tabulated reports of our own district and Conference, as well as of other districts and Conferences, as they are published from time to time in the Conference Journals; and, whereas, the tabulated statement sent out recently by our presiding elder, Rev. Robert Selby, exhibiting the payments made on the benevolences up to the end of the third round of quarterly conferences does not make a favorable showing for the charges of this district; and, whereas, our membership is at least reasonably prosperous at this time, so that to pay our assessments in full is entirely within the bounds of reason and expectation; and, whereas, the Conference year is drawing rapidly to a close, so that what we do this year must be done quickly;

Therefore, be it resolved by this representative gathering of the Meridian District of the Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

1. That we recognize the importance of meeting the assessments in full and acknowledge that the duty to do so is clearly laid upon us; that the asssessments levied upon our charges are not excessive but reasonable, and that therefore they should be not the maximum but the minimum goal for which we strive;

2. That in view of the foregoing reflections we should sound a clarion call to our membership throughout the district to come to the help of the Lord through the channel of the church lest the cause of God suffer as a result of our failure to show a willingness in the day of God's power;

3. That we earnestly urge our boards of stewards, lay organizations and all departments of church work to concentrate their efforts in the few weeks that remain of the Conference year upon the securing of at least the amount of the assessments on their respective charges;

4. That we believe that a similar meeting of this kind should be held after the Annual Conference, either in connection with the district board of stewards' meeting, or a separate meeting, to arrange in the beginning of the new year for an every-member canvass to cover both the budget and the benevolences for the year 1928, this meeting to be attended especially by the pastors, lay leaders and chairmen of the boards of stewards; and,

5. That a copy of these resolutions be given to the press of the Meridian District and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that each pastor be requested to either read or have some one read to each of his congregations these resolutions.

Resolved further, That we extend our thanks and appreciation to the presiding elder for calling this meeting.

Respectfully offered.

A LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

Dear Friend: At a joint meeting of the Conference Board of Missions and the presiding elders in the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, on Sept. 21, it was resolved that the president of the Board of Missions be requested to write a letter to one layman in each church and also send a copy of the same to the pastor of the charge.

The object of the letter is twofold:

First: To call attention to those churches that have been receiving mission money to supplement the salaries of their pastors, letting them know that on account of the receipts from Centenary funds ceasing, and further on account of emergency demands upon the treasurer, the balance usually carried over has been used up during the year. The Board, therefore, faces the fact that there will be not more than 60 per cent of the amount appropriated this year available to use for the next Conference year.

Second: In the face of this financial situation, we desire to urge the laymen to give their most earnest attention and co-operation to a program in each church that will enable the pastor and the missionary committee to raise the amount of the benevolent claims in full. The Board believes that any church that puts forth an honest effort, using a practical plan, can raise the collections in full. It is further suggested that as far as practicable the month of October be set aside for the securing of Conference claims in each church.

If any member of our Board or the secretary can be of any service to you in suggesting a plan or assisting you in any way whatever to reach the goal in your church, please let us know.

Yours in his name,

J. G. SNELLING.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi counts itself fortunate in being able to secure the services of Rev. J. P. Harrington, well known in Mississippi as a fine speaker and a first-class business man, to take charge of the financial department of the League. His official position in the League force is that of Financial Secretary.

He has recently organized a new church in Jackson and has accepted its pastorate. He will be pretty busy with his church, but being physically and mentally quite vigorous and deeply interested in the League work, he is willing to undertake almost double work, to help the League through its present financial strait.

Mr. Harrington scarcely needs an introduction or commendation to Mississippians, but allow us to say that he understands his work well and will not disappoint any congregation or misrepresent anything or mislead any one about the League work.

It, therefore, affords me very great pleasure to say that any assistance or courtesy that may be extended him by our people will be timely and not misplaced and will be greatly appreciated by the League.

T. J. BAILEY, Superintendent.

Jackson, Miss.

The inhabitants of a frog pond close at hand, says the Youngstown Telegram, awakened two little girls who were spending their first night in the country. First, came the high, piping voice of a little "peeper."

"What's that?" asked Winnie.

"I think it's a bird," Susan ventured to reply.

Just then a basso-profundo frog sang one of his lowest tones.

"What's that?" Winnie asked in a startled whisper.

"I'm not quite sure," replied Susan, "but I think it is either a cow or an automobile."—Exchange.

MORNING PRAYER LEAGUE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

During the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference at Clarksdale the Morning Prayer League will meet each morning at 8 o'clock in the Character Builders' class, as designated by the pastor, for song, prayer, testimony, and fellowship in Christ. All members of the Conference, both clerical and lay, are cordially invited to attend and take part in these services.

So spiritually profitable was this half hour of devotion found to the large number attending during the Conference at Columbus last year that it was voted to make the morning prayer a regular feature of our Annual Conference sessions and a committee appointed to arrange for the next year, consisting of T. H. Lipscomb, H. P. Lewis, W. R. Lott.

Rev. H. P. Lewis has been chosen to lead during our approaching session, and his letter in response to the invitation rings so true to the Christian ideals of such a gathering that we take the liberty of publishing it, that all may see the spirit and aims of this organization.

"Yours of the 17th received yesterday. I hesitate to assume responsibility for arranging the program for our morning prayer, but will do the best I can.

"Wonderful possibilities are within our grasp in those services if we are humble and wise enough to realize them. I am sure our Master will be greatly pleased with a band of Methodist preachers daily on their knees, seeking his guidance. So let's seek to make it an occasion for real prayer, of heart-searching, reconsecration, confession, waiting before him, and being still that we may hear his voice speaking to our hearts.

"If we can conduct the services in such a way that he will have the pre-eminence, and our oneness in him is really felt in each heart, and each person is made to feel that he has been brought face to face with his Master, Jesus Christ, I am sure we will all be blessed by them."

Any further announcements concerning the program this year will be made by Brother Lewis.

T. H. LIPSCOMB, Chairman.

"IS HE COMING BACK?"

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

In the months approaching a session of a Methodist Annual Conference it is becoming more and more common to hear the question asked with reference to brother pastors, when referring to them and their work, "Is he going back?" until an outsider who perchance might be "listening in" might decide that Methodist preachers' main business was to please their official constituency and to get a call to be returned to the same pastorate for the succeeding year. This tendency has so grown that there seems to be a spirit of restlessness among both preachers and people that has already led to weakening greatly the efficiency of the ministry and the strength and dignity of the church.

There is no more sense in the continuously changing the pastors of churches than there would be in everlastingly changing physicians in a hospital, clerks in a store, or workmen in a factory. No institution that is continuously having new workmen can be at its best, and no workman can do his best until he is in intelligent sympathy with his constituency. Nowhere is this more true than in the pastorate. It takes time, with its experiences of joys and sorrows with his people, to make a pastor a true shepherd, and capable of rendering his flock the most tender and helpful shepherding, and those churches that have long pasorates, as a rule, have strong constituencies, and those that are always changing pastorates generally are those that are marking time and going nowhere.

Besides this, the economic waste of senseless and continuous moves among preachers is a burden that estatblished churches and worthy ministers should alike protest against. Because Christ and his apostles were always on the move, as was true of the early Methodist prachers, does not justify this in our day of established churches and tried and trained pastors whose characters are each year passed as having "nothing against them." Taking it for granted that there are sometimes misfits in appointing pastors to churches, as in getting clerks in stores, surgeons in hospitals, bookkeepers in banks, or laborers on the farm, what earthly explanation is there that above all of these there should continuously be that growing desire among people to have a new preacher and with some preachers to have new churches? If it be that the preachers are hunting better churches and the people better preachers, is either of these a worthy motive, in the realm of accepted standards of character on the part of the pastors, and of a desire for real shepherding on the part of churches?

In looking for an explanation of this peculiarity of our modern church life, a part of it is in the fact that when worldlings and sinners are "dug up" by a gospel preacher, instead of repenting of the sins that have been condemned, many of them seek to cover the sin by taking spite on the one who uncovered it, just as did those whose sins Jesus and Paul and John Wesley preached against; and one way the sinner has of evening up with the preacher is to stir up opposition to his ministry. And, too, with the saints of his congregation a pastor may himself incur blame by not being as "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord" as he should, sparing himself instead of feeding the flock. Either of these cases is of serious nature, and should be handled, in our church, by "chief overseers." The sinner should be made to behave, and the preacher to get busy; but to change a sinner's pastor won't make him a better man, or to change an unfit pastor won't make him any fitter. The fault should be corrected where the trouble occurs, and not by a ruse that corrects nothing.

One of the main activities of some of our standpat and never-go-forward church officials is to keep their pastors on the move when they fail "to dance to their music;" and a serious tendency with our Methodist superintendency in making appointments of pastors is to listen to this class more than to the leadable and teachable members of the flock who are looking for spiritual food and a place to serve rather than for a position of dictatorship. And as much because of this as for any other reason, pastors should be careful in the selection of those who by reason of their official positions are considered the counsellors of our bishops and presiding elders in the making of the pastors' appointments. Here, at least, we can see that Mr. Wesley had the eye of a "seer" when he wrote into our Discipline that stewards should be "men of solid piety who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline." In these days of large understandings, with the consequent need for correspondingly large financial budgets, we are tempted to substitute men of financial ability for this disciplinary rule of "solid piety;" and in too many instances we are paying for the change by having held over us the whims of worldly dictators, who order preachers to come and go as they will. Here many a preacher has realized the law of cause and effect in "reaping" at the Annual Conference what he or his predecessor has "sowed" at the fourth quarterly conference of the previous year. In looking for stewards, why not go by the disciplinary rule, instead of the financial rule, and put the leadership of our churches into the hands of spiritual people who know spiritual values, and who will co-operate in the program of the church to spiritual ends? Difficulties, you say? Sure; but while one pastor, presiding elder, bishop, or church cannot do this at once, and never perfectly, yet all working together can do much towards this ideal.

As to the senseless eternal moving of preachers, we offer the following as correctives:

1. Let there be an understanding that except for cause—sure-enough cause—preachers are to stay in the pastorates to which they are appointed long enough to do the work that a faithful and efficient minister should do, just as are other classes of workers expected to have their positions permanent. As a rule it takes pastors one year to get acquainted and into sympathetic fellowship with their people, and to learn those with whom and through whom they can work; the second year they can, with a degree of understanding, begin to lead a forward move; and the years after that, all things else being equal, they can lead forth their forces with increasing efficiency, and if studious, consecrated, growing ministers, every after year will add to their power and influence. We are certain that no normal and aggressive pastor can do his best under some three or four years, and the record of the pastorates that we have had knowledge of—especially in large cities—the influence of the pastor has increased yearly on beyond this Methodist time limit. If this be so, why foolishly always be raising the question, "Is he going back?" But should there be just cause for a change of one preacher before a normal time to develop an efficient service, let the move of one offset that of another, and just as few moves be made as possible. An unnecessary change of pastorates not only hinders one in his work in the ministry, but reflects discredit on him who moved, on the church who instigated his move, and on the presiding elder that was party to it.

2. Another consideration should be that pastors as well as churches have rights to be considered when moves are proposed. And here there seems to have developed in our system an unfairness towards pastors, in the effort by our presiding elders to be democratic. Does not democracy, and fraternity, too, require that when a change of preachers is suggested, the needs of the pastor who has the moving to do, who knows most about his plans of work, and the foundations that he has laid, be consulted and equally considered along with the church officials who are proposing the change? Would it not be both fair and wise to acquaint the pastor with every suggestion of the church officials or even have the two parties to the move consider the question together? Some of these secret caucuses of church officials with presiding elders, the contents of which are never known to the pastor whose work and interests are involved, are but little less than trial without representation, and this is not only unjust and unbrotherly, but we believe unwise.

3. A further corrective we offer is that in case church officials ask for the removal of pastors before a reasonably long pastorate, and those who are entrusted with the matter of making the appointments consider the proposition at all, a condition in the interest of the pastor be that his salary be paid in full, and his moving expenses be given him in addition. This would not only be just to the pastor who has not only to pay the moving bills, but must in addition subject his family to the moving ordeal, but would in many instances cool the ardor of some for a new preacher, and so would save many a mistake being made that both people and officials would live to mourn.

The town of Wouldbe, in the oil country in Oklahoma, is said to owe its name to a dispute between a postoffice inspector and a postmaster. The postmaster wanted the town named Mid-Co, but the inspector objected. "It wouldn't do at all," he said. "When the oil is gone what would it be?"

"It would be a town; that's what it would be," the postmaster replied.

"Well, then, if it would be it would be," the inspection replied, and the name Wouldbe remained fixed.—Exchange.

The Home Circle

A RIDDLE.

I have a head, a little head,
That you could scarcely see;
But I have a mouth much bigger
Than my head could ever be.
That seems impossible you say;
You think 'twould be a bother?
Why, no! My head is at one end,
My mouth's way at the other.
I have no feet, yet I can run,
And pretty fast, 'tis said;
The funny thing about me is,
I run when in my bed.
I've not a cent in all the world,
I seek no fortune's ranks;
And yet it's true that, though so poor,
I own two splendid banks.
I've lots of "sand," yet run away;
I am weak, yet "furnish power;"
No hand or arms, yet my embrace
Would kill in half hour.
You think I am some fearful thing,
Ah, you begin to shiver,
Pray, don't for, after all, you know,
I'm only just a river.

A NEW MULTIPLICATION TABLE.

"Oh, I'm going to have such a good time this afternoon!" cried Myra, as she danced through the room where her Aunt Rachel was at last,

"It is so lovely to be out of school at last, auntie!" she went no. "So good to be done with lessons, and to think only of having a good time!"

"I hope you are not leaving all your lessons behind you, dear," said Aunt Rachel, with a smile at the light-hearted lassie-

"Every one of them. Not to give them a thought until our vacation is over. But," turning at the door with an inquiring look, "do you mean that I ought to keep up my lessons, auntie? Mother thinks that, as I had a good deal of headache the last few weeks, I had better not use my eyes much."

"She is right, dear. I was thinking that if you could multiply your good times a little—"

"The very thing I'm going to do all these weeks. Trust me for that!"

"That is right, dear. Take the multiplication table into your pleasures."

"But, do you mean study it? You are puzzling, auntie. But you often are, and then I find you always mean something."

"Puzzle it out, my bird. If you multiply well, you will find it a rich vacation. I mean just that—hold on to the multiplication table. You will be surprised to find how easy it is, and how very delightful."

Later in the day Myra came again, her face this time more thoughtful, but not less happy.

"I've thought it out, auntie—yes, and worked it out."

"And does it work well, my dearie?"

"Oh, so well! Though," with a grave shake of the head, "I had to tackle it pretty hard to make out what you could be meaning. Multiply—multiply pleasures. That seemed easy at first. Just to keep on the lookout for all the pleasures I could possibly get hold of. That is what I had planned for the whole vacation.

"Then I began to think it couldn't be that, or you wouldn't have said what you did. So I hit it. More pleasure—multiply, multiply—but not all for me. The only other way was to get more folks into it."

The small chatterer stopped to look inquiringly at Aunt Rachel, but the latter only smiled and nodded for her to go on.

"I had ten cents to spend for candy. I was going to take my dolls out onto the porch and eat it there. And I had the new St. Nicholas, and I was going to read it. If any of the girls were with me they would expect some of the candy, you see, and I couldn't have a nice, quiet time with the St. Nicholas."

"I see you laid out a very nice afternoon for yourself, dear."

"Yes. Well, as I went for the candy I met the Crane girls. They had walked clear out our way to try to find some wild flowers, and asked me if I knew where they were. They live in a flat, you know, and don't often get out so far. I had gone up the hill for columbine and mandrakes only yesterday, and I did not feel much like going again, but they looked so glad and anxious when I tried to tell them where they were that I said I'd go, and we had a jolly good time. That was a real four times one, wasn't it?"

"It really was."

"When we came back Jane called me to the kitchen and said, 'I see you have company, so you will want some cookies.' So with those and the candy we had a regular little feast. Then Delia Crane read one of the St. Nicholas stories. That was keeping on with the four times, you see, and don't you think I might call it a little bit of a multiplication—just say about two times one?"

"Oh, yes, my dear little girl," and Aunt Rachel put a tender arm about Myra; "for you are certainly learning the new multiplication table!"—Sydney Dayre, in Young Christian Soldier.

MARGARET.

It was the day before the annual prize-giving at the Calcutta Girls' High School. The new missionary sat by the principal, helping make up the "grades" which determined who the prize winners were to be. It would be a great occasion, this day of prize-giving. Representatives from other schools, public officials, missionaries, and even the bishop, would be guests of honor. The government inspector would preside and the prizes would be given away by Her Excellency, the wife of the Governor. Never before had the new missionary participated in anything so thrilling. No wonder she trembled with eagerness to know which of the girls in her classes would receive honors.

When at last the marks had been carefully averaged and compared, one girl, Margaret, was found to have led in almost every subject—first in history, first in second language, first in mathematics, first in general excellence. "Wonderful!" exclaimed the new missionary. "Yes, wonderful!" said the principal. "But more so when you remember her history."

The new missionary scented an interesting story and waited quietly while the principal mused for a moment. Finally she said: "You know Margaret is an orphanage girl." (At that time a small orphanage under the care of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was housed in a building very near the school.) "She was brought to us when but a tiny girl and given over completely to our care by her mother, a woman unfit to care for her own child. All through the years she has been our very own, and it has been such a joy to watch her develop from a puny little child to a fine, strong young girl, abounding in life and energy, clean of body, mind and soul. She has remained on in the orphanage, mothering the little ones, helping in every possible way, being like an elder daughter in the home. In one more year she will sit for her Senior Cambridge certificate. What a joy it will be to see such a culmination after all these years, in the case of one for whom the chance seemed so small!"

Even as she spoke the orphanage "mother," pale with suppressed emotion, entered the room. "Oh, what shall we do!" she exclaimed. "Margaret's mother has come for her!"

"Margaret's mother! Why, we have not seen her for years! Why does she want her now?" said the principal.

"She says she is ill and poor and she needs her help," was the reply.

"Does Margaret know about this? What does she say?"

"Yes, she knows. She does not realize the danger, of course, and says that, while she wishes she need not go, she must do so if her mother needs her."

"Then," said the principal, "nothing can be done. The law gives her to her mother."

"Nothing can be done?" repeated the new missionary under her breath. "Something must be done." But what? Suddenly she thought of dear Bishop Warne over at the Deaconess Home. She would ask him. Running across the campus she rushed into the presence of the good bishop, at that moment finishing his breakfast in company with the sainted Miss Maxey and half dozen other guests. When he heard the story, he said with deep feeling, "That must not be." And then, as naturally as breathing, he quietly said: "Let us pray." Such a prayer as that, the new missionary had never heard before. She will never forget the feeling of calm assurance that all would be well with which she rose from her knees.

That very day the busy bishop took time to lay Margaret's case before a generous and wealthy friend who promised to pay all her expenses to Isabella Thoburn College until she should finish her course there. Margaret was soon on her way to Lucknow and the mother was mollified.

Six years passed by. The new missionary was invited to an alumnae banquet at the woman's college. The guests were seated and all in readiness for the dinner when a messenger arrived and handed a telegram to the principal. It proved to be a message from the president of the Alumnae Association, expressing her deep regret at being unable to be present. "Whom," asked the principal, when she had read the message to the company, "will you have as your toastmistress?" "Margaret! Margaret!" came the answer with one voice.

Imagine the eagerness with which the missionary from Calcutta watched a tall, attractive girl with wavy black hair and remarkably bright, alert face, rise in her place and, with absolute self-possession and dignity, open the program with a speech seldom surpassed in its aptness and illustration and richness of thought and yet abounding in clever humor. And this was Margaret, who came so near the fatal precipice and whom the bishop's prayer and interest had saved.

But Margaret did not stop there. Ever since, she has climbed steadily upward, and to-day stands high among the educators of her native land. And let me add that at least 4 missionaries who are supported by our young people's department have had a part in the making of Margaret what she is to-day, and that Margaret is but one of hundreds of girls whom these same missionaries have led into a more abundant life, full of promise for the girls themselves and for the future of the kingdoms in the lands where they live.—Woman's Missionary Friend.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate will meet in regular annual session at the Advocate office, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La., Thursday, Oct. 13, at 10 o'clock a. m. A full meeting of the Committee is desired.

W. WINANS DRAKE, Chairman.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The work at Bonita, La., under the leadership of Rev. J. W. Faulk, is moving along nicely, with prospects for a full report at Conference.

Mr. J. Campbell White has accepted the position of general secretary of the Men's Church League, and Mr. Frank H. Robson has accepted the call to become working president.

Brother W. B. Thomson, of this city, has a complete set of Clark's Commentary for sale. Those interested should write his pastor, Rev. B. C. Taylor, 1110 Louisiana Avenue, New Orleans.

Roland Faulk, son of Rev. J. W. Faulk, of the Louisiana Conference, was licensed to preach at the recent session of the Monroe District Conference. He is a sophomore in Centenary College.

Dr. C. C. Jarrell, Secretary of the General Hospital Board, accompanied by Mrs. Jarrell, spent last Sunday in New Orleans, preaching at Parker Memorial in the morning and at Carrollton Avenue in the evening.

Mrs. L. R. Stewart, of Pelahatchie, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, says: "The Advocate has been coming to my home ever since I can remember, and I do not feel that I can do without it."

We learn from "Big Brother" that the trustees have been authorized to proceed with the sale of the present parsonage at Greenville, Miss., and to purchase the Reynolds residence on Washington Avenue. It will be several weeks before the deal is finally closed.

Rev. A. M. Serex, pastor of the Second Methodist Church, this city, assisted Rev. L. R. Nease in a gracious meeting at Kaplan, La., last week. There were several additions to the membership of the church, and the Sunday school was reorganized.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., returned from Europe on Sept. 16, and sailed for Brazil, where he will hold the three Brazil Conferences, on Sept. 24. Bishop Cannon's health has improved, but he is not yet equal to full work. He expects to return to the United States about Nov. 22.

Dr. O. M. Trousdale was installed last Sunday as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, this city, to succeed Dr. George H. Cornelson, who resigned the pulpit several months ago on account of ill health. This is the church made famous years ago by the pastorate of Dr. B. M. Palmer.

A "revival for everybody" is in progress this week at Louisville, Miss., where the pastor, Rev. Thomas H. Lipscomb, is being assisted by Rev. H. M. Ellis, Mississippi Conference evangelist. Services will be held daily at 10 o'clock a. m. and 7:30 p. m., with special services for young people in the afternoons.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, after two successful meetings in Oklahoma, is now at Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., assisting the pastor, Rev. T. M. Brownlee, in a largely attended and very successful revival. After the meeting at Jackson, Brother Smoot will go to Heavener, Okla., for a meeting with Rev. Mike Cassidy.

Upon the completion of ten years as president of the Baptist Bible Institute, this city, Dr. H. B. De Ment was tendered a luncheon on Friday of last week, at which the Protestant ministers of the city and other distinguished guests were present. The Institute is one of the great factors in the success of the Baptist church in New Orleans within recent years.

The American Prison Association for many years has observed the fourth Sunday in October as "Prison Sunday," and it urges all pastors who can do so join with it in the observance. Mr. J. F. Thames, of Mississippi, is a member of the board of directors of the Association, and Rev. H. S. Johns, of Louisiana, and Rev. John L. Sutton, of Misssissippi, are active in its work.

Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, is busily engaged with the fourth round of quarterly conferences. The full list of appointments will appear next week. The following are for the next two weeks: Bayou Blue, at Bayou Blue, Oct. 14, p.m.; Terrebonne, at Point au Chien, Oct. 15, p.m.; Houma, at Houma, Oct. 19, p.m.; Morgan City, Oct. 20, p.m.

Rev. E. L. Cargill, our pastor at Cotton Valley, La., has our thanks for two subscriptions to the Advocate. He states that he will begin a meeting at Cotton Valley on Oct. 9, with Rev. J. B. Williams, of Coushatta, La., doing the preaching after the first day. Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Minden District, will preach on the first day and hold the quarterly conference.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, our pastor at Philadelphia, Miss., under date of Oct. 1, writes: "We are closing out a good year in this charge, and in every way I think we are in good shape. Twenty-eight took the Cokesbury course. Our Sunday school is especially worth while, and last Sunday was the best day we have had since we came here two years ago. We shall be ready for the call at Jackson when the time comes."

The Belmont charge, Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, has made a fine record this year. The charge reported in full on salary and benevolences at its fourth quarterly conference, Sept. 26, and there have been seventy-three additions to the membership on profession of faith. We wonder if there is another charge in our three Conferences that can equal this report. Rev. W. W. Bruner is the faithful pastor.

Dr. W. L. Duren, pastor of St. Mark's Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga., and formerly pastor of Rayne Memorial, this city, spent last Friday and Saturday in New Orleans attending to some personal business. Dr. Duren has in preparation a volume dealing with the life of Asbury, which we predict will be a real contribution to the literature on that subject. He expects to make a trip to New York next week to examine some source material.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, our pastor at West Monroe, La., was operated on for appendicitis last week, and for a time he was in a critical condition. A note from Dr. N. E. Joyner, presiding elder of the Monroe District, received on Monday of this week, brought the good news that his condition was somewhat improved. Dr. Joyner also stated that the condition of Rev. D. C. Barr, whose illness we reported last week, is somewhat better. Let the prayers of their brethren continue to ascend in behalf of these faithful ministers.

In celebration of the one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the coming of Methodism to Nashville, Tenn., McKendree Church will have a "Pilgrimage" on Sunday, Oct. 9. All former members of McKendree, wherever located, are cordially invited to be present on that occasion, and such members are requested to communicate with the pastor, Dr. H. B. Trimble, if they find it convenient to be present. Those who cannot attend are urged to send a greeting to the pastor to be read before the congregation or to be filed with the committee in charge of the "Pilgrimage."

Rev. A. M. Shaw, of Mooringsport, La., is in a meeting this week at Blanchard, and will begin one at Mooringsport next Sunday. He and his good wife are delighted that their eldest son, A. M. Shaw, Jr., is now asssociate professor of English in Centenary College, and their daughter, Miss Eleanor, is a sophomore this year, specializing in music and expression. Another member of this gifted family, Professor Joseph Collins Shaw, has entered upon his second year in charge of the science department of the high school at Welsh, La. Brother Shaw's work at Mooringsport is in a prosperous condition.

Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, a daughter of the late Rev. R. A. Davis, of the Louisiana Conference, is planning to open a school for pre-school age children in her home, 7841 Willow street, New Orleans, on Oct. 10. The course will consist of work similar to that given in daily vacation Bible schools, together with supervised play. The classes will meet each day, from Monday to Friday, from 9:30 to 11:30 o'clock. A reasonable tuition charge will be made. Mrs. Crichlow is the wife of Dr. R. S. Crichlow, prominent physician of New Orleans and active in the work of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church.

The New Orleans District Standard Training School will be held this year at Rayne Memorial, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 23. Courses will be given in Beginner, Primary, Intermediate-Senior, and Young People's work, with an additional course in "Sunday School Management. The faculty will be composed of the following: Mrs. H. D. Gurrant, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. W. D. Ferguson, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. W. F. Cann, Opelika, Ala.; Rev. H. L. Johns, Natchitoches, La.; Rev. Clem Baker, Little Rock, Ark. The instructor for the Young People's work is to be secured. The session of the school will begin at 7:30 o'clock each evening during the week.

Our church at Corinth, Miss., Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor, has adopted the plan of combining the Sunday school with the preaching service.

The Sunday school meets promptly at 9:45 o'clock, the classes go to their places at 10 o'clock, and at 10:30 all reassemble in the main auditorium, the closing exercises of the school constituting the opening of the preaching service. The praching service closes promptly at 11:30 o'clock. The purpose of this change is to make it possible for the children to attend preaching. If it accomplishes this purpose—and we believe it will—the plan is greatly to be commended. All of the churches of Corinth have adopted this plan.

As the result of a tragic automobile accident, Miss Hattie Renfro, employed as a city missionary by the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, La., lost her life last week. Miss Renfro was one of the best known and most efficient workers among the city poor in this section, and her death will be keenly felt by those in Shreveport to whom she had ministered so devotedly for the past fifteen years. It seems that the accident that cost the life of this noble Christian worker was one of those "unavoidable" happenings that so often bring tragic sorrow—according to newspaper accounts she stepped in front of an unseen approaching automobile as she was hurrying to catch a street car to go to prayer meeting. Her memory is as precious ointment poured forth among the many to whom she has ministered.

Rev. C. C. Clark, our pastor at Benton, Miss., has our thanks for a list of fifteen subscriptions to the Advocate—fourteen new and one renewal—accompanied by check to cover. He writes: "We have had a good year on the Benton charge and everything is favorable for paying all our claims in full. Our revivals were successful and helpful to our charge. Brother J. E. Williams did the preaching at Benton, Brother M. L. Burton at Midway, and Brother J. H. Moore at Zieglerville. Each of these brethren brought us messages from God's Word that were spiritually helpful to our people. We had twenty-six additions by profession of faith. We feel that a work has been done that will abide."

DEDICATION OF REAVES CHAPEL.

In the year 1848, there was deeded to the Methodist church a plot of ground near what is now Oakley, Miss., and a church was erected thereon. For nearly one hundred years the people of the community worshiped at her altar; here their children found Christ, and here took the marriage vows, and from this altar they buried their dead.

In 1925, while Dr. B. F. Jones was pastor and the last year of his quadrennium, the old church was badly in need of much repair. We are told that some of the people thought best to abandon the old church, the membership going to the nearest church of their choice; but through the leadership of this faithful pastor, the work of rebuilding was begun, and the people inspired to finish the church free of debt.

When the writer came as pastor, he found the frame up, and the roof on. The church has been finished, and is a credit to the community and a monument to the fidelity of its membership. Since finishing the church, a new piano has been installed.

On Oct. 9, we are to dedicate the church. This is also to be a home-coming day for all the present and former membership.

All the former pastors are cordially invited to be present. The dedicatory sermon is to be preached by Dr. B. F. Jones.

Edwards, Miss. J. O. WARE, P. C.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Admission on Trial.

The candidates for admission on trial are asked to meet the committee at the Methodist church in Clarksdale, Tuesday morning, Nov. 1, at 9 o'clock, ready to report for their examination as required by the Discipline.

R. P. NEBLETT, Chairman.

THE INNER CIRCLE.

By Rev. W. R. Lott.

When our Lord was ready to go up on the mountain to be transfigured he took with him three disciples, Peter, James, and John, who had the privilege of seeing and hearing what was done in that hour. We are not sure just why these three men were chosen unless it was thought that they might be able to better understand the mystical experience through which they would be led. It is only when we are close in that we see these spiritual lights and hear the voices from above. It seemed so good to one of them (Peter) that he said, in substance, "let us just stay on here." To see the light, the cloud and to hear men speak of heavenly things was something he wanted prolonged indefinitely. Jesus is calling all of us to come up close to him. There is where we get away from the sordid things of earth, and we can hear our Father's voice telling us what is pleasing to him. How pleasant it is to sit in company where all have a common bond and mutual experience. So it is in religion. If we sit close in and see, then we will be able to help those who crowd around the foot of the mountain calling for help. In fact, there will always be some looking up, waiting for us to come down and tell what was seen and heard when we sat in the inner circle.

CHECKING UP.

By Rev. R. S. Satterfield, D.D.

"We believe the affairs of the company are under able and conservative management, as is evidenced by the marked increase in assets, surplus funds and insurance in force."

This quotation is taken from the State examiner's report of one of the big life insurance companies. Other statements in the report are: "The affairs of the company have been carefully reviewed," "Thorough test checks were made," "A detailed accounting was made of all expenses," "All ledger assets were carefully verified," "Numerous other items of a regular character were inspected," "Your examiners have made close investigation as to the company's practice in handling applications," "The books and records of the company are kept in an efficient manner."

The full report is sworn to and signed by the auditors who made the examination. Knowledge that checking up of this kind is to be made, helps the officers and employees of large corporations to be careful and honest in their accounting and it is an incentive, making them work hard for more business and larger profits. These reports inform the public, resulting in wide confidence and patronage.

Checking up time will soon be here for Methodist preachers. It is good for us that these checking up times come. It stimulates us to greater effort. If we go back and read the brief quotation from the examiner's report, we discover that there is in it evidence of very careful and honest bookkeeping on the part of the insurance company. The only preacher who can make an honest, truthful report at Conference is the one who has carefully and faithfully kept books all during the year.

The preacher who can make a correct report is the one who has made proper entry of the names of those who have joined the church and of those who have been dismissed or have died. He has kept a careful record of baptisms of infants and of adults. The treasurer of his board of stewards has kept books and so have the secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school, of the Epworth League and of the Missionary Society. The benevolences have been carefully handled and accurate accounts kept. It is a hard thing to say, but it is true that a "guessed at" report is neither accurate nor honest. Suppose preachers had to swear to the reports made at Conference, as did the examiner of the report before us of the insurance company. Church reports are as sacred as if they had to be sworn to.

"We believe the affairs are under able and conservative management." Such is the report concerning the insurance company. Will it help us to ask if that will be true of our reports, as Methodist preachers? "Able" management. The manager has worked hard. He has done his best to keep informed. He has studied faithfully. He has been on the job all the time. Nothing has been done half-heartedly or flimsily. He has put his best into every task. Blessed is the preacher who has no smiting of conscience as he tests his year's work by the standards of this business corporation.

"Conservative management." Based upon sound principles, honest effort, free from exaggerated reports. As applied to the preacher, he has followed the program of the church, he and his people have been honest in all credits they have taken on programs of work, standards of efficiency, average attendance reported in Sunday school, visits made, hours of social work rendered, tithes paid. The report of the conversions in the protracted meeting and the other benefits derived from it were not exaggerated. The increase in attendance on preaching services, in the Epworth League and Sunday school, as reported, when compared with the pastorate of the former preacher, is strictly truthful. Is there any reason why a preacher should allow himself to make a less reliable report about his work than the corporation makes?

"Your examiners have made a close investigation as to the company's practices." If instead of formally "passing the character" of preachers, the Conference should "make a close investigation" of all the preacher's "practices," would there be anything brought to light to shame us? Has any time been wasted, or spent foolishly, or in excessive outings and pleasures, or in money-making contrary to the sacred obligation assumed when the vows were taken on being ordained and admitted into the Conference? Have there been any periods of laziness, ill temper, evil speaking of others, ugly attitudes towards those who have not seen just like the preacher sees or been as true to him as they should? What would "a close investigation" bring out that would not be to the credit of a minister of the gospel and a pastor?

"As is evidenced by the marked increase." Increase, growth, are regarded as evidences of faithfulness on the part of those who have had charge of the company.

These are the chief tests of a preacher's work. Has he built up the work? Have his people grown in Christian experience, in religious activities, in liberality? Sometimes too much emphasis is put on the financial reports. Reports circulate around that some preachers paid their salaries, as a bishop termed it, reporting an excessive amount paid by themselves or their families. Sunday schools sometimes want to be reported as missionary schools, but want to keep the offering taken on Missionary Sundays for the use of the school or to apply on some church obligation. The appeal made to the people to pay to the church is sometimes made on the ground of the necessity of making good reports or keeping up a high record. There were those, so the Master said, who blew trumpets and wanted everybody to know about their liberal gifts. But Jesus said the poor woman gave more than they because she gave in deep love. Liberality in contributing to the church is a mark of a true Christian if it is done in a right spirit, with a right motive.

"Marked increase." Yes, real increase and growth are the evidences that a preacher is doing good work. Flurry at or near the end of Conference year is not sufficient to give substantial increase. The preacher who will be able to make an honest report, showing real increase, increase that will endure, is the preacher who has been working faithfully all the year. Soon will be the checking up, Conference, bringing its regrets or its joys.

MRS. H. O. WHITE.

The subject of this sketch, Eliza Martha Robinett, was born Oct. 31, 1846, near Cheneyville, Rapides Parish, La. She was one of twelve children, all of whom lived to maturity. Five of her brothers served in the Civil War, and all of these died from the effects of army service. Her father's plantation home was frequently visited by Methodist preachers, and doubtless her life was deeply affected by the influence of the men of God who enjoyed the courteous hospitality of her childhood home. On Nov. 18, 1868, she was happily married to Rev. Henry O. White, of the Louisiana Conference, at her father's home in St. Landry Parish, the ceremony being performed by her husband's elder brother, Rev. B. F. White, who also had been her teacher. To this union were born eleven children, seven of whom lived to mature age. Of these the youngest, Howard Octavus, died in a camp hospital in Lemans, France, Dec. 17, 1918. Referring to this heavy blow, and the like fate of her five brothers, she often spoke of how war had desolated her home. She passed away peacefully on July 31, 1927, at her home near Ruston, La., after a brief illness. On the Sunday before her going, she was surrounded by her five daughters, her son and son-in-law, six of her seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She was not suffering, and the day seemed a happy one to her. During this last illness, she received the constant loving care and tender ministries of her children, and the physician who attended her, a nephew, Dr. Stewart L. White, left nothing undone that might relieve her sufferings. For more than forty years she discharged successfully the duties of an itinerant preacher's wife; a position of great difficulties, responsibilities and sacrifices, but at the same time offering rare opportunities of helpful service. She bore the burdens and discharged the duties of this position with unfailing fidelity and patience, a true companion and helper to her husband. Such quiet and often unnoticed service as she rendered in this capacity will surely receive its equal share in the reward of her husband's service in the Kingdom. Her chief sphere of service was in the home, where she relieved the strain of her husband's burdens, and reared her large family to usefulness in the church and society. The finest tribute to her faithfulness and success in this high sphere, is to be found in the faith and Christian character of her children. She is survived by one son and five daughters, Henry W. White, of Shreveport; Mrs. Leola Nixon, of Ruston; Misses Nettie, Daisy and Marilena White, of Ruston, and Mrs. I. A. Hearn, of Columbia, all of whom are active and useful members of the Methodist church. To the very end of her life, she was cheerful and mentally alert, a great reader, enjoying especially the church papers, and deeply interested in the success and progress of the church which she loved, and to which she had given her life. She loved to participate by such contributions as her means made possible, in the causes fostered by the church, and sent in her offerings toward each special cause without waiting to be called upon. Besides her own children, several orphan children were, at different times, inmates of her home. In fact, her whole life was spent in service to others. In the days of her increasing feebleness, when unable to take her place in the public worship, she always welcomed the visits of her pastor, and enjoyed the season of prayer in the family circle. She looked cheerfully and with confidence toward the unknown future, with its blessed hope. Amid the sorrowing circle of her family, and surrounded by a company of sympathizing friends, her body was laid to rest in the Ruston cemetery, after an appropriate service conducted by Revs. N. E. Joyner and R. W. Vaughan. Her immortal spirit has gone to join her sainted husband and children in the place which her Lord had gone to prepare for her.

W. WINANS DRAKE.

BENJAMIN TERRY.

On Monday morning, Sept. 19, almost without warning, Benjamin Terry, of Sledge, Miss., was called to his reward. The doctor pronounced it acute indigestion. Ben Terry was the son of Elisha Terry. He was 55 years of age. Thirty-one years ago he was married to Miss Lizzie Parnell, of Pleasant Grove, Miss., by her pastor, Rev. W. M. Young. Four children—two boys and two girls—blessed their home, all of whom survive him. Ben Terry joined the Methodist church early in life, and was a loyal and devout member all his life, and an official in his church. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was a diligent man, a high-toned gentleman. He commanded the love and respect of a large acquaintance. An immense crowd of friends assembled at the old church and burying ground at the funeral. The services were conducted by Rev. W. M. Young, assisted by Rev. J. H. Holder. The Masons of Crenshaw and Sledge said the last rites at the grave. The immense crowd gave testimony to the high esteem in which he was held by a host of friends.

MRS ANGIE GALLEGLY was born April 23, 1850, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, Coahoma, Miss., April 8, 1927. Before her marriage she was Miss Angie King, and was a native of Mississippi. She was twice married, the first time to A. M. Arnold, Abbeville, Miss., on Dec. 31, 1867. To this union five children were born, but only one, Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, of Coahoma, Miss., survives. After the death of her first husband she was married in 1880 to Mr. B. A. Gallegly, also of Abbeville, Miss. To this union were born four children, and only one of these is living, Mrs. Robert Graham, of Natchez, Miss. Her second husband died a number of years ago. Mrs. Gallegly lived at Abbeville, Miss., practically all of her life. For more than sixty years she was a devoted Christian; a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Abbeville, Miss. As a mother she has wrought well, as is attested by the character of her children who live after her. As a neighbor her works are attested by the highest esteem and devotion in which she is held by all who knew her. As a Christian she was ever faithful to her Master and to the church of her choice, and died unafraid, as she trusted in the Lord whom she had loved and worshiped so long. Truly one of the Master's own has been called home after a long life of devoted usefulness. The writer and her pastor, Rev. E. L. Jernigan, assisted by many loving and sorrowing friends, laid her weary body to rest on the Lord's day at Abbeville, Miss., while her soul mingles with those who have gone before.

R. G. LORD.

MRS. WILLIE JOSEPHINE HESTER, daughter of W. J. and Josephine Whyte, was born at Mansfield, La., Aug. 1, 1864. She was married to L. B. Hester in 1883. Ten children were born to this union, of whom two have gone before. She died at the home of her sons, L. J. and H. E. Hester, Jackson, Miss., Aug. 1, 1927, the day on which she was 63 years old. She had been ill several months, and gradually grew worse, until the end came. She was a precious mother, a sweet Christian. Her life was one of unselfishness, always quiet and unassuming. Her memory remains as a benediction to all who knew her. She joined the Methodist church in early life. She was laid to rest in the "Old Home Town," Bond, Miss., by the side of her sweet babe, who had gone on. Besides her husband, L. B. Hester, she leaves behind her to mourn her loss four sons and four daughters. There will her precious body rest until the resurrection; and until then, farewell, sweet mother of mine. We will meet again.

A devoted daughter,

MRS. J. M. MASHBURN.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.
Life's but a means unto an end; that end—
Beginning, mean and end to all things—God."

"LEST WE FORGET."

Those days of the past—how they live in us still! How closely, how radiantly are they locked in our love! In faint, sweet echoing chimes "They haunt the chambers of our hearts like some old poet's rhymes." Shrouded in the glamour of romance and mystery, they beckon from afar. How delightfully intriguing it is to have flashed on the screen, segments of the long ago—vaunting barbaric legions "all gleaming in purple and gold," the fabled swan-ships of Egypt's queen, laurel-wreathed victors of Athenian fame, the cloak of Sir Walter Raleigh or the sword of Robert E. Lee.

Over such gilded stepping-stones, we have reached our unassailable position; they rest secure in cloistered corners of memory, and it is well.

Yet we are far removed. We would not slip back to those days. However alluring as a background, we yearn not for the Roman toga, nor to see our boys clad as gleaming cohorts or wielding Ivanhoe's blade.

Our sweet puritan maids, and gallant silk-ruffled courtiers, those stern defenders of liberty and justice, we gladly claim as parents several times removed; those dust-laden, glory-crowned followers of our Davis, Jackson and Lee, we hold the dearest and bravest of the brave; yet most happy are we of the marching years of progress and fuller development granted us. However, if we could, we would carry over from each age the gift of some unconquerable quality.

So, while we ever strive to make a better world, we can never forget the glories inherited from the past, and O how wise would be that people who kept much of the best of those days active in building a greater future!

The Woman's Missionary Society has been spoken of as international, inter-denominational, inter-racial. I'd like to coin a new word and also call it inter-ageal. It is a creature of three tenses, past, present and future. We of the present occupy that sacred middle place of double obligation. You know 'tis said that we can only meet the immeasurable debt to our parents through our children. So is all life and work. As we review and re-appreciate the past, we revaluate the present and re-dedicate our best efforts to the future.

I believe the finest compliment I ever heard paid our Missionary Society was in the form of a definition which said, "The Woman's Missionary Society is a school in which is taught the greatest Art in the world."

Let us pause a moment to consider what is the greatest art. Do you say Painting? Yes, Painting. Painting for all the peoples of the earth, the appealing picture of our Father-God whose mercies are from everlasting to everlasting; who, looking upon a poor, blighted, sin-compassed world, so loved us that, with infinite compassion, he sent his only Son that whosoever believeth in him may not perish, but have eternal life; who said, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow."

But some say Music. Yes, Music—wafting, to the uttermost parts, the swelling anthem of glad tidings whose symphony first rang o'er the Judean hills two thousand years ago. "For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Then you say Poetry. Yes, Poetry—giving to every tongue and tribe the rhythm and harmony of the life of Jesus, who went about doing good, of whom it is said, "Tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin," and of whom the judge said, "I find no fault in him."

But what motive is it that makes possible the giving to a world of this painting of our God, this poetry of our Lord and the music of their love? The motive is kindness; simple, loving kindness, an attribute inherited through our likeness to our Maker. Then surely the Art of kindness, of helpfulness, of service is the greatest art of all. There is a little snatch of poetry which says:

"So many cults, so many creeds,
So many ways that wind and wind;
While just the art of being kind
Is all that this sad world needs."

Is it not beautiful, the thought of our Society as a school for teaching kindness? But O how careful must we be to learn it aright. To teach it in his name and by his Spirit. In this golden fiftieth year, let us try to roll back the pages and grasp again something of that Enoch-spirit held by the founders of our organization.

We are drawing into our school each month more interested pupils to learn this greatest of arts—a breathing, palpitating, world-encompassing kindness; our thoughtful kindness is blossoming day by day, with wise tenderness, into a broader multiplied helpfulness. Our Societies are developing, are expanding, are strengthening every year, yes, every quarter, even before our very eyes. With programs and leaflets, studies, committees and moneys, our missionary life is very full, and it is well.

And yet there was a time when earnest meditative seasons were given to thoughtful communion before each momentous monthly meeting. And sometimes I fear that, because of much and intimate acquaintance with our dear Society, we lose something of that early reverence and insufficiency; that, in our busy rushing hours, in our care for detail and form, we forget to linger at the source of all our strength.

We want to grow, we want to develop into the most perfect organization possible, because it is an auxiliary to the Master, and nothing less than our best is worthy of offering him. And, with this goal in view, we must not falter. The King's business requireth haste, and there are those who perish while we wait. We must be a busy bark, with the waves of our influence and helpfulness, in ever widening circles, lapping the shores of every land. But O, while we launch into wider uncharted seas, as we press ever forward toward the mark, carrying with us securely the talisman of our service, the purpose for which we sprang into being; may we remember that the more arduous our labors, the more often must we stoop and quaff from the life-giving stream. May we keep that spirit of faith and dependence on God so manifested by our pioneer-mothers, who, when they sought his will, tarried for the vibrant whisper of his reply. May our voices, rising to him in one blending chorus of petition, then be hushed into listening, in a sublime silence of obedience, for the still small voice.

Herman says: "With activities multiplying around us, and the call of a world's need in our ears, we are at times tempted to neglect the quiet place. To walk with God in the cool of the day seems a misuse of time when so much remains to be done. There is, indeed, no cool of the day for us; it is always sweltering noon, and toil as we may the evening bell still tarries."

Let us not be deceived, still stands the ancient trysting place, where the clash of the world is not heard; from which we may come with the sound of crystal fountains in our voice, the radiance of sunlit flowers mirrored in our eyes and a breath of pure, fragrant zephyrs in our heart.

"God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle line,
Beneath whose pow'ful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine:
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!"

MABEL LOVE BROWN.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The last Sunday School Day offerings to reach the office are as follows: Columbia, $20; Monroe, First Church, $17.67; Grand Cane, $12. As the date of the Annual Conference is rapidly approaching we trust that all of our schools will report on this phase of the work as early as possible.

Our next Standard Training Schools will be held at Monroe, Shreveport and New Orleans, as Ruston has just closed a successful school, report of which will be given in a future issue. Monroe has issued its official program, and the school will be held Oct. 9-14, with the following committees named: Publicity, Rev. Marion S. Monk; Entertainment, Mrs. W. A. Walker; Arrangement, Mrs. J. B. Pollard; Enrollment, Mr. A. W. Trotter; Finance, Mr. S. M. Collins. Entertainment will be furnished to all out-of-town students enrolled in this school. The faculty will include Rev. A. S. Lutz, Rev. N. E. Joyner, Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, and Mrs. Jessie Wood Nance.

We are interested to receive a carbon copy of a letter sent to Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, of New Orleans, by Mrs. Cora Court, of Nashville, in regard to development of the Parent-Teacher work in the Carrollton Avenue Sunday school in New Orleans, and it is indeed gratifying to hear of the plans being laid by Mrs. Crichlow along this important line.

We are pleased to know that Mrs. Jessie Wood Nance, of Westmoreland College, San Antonio, Tex., will again be with Louisiana Teacher-Training folk, as she will teach both in the Monroe and Shreveport schools.

A splendid report of the work being done by the Elementary workers in the Shreveport District has reached us, and is so interesting we record it here. This was sent to us by Mrs. N. L. Hudson, District Secretary:

"We held our Elementary Conference for Shreveport District in April, with a fine attendance and good program. Since then two sub-district meetings. One was at Noel Memorial, with thirty-seven elementary workers present and an interesting program, including a talk on 'Missions in the Elementary Division,' by Mrs. Venable, of Noel Memorial; 'What Our Parent-Teacher Organization is Meaning to Us,' by Mrs. Robinson, of First Church, Shreveport; 'Enlarged Children's Week,' by Mrs. W. W. Holmes, our State Elementary Superintendent; and 'Sub-District Goals,' by Mrs. N. L. Hudson.

"Sunday afternoon, the 25th instant, we go to Hosston for a meeting with Sub-District No. 1 Elementary workers. Mrs. R. E. Smith will speak on 'Home-Parent-Teacher Work.' Mrs. Venable will speak on 'Missions,' Mrs. Hudson on 'Enlarged Children's Week and Sub-District Goals;' Mrs. G. M. Hicks will lead the devotional. We regret that Mrs. Holmes will not be with us, due to the illness of her son.

"We are stressing the working on Standards; and trust the coming year will be a banner one for this district."

We are in receipt of the official report of the Natchitoches Standard Training School, showing the following results:

"St. Mark's Life of Jesus," taught by Dean R. E. Smith, 26 credits; "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School," taught by Dr. W. W. Holmes, 8 credits; "Story-Telling in Religious Education," taught by Mrs. W. W. Templeton, 13 credits; "The Small Sunday School," taught by Rev. A. K. McLellan, 4 credits. The school was a fine one from every standpoint.

Our week-end trip included visits to Mansfield and Ruston. At Mansfield we answered an urgent invitation from Brother Law, the superintendent of the Sunday school, to take part on the Promotion Day program. This was indeed a delightful occasion, the program taking place at the 11 o'clock hour, with a fine attendance and fine interest. The departments were well conducted and we congratulate Brother Law on his splendid group of departmental superintendents, all of whom are ladies. Heading the Cradle Roll Department is Mrs. Charles Stevenson; Beginners, Mrs. C. K. Shepherd; Primary, Mrs. D. B. Raulins; Junior, Mrs. J. C. Coyle; Intermediate-Senior, Mrs. A. L. Carter; Adult, Mrs. J. B. Williams. We noticed from the Bulletin of this school that the attendance the preceding Sunday had been 368.

We often hear the lament that "old-time hospitality is disappearing." Your writer urges you to visit Mansfield if you are of this opinion. It was impossible to accept the invitations of all these good people for dinner, and as our stay was limited we could not even divide our time, and upon a special plea of the pastor, our good Brother W. C. Childress, we enjoyed greatly a visit in his home, and were sorry that we could not visit the superintendent, the president of the college, and others who so kindly urged us. In the afternoon Brother Law and his wife drove us to Shreveport, whence we wended our way to Ruston.

This was the writer's first visit to Mansfield since the passing of Prof. Bobbitt, and we missed him greatly from his usual place in the church and its work.

We reached Ruston in time for the opening Standard Training School on Sunday evening. There was a fine enrollment of about 70 workers. We were entertained in the parsonage by the good pastor and his wife. This was another taste of ye old hospitality. Sister Drake excels in many ways, not the least of which is her Southern waffles, and it is always a delight to spend a night in her home with the anticipation of this excellent viand for breakfast, and she does not disappoint one!

On Monday morning we held a faculty meeting at 9 o'clock that was full of interest, and reached home via Winnfield about 6:30 p. m.

Dr. Drake, as chairman of the Sunday School Board, is arranging a fine program for the anniversary meeting of the Sunday School Board at the Annual Conference, which will meet this year in Baton Rouge. Dr. John W. Shackford, General Secretary, will be the principal speaker, and the meeting will be held on Thursday, Dec. 1, at 7:30 p. m.

We acknowledge an announcement of the marriage of Miss Cora Perkins, of New Orlaans, to Mr. James Hamilton Bunch, of Florida. We extend our hearty good wishes to this fine young couple. Miss Perkins has been in charge of the Cokesbury course at Nashville, and Mr. Bunch Superintendent of Adult Work in the Florida Conference.

We note from the copy of the church calendar for October, sent to us from "The Forward Looking Church" of West Monroe, that the pastor, Dr. Lutz, has the writer scheduled to preach in that church at the evening hour, Oct. 5, which will be "Sunday School Night."

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Literature has been requested by fifty schools and has been sent to them for the purpose of observing Enlarged Children's Week during the early part of October. It is difficult to estimate the value of a visit of each teacher into the homes of boys and girls. The purpose of these visits is to get into a closer touch with the home life of these children and young people, to cultivate the spirit of friendliness, to invite the parents to attend the service held in behalf of these young people. At this service the pageant is to be given and a forward step is to be taken in behalf of the children of the church. Why shrink from work when so much is at stake?

It is our purpose to make an exhibit at our Annual Conference that we may see something of the progress that has been made in giving religious education. We want pictures of all new buildings, posters, maps, handwork of any kind, pictures of classes that are doing work that is more than the ordinary, pictures of training classes, any item that indicates growth. It is not possible to visit all the places within a year's time, therefore we are asking all who care to take part in this enterprise to send any of the above mentioned items to the Conference Superintendent of Sunday Schools early in October.

The reports on the observance of Sunday School Day are disappointing. The entire offering made on this occasion is used for the promotion of training work in the Conference. From present indications it appears that we have done one hundred per cent more training of teachers than at any time in the past, more surveys have been made, a larger number of schools have observed Promotion and Training Day than ever, the workers are taking their task more seriously and are doing better work. We projected this work with faith in our leaders; we believed they would stand by us to the limit. We still have faith. Although we have had an increase in missionary instruction and in the missionary offering we have fallen short of our privilege. Please send the amounts you have to the treasurer of the Sunday School Board before the session of the Annual Conference.

We have checked a number of schools and will continue as long as we can. The reports show marked progress in nearly every school visited. We are weak on two important items, Worship and Evangelism. Here is where we must put the emphasis next year. The quality of teaching has improved in every school that has trained teachers. The schools that have neglected the training of their teachers are still traveling in a circle. Where will they land with their precious cargo?

This is the time when all the praying people who are deeply interested in the task of giving Christian education and training in Christian attitudes and Christian conduct should unite in daily prayer for the presence

GOOD WORK AT TROUT-GOOD PINE.

Dear Dr. Carley: The work at Trout-Good Pine is moving along in a hopeful way. Our Sunday schools are taking on new life. Brother R. L. Holladay is our superintendent at Good Pine. He is a live wire—the right man in the right place. The school at Trout, with Mr. H. Hill as superintendent, has about doubled in number.

Our Woman's Missionary Societies at each place continue to grow. We expect to have every member of the Methodist church in Trout-Good Pine a member of the Society by Conference, and some that are not members of the church.

We have held a revival at each church. Rev. H. W. Cudd, pastor at Jena, did the preaching at both places. We held our meeting at Good Pine in July. The people were so delighted with the preaching of Brother Cudd that we at once secured him for the meeting at Trout. We also had Mr. O. F. Scott, of McComb, Miss., as song leader at Trout. We heartily commend him to any one who needs a singer and Young People's worker.

There was much lasting good done in both of these meetings.

I wish to say right here that Brother Cudd is a strong, forceful preacher, and fearless in his denunciation of sin, but not to the extent of abusing the people. He preaches a pure, plain gospel that does not drive the people away, but draws them. We need such men who could give their entire time to the evangelistic work.

Brother Cudd is truly a friend to the pastor and Methodist church. What I mean by friend is that he is interested in the things that go to make a successful pastor—the Sunday school, Epworth Leagues, Woman's Missionary Society—and is tremendously interested in full Conference collections. He always speaks a good word for these things. He holds these things as being worthy and necessary causes. He also speaks well for the pastor, presiding elder and bishops. Therefore I repeat, we need just such men in the evangelistic field.

We are looking forward to a good report at Conference, the best that has been made from this charge in years. We are expecting to report, "Good year, Bishop; everything paid in full." "Nuff said."

R. H. BAMBURG, P. C.

A FINE MEETING AT SATARTIA, MISS.

Our revival meeting began at Satartia on the third Sunday in September, the preaching being done by Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor at Yazoo City. Brother Neill began with the truth and closed with the truth, the meeting ending on Friday night after the third Sunday. I don't think I ever heard the presentation of more fundamental truths in the same length of time. His appeal was to the church, and it had its effect upon some at least. He did not leave out the preacher or people, but it was all said in the spirit of Christ.

We received only three members, but I feel that the church has gotten a vision of what it takes to constitute a real church.

We bought a piano on Saturday before the meeting began, and paid for that, and gave Brother Neill $69 for his services.

Brother Neill is a great man—a man of God—and we appreciate him beyond words to express. Pray for us, that the work may go on.

A. J. LEGGETT, Pastor.

"PROHIBITION HELPS BUSINESS."

"The earnings of the Kresge stores show a big increase in prohibition years. The people at large are supplied better than ever before with currency with which to live as they should live. Increased sales mean that the factories that manufacture the commodities sold by our concern have more work to do, which means more money for the wage earner. A noticeable feature of prohibition is the marked increase in the ability of workers. The young man engages in harmless and wholesome pleasures while off duty, which leaves him fit for the following day's effort. Prohibition has already done more good for the American public than any other proposal ever debated in the House or the Senate. To procure proper help in conducting my business is not the problem to-day it was a few short years ago. It is no longer necessary for the employer to delve into life and habits of the young man as it was before. If these things are true with prohibition partially effective, one can imagine what it will be when all citizens realize that the policy is part of the Constitution of the nation and live accordingly."—S. S. Kresge.

Our many visitors used to tell me much about the tides in the Bay of Fundy, which was not so very far from my home. It seemed amazing that the moon with no tackle and no derrick could lift all this mass of water high above the surrounding sea and then let it swirl sixty feet high into this funnel of a bay. But it is even more wonderful how somebody's life, without the attachment of string or rope, will raise a boy from low level to high and change all his goings. It is as fine a miracle as there is, and when it happens it is worth telling about.—Rufus M. Jones, in "Finding the Trail of Life."

Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure.—Robt. Browning.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Requests for Children's Week material are coming in every day, but there should be even more. The material is ready to go out and we appreciate your asking for it. Every school in the Conference should make an effort to observe Enlarged Children's Week. This special time set apart for turning adult thought and attention to the needs of childhood and youth in the community and for working together to meet these needs by definite forward steps, should be filled with help for every Sunday school. The pageants are pretty, easily presented and very inspiring. There are three from which you may choose. The poster is effective, and the leaflets giving details for plans for the week are very explicit. This material costs you only the asking. If your school has not already secured the material and begun the plans for observing Children's Week, this should be done at once.

As the close of the Sunday school year and the beginning of the new year's work brings some changes in personnel of workers, and an opportunity for meeting several points on the various standards, there should be a good deal of checkig done. If you would like to have the Elementary groups in your church checked, let us know, and we will endeavor to reach you with a checker.

HIGHER THAN WOOLWORTH BUILDING

Year's Sales of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. ED. DAUGHERTY
1308 ORCHARD AVENUE, MUSCATINE, IOWA

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is the highest building in the United States.

If all the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in 1925 could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building with enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

In many little villages as in many thriving cities along the route, who are glad to tell others about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In a recent letter, Mrs. Daugherty says, "I was ill for four months before I took your medicine. I found one of your books at my front door and read it. It seemed to fit my case, so I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every one I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Avenue, Muscatine, Iowa.

Mrs. Carr Also Helped

Muncie, Indiana.—"I could not get around to do my work. I took treatments and they did me no good. I had always heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and I thought it would be like all the others, but I found out after I took half a bottle, as I have proved it wonderful. I am taking it yet and I can do all my work. I am feeling fine now, and it is your good medicines that have done it. I tell every woman of the good I get from taking the Vegetable Compound and from using the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. P. W. NEW FIELD WORKER APPOINTED.

To the Leaguers of Louisiana: It is a great pleasure to announce at this time that Miss Elizabeth Langford, of Monroe, La., has been chosen as our new field worker for the coming year. She is one of the most popular and efficient League leaders in Louisiana, and we are expecting great things for the new year.

This does not, by any means, imply that we have succeeded in raising our entire Field Work quota. Miss Langford has gladly entered the service believing that the Leaguers of Louisiana would finish the work they so enthusiastically began and continue their support of the field program.

Below is a message from our new Field Secretary.

MRS. R. P. JACKSON, JR.,
Reporter.

A Chat from Your New Field Secretary to the Leaguers of Louisiana.

Hello Leaguers!

After my first month of field work in Louisiana I have lots to report to my fellow-Leaguers. There is so much to be done and such a great number of young people to reach that I feel that I have undertaken a great task, but with the interest and prayers of my fellow-Leaguers and the pastors of this State, I feel that great good can be accomplished for the Master.

After spending several days in Alexandria, making out my year's program, with the assistance of our Conference Board President, Rev. J. B. Grambling, and our State President, Mr. Charles N. White, I went into Ruston District to begin my district work.

I spent ten days in the Ruston District, and during that time I visited almost all of the Leagues in that district, besides organizing several new ones. The chapters visited were: Ruston, Dubach, Bernice, Gibsland, Arcadia, Athens, Homer, Summerfield, Lisbon, and Haynesville. Some places I did not reach, among them were: Calhoun, Simsboro, and Farmerville, but I expect to meet with them later.

During my visit to the different Leagues in the Ruston District I interviewed one presiding elder, eight pastors, and one district secretary. I held five Council meetings, three business meetings, three devotional meetings, one Union meeting, and two socials.

I found the greatest need in most of these Leagues to be that of organization, and a better knowledge of Epworth League work. Most young people are willing to do when they know just what to do.

I want especially to thank the pastors of the Ruston District for their splendid co-operation with their young people and their League work.

Miss Gladys Dickerson, the District Secretary of the Ruston District, is now in Shreveport taking a commercial course, but will continue to look after her work through correspondence until her return home.

On Sept. 21, I went into the Minden District, and found that our District Secretary, Miss Mary Searles, had me well routed for ten days' work in her district. Up to date I have been to Springhill, Plain Dealing, Castor, Standard, and Campti.

I spent Sunday at Logansport, where the De Soto Union held its monthly meeting with a group of seventy-five Leaguers present from Grand Cane, Longstreet, Mansfield, Stonewall, and Logansport.

On Monday night the Shreveport City Union held its monthly business meeting, followed by "Stunt night." The Deal Senior League won first place on stunts, followed by Noel Senior League taking second place.

At the time of this report I am in Campti, La., where we have just had a splendid meeting with a large group of Leaguers, followed by a fellowship period of stunts and games.

Leaguers, if your chapter is not listed here, remember that I will be with every one of you at some time between now and Annual Conference, so watch out for me! In the meantime, remember that as young people of the Emmaus way we are praying that great good may be accomplished in Laguedom of Louisiana.

Leaguelly,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

Watch this page every week for Epworth League news items!

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

We are so glad to know that Rev. W. W. Drake, of Ruston, is a 100 per cent Leaguer. Ruston, Leaguers, you should make him proud of you!

Bernice and Dubach have organized new Hi Leagues. Watch them grow.

Louisiana Leaguers, you should know Rev. H. M. Johnson, of Haynesville. He is very greatly interested in our Young People's work.

At Springhill I met two young boys who have decided to enter the ministry when they finish high school. Sam Talley and Roy Montgomery are only 15 years old, but under the leadership of Rev. H. E. Pfost and the Hi League superintendent they will accomplish their desires.

I am glad to find so many of the public school teachers taking such an active part in League organization, especially in rural communities. They are an asset to that community.

Mr. Charles N. White, of Alexandria, who is our new State President, is certainly on the job. We are bound to progress through his leadership throughout the coming League year.

The Leaguers of Louisiana will be glad to know that Rev. and Mrs. James T. Harris are at home in Rochelle, La., after having spent a most delightful honeymoon in Tennessee and Hammond, La., where they visited his and her people.

Of course, all Leaguers know that Mrs. Harris was formerly Miss Cora Varnado, our State field worker of last year.

We, as Epworth Leaguers, wish for this splendid young couple a long life of real happiness and Christian service.

PRAYER OF THE TOILERS.

Dear God, the eventide has come to bless the tired land,
The shadows, slim and softly gray,
are like a mother's hand—
And as the mist creeps gently in, a great peace seems to be Upon our souls—the calm that Christ
once brought to Galilee.

Our work is over for a day, the road leads straight ahead
To all the little homely things, to rest and daily bread;
To woman-lips and woman-arms, and love that never dies,
To fires burning on the hearth, and babies' sleepy eyes.

FOR CONSTIPATION

Mississippi Man Says He Has Found Black-Draught So Satisfactory, He Has No Need to Change.

Wiggins, Miss.—Mr. A. L. Cone, a well known Wiggins resident, says: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for constipation. I have never had to take a great deal of medicine, but for fully 30 years I have, by using it, known Black-Draught to be a great medicine, and when I found it so satisfactory, I haven't seen any need to change.

"When I get constipated, I feel all out of sorts and tired and sluggish and I take a few doses of Black-Draught. It regulates my bowels and I get all right. My wife takes more Black-Draught than I do. She is a great believer in it too, so we keep it in the house. It will cleanse the system and help you, if you use it as we have."

Constipation leads to a great deal of sickness among those who do not understand its dangers, and who neglect to treat it without delay.

Black-Draught, with the natural, prompt action of its purely vegetable ingredients, quickly relieves constipation and helps to drive out the poisons so as to leave the organs in a state of healthy activity.

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT Purely Vegetable

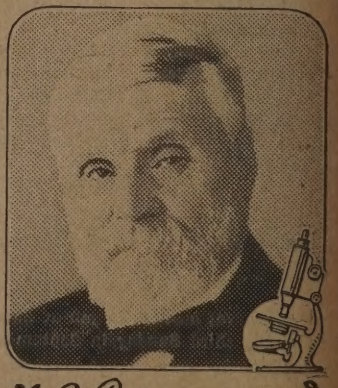
Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.



W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

REVIVALS ON THE LUCEDALE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a revival at each one of my smaller churches, two weeks altogether. We began at Refuge on the first Sunday morning in this month, and continued through Friday night. Brother E. W. Wedgeworth, of the Americus charge, my neighbor on the south, did the preaching in a manner highly pleasing to the serious-minded and God-fearing members of the church and community. No compromise was made with sin in high places or low, and his messages were vigorous and aggressive expositions of Scripture truth. The church and community will be stronger and better because of his stay and ministry with us.

Refuge is a small church nine miles south of here, organized by Brother J. C. Jackson in 1922, with the building begun that year and completed early in the next. They have a well attended Sunday school, a wide-awake prayer meeting and most of the members have a part in a community prayer meeting held in the homes. Just before the revival an organ was bought and paid for, and they now have enough money to paint the church. A number of the workers in the Sunday school attended the Cokesbury class at Pleasant Hill church, conducted in July by Miss Hattie Rae Lewis.

Our revival at Shipman began on the second and lasted through the third Sunday. Brother W. P. Patillo, pastor of the Wilmer charge of the Alabama Conference, did the preaching. A delightful Christian gentleman and a clear and scholarly preacher, he won a place in all of our hearts. Here, as at Refuge, we received three members on profession of faith, with others by certificate. During the meeting at Shipman we had a Cokesbury class taught by Brother O. C. Hull, who also taught a standard class at Lucedale at night. We had Brother Chambers early in the year, and have done some regular work in Leadership Training, so that now we have more than fifty standard units on this charge and a number of Cokesbury units.

Much remains to be done before the Annual Conference. The work at Lucedale is progressive and encouraging.

If you or any relative or friend are worried or suffer because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice that anyone in this world can give is to get a prescription that literally hundreds of people all over the country are using with complete satisfaction.

Simply ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Emerald Oil and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins, rubbing gently upward and towards the heart as the blood in the veins flows that way. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. Emerald Oil is a powerful yet harmless germicide and results are guaranteed by all good druggists.

A GOOD REVIVAL AT KAPLAN, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have just closed a good revival at Kaplan. This town is more than ninety per cent Catholic. Our church is the only Protestant church in the community. Although our membership total is only nineteen, there were but thirteen names on roll a year ago. This little church is more influential than its size would indicate, for not only are the members unsually liberal, but the church also enjoys the active support of friends from five other denominations. From Sept. 11 to 25, Rev. A. M. Serex, of Second Church, New Orleans, assisted the pastor in the promotion of this revival. Brother Serex played the double role of song leader and evangelist, ably acquitting himself in each of these offices. He excels in the pulpit and out. The interest of the people was captured from the start. Visitors from Abbeville and Gueydan were frequently present at the services. The church and community have received a blessing, and we confidently hope for abiding results.

HIS SWEETEST MEMORY.

John McNeal tells the following story of himself: "My sweetest memory is of lying awake at night on my bed in my little room, hearing the voice of my dear mother, who for twenty-five years had never a night without pain and never a night with two hours' unbroken sleep, and through all that quarter of a century this light shone, till it brought in the everlasting day. My earliest memory is lying awake and hearing her, not singing, but trying to forget her pains by reading in the silence of the night, with all her house, as she thought, sleeping around her, though I was awake. I can hear her in her woman's voice—the sweetest voice that can fall on man's ear is that of his mother—'yea, though I walk through the valley and shadow of death, I will fear no evil. Thy rod and thy staff comfort me!' Sweet mother! May your child rise up some day and be a like testimony for you!"—Selected.

EMPHASIZE "SPIRITUAL CULTIVATION."

May I use your columns again for the "Spiritual Cultivation" movement? I should like to ask the program committees of the zone meetings to give some place in their programs to this phase of our work. There is sure to be a great awakening in our church if we are faithful. I earnestly urge, as a beginning, that we begin at home with family altars; using the Lord's Prayer in concert at the table and a verse of Scripture by each member of the family; then, help others.

MRS. S. L. POPE,
North Miss. Conf. Leader of Spiritual Cultivation.

ZONE MEETING AT KREOLE, MISS.

Dear. Dr. Carley: We'd like to make a report (though quite late) of the summer zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Seashore District, Mississippi Conference:

The women of the zone had a most interesting and helpful meeting at Kreole in July. We had as our guests Miss Helen Sells, of Gulfport and Scarritt College, and Rev. M. L. Burton, also of Gulfport. Following the devotional and address of welcome by Mrs. Murray Cox, wife of the pastor at Kreole, Brother Burton spoke to us on "The Importance of Missions," giving us some of the early beginnings of Methodism on the Mississippi Gulf Coast. He concluded with a plea for willingness to do our part, emphasizing the need and value of training and education.

Miss Helen Sells, who is taking her M.A. degree in Religious Education in Scarritt and her M.A. in Physical Education in Peabody, and who has received her appointment to Korea, introduced us in a most pleasing way to Scarritt College, with special reference to the buildings, administration, and course of study.

When we had partaken of a most appetizing lunch, the recognition service was conducted by our zone president, Mrs. M. H. Davis, of Mount Pleasant. This service included the reports from the seven societies represented, and showed a total present of fifty-six members and several visitors, including Rev. M. L. Burton, of Gulfport; Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Newton; Rev. D. E. Vickers, of Ocean Springs; Rev. Murray Cox, of Kreole; Rev. H. L. Daniels, of Biloxi; Rev. J. L. Sells, of Pascagoula, and Miss Helen Sells.

The session was closed by Brother Burton, who made a timely statement regarding the importance of securing news and knowledge of our missionary work through the reading and studying of the Missionary Voice.

Secretary.

Mother!

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache diarrhœa, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

AN APPEAL FROM THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS TO THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, IN BEHALF OF SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT.

Dear Brethren:

It is now imperative that the church gird herself for a strong effort and complete the task of Superannuate Endowment provided for by the General Conference of 1922. We are grateful for what has already been accomplished, but the fact remains that less than one-third has actually been paid on the $10,000,000 which the church obligated herself to raise in five years for this purpose.

Since this movement was begun in the spring of 1924, by authority of the General Conference of 1922, the church has sought to meet this obligation while other pressing matters demanded attention. At the adjournment of the Annual Conferences this fall, the fourth year of this Special Effort will have been practically completed. The fifth year will begin April 1, 1928, and during that year every charge in the church should secure in cash and good personal subscriptions the remainder of the quotas assumed.

No obligation appeals with greater force than that of providing for the support of our worn-out preachers and the widows and dependent children of deceased preachers. A proper response to this obligation would not only pay a debt long past due, but would also strengthen the moral fiber of our people to meet other obligations that are constantly demanding attention. If we do not provide for the necessities of those worn out in our ministry, how can we with good conscience continue wearing out men in this ministry? When we demand all from the young preachers at the bar of our Conferences, and they give it without reserve, we cannot hold ourselves blameless if we neglect them in old-age after they have given the church their all.

The $10,000,000 for Superannuate Endowment must be paid. The fifth year of the movement is the time to secure bona fide pledges to cover the unpaid balances of the quotas already assumed by the charges. The honor of our church calls upon us to complete this task; our self-respect urges us to it, and our sense of justice demands that we apply ourselves as never before to do for these veterans of the Cross what we promised to do. Let it never be said by the world that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, made promises to her superannuated preachers that she did not fulfill.

At each Annual Conference this fall, a representative of the General Board of Finance will be present to tell in detail the plans for this great cause during the Conference year of 1928. We have agreed that one hour at each Conference shall be set apart for this purpose. We call upon all the preachers and lay members who attend these Conferences, to be much in prayer that the occasions of presenting this work may be divinely ordered and greatly blessed by the "God of our Fathers."

In conclusion, we express our definite conviction that this sacred matter should now have our undivided support. It is our purpose, from now on through the year of 1928, to give it most careful attention and direction in our respective Episcopal Districts, with the confident hope that one of the most important tasks the church has ever undertaken may be completed.

GOOD BEGINNERS—POOR FINISHERS.

Methodism has a well established reputation for beginning great movements well; but we are not sure she finishes as well as she begins. We need to go no further for illustration than the statement from the bishops appearing on this page concerning the Special Effort in Behalf of Superannuate Endowment.

We began this great movement well. The cause is so deserving that it does not require argument to prove its need or its timeliness. It would not be hard to prove that it was put off too long—especially if we should call to the witness stand those veterans in the ministry of the church who to-day are suffering because of the failure of the church to provide for their needs during the lonely and tragic period of their superannuation. Sometimes we hear ministers in the active work, drawing salaries fully equal to those our superannuates received, complaining that it is very hard for them to make "tongue and buckle meet." We wonder how those worn-out servants of the church manage to exist on the pittance they receive from the superannuate fund.

It seems to us the time has fully come for the church to complete at least one job that it has begun well—and that job is the raising of the amount needed to provide the bare comforts of life for our worn-out preachers. It would be genuinely refreshing for the church to report not only the over-subscription of the amount asked for, but also the over-payment of the subscriptions. We could even be content with the payment in full of these pledges. The full $10,000,000 needed for superannuate endowment could be paid within the year if we would all give ourselves to the effort.

"SWEET HOUR OF PRAYER."

The beautiful song which recounts the privileges and blessings of prayer may be considered by some matter-of-fact people as too emotional and sentimental to be a practical expression of real Christian feeling; but it will be so considered only by those who have no actual experience of being called from a world of care and being relieved of the burdens, harassments, disappointments, and sorrows of life by this very precious season of communion with God. Prayer is not a sentimental expression of religious devotion; it is a very real and satisfying experience of the spiritual life. Most Christians would be happier if they prayed more.

A FUTILE SUGGESTION.

We see from the papers that a distinguished churchman of England has suggested that it would be well for the scientists to cease their investigations for a period of ten years, the assumption being that the scientists have already discovered more than the human mind has been able to assimilate, and that the ceasing of scientific investigation would promote the moral and religious welfare of mankind.

It seems strange that anybody should suggest in this period of the world's history that men should cease to acquire knowledge. It is especially unfortunate, it seems to us, that the suggestion should come from a churchman. The suggestion is, however, a futile one, for scientists are not going to break up their equipment, tear down their laboratories, do away with all their accumulated data, and eat the bread of "do-nothing" for ten years—or ten minutes, for that matter. Even if they should desire to do so, the irresistible urge to understand the phenomena of nature would drive them on.

A suggestion much more to the point, we think, would be that the Christian world give itself as passionately, as unreservedly, as devotedly to the propagation and establishment of the Christian faith for the next ten years—and forever—as the scientists give themselves to the prosecution of their studies. The church will grow far faster by becoming a protagonist of Christianity than it will by becoming an antagonist of science.

LEAVES FROM MY NOTE BOOK.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

I had long desired to visit Damascus. It was somewhat late in the day when we reached the hill-top overlooking the city, and it burst upon us as a delightful vision. It is said to be the oldest city in the world, is called the "Eye of the East," the "Head of Syria," and was said by Mohammed to be so near like unto Paradise that he would not enter it because a man should not seek Paradise on earth. The life and beauty of Damascus are dependent upon the river Abana, which rises in the mountains nearby, flows eastward through the plains, gives life and beauty to Damascus and then is itself swallowed up in the desert lakes. Its waters are conveyed by an admirable system of canals through every quarter of the fertile and luxuriant garden by a system of irrigation. So there is first the mountains, then the plain, with the river-made city, and just beyond it a hot steaming desert. From the hill nearby we looked down upon the orchards, gardens, vineyards and fields of Damascus with its gleaming white houses, its spires and minarets.

As far as natural beauty is concerned, it would be as well not to come down from the hillside, for the houses have little architectural beauty, the streets are usually very narrow, and projecting upper stories of buildings often obscure the light. Like many other Latin-American and Oriental houses, the interior is frequently very attractive, indeed beautiful, the rooms opening on spacious courtyards with fountains, flowers and ornamental trees. The most interesting feature of Damascus is the business quarter. The bazaars are a never-ending source of attraction, stocked as they are with goods of the most varied kinds, from the veriest trifles to silks, laces, and jewels of great value. The principal bazaars are in long avenues roofed over, each avenue devoted to some special trade. The name Damask originated as descriptive of the beauty of design and quality of the texture of the products of the Damascus looms, of which there are several thousand still operating in the city.

The visitor interested in religious matters will ask first of all for "the street called Straight," and it is probable that his desire is actually gratified, for there is one street which runs from west to east through the whole length of the town, and is the only street answering to the description of "Straight." Of course, as is true in all such matters, it is questionable whether the place pointed out as to the location of the house of Judas is the true location.

The next place in interest in the great Mosque. It is possible that this Mosque was first of all a heathen temple. Then in the days of Constantine the temple became sacred to Christ and was dedicated to John the Baptist, whose head, in some extraordinary fashion, was supposed to have been contained in a casket in the temple, although we are not told why Salome and Herodias should have had it preserved. For nearly three centuries the building was the Christian cathedral church for Syria. After the Moslem conquest, it was for a while equally divided between the Christians and the Moslems, but soon the Moslems drove the Christians out, took the entire temple and called it the Great Mosque. The most notable feature of the Mosque is a beautifully adorned chapel, the tomb of the great Moslem hero, Saladin, who fought the Crusaders so successfully.

Our hotel, located near the river, was well kept, with clean, comfortable beds and good, well-cooked food at reasonable prices, and from the window as I looked out, preparatory for an early start to Jerusalem, I heard the Mohammedan Muezzins sounding out from the minarets of the many Mosques the call for prayer to the faithful. But early as we were, the caravans with the camels—"ships of the desert"—and the ever-present donkeys, were also on their way. We stopped again on the hill overlooking the city to see it in the early sunlight, and as I looked down upon it, I recalled the story of "Eleazer of Damascus," the faithful steward of Abraham's household, who when sent from Canaan back to Syria to find a wife for Isaac, explained the success of his mission in one simple sentence, "I being in the way the Lord led me"—which method might be adopted with profit by many of us today.

We left Damascus about 7 a. m., and reached Jerusalem about 7:30 that night, with a stop at the fords of the Jordan for passport inspection as we passed from Syria into Palestine, and a stop of nearly three hours at Nazareth for lunch and to visit the orhpanage on a nearby hill. It was a journey which, while I should be glad to repeat at a more leisurely pace, was especially enjoyed in that it compassed the entire distance in one day, over well-built, well-graded, hard surfaced road, sweeping along the foothills of the Lebanon mountains, with the snowy cap of Hermon on the north dominating the whole. On the hillside as we swung down into the valley, we saw on the right the "Waters of Merom," the lake at the base of the Lebanon Mountains, then right in front of us the beginning of the Jordan River, and on the left at the south the beautiful Sea of Galilee, along which and in sight of which we drove for many miles, till we turned off near Tibera for Nazareth.

There is a clean German hotel at Nazareth where a fairly good lunch can be had for a dollar. The town seemed somewhat cleaner and more alive than when I was there in 1910. The Orphanage was well located, and I was pleased with the staff of Armenian teachers and the orphan children, many of whom were expecting to be sent to Egypt, Greece or France. During the drive from Nazareth to Jerusalem we passed several of the Jewish settlements, which seemed to be pleasantly located, but I could not but question whether they would be self-sustaining. It was said that many of the colonists had been found to be unsuited to the life in the new surroundings, having no knowledge of farming or shepherding, upon which most of them must depend for their living. There did not seem to be much life or movement in these villages, and the casual inspection did not impress me that the colonists looked very hopeful or happy. But the land all along the way seemed to be fertile, and it may be that by the institiution of improved methods, including better irrigation and dry-farming, this increased population can be sustained. I should think, however, that some industry like rug or lace-making, or olive wood curios for export would be needed.

The road wound its way through valleys by the side of rippling brooks, and then climbed the hills in sweeping spirals until at the top, with the glass, the "Great Sea" on the west could be seen, and the invigorating sea breezes be felt, and then it went down again into even a deeper valley, both hill and vale covered with green, and alive in some sections with herds and flocks. And about the time we reached the Mount of Olives the moon came up, bathing Jerusalem in beautiful silvery waves of light, and as we passed along the edge of Gethsemane, I could but picture the Agony, the Betrayal and the Arrest which took place in the shadows of the olive trees under the light of the full moon 2,000 years ago.

Jerusalem was crowded with tourists, especially Americans, but I managed to find a bed. I was there only two nights, and I walked the streets and alleys until late, and in the daytime went again to Bethlehem, and to the "Holy Places." There has been a great change in the city without the walls—the coming of the railroad, of automobiles and garages, increased population, modern buildings, and above all the abolition of Turkish rule and the incoming of Great Britain. I was glad I had been there before these changes occurred, for while the city within the walls, and the "holy places" are much the same, the atmosphere and the attitude of the people are different, and will be increasingly so. But it does not really matter. "The hour cometh when neither in Jerusalem, nor in this mountain shall men worship the Father. God is a spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth." Jerusalem is after all and above all a symbol.

As the Apostle says: "The Jerusalem which is from above is free, which is the mother of us all." It is the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, "descending out of heaven from God, adorned as a bride for her husband"—it is of this Jerusalem and not the one on earth of which we sing—

"O Mother dear, Jerusalem!
When shall I come to thee?
When shall my sorrows have an end?
Thy joys when shall I see?"

WHAT THE BIBLE TELLS ME ABOUT RACE RELATIONS.

By R. B. Eleazer.

Just the job of getting along with one another is life's most difficult problem. It's a lifelong problem, too; we never solve it fully. Happy are we if we go on to the end honestly seeking to work it out, instead of growing bitter and giving up in despair.

Particularly difficult is this problem when it involves people who are radically different from us, especially people of other races—and the greater the difference, the greater the difficulty. In doubt and uncertainty we look about for help—for some sound principle to guide us toward the solution. Where shall we turn with confidence if not to the Bible?

We open the book. "In the beginning God;" the creation of a world; its peopling with the lower orders of life; and then—

How promptly the old Book answers! For here in the first two chapters is the very basis we need for all our thinking about people:

"God created man in his own image, * * * and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life" (Genesis 1:27 and 2:7).

Who can fail to see the meaning? Made in the image of God, like him in the power to know and to choose between good and evil, inbreathed by God's owon immortal spirit, humanity is something infinitely valuable and sacred. In every man, therefore, I must see one of God's children, strayed a long way from home, maybe, but like the Prodigal Son, still dear to the Father's heart. Hence I must respect him, not necessarily because of what he seems to be, but because of his innate divinity, his potential God-likeness, his infinite possibilites.

"Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother?" (Malachi 2:10).

As children of one Heavenly Father, I must think of all men as brothers. No, not in terms of sentiment and gush, but in understanding, in sympathy, in good will and helpfulness. Many of them I may not admire; some I may even dislike; but just the same I must think of them with kindly interest and an honest desire to do them good, not ill.

"God * * * hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth" (Acts 17:24 and 26).

How shall we account, then, for the striking differences between races? For example, what has made some of them light in color and others dark? Climate, without doubt. One can easily see its effect in a single summer's tan. Imagine the process going on for ages and you can readily understand the result.

But doesn't the Bible say God cursed Ham and turned him back? No, it does not. It says nothing about God cursing anybody, and nothing about anybody being turned black. Read the story for yourself in Genesis 9.

"God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean" (Acts 10:28).

Since all are the children of God I must not think contemptuously of any or flatter myself with any feeling of innate superiority. I may have had better advantages; I may know more and have more; I may even be more capable than others; all this I may see quite clearly. But I may not therefore count myself inherently better than any other of God's children. I am not the judge of any man or race. To their own Father alone men stand or fall. (Romans 11:4.)

"Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, 'Thou shalt not kill.' * * * But I say unto you, that whosoever shall say to his brother, 'Raca' (worthless one'), shall be in danger of the council, but whosoever shall say, 'Thou fool,' shall be in danger of hell fire" (Matthew 5:21 and 22).

Yes, it is wicked to kill the body of a man, says Jesus, but no less wicked to stab his spirit with contempt—to count one of God's children a worthless thing, worthy of no more consideration than a beast. Whenever I deliberately hurt or humiliate or degrade any human being, let me remember well that I am striking also at the very heart of God.

"Whosoever shall cause one of these little ones that believe on me to stumble, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he were cast into the sea" (Mark 9:42).

Like the sin of contempt for God's children is the sin of limiting them, of putting hindrances in their way, of denying them opportunity to achieve the best they are capable of. Child labor that dwarfs undeveloped bodies and minds; starvation wages that mean, not life, but only bare existence; lack of educational opportunities; houses unfit for human habitation; failure of our cities to furnish to certain groups the common decencies of civilization—sewers, sanitation, paving and the like—these are some of the ways in which we put stumbling blocks in the way of God's little ones.

"If I did despise the cause of my manservant or my maidservant when they contended with me, what then shall I do when God riseth up? And when he visiteth, what shall I answer him? Did not he that made me make him?" (Job 31:13-15).

I must be considerate of my employees, for they are no less human than I—considerate of their feelings, their welfare, their rights. If they have grievances, I must hear them with patience and open-mindedness, not arrogating to myself the right to be witness, judge and jury all in one. Every man has the right to be heard in his own cause, and to be treated as a man.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Mark 12:31). "If God so loved us we ought also to love one another" (I John 4:11). "Let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth" (I John 3:18).

"Impossible," you say? "There are some people we just can't love!" Not if we understand what Jesus meant by love. He was talking of something very different from what we usually call by that term—something very much finer and more unselfish. He meant a deep human sympathy that always seeks to understand and a genuine interest and good will that are always anxious to help. In that sense it is not only possible, but easy, for one of Christ-like spirit to love even the most unlovely. And love like that "is the fulfilling of the law."

To sum up, what then does the Bible tell me concerning race relations? These things among others:

That I must see and respect the divine image in every human being;

That I must recognize my common brotherhood with all;

That I may not hold any in contempt, nor put hindrances in their path;

That in all my dealings I must be just and considerate; and finally,

That in all human relations I must be guided by Jesus' law of love and service.

THE PASSING OF A SAINT.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

The great church was packed, chairs filled the aisles, and people were turned away for lack of space. Hundreds of eyes were wet with tears. The choir, the chancel, the casket, were mounts of flowers. For more than two hours people of all classes passed to look once more on the face of the dead, and few did so without deep emotion. Shreveport, or any other city, has seldom seen such a funeral as that of Miss Hattie Renfro, for fifteen years the beloved city missionary of the great First Methodist Church in Shreveport. She was struck by a passing car, thrown violently on the sidewalk, and her skull was fractured, inflicting a mortal hurt. Miss Hattie, as she was universally known, was born at Smith Grove, Ky., and I thought the readers of the Advocate would be interested to know how everybody loved this saintly woman. Eloquent tributes were paid to her, but none finer than the leading editorial in the Shreveport Times, the leading paper in Shreveport. It is seldom that a great secular paper makes its editorial leader a tribute to a modest, timid woman, whose only claim to notice was her service to society; but the editor of the Times, under the heading of "Miss Hattie Renfro, Heroine," paid her the following beautiful tribute: "For more than fifteen years, the name of Miss Hattie Renfro has been closely identified with social service endeavor in Shreveport. Although working under the auspices of the Methodist church, her work knew no creed. She was the servant of all in distress. There are some of us in this life who believe that the tasks they undertake have the blessing of heaven and that they have been divinely called to their performance. Some in this life are given the rare opportunity to rise to heroic heights. Miss Hattie, as she was affectionately called by those to whom she ministered, saw a divine call in her mission, and to her was given the opportunity to be a heroine.

"Far from her was the thought that she might be doing something heroic. Miss Renfro in her daily work saw only duty. Where distress called she saw the signal of duty. She was a true heroine. Weather never deterred her. Personal well-being and comfort were never considered by her. In the heat of the summer and the cold of winter she went her daily rounds ministering to those who needed her. No case was too desperate. They cursed her often, but she blessed them. They rejected her, called her 'sob sister,' 'meddler,' "psalm singer,' and what not; but she replied with a smile and held up those whom she would help to the Savior of the world. She showed the God of love and the greatest sacrifice. Where she found despair, Miss Renfro instilled courage. Many a man, woman, young boy or young girl has been kept from the act of self-destruction by Miss Hattie, who gently said: 'Why, sure, there is hope and God has not forsaken you.'

"Many a girl she redeemed. Many a youth she snatched from the fire ere burnt too severely. She was helper, advisor, counsellor, sister and brother all in one. 'Angel of the jail,' they called her. * * * Miss Hattie Renfro, heroine! * * * She will never be forgotten, and Shreveport will honor her memory always. * * * The Times joins the universal sorrow which has come to Shreveport; but somehow one feels better to know that this earth has been blessed with such a noble, modest heroine as Miss Hattie Renfro, the friend of all the poor and the angel of the prisons."

So passed from this earth this noble lady in the prime of her useful life. Kentucky never had a finer representative of her best people than Miss Hattie. No one seems to have been to blame for the accident that suddenly blotted out her light. A mysterious providence? Yes, indeed it is, and we can only bow in silent submission. There is no explanation of why such a useful life should be suddenly ended in such a manner while unworthy thousands are allowed to live. God alone knows. But it is a blessing to have known and loved Miss Hattie.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

We should approach this subject with a reverent and inquiring mind. Can any scholar have attained the ultimate in his statement of Biblical teaching on this so little understood theme? That there is an unpardonable sin is without question. The New Testament contains many explicit hints to it, and Jesus distinctly taught it. That it is in some way connected with the Holy Spirit seems very obvious.

And comparing Scripture with Scripture, a careful examination of the more prominent passages of his logos bearing directly on this perplexing subject seems to the writer to warrant the following definition of the unpardonable sin: It consists in neglecting, resisting, denying, or profaning the Holy Spirit. Sins of this type are irremediable and therefore unpardonable. Let us, therefore, remember that the Third Person in the Godhead is very sensitive, and it is an easy matter to exasperater him. Jesus said: "Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come" (St. Matthew 12:31,32). As this is pre-eminently the era of the Holy Spirit, and as he is the most intimate and potent and in a very large sense the last manifestation of the Trinity, it behooves man mortal to listen to his tender, pleading voice, for "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" (Hebrews 2:3), of which God bears witness with "signs, wonders, miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost?" It is conceded by not a few of our learned men that in his personal manifestation the Holy Ghost was to become an active and recognized personality wherever Christ's gospel was proclaimed.

It is the distinct function of the Holy Spirit to "convince the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment." "Of sin," said Jesus, "because they believe not on me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged" (St. John 16:8-12). He admonishes us not to rejoice in that the spirits are subject to us; but rather rejoice because our names are written in heaven (St. Luke 10:20). "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Rev. 20:15). But unfeigned faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the only warrant for entering our names on the "page white and fair," and he who persistently nelects or resists the gracious Spirit's warning and pleading, is certainly guilty of the unpardonable sin, he is condemned, and "the wrath of (a just God) abideth on him" (St. John 3:18, 36). "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you." If he who so intensely loves us says, "Surely I come quickly," well may every heart that really loves him say, "Amen, even so, Come, Lord Jesus."

"The whole creation groans
And waits to hear that Voice
That shall restore her comeliness,
And make her wastes rejoice.
Come, Lord, and wipe away
The curse, the sin, the stain;
And make this blighted world of ours
Thine own fair world again.
Come then, Lord Jesus, Come!"

In the Trinity, I confide,

Georgetown, Miss.

MISSIONARY COUNCIL SPEAKERS AND PLANS.

Speakers for the second annual session of the General Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be held at Jackson, Miss., Dec. 13, 14, as announced by Dr. W. G. Cram, chairman, include six bishops of the church, as well as Mission Board secretaries and outstanding educators and religious leaders from throughout Southern Methodism.

The bishops who will address the 100 or more outstanding missionary leaders of the denomination attending the Council session are widely known for their interest in missionary work. They are: Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, of Atlanta, Ga., founder of mission work in Europe, now president of the Board of Missions and in charge of Mexican missions; Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, founder of mission work in Cuba; Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, of Huntington, W. Va., now in charge of missionary interests of the church in Europe; Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Washington, D. C., in charge of work in Brazil and Africa; Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, N. C., and Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, Tex., widely known as promoters of missionary interests of the church. Bishop Cannon left for Brazil the latter part of September to preside at the annual meetings of the three Methodist Conferences in Brazil. He expects to return to the States in time to attend the Council session.

Other eminent speakers who will deliver missionary addresses during the Council session include: Dr. H. W. Cox, president of Emory University; Dr. Plato Durham, Emory University; Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of the Board of Missions; Dr. O. E. Goddard, Foreign Secretary; Dr. J. W. Perry, Home Mission Secretary, and Dr. F. S. Onderdonk, superintendent of the Texas-Mexican Mission.

All sessions of the Council will be held in the auditorium of the Galloway Memorial Church in Jackson, and the pastor, Rev. H. S. Spragins, will be host to the gathering. Local committees in charge of all arrangements are under the direction of Rev. J. L. Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, assisted by local Methodist pastors.

The Council will be the most widely attended and far-reaching in its results of any missionary gathering of the entire year. The thirty-eight Annual Conferences will be represented by the chairmen of the Conference boards of missions and the Conference missionary secretaries, while a dozen or more missionaries now in the States on furlough will attend as representatives of their respective foreign fields.

"World Evangelization" is the subject that has been selected as the theme of the meeting, and discussions will center around plans for the great international revival of 1928, to be carried on both in the home and in all foreign fields. This movement is expected to be no mere effort to increase membership, but a deep revival that will stir the church to its depths. Already reports from the mission fields indicate that the time is ripe for world evangelization. In Japan a great plan for winning "a million souls for Christ" has already been inaugurated by one of the most prominent Japanese Christians, widely known as a social and labor leader. The members of the Texas-Mexican Mission are pledging to give themselves as never before to the work of the salvation of souls. And from Brazil comes the heartening news of 200 new converts received during the recent visit of the Foreign Secretary as preliminary to the opening of the great revival there.—Board of Missions Bulletin.

THE PERAMBULATOR PERAMBULATES.

By Van Carter.

My last big perambulation was in 1920, when I visited China, Japan and Korea. Some of the wonders of these lands I tried to visualize to the readers of the Advocate through articles written at that time. As it was the World's Sunday School Convention which brought about that trip, so it is the World's Sunday School Convention which causes me to take this one.

It happened this wise: My friend Mark Anthony, District Passenger Agent of the Missouri Pacific Lines, called me in his office one day and said: "See here, Van, what about our getting up a special train to take the Louisiana delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention to be held in Los Angeles, July 11-18, 1928?" I replied: "It is O. K. with me provided you route the special train by way of the Grand Canyon, for you know, Mark, many people can take only one trip in a life-time to California, and I want our delgates to see that outstanding wonder of the world, the Grand Canyon of the Arizona." "We can do that all O. K.," said Mark. So he began to get busy with routes and rates, and in a few days the special train tour was mapped out and ready to be submitted to the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, for approval. The next time I saw Mark, I said: "It has been sixteen years since I visited the Grand Canyon and California, and if I am to serve our Louisiana delegates to the World's Convention in Los Angeles next July, to the best of my ability, I think I had better make the trip now, so the places of interest will be fresh in my mind when our special train starts." Mark phoned over for our mutual friend, J. A. Fitzgerald, the General Agent of the Santa Fe System, on whose road the Grand Canyon is located, and there and then was mapped out for me this trip.

Leaving New Orleans at 10 a. m. on the famous "Orleanian" of the Gulf Coast Lines, I enjoyed a splendid observation car ride through Louisiana's lowlands of sugar cane, cotton fields, swamp lands, rice fields, timberlands, cattle country, and dairies. Texas was reached by 6 o'clock, and then for 117 miles we literally raced across the open country of East Texas at a mile every 75 seconds until Houston was reached, where we boarded our "Santa Fe All the Way" train to California.

My friends had planned that the first stop should be at Adamana, Arizona, so that I could visit the Petrified Forest. Leaving Houston at 10 p. m., our train moved steadily upward, and at 8:30 the next morning we found ourselves breakfasting at Brownwood, Tex., 1,342 feet above sea level. All day long we journeyed, and at night we were at Clovis, N. Mex., some 335 miles further west and 2,876 feet higher in altitude. Clovis is a city of 6,000, situated in the northeast corner of New Mexico, 4,218 feet above sea level. The air here was indeed bracing and exceedingly delightful to breathe. It also necessitated the use of blankets in our sleeper. The next morning we breakfasted at Gallup, N. Mex., 1,392 miles from dear old New Orleans and at an elevation of 6,498 feet. Here we saw in the Santa Fe station hotel, the El Navajo, the famous Navajo sand paintings, and received the information that this little town of 4,500 population was the gateway to Mesa Verde National Park where, a thousand years ago or more, there lived in the Santa Fe Southwest a people who flourished and then disappeared. They are known to us as Cliff Dwellers. Who these people were, when they lived, where they came from, why they left, and where they went, are still one of the mysteries to be solved. However, it is said that to-day hundreds of ruins of the structures they built are to be found in the Mesa Verde, and the Santa Fe Railroad has opened this new and shorter way of reaching them.

I could not tarry here, for I was headed for Adamana, seventy-five miles further west on the Rio Puerco River, which sometimes gets on a rampage as does our own Mississippi. As we journeyed by the side of this river we soon saw that it was very much swollen and its turbulent waters were running, rushing and reverberating through the land, carrying before it all loose material and closing all its fords to traffic. When I stepped off the train at Adamana all I could see was the depot, two stores, and two houses, and it certainly seemed to be the jumping-off place. To the south, however, only a few miles distant, lie thousands of acres covered with agatized fossil remains of gigantic pre-historic trees and known to us as the Petrified Forest. Hither did I journey, and when I beheld it I said, "This truly is the world's greatest puzzle and America's wonder field of mosiacs."

When we say "forest," one naturally thinks of many standing trees, but not so in this wonderland. Instead of standing upright, petrified trees in great profusion lie about you, and logs of all sizes greet you on every hand, and chips, big and little, are scattered over the earth till it seems you are on a carpet studded with gems of every size, which glisten with every color imaginable.

There are four forests. In the first the chief object of interest is the natural log bridge, spanning a chasm sixty feet wide, truly a trunk of agate. The surrounding mesas with their variegated colors upon their slopes make a wonderful setting for these jewels of nature. In the second forest may be found a splendid assortment of chips of all sizes with the most delicate tints imaginable. Many of them you desire to grab and bring them away with you for paper weights for your office or study desk, and thus have a continual reminder of this beautiful and marvelous "God's Acre" 5,300 feet above sea level; but a United States official has posted in conspicuous places: "Visitors are not allowed to take specimens from the forest within the National Monument." The third forest covers a greater area than the others, and because the colors duplicate every tint of the rainbow, it is known as the Rainbow Forest. In it are several hundred whole trees and quite a few over 200 feet in length. There, too, the ground is literally covered with a carpet of agated stones, beautiful to behold. The fourth, because of the many logs in it of a blue tint, is known as the Blue Forest, and its chief attraction is the peculiarly shaped and beautifully colored "bad lands," and its carved rock formations.

Thus my stop at Adamana of one day brought me into a region of ruins 5,300 feet above sea level that are indeed the world's greatest puzzle, for no man yet knoweth whence the forests came nor when, for there is no data beyond the fact of the trees, logs, and chips themselves. Thus man is free to form his own conclusion with no one to say him nay. With such a glorious sight as the forest offers to the traveler, this was my thought as I rode back to Adamana in the cool of the evening for dinner, and then catch my train for the Grand Canyon: Surely Louisiana's Special Train of Sunday school workers to the World's Sunday School Convention in Los Angeles, July 11-18, 1928, must visit the Petrified Forest—America's wonder field mosiacs. Of the Grand Canyon I shall tell you of in my next.

TO FATHER, UPON HIS BIRTHDAY.

By Rev. J. L. Greenway.

I once saw a tree rising stalwart and stout
Above the rolling plain,
And there were no others that grew about
To rival its tall domain.

Rooted strong in the earth, it reached for the sky,
And grasped the cleanly cloud;
Though the tempests beat and the years crept by,
That head remained unbowed.

And the scars it bore and the wind-combed moss
Were medals of honor the tree
Had won by its burdens; and many a cross
It had won in its struggle to be.

Through many a struggle and many a strife
The gales had beaten and dinned;
But from the storm it had conquered life,
And embraced the strength of the wind.

As I raise to you an honoring song,
Remembering my stalwart tree,
It seems its virtues and strength belong
To none so much as thee.

For you have endured the battlefield
Of the passions and storms of man,
And you could bend and never yield
As only a stout oak can.

The dashing winds have made thee strong,
And the rains have made thee clean;
But the storms have not blinded thy sight of wrong,
Nor bent to the low or mean.

So unto you as the years creep by
All honor we have allowed;
Rooted strong in the earth, you have grasped the sky,
And reached to the cleanly cloud.

BENONI—BENJAMIN.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

"She called his name Benoni—but his father called him Benjamin" (Genesis 34:18).

Benoni—what is the meaning of that? "The son of my sorrow." And what does the name Benjamin mean? "The son of my right hand." Thus one saw the thorns, and the other the roses which bloomed in their midst. The dying Rachel saw only the dark cloud, but her husband peered through the sliver lining. The one gazed upon the sun in its setting, and the other in its rising. In the log book of Columbus there is one entry more common than all others. It is not, "To-day the wind was favorable;" it is, "To-day we sailed on."

When Bartholomew Diaz, the great Portugese navigator, discovered the cape which showed that there was an open sea round the southern point of Africa—the first to make this discovery—he called it Stormy Cape, as his vessels were there subjected to fierce tempests. When, however, he returned to Portugal, his far-seeing king, John the Second, realizing that it gave promise of a passage to India by sea, re-named it the Cape of Good Hope.

The short view was confined to the turbulent experience; the farther vision brought into view the immense possibilities of an open gate to the illimitable East. This is an epitome of life. "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous," when we "look at the things which are seen," but we see "that our light affliction is but for the moment" when we "look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen." We recognize that the stormy passage leads to a delectable haven. The unpromising Benoni brings the happiness and succor of a Benjamin.

One can only surmise as to why Rachel gave to her child this ill-omened name. We would naturally expect her to welcome this second male child as the richest gift of heaven. She had prayed in the days of her barrenness, "Give me children or I die" (Gen. 30:1). One would have thought that she would have displayed the attitude expressed by the couplet in George Macdonald's poem:

"Where have you come from, baby dear?
But how did you come to us my dear?
God thought about you, and so I am here."

The realization of her fondest hopes for this second time, however, meant that while it was doubly making life worth living, there was no life to live. And we must remember that for her the grave had no illuminating resurrection light such as it presents to us. Travelers in northwest Africa came across some out-of-the-way natives who called the Atlantic "The Sea of Darkness." Observing that the sun and moon set in that quarter, they believe that the islands of the sea have no light-giving orbs to illumine them, and spoke of them as the islands of darkness. And in those primitive days of Rachel and Jacob, the setting of life's sun did not give much assurance of the dawning of a new day of immortality. It was long after this that the Psalmist exclaimed, "In death there is no remembrance of Thee." But even in these days of gospel radiance, death under such circumstances could not be inviting.

She had everything to live for. No fell disease had fastened upon her. She was at that stage of existence when the ardent lust for life is at its strongest. Her mother-heart sought for its legitimate satisfaction in the rearing of her children. She was rich in the love of an adoring husband, and trusted that this new gift would be an additional cord of love and hope. And now these dear and precious ties are to be ruthlessly sundered. It is not difficult for us to see why she should say, "Call his name Benoni." He did indeed appear to be "the son of sorrow."

Was not Jacob's point of view, however, the more commendable? He thought of the price which Rachel was having to pay, but he also considered the possibilities of the new life given. They had a responsibility to him. He must not be handicapped with an ill-starred name. Jacob turned his gaze to the radiant dawn of the new life, rather than to the clouded eventide of the departing one—

"Men think it is an awful sight
To see a soul just set adrift
On that drear voyage from whose night
The ominous shadows never lift;
But 'tis more awful to behold
A helpless infant newly born,
Whose little hands unconscious hold
The keys of darkness and of morn."

—Lowell.

Did not some such thought animate Jacob when he suggested that they call their child Benjamin, rather than Benoni?

It may also be presumed that an even deeper reading of the facts of life prompted him. Jacob was facing the most crushing sorrow of his life. It is probable that it was her grief for her desolated husband which made Rachel adopt so gloomy an outlook.

Jacob had shown his devotion to her through fourteen years of ardent waiting. Their seven years of married life had been a prolonged and tender courtship. She knew that her own children were peculiarly prized because they were her children.

What a tragedy it was to him to lose her! Yet he followed a true instinct in recognizing that the deepest sorrows can be constituted channels of richest blessing by the gracious power of God. This child whose coming had innocently brought such grief would be his stay and comfort in old age. "The bud may have a bitter taste, but sweet will be the flower. Therefore," said he, "let us call him Benjamin, the son of the right hand."

Should we not also look for the sunny side of the cloud?

To quote Ellen Thorncroft Fowler's quaint putting of it—

"The inner side of every cloud
Is bright and shining:
I therefore turn my clouds about
And wear my troubles inside out,
To show the lining."

We wear black for mourning to typify our grief. The Chinese wear white to symbolize the purity of the departed's new home. Should we not sing of victory over death rather than bewail our own desolate lot? Let our note be "Benjamin," rather than "Benoni."

"Not only so, but we triumph even in our troubles, knowing that trouble produces endurance, endurance produces character, and character produces hope—a hope which never disappoints us, since God's love floods our hearts through the Holy Spirit which has been given us" (Rom. 5:4-5).

LORENZO DOW.

By Paul Hutchinson.

The Methodist church has harbored some queer individuals in its time. But it is doubtful whether it ever contained one queerer than Lorenzo Dow. His own journal tells us that the people of the early American settlements to whom he preached generally called him "Crazy" Dow. And the same source of information gives plenty of reason for the use of that name. He was a thorn in the flesh of most of the Methodist leaders of his time, and the rank and file of the members of the church of that period regarded him as a subject for prayers. Yet, admitting that he was a queer character, and acknowledging a suspicion that there were times when he accentuated and traded on his queerness, there are two things which can be said about him: First, he is remembered long after most of his contemporaries. And second, he stirred religious interest to white heat in an enormous stretch of territory. On both counts the man is worthy of consideration.

It was in 1798 that Dow, a boy of eighteen, came from a Connecticut farm to preach in the Methodist church. He had tried to enter the itinerancy two or three times before that, but the authorities of the church felt too much misgiving. From the start he was a marked man. His appearance attracted attention even before he began to talk. The most vivid description I have found of him is in an English volume, which testifies to the impression he made on the other side of the Atlantic, with his long hair, his flashing black eyes, his strung-out, emaciated consumptive body.

The Man Nobody Could "Keep Put."

As I have said, Dow was a trial to his Methodist superiors from the start. For several years he was an annual "problem" at the door of Conference, and when at last he had slipped inside the bar he proved more of a problem inside than he had been out. Jesse Lee had more experience trying to fit the rigors of Methodist discipline to this Yankee will-o'-the-wisp than anybody else, but Asbury, Coke, Whatcoat, Garrettson, Snethen—all the commanders of that early Methodist army had their troubles with him. Moving about as he did, he was bound to meet them all. When he did meet them he had a way of asking for chances to preach. None of them knew what to do with him. He came at a time when Methodism, at least along the seaboard and in the British Isles, was beginning to settle down, and he didn't have a trace of "settle" in him. Finally the bishops and presiding elders seemed to have adopted a sort of benevolent neutrality. He had taken himself outside the regular Methodist order, and they were more than willing to do nothing to embarrass him, although Lee had threatened dire punishments, if he would leave them alone.

Dow came up three times before the Annual Conference would admit him on trial. Each time his supporters could tell of tremendous stirrings in every place in which he had preached, but each time Jesse Lee or some other would warn the brethren against the inevitable difficulties that would follow giving such a man a place in the regular ministry. These rejections cut Dow to the quick. Yet when he finally did get in he left his circuit that same year to undertake the first of his visits to Ireland. One has no difficulty in hearing the exasperated presiding elder say, "I told you so," as he tells a young man named Elijah Hedding to go and see what he can do with the deserted circuit.

There was something utterly senseless about that first trip of Dow's to Ireland. He landed in Ireland without credentials, without knowing a soul, and in a period when every wanderer and every unattached person was subject to careful police supervision. Yet, all things considered, he had a fine time in Ireland. He found plenty of places in which to preach, made some of the warmest friends of his life, and the number of his converts was large.

"Behold This Dreamer Cometh!"

When Dow returned to the United States from this first Irish expedition there were still Methodists who were willing to give him a chance in the regular itinerancy. One of them—I am interested to note that his name was Hutchinson—persuaded Freeborn Garrettson to give him a circuit on his district. Garrettson was skeptical, but this Hutchinson in a way became security for Dow with the elder. Garrettson's skepticism was justified. It wasn't very long before Lorenzo was dreaming and hearing vioces again. And the next thing anybody knew he was disembarking from a coasting vessel in Georgia. This was the end of his career as a "regular" Methodist preacher. After that he was decidedly irregular—and decidedly powerful. For from Georgia began the first of those immense itineraries that took him back over the mountains and through the wilderness until he had carried his message to practically every settlement between the Atlantic Ocean and the Mississippi River.

About this time he fell in love. It is a shame not to give the full account of his courtship, as his journal preserves it, for it can have had few parallels. But it began when he visited one Smith Miller, a Connecticut man who kept a house in which Methodist itinerants occasionally stayed. When Miller's daughter, Peggy, stepped into the room, Dow asked her whether it was true, as he had been told, that she was resolved to marry no one but a Methodist preacher. Peggy confirmed the rumor. Dow then asked, "Do you think you could accept of such an object as me?" Peggy left the room without answering. Dow says that he had opportunity to ask only one more question on that first visit. Whether or not it was the same question we are not told.

A Weird Courtship.

But the next day Dow was back, under pretext of having his clothes fixed. This time he told Peggy of an impending southern trip, on which he was fairly certain to die. "But," said he, "if I am preserved a year and a half from now I hope to see this northern country again, and if you live and remain single, and find no one you like better than me, and would be willing to give me twelve months out of thirteen, or three years out of four to travel, and that in foreign lands, and never say, 'Do not go to your appointment'—for if you should stand in my way, I should pray to God to remove you, which I believe he would answer—and if I find no one I like better than I do you, perhaps something further may be said on the subject."

This might be taken for a proposal. Apparently it was by Peggy. She waited; Lorenzo returned; they were married; he turned out to be fully as errant a husband as he had warned. But Peggy proved an ideal wife, and they lived together in such complete accord that the time never came when the husband was tempted to pray God to let him out of his bargain by the respectable route of widowerhood. He showed his affection for her by calling her "My Rib," which is certainly as intimate a term of endearment as one could devise.

After his wedding, Dow's life was a ceaseless itinerancy. Accompaied by Mrs. Dow, he crossed the ocean once more, where he proved instrumental in the formation of the Primitive Methodists and the Quaker Methodists, together with one or two local bodies of independent Methodists in England. He also had a second successful evangelistic tour in Ireland. On the American continent he passed back and forth without pause, preaching all the time, save when he was writing or debating. He became a famous champion in those days of intense doctrinal disputation, Calvinists and Universalists being his favorite opponents. In the camp meetings he proved a power; indeed, there was a time when he was the most popular camp-meeting preacher in the country. Never robust, the diseases common to the frontier fastened hard on him, so that he had to have a leather harness made to hold him erect and in his saddle, and later even this had to give way to a carriage. But he kept going, preaching with power, and witnessing revivals of tremendous emotional force.

The last years of Dow's life are somewhat shrouded. He did not leave his journal in such form as to give us the whole story, and by that time—he died in 1834—the Methodists had come to regard him as such a liability that they said as little about him as possible. It is almost pitiable to find, in the best of the Methodist biographies of Dow, published seven years after his death, the closing pages filled with references to his "declension in piety." The paragraph in which this excellent work brings its subject's career to a close is worth quoting as an example of literary art, if for no other reason. "Mr. Dow's end was sudden," it says. "He was at Washington, in the District of Columbia, preparing his papers for a continuation of his journal, when he sickened and died. Of the manner of his death little is known, but it is to be hoped he lived to repent his loss of piety, and obtain the precious faith he so evidently enjoyed in the early part of his career. He was probably about fifty-seven years of age at the time of his death."

Permanent Marks.

It is hard to discover the basis of this "loss of piety" charge. According to all that one can learn, Dow kept preaching to congregations larger than those of any other American preacher right up to the time of his death; he kept having conversions everywhere he preached; more babies were named after him than after any other Methodist of his time. To be sure, as he neared the end he gave more and more time to fighting the Roman Catholics, and his real purpose in visiting Washington at the time of his death seems to have been to uncover Jesuit plots there. But fighting the Catholics has never been generally regarded by the Methodists as evidence of loss of piety. The truth is that Dow became a good deal of a critic of the Methodist system, and especially of the Methodist bishops, and this was taken to be tantamount to a confessed loss of piety. Well, perhaps it was.

At any rate, sanctified (as he claimed) or not (as others claimed), he made his mark. Go down into Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Mississippi, Missouri, and you can find that mark abiding. And whether you think he was sane or crazy; justified in the course he pursued or irresponsible; a hero or a freak—whatever you call him, he is worth knowing. He deserved a better, fuller description than I have given here. For, as Abel Stevens said of him, "He posssessed characteristics not devoid of interest to the student of human nature." —Methodist Episcopal Press.

PERSEVERANCE.

When you're up against a trouble,
Meet it squarely, face to face;
Lift your chin and set your shoulders,
Plant your feet and take a brace.
When it's vain to try to dodge it,
Do the best that you can do;
You may fail, but you may cnoquer.
See it through!

Black may be the clouds about you,
And your future may seem grim,
But don't let your nerve desert you;
Keep yourself in fighting trim.
If the worst is bound to happen,
Spite of all that you can do,
Running from it will not save you.
See it through!

Even hope may seem but futile
When with troubles you're beset,
But remember you are facing
Just what other men have met.
You may fail, but you may conquer.
Don't give up, whate'er you do;
Eyes front, head high to the finish.
See it through!

UNDERSTANDING TOM.

It was Polly's birthday—good little Polly with her self-sacrificing spirit and her thought for others.

She arose as usual, for birthdays are not always holidays, although they ought to be. Mother had been ill for several weeks, and for the last month Polly had been at the helm, planning the meals and cooking and cleaning.

Though it was her birthday, Polly did not start out by saving herself. Father was especially fond of bran muffins for breakfast and she would make a pan of them for him by way of a birthday offering. She would have bacon and eggs, too, and oranges.

Father and Tom looked at the neatly spread breakfast table with approval. Father put both arms around her as she came in.

"My good little daughter," he began with an affectionate kiss, "I trust you will have many, many more birthdays—each one happier than the last."

And then he put into her hands a small package.

Polly's face, flushed from the heat of the kitchen, lighted.

"Thank you, father dear," she cried. "You know how much I appreciate any gift you would give me."

The package proved to contain gloves. A sensible gray pair that Polly especially needed. But she could not help but feel just a little disappointed. On one's birthday one sometimes wanted gifts that were not quite so sensible. Mother's present proved to be material for a new dress. This was a sensible gift, too, for Polly needed the dress—a dark blue serge—there was no doubt about that. But still in Polly's heart there was that same disappointed feeling.

By 10 o'clock Aunt Louisa came in bringing her gift. Two pairs of hose—and again the feeling of disappointment predominated. It was nice having all these sensible birthday gifts, but because she was a beauty-loving little girl, she longed for something different.

The day passed, and at 6 o'clock a knock sounded on the door. Polly went to open it. There on the front steps was a boy from the florist's and he held in his hand something very carefully wrapped up.

"Are you Miss Polly Maxwell?" he asked

Polly nodded.

"Yes, that is my name," she answered.

The boy handed her the package.

"It's all right, then," he said, as he took himself off.

Polly, with the package in her hand, went into the living room and very carefully took off the wrappings. And there before her astonished gaze was a blue silver basket filled with chrysanthemums, pink rosebuds, ferns and laurel.

"Oh," cried Polly breathlessly; "oh, oh!"

And then she spied a card lying among the flowers. With fingers that trembled, she extracted it and held it up. On it were written these words, "To the best little sister in the world on her birthday, from her affectionate brother, Tom."

Polly suddenly stooped to lay her cheek upon the fragrance of the basket. As she did so she whispered a little prayer of thankfulness. Tom had made it all right. He knew that she needed something just that lovely, to set off her sensible birhtday gifts.

"To the best little sister in the world on her birthday," she whispered the words softly.

Tom knew. Dear old understanding Tom!—Susan Hubbard Martin, in Presbyterian Advocate.

MARGOT'S BAD INDIANS.

Margot and Sam were a little girl and boy who lived in a log cabin in a clearing in a great woods. You see, they lived in the days when the white people had just come to this country. There were very few towns in those days and many of the people lived in the forest this way with their home far away from any other houses.

Margot and Sam did not often go away from home and seldom saw any other little girls and boys. But they were very happy most of the time, for they found many things to play with in the forest, such as flowers, nuts and small animals to make pets of.

But they loved each other most of all and never tired of being together, and made up many funny games to while away the long winter days.

The times when they were not happy were when their parents talked about the bad Indians. You know there were two kinds of Indians. They did not fear the good Indians who sometimes came to their cabin home and brought them beaded presents. They laughed to see the Indian women carrying the little Indian babies on their backs in a kind of cradle. These babies were called papooses and were tied in so that they could not move.

But the bad Indians were (their parents said) much to be feared. They would sometimes kill people, burn their houses and carry off the children. Margot was older than Sam and knew the kind of feather headdress worn by the friendly Indians, but she had never seen any bad Indians.

One day when their father was away from home, a man came to tell their mother that a woman living in another part of the woods was very sick. She needed some woman to come and do something for her. At first their mother felt that she could not go and leave the children alone. But when Margot declared that she was not afraid to stay alone with Sam, their mother decided to go to see the woman.

The children had a good time. Sam beat on the very large copper kettle in the corner with a stick. It made a merry, booming sound. Then Margot made the large spinning wheel turn so fast that it buzzed like a swarm of bees. They laughed and felt that they were having a great time.

Then Margot climbed upon a chair to look out of the small window, for her mother had had her fasten the door with the large wooden bolt.

What the little girl saw made her shake so she almost fell from the chair. Some Indians were coming out of the woods and they had on strange head-dresses and had their faces painted to look terrible. She knew that they were bad Indians, and was badly scared, but mostly for Sam, who was younger than herself. She slipped down from the chair and told Sam not to strike the kettle any more, but she did not tell him why, she did not want to scare him if she could help it.

Then she looked hard at the kettle, which was the only good hiding place in the room, but was not large enough to cover them both. Then she decided that Sam was the one to be saved from the Indians, for she was older and could stand being carried off better than he. So she put Sam under the kettel that was large but not heavy to lift. She told him that they were going to play a new game but that he must be still and not say a word until she told him to. She then hid under the bed where she could see the window, for she thought the Indians would be sure to look in there. So they did—all crowding up to peep in. Their painted faces looked terrible to her, but she did not cry, only watched to see what they would do. Then, suddenly she saw one of them jump back—then others did the same with their eyes almost popping out.

What could be scaring them? Then Margot heard a scraping sound, and peeping from the foot of the bed saw the kettle moving out from the corner toward the door. Of course she knew that Sam was crawling under it, but the Indians, who believe in such things, thought that it was walking itself and was making some kind of magic to get them.

Soon, every face was gone from the window, and after a while Margot ventured to look out again, and saw that they had gone, every one of them.

She then lifted the kettle from Sam and told him that he had played a nice game, but she did not tell him about the Indians. Their mother and father came soon, and she told them, and Margot was told that she was a brave girl and a very kind little sister.—Mary David Ammenman, in Central Methodist.

THE SHINY SIDE OUT.

The small boy had a new belted overcoat, the belt to which was stiffened with a facing of patent leather. When the youngster appeared all ready for school, the patent leather was in evidence.

"Why, son, is your belt on right?" asked the father doubtfully. "I think it is intended to go the other way, isn't it?"

"Oh, I like it with the shiny side out!" replied the boy, making his departure promptly, to escape further criticism.

"The idea!" exclaimed the mother, entering just in time to catch the sentence and witness the fitting. She made a movement toward the door, but her husband detained her.

"Don't," he laughed. "His principle is all right, whatever may be said of the effect on his coat. Turning the shiny side out is the way to put things. It is what this old world needs; long may the boy stick to it!"—Kate W. Hamilton, in Queen's Gardens.

GROWN-UP LAND.

"Good morrow, fair maid, with lashes brown,
Can you tell me the way to Womanhood Town?"
"O, this way and that way, never a stop!
'Tis by picking up stitches grandma will drop;
'Tis by kissing the baby's troubles away;
'Tis by learning that cross words never will pay;
'Tis helping mother, 'tis sewing up rents;
'Tis reading, 'tis playing, 'tis saving the cents;
'Tis loving and smiling, forgetting to frown,
O, that is the way to Womanhood Town!"

"Just wait, my brave lad, one moment, I pray, Manhood Town lies where? Can you tell me the way?"
"O, by toiling and trying we reach that land,
A bit with the head, a bit with the hand!
'Tis by climbing the steep hill, Work,
And keeping out of the wide street, Shirk;
'Tis by always taking the weak one's part;
'Tis by giving the mother a happy heart;
'Tis by keeping bad thoughts and actions down.
O, that is the way to Manhood Town!"
And the lad and the maid ran hand in hand
To their fair estates in Grown-Up Land.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. G. Lord, Coahoma, Miss., has our thanks for two subscriptions to the Advocate, recently sent in.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, our pastor at Standard, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday morning of this week. He gave a good report of the work under his care.

The Y. W. C. A. is planning a nation-wide dinner, to be attended by 10,000 girls on Nov. 22. The dinners will be given in two hundred cities and towns.

Southern Methodist University opened its fall session on Sept. 26 with the largest enrollment in its history. The opening address was delivered by Dr. Joseph Fort Newton.

Mrs. C. M. Noble, Sr., of Charlieville, La., announces the marriage of her granddaughter, Eliza Noble Vaughan, to Mr. Bernard H. Ford, of Rayville, La., on Oct. 2. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy couple.

The eighty-fourth session of Athens College, Athens, Ala., opened on Sept. 14 with a large attendance. The endowment campaign of the school is within $100,000 of its goal. Mrs. J. H. McCoy is president of the college.

Those of our readers who are interested in football doubtless noticed with pleasure that in last Saturday's games Millsaps won from Howard, and Centenary won from Southern Methodist University, both by comfortable scores.

Dr. Mark Terrell, general evangelist, requests use to state that he has an open date beginning Nov. 6 that he would be glad to give some pastor in Louisiana or Mississippi. Until Oct. 17 Dr. Terrell's address will be Fayetteville, Ark.

Rev. J. H. Holder, pastor of the Methodist church at Grenada, Miss., recently held an eight-day series of services, doing the preaching himself. The Grenada Sentinel reports that the meeting was very helpful to the community.

Though we have no official information to that effect, we understand that Bishop H. M. DuBose, who has been in the ministry fifty years, will preach a semi-centennial sermon before the Mississippi Conference at Jackson, Miss., on Nov. 9.

Miss Carolyn A. Hosford, who has been assisting the pastor, Rev. J. W. Sells, in a series of meetings at Pascagoula, Miss., is rendering a similar service in the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss., this week, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, pastor.

Rev. W. F. Roberts, our pastor at Ida, La., writes: "Everything is moving along nicely with us on the Ida-Hosston charge. We are getting ready to go to Baton Rouge with that ancient and time-honored report, short but sweet, 'Everything in full, Bishop.'"

We have received no direct information since last week, but we learn indirectly that Dr. A. S. Lutz and Rev. D. C. Barr, both of whom were seriously ill as the result of operations which they recently underwent at Monroe, La., are gradually gaining strength.

Recently the Advocate has carried some advertising of Webster's New International Dictionary, published by G. & C. Merriam Company, Springfield, Mass. Having used this dictionary for a good many years, the editor of the Advocate has no hesitancy in recommending it heartily to anybody who may be in need of such a volume.

Dr. George W. Ridout, of Asbury College, has just brought from the press a pamphlet, "The Dress Question and Modern Abominations," in which he brings a severe indictment against modern fashions in dress. The pamphlet is published by the Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

According to press dispatches, Dr. B. P. Taylor, pastor for the past two years of the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., has been transferred to the St. Louis Conference and appointed presiding elder of the St. Louis District; and Dr. Frank L. Wells, for the past four years presiding elder of the St. Louis District, has been transferred to the Louisiana Conference.

Another book of sermons, "Familiar Failures," by Dr. Clovis Chappell, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Memphis, is just from the press. These sermons were preached by the author to his congregation—eight in the morning and eight in the evening. We have not had an opportunity yet to read this book; but we have read other volumes by Dr. Chappell, and we feel sure a treat is in store when we can get to this series.

We learn from the Grenada Sentinel that the presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference, the Board of Education, the Sunday School Board, and the district Sunday school secretaries held meetings in Grenada last week. The Board of Education took action looking to the raising of sufficient funds to continue Grenada College as one of the A-grade institutions of the church.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, of Grand Cane, La., was in New Orleans on Friday of last week and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He was recently assisted in a meeting at Stonewall by Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, in which gracious results were accomplished. Brother Grambling will carry a good report to Conference. He will be the speaker at the Shreveport Union Epworth League revival, being held this week at the First Methodist Church, Shreveport.

The Junaluska prize novel contest was won by Rev. D. E. Camak, of the Upper South Carolina Conference, with a volume, "June of the Hills." The book is being published by the Junaluska Woman's Club. The book will appear on Dec. 1. The price prior to that date is $1.25; afterward the price will be $1.50. Miss Maude McCulloch is the sales manager, to whom orders should be sent. The book is very highly commended by Dr. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, who is himself a lover of the hills with which the book deals.

GREAT ACHIEVEMENT OF SHREVEPORT METHODISM.

The following telegram was received just before the Advocate went to press on Tuesday morning:

"Texas Avenue congregation, with help of Shreveport City Board of Missions and Church Extension, has let contract for the erection of a fine brick church. Rev. R. T. Ware and his congregation are very happy. Shreveport Methodism receives a great inspiration in this achievement."

Signed, W. W. HOLMES.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences:

I notice from the Journals that quite a number of you did not include in your report to the Annual Conference last year the amount paid on Centenary.

You will receive from my office during the latter part of the month a post card giving the amounts as follows:

1. The amount paid last year.
2. The amount reported in the Journal.
3. The difference to be added to this year's report.
4. The amount paid this year.
5. Total amount to be reported this year.

If you do not receive one of these post cards, you will know that your report last year was correct and there was nothing to report this year.

If your report was correct last year, you will only receive a card showing the amount paid this year.

Yours sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Centenary Treasurer,
Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences.

WIN THE WAR!

(Message adopted by seventy-five Representative Leaders at Atlantic City Conference on Prohibition, held October 5 and 6, 1927).

The nation is approaching its great period of political discussion and decision. The crisis in constitutional government demands a national offensive. Organization must be made adequate for the occasion. We call for a realignment of our forces and for a united command.

Prohibition is not a theory; it is a fact. The practicability of its enforcement where not vitiated by corrupt politics has been proved. That it is a good law has been demonstrated. By it labor has been enriched, business enlarged and the public's savings increased. Morally it is the greatest social adventure in history. Politically it challenges a free people to carry out their own mandates. At its worst prohibition is immeasurably better than legalized liquor at its best and it is the settled conviction of a large majority of the nation's voetrs that it shall be carried into full effect.

We stahd for the enforcement of all law. The issue joins in the Eighteenth Amendment. The personal liberty argument is specious. Personal liberty must wait on public weal and walk with law. To concede that enforcement is impracticable is to condone nullification. The alternative is ordered government or anarchy, and the Constitution of the United States is not a jest.

The friends of prohibition and law enforcement demand positive declarations in party platforms. They will strive to defeat office-seekers who are either negative or silent. Representative leaders of twenty-five million women who have been added to the electorate since the Eighteenth Amendment came into force have joined in the declaration of three million organized young people that "No candidate not outspokenly committed to the Eighteenth Amendment and its enforcement can have our support or votes."

We call upon the American people to repudiate all State and national party platforms that deal only in glittering generalities with law-enforcement. We will oppose and vote against candidates in both parties whose promise is fair and dry but whose official performance is wet.

The matter is more than a domestic issue. The hope of every other people awaits the outcome of our struggle and the organized "trade" abroad unites with the illicit traffic at home to destroy our achievement. In this, when we strengthen America, we serve the world.

Let propaganda be answered with truth. Release the facts. Let complacency make way for militancy. Mobilize the public conscience.

Then shall Lincoln's aspiration become a reality in government and "reverence for law the political religion of the nation." And with Lincoln we invoke upon this cause "The considerate judgment of mankind and the favor of Almighty God."

MISSIONARIES RETURNING TO THEIR CHINA STATIONS.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions in New York City have received a cablegram stating that their missionaries have reoccupied all of their stations in the province of Shantung. The English Baptist Missionary Society in London have also announced that their missionaries have returned to all their stations in Shantung and Shansi. The board of the Church of the Brethren have also received a cablegram that their missionaries have returned to their stations in Shansi. The trustees of Peking University have received a cablegram stating that that university has reopened with full enrollment and that the outlook is encouraging in every respect. These messages are typical of those received from missionary boards working in North China. They seem to indicate that the authorities in China, both of the missionary societies and of the government, do not expect any serious disturbances to occur in the Northern province in the near future.

The Methodist Episcopal and the Baptist Boards in New York, and the board of the United Church in Canada have received information that a few of their missionaries are returning to West China. A small group of missionaries have remained in the province of Szechwan throughout the year, and these recent reports seem to show that the situation there is sufficiently stable to justify the increase of these numbers.

With reference to Southern China no general information is immediately available. Many of the missionaries there were able to remain at their work without interruption during the past year. Their more serious difficulties occurred two or three years ago, and in recent months, the storm center having gone to the north, they have been able to carry forward their missionary work with less interference than has been their experience in recent years. It is probably true that in these autumn months even larger numbers will be found in their stations in South China.

The Yangstze valley continues to be the center of the stage in the struggle between the Nationalists' forces and those opposed to them. In that area missionary service is still interrupted. Even so, however, at Hankow, Bishop Roots and Bishop Gilman, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, are continuing at their work, and proposals have been made for the return of several other missionaries to that center.

The principle of most of the missionary societies with reference to the return of missionaries to their former stations is that the decision rests with the missionaries themselves and the mission organization in China. It is expected that the missionaries will obtain from the consuls and other government sources all information obtainable regarding the situation in the places to which they propose to go. The missionaries themselves, of course, have definite information regarding those conditions. It will be desirable, however, to disentangle as much as possible the direction of missionary work and particularly the determination of such questions as the return of missionaries from the political problems of International Relationships. So the missionaries, on the one hand, will seek to avoid entering any place of danger so as not to make the relations of the governments concerned more complicated, and on the other hand without reference to political issues they will endeavor to carry forward their missionary service.—Foreign Missions Bulletin.

MY LORD AND I.

By the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins.

Dr. F. B. Meyer told me a beautiful story not long ago. It is the story of a group of people who were traveling in Europe. In the group there was a little girl. They all loved her, but she had one exceedingly trying habit. Every time the company stopped at a hotel, morning, noon, or night, this little girl would find a piano somewhere and would begin to play. She could only play one little ditty with one finger. She could not play it through without striking two or three false notes, and yet she kept it up so constantly that they grew weary.

One day at the noon hour at a hotel the little girl was the first one out of the vehicle, and flew to the piano. There was a great musician in the house. When he heard those strange sounds he came down, and stood in the door, and saw the little girl sitting on the piano stool, drumming away. He went and sat alongside of her, and while she continued to play he put his great hands on the keyboard, and took her poor little ditty and made it the theme of a wonderful symphony.

The music rang out through the house, and people came crowding to listen in breathless silence to such music as they had never heard before.

The great musician took the little girl by the hand and led her out and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the little girl who made the music you have been listening to and enjoying!"

Do you catch the message? We are living a life unsatisfactory to ourselves, although our hearts are loyal. We are making more mistakes than successes sometimes, but those nail-pierced hands are moving up and down the keyboard of our life, and are taking that which we are trying to do and making it the strength and the power of a rich and eternal story. They are taking our mistakes and making of them wonderful successes. The wonder of it is that at the last great day the Master will lead us out and say:

"This is the child who was loyal to me on earth!"

Partnership with Christ. My Lord and I. Not I alone. Not my Lord alone. My Lord and I. That close fellowship, that close communion, that close consciousness of his love and his strength working in and through us, so that our loyalty is simply bound up with the way in which he works with us.—Record of Christian Work.

CHINESE HOME MISSIONS CARRY ON.

A letter from Dr. C. Y. Cheng, General Secretary of the National Christian Council of China, brings the following cheering news of the loyalty and steadfastness of purpose of the Chinese Christians:

"You will be happy to know that, at a time when missionaries have evacuated from their posts and much of the work of the church has come to a standstill, the Chinese Home Missionary Society is planning to send out a new band of missionaries to the Yunan Province. The secretary of the Society, Rev. C. K. Li, is going to accompany four or five new missionaries to start for Yunan after visiting such centers as Foochow, Amoy, Swatow, Canton and Hongkong in the early part of September, visiting the churches and meeting church leaders in these centers in the hope to rouse up a greater measure of zeal for this missionary outreach. We hope to have two medical workers, two teachers and one evangelistic worker amongst those who go to the field. It is very gratifying to know that these people have decided to serve Christ and their fellow-men in that distant place, well knowing that political upheaval and open banditry are awaiting their coming. It is very inspiring to read the letters these people wrote to us offering their services for the evangelization of the Southwest. * * *

"The evacuation of missionaries has somewhat added to the difficulty of the church. In that, much responsibility has been left over to the native workers. Yet we are thankful to say that many stand firm and prove to be faithful to their trust. This time of testing will, in my opinion, lead the church to a higher plane of their spiritual life. The church in the future may have to go with less financial support and intellectual assistance from outside, but the church will still have the Christian truth and message to deliver to the people of China. The church will still have Christ to present to the people of the Far East—Christ who is the essential value of the Christian religion."

JUPITER AND THE HORSE.

"Father of beasts and men," said the horse, approaching the throne of Jupiter, "I am said to be one of the most beautiful of animals with which thou hast adorned the world; and my self-love leads me to believe it. Nevertheless, I believe there are some things capable of improvement even in me; may there not be?"

"And what in thee thinkest thou admits of improvement? Speak! I am open to instruction," said indulgent Jupiter, with a smile.

"Perhaps," returned the horse, "I should be fleeter, if my legs were taller and thinner. A long swan-like neck would not disfigure me. A broader breast would add to my strength. And since thou hast destined me to bear thy favorite, man, the saddle which my well-meaning rider puts upon me might be created part of me."

"Good," replied Jupiter, "Wait a moment." Jupiter, with earnest countenance, pronounced the creative word. Then flowed life into dust; then matter organized and combined; and suddenly stood before the throne the ugly camel.

The horse saw, shuddered, and trembled with fear and abhorrence.

"Here," said Jupiter, "are taller and thinner legs; here is a long swan neck; here is a broad breast; here is a created saddle! Wilt thou, O horse, that I should transform thee after this fashion?" The horse trembled.

"Go," said Jupiter; "be instructed for this once without being punished. But, to remind thee occasionally of thy presumption, the new creation shall continue." Jupiter cast a preserving glance at the camel. "And never shall the horse behold thee without shuddering."—From McGuffey's High School Reader.

BEING HELPFUL.

"This little girl washed the dishes,
This little girl swept the floor,
This little girl helped her mother
With many an odd little chore.
This little girl loved her daddy,
And all the rest of them, too:
And this little, tiny baby
Was ready to laugh and coo."

MRS. ANNIE ERVIN McGOWAN.

Mrs. Annie E. McGowan died at Grenada, Miss., and was buried at Terry, Miss., services being conducted in the Methodist church by the following: Rev. R. E. Rutledge, pastor; Dr. B. H. Lovelace, pastor Baptist Church, Clinton, Miss.; Rev. J. O. Ware, her son-in-law, and pastor Methodist church, Edwards, Miss., and Rev. H. J. Moore, pastor of the Methodist church at Bolton, Miss., all of whom bore eloquent testimony to her worth. Mrs. McGowan was a woman possessing all the noblest traits of character, and to depict her properly would be like trying to paint the lily or add fragrance to the rose—her beautiful life spoke for itself. She was a faithful church worker, always ready and glad to do more than her share, as her deep spiritual nature made it her chief pleasure to help carry on her Master's work here. As a friend, she was always true, and she will be sorely missed. All who knew her loved her. In her family, she seemed the one upon whom all the others could lean for sympathy, guidance, help, and love; in fact, where Annie was seemed home since the sainted mother's passing. She was indeed ready for transplanting into the heavenly vineyard—her last words were, "I am ready to go."

"Ready to go; yes, ready to go,
Winging her way from a world of woe.
Ready to lay earth's sad cross down,
And to receive Heaven's radiant crown.

"Ready to meet, on the golden shore,
The loved and lost, who have gone before.
Ready to rest now, her victory won,
And hear Jesus say to her, 'Child, well done.'

"Oh, may we live from day to day,
So at the last we, too, can say—
When the night comes on, and the lights are low—
'All, all is well, I am ready to go.'"

REBECCA D. HUBBARD.

BROTHER J. G. ROBERTS died on July 6 at his home near Minden, La., where he had resided during the closing years of his useful life, surrounded by his children and grandchildren. Brother Roberts lived the major part of his life in Mississippi, where he was born in 1854. In 1876 he was married to Addie Jones, and to this union four children were born, three of whom, with the wife and mother, survive the father. His early life was spent near the Old Sam Jones Camp Ground, and it was while attending services during a camp meeting at that place that he was converted and surrendered his life to God. He united with the Sharon Methodist church at Gloster, Miss., and for a number of years served as steward of that church. Upon moving to Louisiana, Brother Roberts united with the congregation of the little Methodist church near McIntyre, on the Cotton Valley charge, and in the service of this church he was active until the end came. It was while assisting the pastor, Brother E. L. Cargill, in a meeting at this church that the writer was associated with this good man in the summer of 1926. I was entertained in his home and enjoyed his fellowship. During this meeting he celebrated his seventy-second birthday; but at that advanced age he was active and took a keen interest in the work of the church. He was a great lover of music, and delighted in singing the old hymns of the church. In his going the community has sustained a great loss; one of its outstanding citizens has passed to his reward. The church will greatly miss his presence and voice in her councils, and his family will miss his presence and influence.

W. F. ROBERTS.

MRS. ROBERTA SEAL departed this life, Sept. 13, 1927. Sister Seal had been sick for some time, so that her departure was not unexpected. To her, death held no terror, as she frequently talked of going home. She surrendered her life to the Master at the age of 13, and joined Beech Grove Methodist church, and was faithful to the end. She was Miss Roberta Cunningham, and was married to Mr. Jason M. Seal, Jan. 17, 1867. For sixty and one-half years this saintly couple lived together as man and wife, sharing alike the joys and sorrows that fell their lot, trusting always in and the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock."

Like rock house foundations, the essential quality of rock for monuments is durability. Other important qualities are beauty, legibility of inscriptions and adaptability to design. Granite is the only stone that fills these requirements, and many granites do not possess all these qualities.

Winnsboro Blue Granite

is a true granite, as pure a granite as is known. It possesses all of the above essential qualities for the ideal memorial, and it contains less deleterious ingredients—iron, lime, water—than other granites. It is, therefore, the most durable.

Be sure that you get the genuine Winnsboro Blue Granite. Like other high quality materials there are many inferior substitutes which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Write for Free descriptive literature, also for facsimile reproduction of a polished sample of Winnsboro Blue Granite that you may see its beauty.

When you have purchased a monument specifying Winnsboro Blue Granite write us giving name of your Memorial Merchant, and we will send you a polished Winnsboro Blue Granite paper weight.

ZONE MEETING AT TROUT.

On Tuesday, June 29, zone No. 5 put on quite a nice program at Trout. The meeting was called to order by the zone leader, who announced that we would have a social hour, which every one enjoyed. At 12 o'clock a very tempting luncheon was served to about sixty-five people. Brother Dodson, our presiding elder, was present and was called on for prayer. The luncheon had been prepared by the Trout-Good Pine Societies as co-hostess for the zone meeting.

Afternoon Session.

The meeting was called to order at 1:30 by the zone leader, Mrs. T. J. Drewett. The Bible lesson was very beautifully given by Mrs. Waggoner, of Olla. Mrs. Waggoner is president of the brand-new society at Olla, and I believe the first "Jubilee Society" of the Minden District, with the Good Pine Society holding second place.

Special song, "Whispering Hope," by Mrs. Frank and Miss Mollie Bamburg, was greatly enjoyed by every one.

Special song, "The Old Rugged Cross," by Maxine Ellard and Schuhle Bamburg, was beautifully rendered.

Remarks by zone leader. Some of the questinos asked were: Are we helping Jesus or hindering him? As the mother worries over a lost child, more of course Jesus worries over his lost children. In checking our own lives, do we find that we are using our lives for Jesus as we should?

Tidings from Each Auxiliary.

Mrs. Pepper gave a brief outline of our own auxiliary, stressing the fact that we feel keenly the loss of our Good Pine members. They now have a Society all their own.

Miss Svea Johnson, president of the Good Pine Society, gave a fine report. Told of the work among the flood refugees at Rhinehart and carried quite a big box of clothing to the camps also.

Mrs. Yancey, president of the Jonesville Society, told about the flood waters running them to the hills and they had just recently been able to get back to their homes. So of course they had no report, but possibly would be able to have the zone meeting there by the last quarter. "Jonesville will do her part."

Mrs. Drewett spoke for Jena Society, saying they had not accomplished much since the first of the year, but are gaining ground again.

Olla had a fine report given by Mrs. Davis, and as Mrs. Drewett and Mrs. Gallaher helped them to get organized, we are very proud of them. The reports shows they are the workingest society in the district. They made $85 last quarter.

Mrs. Sheppard's report of the Rochelle Siciety was interesting, also that their attendance for the quarter had been almost one hundred per cent.

Mrs. Boddie, from Opelousas, who is zone leader for her district, was present, and told us about their work. We were so glad to have her with us.

Brother Dodson favored us with some fine thoughts. He likened the Missionary Society to the lily, and back to Ruth and Naomi, and the loyalty of one daughter-in-law, who would not turn back, and that the Missionary Societies will never turn back, but will continue to move on and be loyal.

Solo, "Somebody," by Miss Audrey Coleman, was very sweet indeed.

Brother Boddie, from Opelousas, gave us a fine talk. He said he just couldn't get away from the high water mark. He was trying to forget it this week as he was attending the Bible Training School at Rochelle, but when Mrs. Yancey gave her report from Jonesville, a high water report, then he would tell about some of the work that this Missionary Society had done. They were found doing everything their hands could find to do in the refugee camp.

Each Auxiliary represented had a Mission Study Class and a Bible Study Class.

Talk by Mrs. C. W. Flowers, on "Why We Need These Study Classes," that they are very necessary, was shown clearly that being in classes, naturally discussions arise, and different ideas are expressed that will cause you to think more before reaching an honest to goodness conclusion, so when we study a book on the foreigner, we become more interested in him and are ready to help more.

Jubilee Year—Mrs. B. T. Gallaher. The year 1928 will be the Fiftieth Anniversary of the authorization of the woman's work of the church, and the Societies of to-day will have an opportunity to show their appreciation of the pioneer women. The plans have been carefully and prayerfully made so that our entire constituency, from our bishops to the humblest members in the smallest church, shall have a part in it. Looking backward, and thinking forward will characterize this year's work.

Mrs. W. F. Wade explained the work of the Hospital Visitor, so that any time some of our own people are in hospitals, we can notify the committee in that city and their needs will be looked after.

Explanation of the Epworth Juniors by Mrs. Boddie, of Opelousas. The last Conference did away with the Junior Missionary Societies, and have instead the primary division of the League. This seems to be under the supervision of the president of the Societies.

Mrs. Drewett read the zone reports. Each one has given good reports on the zone work. She also mentioned the Pauline Randle Shaft, and urged that each Society send in their dollar to be placed in that fund.

Roll call showed five auxiliaries in zone No. 5 represented; also Rochelle and Opelousas, and Brother Dodson, "representing the whole Minden District." We had eleven visitors.

The collection for Scarritt Worker was taken, and $6.80 was the total received.

Brother Bamburg's talk was appreciated. He told how pleased he was with the two societies and that they both deserved much credit for their work among the refugees at Rhinehart, mentioning the fact that Trout Society had sent 321 garments and 153 pairs of shoes to Camp Beauregard, that Mr. Kiser, through Trout Creek Lumber Company, had given to the Trout Society for that purpose 125 pairs of the 153 pairs sent.

Brother Cudd then said he had enjoyed this program that the ladies had put on, and was the first one to say, "Goodness, but that dinner was fine and we are going to invite ourselves back again." Brother Cudd's talks are always enjoyed.

Then the question of where the next meeting would be, resulted in Olla getting it, as Jonesville was still refugeed and couldn't entertain.

Song: "Oh Zion, Haste."

Benediction: Brother Dodson.

Secretary Zone 5.

ZONE MEETING AT GRACE CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.

The third zone meeting for 1927 of zone 1, Jackson District, met at Grace Church, Jackson, Sept. 30, with a larger attendance than at any previous meeting.

There were representatives from every auxiliary, but it was with regret that we noted that the unorganized territory was not represented.

Grace Church proved herself a most cordial and gracious hostess, leaving nothing undone which would add to the comfort or pleasure of her guests. A delicious plate lunch was served at the noon hour by the hostess to all in attendance.

Galloway Memorial Church prepared and rendered the splendid program, which proved interesting, instructive ad inspiring.

After the program was over, a short business session was held, at which it was decided that on account of other meetings to be held during the fourth quarter of 1927 the fourth zone meeting would not be held.

Mrs. Dorrah, of Grace Church, was elected zone chairman for 1928, to succeed Mrs. Robert Pennington, of Pelahatchee, who has been our effi-

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The official report of the Ruston Standard Training School has reached the office, and Dr. W. Winans Drake, Educational Director, says: "I think the results are quite satisfactory. Had no difficulty with finances." There were fifty-nine credits in this school, as follows: "Story-Telling," taught by Mrs. W. W. Templeton, 34; "Intermediate-Senior Psychology," taught by Mrs. G. F. Winfield, 11; "The Bible," taught by Dr. Cleanth Brooks, 14. This was, indeed, a successful school.

We are in receipt of registration fee for Wesley Bible class from Vinton. The motto chosen for this class is "My Brother and I." The officers chosen are: Mrs. Vernon Lyons, president; Mrs. H. M. Lane, vice president; Mrs. C. W. Guthrey, secretary. We wish them success.

Mrs. Robert Wynn, of Lake Charles, is asking for a large number of registration blanks for Wesley Bible classes. Lake Charles is putting on an enlarged program in the Sunday school this year, and Brother Mayo, the secretary, writes of a splendid installation service recently held, and has furnished this office with a complete list of teachers and officers, for which we thank him.

The official announcement of the Shreveport Standard Training School to be held at Noel Memorial Oct. 17-21 has been received. The school will hold a Sunday school rally, for which a splendid program has been planned. Refreshments will be served, and an hour of fellowship will be enjoyed. This rally will be held prior to the opening of the training school. There are five courses offered in this school: "The Christian Religion," to be taught by Dr. N. E. Joyner; "The Sunday School," by Dr. W. W. Holmes; "Primary Worship," by Mrs. W. B. Ferguson; "Intermediate-Senior Department Administration," Mrs. J. W. Nance; "Agencies of Religious Education for Young People," Rev. H. L. Johns. This promises to be a great school.

We are in receipt of a most interesting bulletin issued by the Shreveport City Board of Missions and Church Extension, presenting the needs of the Texas Avenue Church of that city. The proposed new building is pictured on the bulletin and the contract has been let, amounting to about $27,000. The pastor of this church, Rev. R. T. Ware, has been untiring in his efforts to accomplish this building, and has had wonderful cooperation from his congregation, presiding elder, and the other pastors of the city. Dr. Goodrich, of First Church, has rendered invaluable aid. The new location of the church will be at the corner of Park Avenue and Laurel Street. The old Texas Avenue church building has served thirty-seven years, but has rotted away and become inadequate. It is a splendid thing to see the whole of Shreveport Methodism taking part in this enterprise, thus fulfilling the law of Christ, "Bear ye one another's burdens." We prophesy a great future for this church.

In the approaching Standard Training School scheduled to be held in New Orleans, Oct. 23-28, Rev. Clem Baker, of the Little Rock Conference, will teach his course on "City Sunday School Management." In a recent letter from Brother Baker inquiring as to details of the school, etc., he says: "I am delighted at the chance of getting to come to New Orleans." We can assure the New Orleans people who have not yet had the pleasure of having Brother Baker with them that it will indeed be an opportunity for them, both to meet him and to take his course.

In reading the many good things in the Methodist Messenger, the official organ of First Church, Shreveport, we became greatly interested in an item down in the far corner of the last page entitled, "Still We Plead," in which a request is made for parents to send to the pastor the names and addresses of all absent college boys and girls, in order that he might send to each of them a personal letter, and that they might be placed upon the regular mailing list of the Messenger, complimentary, in order to give them a taste of the church and Sunday school affairs while away from home. The item ends with the question, "Do you care?" We feel sure that every mother and father in the State would appreciate such interest in their absent young people.

Wednesday was spent in Monroe and West Monroe in the interest of the Standard Training School to be held there next week. Conferences were had with the leaders of both schools, and on Wednesday evening the writer delivered the message on Religious Education at the West Monroe church. Visits were made to the Riverside Hospital, where Dr. Lutz, pastor at West Monroe, and Rev. Dan Barr, of Oak Ridge, are recovering from recent operations.

We had the great pleasure of being entertained in the Henry home in West Monroe. When the writer was a young man and student at Centenary, a summer was spent on the Downsville circuit, where he enjoyed the beautiful hospitality of these same good people. Their home, now in West Monroe, is still the home for preachers, and during Dr. Lutz's illness all assisting preachers are being entertained there. The old folk have passed to their reward, but the hospitality of the home has been inherited by the children, of whom eleven are living. These are all upright Christian men and women, leading professional lives, teaching in the Sunday school, acting on the board of stewards, and serving their Master in many capacities. Dr. J. P. Henry is located at Winsboro, but the others—R. B. Henry, Sr., and R. B. Henry, Jr., J. R. Henry, Dr. H. S. Henry, Dr. W. M. Henry, Mrs. Lizzie Gilliland, Mrs. Elsie Johnson, Misses Alice, Dean, and Kate Henry—are all living in West Monroe, except the married sisters. May God's richest blessings continue to fall on this home.

The Conference Sunday School staff will hold a meeting at 9:30 a. m. on Nov. 8, at Alexandria. The staff is composed of the Conference superintendents of all departments. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, State Superintendent of the Elementary Department, and Rev. B. C. Taylor, of the Adolescent group, have indicated their intention to be present. It is hoped that the entire staff will be able to attend this meeting.

The congregation of First Church, Alexandria, and their friends, enjoyed two great messages from Dr. Sexton on last Sunday.

This note came from Mr. A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, a few days ago: "Men's Bible class had a great meeting and banquet last night. Dr. Goodrich gave the address on Brotherhood."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We are asking for pictures of all new church buildings, pictures of classes, methods of advertising, handwork done by pupils, any item of interest for our exhibit at Annual Conference. You will be glad to see your church represented in this display; you will feel like you were left out if you do not send in this material. Just a few minutes' work will make a number of people happy.

We are making progress in giving many teachers religious education, and these teachers are giving it to the children. It is not spectacular, but it is solid and enduring. We are able to make the best showing of what has been accomplished than at any time in the past. It is not possible for us to check up all the schools that are using the Program of Work, but we can check up all that will possibly score 70 points or more. If you will write me you want your school checked, we shall be glad to do so. Do not blame us if you do not ask us to visit your school.

We are planning to expand our program considerably the coming year. We have three ways of doing this. The first and most vital is to call for 100 volunteers who will teach at least one class during 1928. There is not a preacher in the Conference who could not teach "What Every Methodist Should Know." The teaching of this course would tone up the spirit of loyalty in a wonderful way. Another course is badly needed, "Evangelism," and still another, "Training the Devotional Life." These courses will appeal to the preachers and people. Whether one is approved to teach or not, it is possible to teach one or all the courses mentioned. Let us have a band of volunteers, one hundred volunteers, who will lead the hosts of Methodism forward. One hundred volunteer teachers will equal the expenditure of $2,000. This is far better than employing one hundred to teach for money compensation. It is infinitely better than raising the "assessment." Another way we shall have to expand is to have one hundred schools to participate in our Dual-Extension program—one hundred new schools giving missionary instruction and giving a monthly offering for North Mississippi and Europe. The third way of extending our work is to increase our Sunday School Day offerings. For some cause, many churches seem to want to discard this project altogether. The Conferences near us make a great success of this day. We are going to do better next year.

Rev. W. R. Hammontree will devote all his time to Monroe and Itawamba Counties. Mr. E. M. Sharp will give his time to Corinth District. These two young men have been working with us all summer. They have been eminently successful in teaching Cokesbury schools, making surveys, organizing schools, etc. We consider ourselves exceedingly fortunate in that the Sunday School Board is able to secure their services. More will be said of their work later. In the meantime, pastors and other Sunday school workers can give them full confidence. They are not on trial, but have demonstrated their worth and ability.

CLINTON CHARGE PROGRESSING.

Dear Dr. Carley: The Clinton charge is closing out a successful year's work. Much has been done in the way of "building, repairing, and furnishing churches and parsonages." The Sunday school department of the Clinton church, consisting of four rooms, hall, and bathroom, was finished, and furnished for use as a temporary parsonage at a cost of approximately $1,200. (This does not include the building itself, but merely the plastering, flooring, furnishing, etc.) The Pearl Chapel church has been newly ceiled at a cost of $500.

We have had gracious revivals at all of the churches. Rev. H. J. Moore was with us in the Brownsville meeting, and while he preached only three times during the meeting it was evident that much good was accomplished. Rev. Jasper L. Smith was with us in two fine meetings. Brother Jack is as "fine as silk," and we couldn't afford to let a year go by without having him with us in at least one revival meeting. Rev. Thos. O. Prewitt did the preaching in the Greenfield meeting. We also had a gracious revival there. Prewitt is a splendid type of a young evangelist, and has a great future. Rev. Clyde C. Clark assisted in the Clinton meeting. This was his first effort at holding a revival, but you wouldn't have suspected it in his splendid preaching. It was also the first Methodist revival to be held in Clinton. It was necessary to put one hundred extra folding chairs in the auditorium to accommodate the crowd every evening. There were fourteen accessions to the Clinton church, and five to the Drakes church, where Brother Smith did the preaching.

To any pastor desiring the services of a pastor-evangelist in a revival meeting, we would unreservedly commend any of the above mentioned brethren. They are all, without an exception, strong revivalists and consecrated men of God.

We are working toward the goal of full collections by Conference. It is, as usual, a difficult matter, but our people are "zealous to good works."

We could not conlude this article without mentioning the excellent spirit of co-operation manifested toward us by our Baptist brethren of Clinton. They worked with us as one in the revival meeting. Brother Clark was entertained in the home of a leading Baptist family, Prof. and Mrs. Spencer. The writer and the lady-of-the-parsonage have been elected honorary members of the Mississippi-Hillman College Faculty Club, and the writer is constantly designated to conduct the chapel exercises in both of the colleges. We do not say this boastfully, but to illustrate the fine spirit in which our Baptist brethren of Clinton have received the first resident Methodist pastor.

Giving God all of the credit, we are,

MARLIN H. McCORMACK, JR.,
Pastor, Clinton Charge.

GLAD TO SPREAD GOOD NEWS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—The friends of Mrs. Helen M. Kowalczyk of 6819 Hope Avenue were glad to hear that she has regained her health. For quite some time Mrs. Kowalczyk was quite ill and it was impossible for her to work. She took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build her up. After she had started taking it, she wrote to the Pinkham Company as follows: "I certainly boost Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I feel stronger already and sleep sounder. I am very glad to spread the good news of how it has helped me."

Detroit, Michigan—"I heard of this medicine through an advertisement in the 'Detroit News' and wrote to Mrs. Grace Gillem, whose letter was published. Then I started taking the Vegetable Compound and got the best results. I used the Sanative Wash, too. I am really happy if I can advise women to take your medicines." —Mrs. M. E. Murphy, 12163 Washburn Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use by women for over fifty years. It is a vegetable tonic made from root and herbs and is sold at all druggists.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Meridian Epworth League Union Meeting at Fifth Street Church.

The Meridian Epworth League Union met at Fifth Street Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 25. The meeting was filled with a business session, and a delightful "Talents" program, put on by the Fifth Street Leaguers. The president, Miss Lilybec Phillips, presided. Attention was called to Self-Denial Week, beginning Sept. 25, and Miss Addie Greeley presented a plan for grading the local chapters and awarding the banners at the Union meetings, which was adopted.

"Efficiency Institute" and plans for carrying out same were discussed by W. D. Hawkins. The union voted approval of the plan and appointed committees to perfect the arrangements and prgoram to be held Nov. 28 to Dec. 2.

Miss Peebles, Wesley House worker, having recently come to the field, was introduced, and spoke briefly of the work and opportunities of the Wesley House. The offertory was rendered by Miss Majie Eshe, and a special offering was taken for the Wesley House.

The following program was rendered by the host League:

Scripture lesson and talk by Rev. George Jones.

Violin solo, Maurice Christopher.

Piano solo, Mrs. Ruth Richardson.

Vocal solo, Mrs. Laurie Mae Carter.

Saxophone solo, Miss Margaret Koerner.

Reading, "When Malinda Sings," Mrs. Willie Koerner.

Violin solo, Lamar Cooper.

League benediction.

Senior League of Kingston Church, Laurel, Gives Interesting Program.

The Senior League of the Kingston church gave a very interesting program on the night of Sept. 25. This being the fourth Sunday, it was a missionary lesson. The leader, Miss Maggie Le Guin, prepared the lesson in a very unique way, not using the Era except to make a copy of the Scripture reading to be used.

Envelopes were numbered according to the numbers on the programs, and in these were placed little cards on which was written the part each was to take.

First was a missionary hymn, "Help Somebody To-Day," selected and announced by Miss Esther Denham, followed by the Scripture reading by Miss Doris Holt. Miss Lucile Holt led in prayer, praying especially that God would give the Leaguers more missionary spirit and help them to pray intelligently for missions.

Mr. E. J. Kirkland selected and announced an appropriate hymn, "The King's Business," after which Miss Mary Everett very interestingly told an inspiring missionary story, entitled, "Why Sallie Green Could Pay Her Tithe." A hymn, "The Whole Wide World for Jesus," was announced by Miss Ruth Patrick. Miss Naomi Everett opened the sentence prayers, and we closed with the League benediction.

The Leaguers agreed that this was a change from the regular program, and that they should try to vary them as often as possible, in order to keep the devotional meetings from growing monotonous.

APPRECIATION OF REV. L. E. ALFORD.

Four years being the limit according to the law of our church, Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District for the last four years, will be appointed to a new field at the approaching Conference in Jackson.

It is only necessary to examine the minutes of the Mississippi Conference covering the time he has served as presiding elder to ascertain the progress made under his efficient and capable leadership. He has been instant in season and out of season, making full proof of his ministry, honoring his office, "a workman that need not be ashamed."

From the start he has endeared himself to the pastors and laymen by his kind, brotherly spirit, and the unselfish service he has rendered in the King's business.

We, the members of the quarterly conferences of the Philadelphia station, the Philadelphia circuit, and the Burnside circuit, regret to give him up as our leader and elder. We shall miss the blessings of his fellowship and associations, which we prize very highly.

Associated with him in his great work throughout the district has been his capable and accomplished wife. She shares the responsibility, honors and rewards, and also the love and affection of the membership of the whole district.

We most heartily commend them to those to whom they may be appointed for the next year. Our prayers, our love will go with them into the next year.

Officials, Philadelphia station, Philadelphia circuit and Burnside circuit.

FROM UNION, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: May we have a word from Union charge? We are closing out our third year in a very satisfactory way. We have had twenty-eight accessions to the church on the charge on profession of faith, and sixteen by certificate. We are expecting to report our salaries and benevolences in full this year, as we have been doing the other two years we have been here.

Another thing worth reporting is a training class taught here at Union, and its results. Brother Chambers came to us at the time appointed; the pastor, the superintendent's wife, and others were sick and could not attend. There were not very many attended, but the work done by Brother Chambers was a most excellent one, and it has influenced the entire school. We have had Promotion Day observed with appropriate exercises; a complete reorganization of the school, grouping the different groups of pupils according to the Program of Work, and the arranging of the different classes in the right rooms, etc., which means a better work than ever before.

We are happy in our work here. The people are as loyal as any we have ever served. All three churches put on the special campaign for the Advocate and succeeded in getting it in over fifty per cent of the homes of our people.

Yours in His wrok,

R. H. CLEGG, P. C.

BAD PAINS IN SIDE

Spells of Nervousness Also Troubled This Lady Who Gives Cardui Credit for Helping Her Get Well.

Depew, Okla.—"For six years," says Mrs. Edd Burton, of this place, "I suffered as bad as a woman can suffer and still keep going."

"I was good for nothing, was lifeless and pale, unable to eat anything. Nothing agreed with me. At times I had such bad pains in my sides and back I would have to go to bed. I had cramping spells and would faint if I stood on my feet any length of time. My nerves would become upset at the least little thing and I would have spells of crying that were so exhausting they left me prostrate.

"Several of my friends suggested that I take Cardui. They told me of their experiences with it, how much they have been helped. At last I decided to try it.

"In a few weeks, I could see that I was improving, so I kept on. I did not expect the troubles of years to disappear in a few days, nor did they, but in time I was much better. I kept up the Cardui treatment for several months and thanks to it I am a well woman now."

At all drug stores. NC-180

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated! Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

THE ONE HOPEFUL NOTE.

"War," says everybody, "is a most frightful calamity."

"Yes, it is," says the militarist; "we'd better be prepared for it."

"You're right about war," say the biologists, "but it's the law of nature, and you can't buck against nature."

"But there's one thing worse," says the patriot-plus, "to think you can't get your country's rights any other way."

"War is terrible," says the munitions maker, "and going to be more so; let me show you the latest killing machine."

"War is pretty bad," says the politician, "but it's about the only chance we get to use the glorious old banner in our speeches without feeling foolish."

"War is indescribably bad," says the sentimentalist; "let's forget it, and talk of other things."

"War is a crime," the church is every day more boldly saying, "and the church of Jesus Christ will keep clear of it from now on."

This last voice is not as strong now as it will be some day. It is the only voice with any note of hope in it. None of these other confessions of war's awfulness can have the slightest effect. How could it, when the very confession leaves the door to war wide open?—Dan B. Brummitt.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

cient chairman for 1927. Mrs. S. L. McLaurin, of Brandon, was re-elected zone secretary for 1928.

The following resolutions were introduced and unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the women of zone 1 have responded so well to this our third meeting, be it resolved, That each woman consider herself a committee of one to urge the others of her auxiliary to attend our next meeting.

"Whereas, the women of Grace Church are so largely responsible for the success of this meeting, be it resolved, That we tender to them a rising vote of thanks for their wonderful hospitality and co-operation.

A rising vote of thanks was also tendered Galloway Memorial Church for the day's most excellent program.

The meeting unanimously expressed regret at the unavoidable absence of our District Secretary, Mrs. J. C. Wood.

The invitation of Galloway Memorial Church auxiliary to have the first zone meeting of 1928 with them was accepted with pleasure.

The auxiliary to furnish the program for this meeting will be selected later by the zone chairman and District Secretary, and the auxiliary selected will be notified by the zone secretary.

The benediction said by Rev. W. A. Terry, pastor of Grace Church, closed a day "full, pressed down and running over" with good things.

ZONE MEETING AT PLAIN DEALING, LA.

The meeting of zone No. 1, Minden District, met at Plain Dealing Methodist Church, Sept. 9, 1927, at 10 o'clock, with our zone leader, Mrs. W. H. Martin, presiding.

Beauty and simplicity marked the decoration of the new church. Tall baskets filled with beautiful flowers were arranged artistically, and made the church an unusual scene of beauty.

The following program was rendered:

Devotional, by Mrs. A. M. Wynn; "Why the Zone Meeting?" Mrs. Martin; "The Woman's Missionary Society Speaks Out Loud," Mrs. Post, of Springhill; "Statistics of the Missionary Work at Home and Abroad," and "Every Woman in the Missionary Society," by Mrs. S. J. Caldwell, Jr.

Discussion Topic—The problem of how to interest the members.

Mrs. Floyd Lyon presented the Epworth Juniors' work, after which the Juniors sang, "The World Children for Jesus."

At this time the meeting adjourned for a noon recess. A lovely luncheon was served cafeteria style, presided over by the young ladies of Plain Dealing, after which the meeting was called to order for the afternoon session.

Prayer, by Brother Pfost, for all the home and foreign missionaries and Christian workers.

"Talk on Scarritt," by Mrs. Martin; "Jubilee Celebration," Mrs. H. J. Rivers, of Alden Bridge; "Mr. Egan's Investments," by Miss Audrey Strayhan, Alden Bridge.

Brother Pfost and Mrs. Giles, of Springhill, were asked by the leader at this time to tell of the wonderful Vacation Bible School they held this summer, which they kindly did, and wishes were expressed that more of us might enjoy the schools next summer.

Mrs. J. B. Turnley's Young People gave effectively a pageant, "Tell the Tidings," the music being rendered by Misses Lucile Wright and Louise Nuckalls.

Solo, "Golden Bells," which was enjoyed immensely by all, Mrs. J. N. Giles, of Springhill.

Business—Offering for rural workers for Vacation Bible School, after which came roll call. Each auxiliary was represented with the following number: Alden Bridge, 7; Plain Dealing, 48; Springhill, 4; visitors, 6. We regret very much that Cottton Valley was not represented.

The second meeting of this zone will be held in Springhill, the date to be set later.

Song, "Take My Life and Let It Be," in prayer form, brought to a close a delightful day for those who had the pleasure of attending.

MRS. H. J. RIVERS,
Secretary.

SOCIETY ENTERTAINED AT CRUGER, MISS.

The ladies of the Cruger Woman's Missionary Society were delightfully entertained in the home of Mrs. Forest Fleming on a late date in September.

An interesting program on Home Missions was given, with Mrs. J. E. Turner as leader. Mrs. C. A. Marks read the Bible lesson from the Missionary Voice, and Mrs. Turner presented the home mission work in a unique and impressive way, using a large, attractive poster, on which she had outlinetd the principal facts concerning this work and the new situations that are facing the home missionary enterprise. The program closed with a prayer by Mrs. E. J. Hines.

Delicious refreshments were served to fifteen guests, including six visitors, Mrs. H. Y. Parker and four young ladies of the faculty, Misses Frazier, Mars, Murray, and Williams.

Mrs. Fleming was assisted in serving by her mother, Mrs. Waterer.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 73—No. 42. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3671.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE "MOTHER CHURCH."

We are not thinking of the "Mother Church" in the historical sense that is usually meant by the term; we are thinking of the church as the mother of all benevolent and beneficent institutions of modern civilization. And of course when we say "church," we mean the Christian church.

Now and then we run across a man who seems to pride himself upon the fact that he is not connected with the church, but is actively interested in all the movements that have as their end the care of the dependent, the relief of the suffering, and the uplift of the downtrodden. Such a man usually says, in an apologetic way: "I am not interested in the church with its doctrinal distinctions and denominational differences; but I am interested in my fellow-man, and I am glad to do all I can to make the world a better place in which to live."

We have no fault to find with the man's interest in his fellow-man; but we do find fault with his assumption that the church itself is not an organization through which he can find fullest expression for his benevolent feelings. If he will take the trouble to run back over the history of civilization, he will find that the Christian church is the mother of all the movements and agencies through which he now ministers to the needs of the world; and he will find further that it is the church that supplies the real motive power to keep all these institutions and agencies functioning to-day. If there were no church, there would be no widespread organized movements for the uplift of humanity.

So let the man who is interested in his fellow-men but is not interested in the church remember that, after all, it is the church to which he owes most for his desire to serve his fellow-men and for the means by which he may serve them. Remembering this, let him support the church as the mother of all agencies for good in the world.

THE CONFERENCE COURSE OF STUDY.

We hope not a single young preacher will have to suffer the embarrassment and humiliation this year of reporting that he has failed to complete his work in the Conference course of study.

The three excuses usually offered for failure to do this work of preparation for the ministry are: sickness, either personal or family; the great demands of the pastorate, leaving no time for study, and the unusual activities during the year in evangelistic work. There may sometimes be some merit in the first excuse, though it is amazing how much studying a really sick man can do; there is very seldom any merit in the other two excuses. The demands of the pastorate are heavy—every preacher knows that; but for the first four years of a preacher's connection with the Annual Conference, nothing is more important than that he prepare himself for the fullest usefulness in years to come by mastering the course of study prescribed for him. And if he is not to neglect this course of study for the regular tasks of the pastorate, certainly he should not undertake additional tasks that will keep him from doing what the church has told him he ought to do.

As a simple matter of fact, if a young preacher cannot do all that is expected of him during the preparatory years of his ministry, both in the regular work of the pastorate and in special evangelistic efforts, and at the same time bring up year by year the full course of study, it is seriously to be doubted if he is properly qualified to continue in the work to which he professes to have been called. Certainly nothing can be said in favor of the man who through sheer laziness fails to do the work assigned him.

A SUGGESTION TO OFFICIAL BOARDS.

A good many preachers will be moving after the sessions of our approaching Conferences—it is always so. Some of these preachers will be able to move without any special financial embarrassment; others will have to devise ways and means of meeting the obligations incurred by a move. The considerate board of stewards of the preacher that is moving will see to it that the salary is paid in full; and the considerate board of stewards that is receiving a new preacher will see to it that some cash—it ought to be a goodly amount—is handed to him very soon after his arrival. Most preachers are in need of money nearly all the time, but they especially need it just before and just after moving.

LONG ARTICLES.

The editor has no revelation concerning the publication of long articles; but he has his own opinion, and the very definitely expressed opinion of members of the Publishing Committee, as well as of a good many other readers of the Advocate, to the effect that such articles are not read to any great extent and to the further effect that they keep the paper from being as attractive and interesting as it might otherwise be. We will not lay down any hard and fast rule as to the length of communications that will be published; but we will say to our contributors that they will be much more likely to "get their ideas across," both to the editor and to the public, if they will practice the art of condensation. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient—but very often it is useless.

WHY NOT?

We are surprised every year to see that not a few churches throughout the connection fail to observe Sunday School Day. We are surprised, because the observance of the day is made obligatory by the Discipline and we cannot understand why pastors, superintendents, and others charged with the carrying out of the law persistently fail to observe its requirements. We should like to hear those who have not observed the day this year give just one good reason for their failure to do so—we do not know one.

FLAPPER SCHOOL TEACHERS.

According to press dispatches, the Mississippi State Superintendent of Education has very definitely expressed his conviction that the young women who are teaching school in that State should conduct themselves in such a way as to avoid even the appearance of evil. In pointing out some of the things that a young woman school teacher should not do, he specified the profuse use of cosmetics and the taking of automobile rides at night.

We think the statement of the superintendent will have the approval of all right-thinking patrons of the public schools, both fathers and mothers. Teachers have—and properly so—a tremendous influence upon the lives of their pupils; if that influence is not for good, the teacher is an influence for evil in the community. If the suggestion of the superintendent fails to produce results in what we are glad to believe are the few communities where amendment is needed, prompt and vigorous action by the school board will doubtless be effective. The so-called "flapper" is more often foolish than bad, and a word of warning will usually be sufficient.

COMMERCIALIZED HEROISM.

The popular interest in aviation is apparently being capitalized by those who are more concerned for the money they can make out of hazardous flights than they are for the advancement of the art of flying. Colonel Lindbergh accomplished a marvelous feat without the preceding blare of trumpets and a carefully planned and carried out program of publicity; and though he has been accorded all the praise and honors that men know how to bestow, he has kept his equilibrium on the earth as well as he did in the air, showing no signs of "big-head" and consistently refusing to capitalize his history-making achievement. His is real heroism—a very different kind from that produced for pay.

SOME NOTES OF MY LIFE.

By Rev. E. G. Kilgore.

Dear Dr. Carley: As this is the fiftieth year since I entered the traveling ministry, I will, if you will give me space in the Advocate, give your readers some notes of my life.

After spending four years as a local preacher, in school most of the time, I was received into the North Mississippi Conference at Holly Springs in November, 1877. Bishop Keener presided, and Rev. John Barcroft was secretary. Here I met some of our leaders, and the Conference was a great inspiration to me. I was appointed to the Saltillo circuit, which was made up of eleven churches and school houses, where we preached once a month and held revivals at each place. The following year, the Saltillo and Fulton circuits were consolidated, and I served the charge embracing nineteen preaching places, including school-house appointments. I preached twenty-one times a month and held revival meetings at all these places during the year. Three hundred and seven were added to the church on profession of faith during these two years, and two young men were called to preach from one church, and at the conclusion, I was ordained deacon by Bishop Kavanaugh at Water Valley and appointed to the Buena Vista circuit, a new charge cut off from the old Houston circut and consisting of five churches.

I served here three years. Four hundred and fifteen united with the church by vows and baptism during the time, and a good home was purchased for a parsonage and a new church built, both of which are still occupied as such and stand as a monument to the good work thus recorded. We were in a continuous revival almost through the entire time we were with these good people. Five young men were called into the ministry from among the converts on this charge. At the close of the second year I was ordained elder by Bishop Paine at the Conference at Grenada, thus completing the prescribed course of study in four years. When moved from Buena Vista, I was sent to the Columbus circuit. This charge embraced the territory east of Columbus along the Alabama line, and included at the time nearly all the territory south of the Butahatchie River to the State line.

At the close of my first year there, the work was divided and I served only five of the original churches. We spent two very pleasant and profitable years on this work. More than two hundred were added to the membership of the church. Another parsonage was purchased and another good church built on the work, and was dedicated by Dr. William Murrah, father of the late Bishop Murrah, and was named Murrah's Chapel in honor of this good man. The first addition on profession of faith here is now a successful minister of the gospel. While serving this charge we lived in Columbus, and I was associated with the Billups, the Sykes, the Lipscombs, the Leaches, and many others too numerous to mention, and from whom I was greatly benefited spiritually; and on the circuit we had the Vaughns, the Veners, the Ervins, the Tunnels, and many other good people in whose homes we spent many happy hours; and here, too, we had the pleasure of hearing lectures and addresses by great leaders both of church and State, and thus received great benefit.

Just at this time I was given a little vacation for a visit to my old home, where I began a meeting at the church where I had held my membership before entering the ministry. Although the meeting had not been announced, we continued two weeks, and nearly one hundred joined the church, including twenty-seven heads of families. It is said to have been the greatest revival meeting held in the history of that church. My own now sainted mother was yet living and was present to enjoy the meeting. She left us for her home in heaven later in the same year, at which time she kissed me and said, "Go on, my precious boy, and preach the gospel and meet me in heaven."

When the two years were ended at Columbus I was appointed to West Point and Tibbee, and during the first year there the membership was doubled, the parsonage was built at West Point, and a new church organized and a house of worship built east of Tibbee, which was dedicated before Conference, and a new pastoral charge was created which was afterwards known as the Mayhew circuit. Tibbee and the new church mentioned above were included in this new charge, while West Point was made a station, and I was appointed as its first pastor. I soon moved into the new parsonage, and spent a very pleasant year until death entered our home and claimed one of our children. I also developed typhoid fever and came very near crossing the last river myself, but had recovered sufficiently to enable me to act as Conference host at the session which was held that year at West Point. Bishop Duncan presided to the satisfaction of all and took occasion to speak some very comforting words to me as I had asked for a supernumerary relation, which would leave me without a charge, and of course I would have to vacate the personage. This parsonge, with some added improvements, still stands as a home for the preachers to that charge after forty-one years have slipped by. Many changes have been made in this young, growing city, and most of those who contributed to the development of the work recorded above have gone on to their reward, but their works give evidence of their loyalty to the church. West Point has grown as a town, and our church has increased in membership until now they can pay their pastor a salary of $3,000, with a good parsonage furnished and one of the most attractive houses of worship in the entire Conference.

When through at West Point, I moved to Hernando for residence, where I found a fine class of people who showed us great kindness while there. After the winter had passed I was able to assist some of the brethren in their revival meetings, beginning with Brother Bell, our pastor at Hernando and Coldwater at the time. I had already found Brother Bell to be a Christian minister of the highest type—in fact, it has never been my privilege to be associated with a sweeter spirited man than Rev. John W. Bell. During the year I conducted meetings at Carrollton, Coffeeville, Clarksdale, Slate Springs, Atlanta, and other pionts in Mississippi, and two meetings in Texas, where I had gone for a rest, and finally a great revival at Jonesboro, Ark., which closed the work of the year. In all these meetings more than six hundred united with our church, and many of the converts went to other communions.

After this I was appointed to Black Hawk circuit, where I served three churches—Black Hawk, Acona and Sweet Water. This was the best charge that I had received up to that time from a financial consideration. I only stayed one year, however, as the evangelistic fire was burning in my bones. So I again took a supernumerary relation and moved to Coffeeville, and in response to a chain of invitations I held meetings in the following States in the order given: Arkansas, California, Texas, Mississippi, Kentucky, and Tennessee, and witnessed more than a thousand additions to our church. But when the Conference was held, which convened at Oxford this year, Bishop Galloway told me they needed me in the pastorate, and I was again assigned to regular work in the Delta. I served Australia, Duncan, and Alligator Lake, three churches, and preached to an average congregation of about thirty people during the entire year—small compared to other years, but I stayed with my charge, I conducted only two revivals outside of my own territory, and we rounded up a good year and carried up a full report on all lines, and some strong material was added to the church.

Then I was transferred to the White River Conference and was stationed at Jonesboro, where we spent a very pleasant year with friends of other days. I was then transferred by Bishop Duncan to the St. Louis Conference to fill Cape Girardeau station, made vacant by the transfer of the pastor appointed there to another Conference. This opened the way for some very successful revival work in the St. Louis Conference and elsewhere, as well as to fill out the year at Cape Girardeau, where we enjoyed a good degree of success and formed some friendships which have lingered with me all along the way since.

After this, I located, at my own request, to enter more fully into the evangelistic work, and during the following year I saw 1,520 persons received into the Methodist church, while many joined other churches. For four consecutive years, under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, I was in a continued succession of revival meetings where wonderful power was manifested in the salvation of souls. Then my chain of engagements was broken by serious sickness in my home and loss of loved ones, and a change of conditions with more and more serious sickness. All this caused quite an extended cessation of my evangelistic labors. I was confined at home with sick loved ones nearly all the time for six years, and when the worst was over I was financially depleted to the extent of embarrassment; but even under this stress of circumstances I enlisted in the work anew and soon found some open doors. After getting a very good start again, there came more sickness, this time involving sanitarium, hospital and trained nurse expenses. I was thus hindered again, but we will understand all this better bye and bye.

I was one of the pioneer evangelists of our church and had to locate in order to do this kind of work, but later the church legalized the office of evangelist and began to appoint district and Conference evangelists as well as general evangelists. Later I learned, to my surprise, after looking into the law of our church, that one could not be appointed to this work who was not a member of some Conference, and otherwise must be dubbed as a "Free Lance." So here I am, having passed by twoscore and ten years, with dependent loved ones; and not being a member of the Conference, I have no claims on the superannuate funds; and while I am still able to do some work (have held five revival meetings in the country this summer and preached nearly a hundred sermons, including some appointments filled in for the preachers in city churches during their vacation), still there is but little work open for a man of my age, as there is now such an army of younger men in the evangelistic field and people are clamoring for young men—the older ones with their accumulated equipment for such work and their extended experience must stand aside while the procession passes by.

While passing through these early years I conducted revival meetings within my own Conference territory in a number of the leading towns, namely, at Houston, Pontotoc, Aberdeen, Columbus, Carrollton, Starksville, Charleston, Greenwood, Clarksdale, Ripley, Batesville, Sardis, Oxford, Grenada, Durant, Kosciusko, Lexington, Tupelo, Okolona and a number of other smaller towns and country churches. I have held 417 revival meetings, in which thousands of conversions have been reported, and I have seen more than 15,000 received into the Methodist church; and along with this, I have financed through my efforts the buying and building of parsonages, the building of churches, paying off church debts and boosting pastors in raising their Conference collections.

Among my own comrades in the ministry of other days, I recall the names of Revs. J. M. Hampton, R. P. Gore, G. W. Gordon, B. H. Bounds, W. C. Lester, A. J. Foster, H. R. Tucker, T. Y. Ramsey, R. G. Porter, J. S. Oakley, R. P. Mitchell, John H. Scruggs, J. A. Bowen, J. W. Honnoll, T. C. Weir, J. J. Wheat, Amos Kendall, H. E. Smith, J. E. Thomas, D. L. Cogdell, R. M. Davis, J. W. Price, J. D. Cameron, T. G. Freeman, H. C. Morehead, L. D. Worsham, S. M. Thames, J. T. Cunningham, J. W. Poston, W. T. J. Sullivan, H. C. Parrott, J. M. Wyatt, and a host of others too numerous to mention who have already passed through the Gates into the City. These were all of the North Mississippi Conference. I think of many others of other Conferences all the way from Carolinas to California with whom I have enjoyed sweet fellowship who have also gone.

We are in our "hired house" here; but there, if faithful to the end, I shall have a mansion and a robe and a crown and be associated with the pure and the good of all ages, where there will be no more sickness, sorrow, pain or death. This will be glorious and eternal.

I now ask an interest in the prayers of all who love the cause of Christ and who may perchance read these notes, that there may be "light at eventide."

My letter is much longer than I intended, but if it does not find its way to the wastebasket I may write again on subjects that may be of more interest to the reader.

GRENADA COLLEGE NEWS.

Organization of Sunday School.

The second Sunday after the opening of the fall session of Grenada College, the Sunday school was organized. The student body is divided into six classes: Two classes of freshmen girls, who are studying this year "Jesus' Ideals of Living," by Walter Fiske; two classes of sophomore girls, who are studying the "Meaning of Methodism," by Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe; one class of junior girls, who are studying "New Testament Women and Problems of To-Day," by Madeling Miller, and one class of seniors, who are studying "The Program of the Christian Religion," by John W. Shackford.

The organization consists of a president, Miss Velma Blissett; a vice president, Miss Melba Yarbrough; a secretary, Miss Marei Moore; a treasurer, Miss Lois King; a cabinet composed of the following girls: Miss Elizabeth Carothers, Miss Eleanor Dendy, Miss Minnie Jordon, Miss Mary Leslie McRay, Miss Evana Shelby, Miss Nancy Ruth Dodds, and two faculty advisors, Miss Corrine Laney and Miss Helen Swisher.

The Sunday school has adopted as its aim to meet all the standards set up by the young people's department of the Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to emphasize leadership training. The work done in these classes gives the girls credit toward the Blue Seal Diploma. Last year to the 180 girls here, 480 teacher training credits were given.

The Sunday school also sponsors the Recreational Club, which has for its purpose the training of girls in recreational leadership.

Special Services Held at the College.

A series of special religious services were conducted in the auditorium at noon each day of last week by Mr. Newman, who was directing the music at the revival services at the Methodist church of Grenada.

On Wednesday he took for his subject, "Why I Believe in Jesus;" on Thursday, "The Wages of Sin is Death;" on Friday, "His Name Shall Be Called Wonderful," and on Saturday, "The Story of the Religious Climb of One Man."

The Grenada College girls were very fortunate in having these inspiring talks, the influence of which will long be felt in the college.

MISSIONS AND SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION.

(Fourth Sunday Program for "C" Type School, Having One Worship Service for All Classes.)

Hymn. "Rescue the Perishing." (No. 679 Methodist Hymnal; No. 246, Cokesbury Hymnal.)

Announcements.

Call to worship.

Leader. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits:

Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases:

Who redeemeth thy life from destruction:

Who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies.

Hymn Response (without announcement. No. 1, Cokesbury Hymnal). "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

Prayer. O God, our Heavenly Father, we praise thee and bless thee for thy loving-kindness and tender mercy that have taught us to call upon thee as our Father. May we remember this morning thy other children, our brothers and sisters who do not yet know thy goodness, and may we freely give our sympathy, our service, and our money to help them to know and love thee. Amen.

Scripture. Matthew 9:35-38.

Hymn. "Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Us." (No. 5, Cokesbury Hymnal.)

Leader. We read many times, in the Gospels, that Jesus "had compassion" on the suffering and the sick; the weary multitudes with their lame and halt and blind, the unsatisfied seekers after peace. He felt their pain, he never turned a deaf ear to their calls upon him. He healed "every sickness and every disease;" he taught them of the kingdom of God. He laid his gentle hand upon their disease-ridden bodies, he brought peace and forgiveness to their sin-crippled souls. Following the example of Jesus, our missionaries in Belgium have not only preached the gospel to those who did not know the Saviour's love, but have provided sympathetic care and healing for the sick. They found already established in Brussels a Protestant hospital which was desperately in need of help to continue its work. The Methodist Mission joined with native Protestants in purchasing and equipping a building and in paying off the debt upon it. A brief sketch written by one of the nurses gives us a vivid picture of this "Clinique Protestante."

Story. "The Protestant Hospital in Belgium" (read by member of the school). Our clinique is unique in Belgium, I believe. It does not look a bit like a house where suffering is to be found. Its aspect is gay and nice, it is all white on the outside with black letters indicating its name.

On the inside it looks inviting, though it is not for pleasure you come there.

Our patients are for the most part Belgians, a few Dutch people, and fewer English. The patients are usually kind-hearted, grateful and often very humorous creatures. Most of them are operation patients. We have very few other cases. When the first days of pain and misery are over, our patients are very easy to care for, although there are exceptions to the rule, of course.

In the wards the patients amuse each other and the nurses as well by their gay chatter and funny remarks. A thing that always strikes me is their interest in our Bible. They scarcely move when it is read to them, and after the reading they ask about our religion. We never force our faith on them, we just leave them free. Religion is too holy and beautiful to give where it is not wanted, especially as they have a religion of their own and are not heathen. But our patients often ask for our reading and grumble when the chapter is not long enough to suit their taste. They think our religion so much simpler than their, and so it is, though there are many beautiful ideas in theirs. Seldom, and that fortunately, there is sadness in the house when one of our patients dies. Sometimes death comes so suddenly. When it happens in one of the wards, gayness is banished, we are living as under a cloud. It does not last long; we know each other too little for that.

Though I ought perhaps to have begun with our matron, Mademoiselle Barger, I kept the best part for the last. She is a truly remakable person and very much beloved by the patients. I never saw any one so capable, so quite the right woman in the right place. She manages the whole house from top to bottom.

What else can I say about our clinique? I love it, and that is the beginning and the end of it.

Hymn (while the offering from classes is brought forward). "O Zion, Haste." First and fourth stanzas, No. 68, Cokesbury Hymnal.)

Prayer Sentence. Consecrate this offering, our Father, to the increase of thy kingdom, we ask in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Dismissal to classes.

CHINA HOLDS CONFERENCE ON "CHRISTIANIZING ECONOMIC RELATIONS."

Fifty men and women, almost all of them Chinese, and all actively connected with varied aspects of Chinese industrial problems, spent ten of the last days of August in conference in Shanghai considering the general topic of how to Christianize ecnomic relations in their country. The conference was preceded by investigations of industrial and rural conditions and their relationship to principles recognized as Christian. Coming as it did at a time when China is seething with economic ideas both good and bad, and when international experiments in adjustment of economic conditions are being tried out, the conference had more than ordinary significance. One of the most helpful visitors at the conference was Kagawa, the noted Christian leader of social and economic reforms in Japan.

In reporting some of the considerations and results of the conference Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, secretary of the National Christian Council, writes:

"Three main divisions were followed, industry, agriculture, social thinking. In the first, consideration centered on the minimum wage and the principles for determining wages, on hours of work and rest, child labor and women's labor. The rights of the worker were stressed, as it was clear that the conference stood for these. But it realized that a sudden jump to ideal conditions, such as an eight-hour day, would dislocate industry and make more evils than it cured. The findings therefore claim the rights of the worker while advising gradual progress towards their full expression in indutrial law and custom.

"In the rural discussions, the question of tenancy occupied much attention, and the findings drew attention to ways in which the recognized evils in the present system could be lessened or removed. The advantages and disadvantages of written contracts were discussed, and also methods of determining a fair rent. Co-operative marketing, credit societies and other similar plans were advocated. The need for rural workers was stressed, and it was made clear that there is a great opportunity for the rural church in giving skilled help and providing trustworthy leaders. Increased production is a need even more insistent than better distribution, and much emphasis was laid upon this point.

"The sessions on social thinking revealed a more conservative approach to current economic theories than some had anticipated. No argument was urged for the abolition of private property or the replacement of the wage system by any other economic plan. The evils of large aggregations of private property were clearly brought out, as also the shortcomings of the wage system and the dangers of economic competition. But no doctrinaire solutions were adopted. The challenge to the church was to study the facts and to inquire more deeply into their meaning. To make a better economic order it was felt that step by step the principles of Jesus must be applied as a constructive criticism is brought to bear upon existing evils."

THE 1927 MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE AND BISHOP DuBOSE'S SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

By Rev. J. L. Decell, Presiding Elder, Jackson District.

The approaching session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, which will be held in the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., Nov. 9-14, will be a memorable one. Dr. H. S. Spragins, Galloway Memorial; Dr. T. M. Brownlee, Capitol Street; Rev. W. A. Terry, Grace; Rev. T. O. Prewitt, Millsaps Memorial; and Rev. C. E. Downer, Glendale, Jackson pastors and co-hosts of the Conference, together with their people, are sparing no efforts in making adequate preparations for the entertainment and work of the Conference.

Bishop W. A. Candler, D.D., LL.D., our honored and respected Senior Bishop, will be the president of the Conference, and this within itself is a guarantee of no mean import.

By previous action of the Conference it was resolved that at this session the Conference would celebrate the Golden Jubilee of the Admission on Trial of Horace Mellard DuBose. Bishop DuBose will deliver his semi-centennial message on Thursday morning, Nov. 10, at 11 o'clock, and will preach the sermon at the ordination of elders on Sunday night.

Fifty years ago (1877-1927), when Horace Mellard DuBose came up for Admission on Trial from the Shubuta and McGowan circuit, death was depleting the ranks of the archons. Alfred Taylor Bledsoe, editor of the Review and "America's great thinker" died during the session of the Conference. And Bishop Enoch M. Marvin, who had just returned from his missionary tour of the world, had been assigned to hold the Mississippi Conference, but died two weeks before the opening day. God was burying his workmen, but was preparing to carry on his work. This youth of 19 years, knocking at the doors of the Conference, was in favor with a high destiny. He would be both editor of the Review and bishop.

Upon the death of Bishop Marvin it fell to the lot of Bishop Holland N. McTyeire to preside over the Conference. He being delayed, the Rev. William Hamilton Watkins, D.D., (father of Dr. A. F. Watkins), was elected to preside the first day. The illustrious Charles Betts Galloway, though but 26 years old, was in his fourth year as pastor of First Church and was the genial host of the Conference. The youthful applicant for admission on trial was entertained in the parsonage home of Dr. and Mrs. Galloway. Here was begun that Jonathan and David like devotion between them that is as timeless as it was beautiful. Bishop McTyeire sent C. B. Galloway to First Church, Vicksburg, and H. M. DuBose to Chotard circuit, just north of Vicksburg.

After fifty years of enlarging vision, deepening conviction, and fruitful toil as a circuit rider, station preacher, editor, author and bishop, he returns home. Many of the Bishop's Conference comrades have fallen on sleep and their witness is in heaven and their record is on high. What a great cloud of heavenly witnesses will encompass us about during this Conference. For his work's sake Bishop DuBose is known and loved by the oldest down to the last admitted. His home Conference is justly proud of her own, who has been in character unblemished, travels far, labors many, and for truth unswerving and valiant. And her welcome to him will be as to a great leader of Israel's embattling hosts.

Of that noble company who were members of the Conference prior to 1877, so far as the writer was able to ascertain, there are only four living now, Rev. Beverly Carradine (?), Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D., Rev. B. F. Jones, D.D., and Captain S. B. Watts. Of the seven admitted in 1877, only Bishop DuBose still lives.

Other historical addresses, anniversary speeches, or sermons will be delivered by Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., pastor Central, Meridian; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader; Hon. Andrew G. Gainey, layman; Rev. H. T. Carley, D.D., editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; Rev. A. F. Smith, D.D., editor Christian Advocate; Rev. T. D. Ellis, D.D., Secretary General Church Extension Board; United States Senator B. P. Harrison; Dr. Harvey W. Cox, President Emory University; and Rev. W. G. Cram, D.D., Secretary General Board of Missions.

These, with the ministry of Bishops Candler and DuBose and other preachers on Sunday and the delightful fellowship of the occasion, should inspire us to the most fruitful toil and happiest realization of our lives in the new Conference year.

All Jackson Methodism welcomes the one hundred fourteenth Conference session.

THE NEWTON DISTRICT—THEN AND NOW, 1923-27.

This message at this time, coming somewhat in the nature of a review and report of the work done in this district during these four years, is given for the purpose of encouraging and commending these pastors and laymen, who have been the chief agents in bringing about this progress, and also to remove any fear from the minds of any preachers that may hereafter be sent to labor within the bounds of this district that they are being afflicted by being assigned to a charge in our midst.

The territory embraced in this district includes Neshoba, Leake, Newton, Scott, almost all of Smith and Jasper Counties, Laurel, of Jones, Shiloh charge of Rankin, and Cleveland charge, of Kemper.

The district parsonage is located at Newton, the east central portion of the district. We have spent $1,200 in repairs and furnishings, and it is now a very comfortable home.

The roads of this district have made such a marked improvement during these four years that the furthest church from here can be reached within three hours, a distance of seventy miles.

The population of this district is chiefly native white people who make their living by cultivating their own land. Of course we have some large sawmills in this section, but the membership is chiefly from the farm homes.

I believe I can help the readers of this message to realize that this is one of the most important districts in our Conference as we consider the following facts:

This district has produced more preachers than any other district in the Conference, and the character, ability, and achievements will compare favorably with those produced in any section of our church. We have now in the active ministry twice as many preachers as this district is using.

But let us now note some of the progress made since December, 1923. The Conference Journal of 1923 shows we had a total membership in this district at that time of 9,985. The same Journal for 1926 shows a membership of 12,784, or a net gain of 2,799. The reports from the pastors to date for this year show 450 on profession of faith and 225 by certificate, with a dismissal of 140, which gives us a net gain this year of 535, or a total for the four years of 3,334, which makes a gain of 33 1-3 per cent in the four years. Total number on profession of faith, 2,600, an average of 650 for each year by vows.

Our Conference Journal shows that from 1923 to 1926 we had a total net gain in membership of 5,810, but 2,799 of that number are found within this district. In other words, the Newton District lacks only 2.4 per cent furnishing as much gain as the other six districts combined.

Let us next look at the growth in new organizations. During these four years we have organized nine new churches. We now have six good, substanital buildings, housing these congregations, where Methodism had nothing four years ago. And some of these new churches are among the strongest country churches in the district.

We have replaced and are replacing (because Carthage is not yet finished) old frame and inadequate buildings at the following places: Union and Bay Springs, each with two-story modern brick buildings; Decatur, with a two-story concrete brick building; Carthage is rapidly building a modern brick church, which will cost, complete, $20,000. Conehatta, Mars Hill, and Hillsboro have replaced old with modern frame buildings, with class room facilities.

We have built large Sunday school annexes at Forest and Morton. We have paid debts on five others. Have repaired, repainted, or enlarged about forty others, so the value of the church property in this district has increased approximately fifty per cent during these four years.

We have built three new parsonages. We have remodeled, enlarged and improved the other parsonages until our parsonage property is almost double in value what it was.

We look now at the support of the ministry. We have the same number of pastors at work here that we had four years ago. There has been an increase in the support of these pastors of 29 per cent, so to-day we have no member of our Annual Conference getting less than $1.000 from the churches they serve, not counting the mission appropriation. The presiding elder's salary has increased from $3,000 to $4,200, or a forty per cent increase.

There has likewise been a splendid increase in the payment on our benevolences, though there are many of our people throughout this district that do not yet appreciate their obligation to send the gospel message to the other person.

There has been a similar growth in our Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, and Woman's Missionary Societies.

I believe this district can make even greater progress during the next four years. Here is a great field and a great opportunity for the next presiding elder.

THE OCTOBER MEETING OF THE SUNFLOWER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

This meeting was held at Ruleville, Miss., Oct. 11, with Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Lewis, host and hostess for the day. Besides several members of the local congregation, there were present: Revs. J. V. Bennett, Belzoni; J. E. Cunningham, J. H. Felts and J. O. Dowdell, of Greenwood; C. T. Floyd and wife, of Moorhead; W. L. Storment and wife, of Sunflower; J. D. Wroten, of Indianola; J. J. Brooks, of Schlater; A. Y. Brown, of Minter City; C. L. Rogers, of Webb; "Mister" Shipman, of Tutwiler; C. L. Oakes, of Lambert; R. O. Brown, of Clarksdale; E. E. McKeithen and wife, and J. C. Wasson, of Drew; S. E. Ashmore and wife, of Carrollton, and Dr. T. B. Holloman, the District Lay Leader, of Itta Bena.

Rev. S. E. Ashmore preached an impressive sermon on "Prayer," which was followed with a very appropriate message in song by Mrs. Ashmore.

Following the devotional hour, the subject, "A Criticism, Favorable or Unfavorable, of Modern Preaching," was very helpfully discussed by Dr. T. B. Holloman, Mr. W. F. Wilson, and Mrs. E. C. Stansell.

A bountiful lunch was served in the church annex by the ladies of the Missionary Society, and the social hour was a delight to all.

During the afternoon session Revs. C. L. Rogers, W. S. Shipman, and W. L. Storment ably discussed "A Comparative Study of Expository and Topical Preaching."

Greenwood was selected as the next place of meeting, and the time set was for Dec. 13. The program will be: Sermon by the new presiding elder; election of officers; dinner; impressions of the Clarksdale Annual Conference, and plans for the new Conference year.

The final discussion of the day, participated in by J. V. Bennett, J. D. Wroten, and J. J. Brooks, was: "Suggestions for Improving the Spirit of Fellowship in Our Conference." This last subject proved to be in every way helpful, and the spirit manifested by all who took part was right.

The program of the day was brought to a close by all coming to the altar and entering into a season of prayer for the "Unity of the Spirit in the Bonds of Peace." God honored the day with his presence and leadership.

All attending expressed themselves as to this being the best session of the Association held.

DOWN THE RIVER.

By Rev. R. H. Harper, D.D., Presiding Elder, New Orleans District.

The work of Rev. Leon Picone in opening preaching places at Pilot Town and Port Eads laid upon the writer the responsibility of making recently a trip he had often dreamed of making—to the mouth of the Mississippi; and some notes of the journey may be of interest to the readers of the Advocate.

The trip was made via the Algiers and Lower Coast Railway to Buras, the terminal of railroad traffic down the river; thence by mail boat to Pilot Town and Port Eads—an all-day journey and a distance of about a hundred miles.

The Missouri Pacific Company has recently acquired the Algiers and Lower Coast Railway, "The Orange Blossom Route," and already a great improvement has been made in roadbed and rolling stock. It is said the rails will be extended further south, and it is believed that the extension and improvement of this railway will mean much in the development of this fertile section below New Orleans. The cars pass the home of the late Theodore Wilkinson, also the home of ex-Governor Warmoth. This latter property now belongs to others, who have already set out thousands of orange trees.

We saw the levee being rebuilt at the Junior plantation, where a steamship had rammed the dike and created a crevasse during the recent flood. Though some water is still in the fields in that section, the highway and the railroad have been restored.

At Myrtle Grove there boarded the train a sunburned young fellow whom the writer recognized as a faithful member some years since of the Parker Memorial Sunday school—Mr. Charles Campbell. He is now assistant city editor of the Item, and had been combining vacation and business, gathering notes (for literary work) among the picturesque fishermen of Barataria Bay.

Below Buras the mighty river attains its greatest width—a mile and a quarter, and it is truly a majestic stream with its broad flood and its low-lying green shores. The sturdy little mail boat the "Belfort," built by an Austrian at Olga, on the lower river, bravely rode the huge swells rolling up with the south wind and at times the spray flew so free that the windows of the pilot house had to be closed. We had as a pleasant companion on this part of our journey a gentleman who belongs to the "Lower Coast," though now a resident of New Orleans—Mr. Leovy. He contracts to deliver willows to the government to be used in jetties and revetments. He and the pilot, Captain Buras, pointed out places of interest along the way—Forts Jackson and St. Philip, between which the Confederates stretched huge chains in an effort to stop Farragut's fleet, also the point below Fort Jackson, where the fleet rode at anchor for a time with their masts camouflaged with trees. If aeroplanes had been available then, they might have changed the course of history.

Late in the afternoon we reached the "head" of the "Passes," the end of the river proper, and entered the South Pass. This is the channel followed by most of the ships which visit New Orleans. Toward sunset we landed at Port Eads, where we were most hospitably received by Mr. and Mrs. Reagan. Port Eads is in sight of the very mouth of the river, or pass. The ground has been built up, or filled in, on the east shore of the pass, and a most pleasant and unique village is Port Eads, stretching a mile along the pass, with greensward, flowers and white houses in the foreground, and the marsh and an inlet of the Gulf a few hundred yards in the rear. All night the wash of the waves can be heard while the Gulf breeze fans the cheek. This is one town with not a single street in the usual meaning of that word. Not a roadway is to be seen, not a horse, not a cart, not an automobile, not a traffic cop. Nevertheless you must watch your step. If you go too many steps in one direction, you are likely to step off into a hundred feet of water and fall in the path of some great ship from some far port of the world. If you go too far in the other direction, you are likely to step off into the marsh and the quagmire. Main Street in this pleasant village is the board walk which runs for a mile along the pass, a few feet back from the revetment. This village is also unique in the fact that children and young people are always under their elders' eyes—there is hardly a place where they can go from view. As twilight came on, the lighthouse across the pass began to glow, blinking like a giant's eye in the darkness as the great light revolved. Down the pass another great light began to glow on the very edge of the Gulf, while twenty miles or more to the west could be seen at intervals the flash of the light at Burrwood on the Sou'west pass. It seemed almost as if we were in another world from that to which we had been accustomed.

Strange that a pleasant village like this of intelligent folk should have been without any religious services for so long. Brother Picone has been welcomed there and he is now visiting the place regularly and conducting a preaching service. A church of sixteen members has been organized. Services are held in the community hall. Nearly fifty people gathered to hear the writer preach. The following morning Mrs. Harper, who accompanied the writer and Brother Picone on the trip, organized a Woman's Missionary Society and a Sunday school, both of which are expected to do good work. It may be safely claimed that the church, Missionary Society and Sunday school at Port Eads are the southernmost in the Louisiana Conference.

While at Port Eads we were shown things of interest connected with the government work there, under the charge of Mr. Reagan, and given a ride on the sturdy little boat, "Balize," down the pass and out a little distance into the Gulf itself. Here we enjoyed some real waves, saw many grave pelicans sitting on piling, and also saw the "sportive dolphins play."

We had a real thrill on our trip from Port Eads to Pilot Town. Mr. Reagan gave us the use of his speed boat and accompanied us on the trip, which was made in record time. The second night was spent at Pilot Town, where a service was held in the schoolhouse. Brother Picone conducts a little Sunday school with the children at this point on the Sundays that he preaches there, but it has not been possible to organize a regular school because there is no one to take charge of it. Captain Zatarain, a member of the Algiers church, assists in the Sunday school and preaching service when his duties as river pilot bring him to Pilot Town. He was largely instrumental in securing an opening for Brother Picone at this point. Others of the pilots have been very cordial to Brother Picone, and he finds a welcome in the home which they maintain there. The writer had the pleasure of visiting this home and of enjoying a cup of good coffee furnished by the master of the spacious kitchen, "Bennie," a Canadian who was once the chef of E. H. Harriman.

We returned by the mail boat and the railway from Buras. Having several hours to wait at Buras, we enjoyed an automobile ride, through the courtesy of Mr. John Edgecombe.

We drove south from Buras into the "orange belt," and continued as far as Fort Jackson. This fort, which is said to be of great age, reaching back into French and Spanish times, is a huge piece of masonry. It has a broad moat about it, the water in which is covered by hyacinths and other water plants, and Mr. Edgecombe ventured the assertion that in its present condition, with the possible reptiles beneath the hyacinths, an enemy would have a wretched time trying to cross the moat. The writer shuddered at the thought. The moat is surrounded by a vast embankment which encircles and completes the whole of these fortifications. This is crowned by a brick wall, and beyond this embankment is still another moat. Or perhaps it is only a natural swamp on the landward side. On the inner slope of the embankment an aged orange tree is growing, and this season it is fairly well laden with fruit. Further on the crest of the ridge we saw two graves. The slabs bear the date of 1832.

We had not realized when traveling on the river, that pleasant homes and acres and acres of orange groves stretch away behind the screen of great willows along the shore. But such is the case. It was a great experience to travel through these miles of orange trees and grapefruit, and all heavily laden with fruit beginning to ripen. With one by his side who had sung the words in other days, the writer recalled:

"Dost thou know that sweet land wherein the greatest treasure Shine like gems set in gold, the fruit of orange trees—"

WHENCE COME THE LEADERS OF OUR CHURCH?

An examination of the educational training of the various groups of leaders in our church reveals some interesting facts. Statistics which are given below have been secured from the Board of Education, which has gathered these facts from reliable sources and records.

Bishops Elected Since 1897.

During the last thirty years twenty-five bishops have been elected, twenty-one of whom were trained in Southern Methodist schools, two in secular institutions, and two had no college training; nineteen of them graduated with B.A. or B.S. degrees; fourteen did graduate work at university, and eleven took university degrees.

Connectional Secretaries.

Reports of the educational training of forty-four connectional secretaries and assistants now in office are as follows: Thirty-nine were trained in Methodist schools; three in other church schools, and two in secular institutions; thirty-seven graduated with A.B. or B.S. degrees.

Clerical Delegates and Alternates, 1926 Geheral Conference.

Of the two hundred and fifty-one clerical delegates and alternates in the General Conference in 1926, on whose educational preparation figures have been secured, one hundred and forty-eight were trained in Methodist schools; twenty in other church schools; seventy-nine in secular institutions; and four attended no college. One hundred and twenty of this number graduated from college with B.A. or B.S. degrees. Sixty-two attended universities, and forty-six received university degrees.

Missionaries.

Investigation shows that from eighty to ninety per cent of our missionaries come from church schools.

An investigation made a few years ago shows that in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, out of two hundred and eighty-eight missionaries in the field, two hundred and thirty-six had been educated in Methodist schools, ten in other church schools, fourteen in independent colleges, and sixteen in State schools. Nearly one hundred per cent of the missionaries sent out by the Woman's Board have been trained in Scarritt College, the most of whom have received their previous training in our church schools. At the annual meeting in Shreveport, La., in March, 1927, twenty-five young women were consecrated as missionaries for the home and foreign field, all of whom were Scarritt students.

Pastors of One Hundred Largest Churches.

The Yearbook of Southern Methodism gives a list of one hundred of the largest churches. Information in regard to the educational training of sixty-three of the pastors of these churches has been obtained. Forty-six of them were from Southern Methodist schools, three from other church schools, thirteen from secular institutions, and one had no college training. Sixty-two out of sixty-three of these pastors are college trained. Thirty-four of the sixty-three graduated with B.A. or B.S. degrees, twenty-six attended universities, twenty-one of whom graduated with university degrees.

Approved Instructors in Sunday School Teacher-Training Work.

The Sunday School Department has six hundred and thirty-six approved instructors for its Standard Training School work whose educational record is given. Four hundred and forty-six of this number are from our Methodist schools, forty-four from other church schools, one hundred and thirty-nine from secular institutions, and seven have no college training. Only seven out of six hundred and thirty-six have no college training, while four hundred and ninety have been trained in our church schools. Four hundred and twenty-three of the six hundred and thirty-six have B.A. or B.S. degrees, while two hundred and sixty-eight attended universities, and two hundred and eight have university degrees.

Presiding Elders.

Information has been secured giving the educational training of one hundred and eighty-seven of nearly three hundred presiding elders in Southern Methodism. One hundred and two of these one hundred and eighty-seven are from Methodist schools, twenty from other church schools, fifty-two from secular institutions, and thirteen had no college training.

While presiding elders are perhaps selected more for their administrative ability and experience than for educational training and scholarship, it is a significant fact that one hundred and seventy-four out of one hundred and eighty-seven are college trained, and one hundred and twenty-two out of one hundred and seventy-four from church schools.

Editors of Conference Organs.

There are fifteen Confernece organs in the church with a total weekly circulation of about a quarter of a million. They are read probably by a million people, and their influence is far-reaching. During the last twenty years these organs have had over sixty editors. Information has been secured as to the educational training of forty-seven of them. Forty have been trained in our own Methodist schools, seven in other schools, and thirty-three have B.S. or B.D. degrees from our Methodist institutions.

The Inescapable Conclusion.

From the foregoing facts we are brought face to face with the remarkable contribution which our universities and colleges have made and are making to the life of the church and the State. If they had made no other contribution than that of training the church leaders, they would have abundantly justified all of the money and efforts invested in them.

A consideration of the facts recited above has special significance when it is taken into account that only eleven out of every one hundred preachers in our church are college graduates, and only twenty-two out of one hundred have any college training.

If the figures were available with reference to the training of the laymen in the church who take rank as leaders in the realm of Sunday school activities, lay work, and official relationship, we are quite sure that additional emphasis could be given to the significance of the place of the Christian college in the great work of our church, both in its relationship to world evangelism and the development of the essential elements of integrity, righteousness, and justice in the character of the people of the nation.

All honor to the faithful men and women who labor in our schools, colleges, and universities pouring out their lives in unselfish service to the church and humanity in the same proportion as our ministers and missionaries.

These educational interests, hampered by lack of endowment and equipment, have gone forward in the years that have past heroically meeting the hardships and problems presented on every hand, making at the same time as remarkable a contribution to the ongoing of the Kingdom of God as any institution or group within the church.

Any one seeking to make an investment in Christ's kingdom should weigh the matter carefully and make his contribution in the light of the results which will naturally accrue. These results can be predicated upon achievements of the past. In the light of the past, surely no investment offers greater returns to the minister or layman than that made in the Christian college.

All honor to the men of the South in particular who, in increasingly large numbers, are coming to visualize clearly the magnificent investment for time and eternity that can be made through the placing of their funds at the disposal of our church colleges and universities.—The Methodist Layman.

IT CAN BE DONE.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am sending you the following information for publication with the hope that it might be of inspiration and encouragement to some pastor who has yet to raise his Conference collections. I trust that no one will consider me over proud, for I want publicly to state that the very remarkable record we have made at Jackson this year has been possible because of splendid response from these good people. Therefore, if this seems boastful, it is boasting on their behalf and not on that of the pastor.

Most of the preachers of the Louisiana Conference know something about Jackson and its past history. They know that it has had a glorious past. I think that few would dispute the statement that from this country charge have gone more leaders into the different vocations than from any other small town in Louisiana. The influence of Old Centenary made the above statement possible. With the going of that institution went also the great leaders of Jackson. Especially was that true of the Methodist church. It soon declined from a station to a three-point circuit.

The first task we undertook after the beginning of the Conference year was that of raising our Missionary Special. Jackson was not a missionary church. They were laboring under the false notion that so many of our churches are laboring under, that they were unable to help any one but themselves. This was manifested in their report to the Annual Conference, which shows that the entire charge gave less than fifty dollars to the entire missionary interests of our church, and forty-seven dollars of that was given through the Conference claims. We studied a missionary book, preached missionary sermons and sent out personal letters explaining the need for this money. We tied for first place in the district in getting our quota in the quickest, and led the district in oversubscribing our quota. A church which gave less than fifty dollars last year has given more than eight hundred dollars for missions this year.

We have had a missionary study class going in one of the churches nearly all the year, and the people have responded wonderfully to information on this important part of our church work.

This letter is growing long, so I will just give a synopsis of the other accomplishments of the Jackson charge.

We held a splendid approved Cokesbury Training School on the charge; observed every fourth Sunday for missions with a program and an offering, this offering totalling more than the entire offering for missions last year; organized a splendid Missionary Society at Ethel, and besides that a growing prayer meeting at the same place.

The Conference collections have never been paid since the present charge was organized. They might have been raised when Jackson was a station—I do not know about that. At the fourth quarterly conference held Sunday evening, the pastor was able to report everything in full, and that two months before Conference.

I believe the Conference collections can be raised in any place in Louisiana unless some peculiar situation prevents, such as an overflow, or storm, etc. If we who are not in the overflowed section do not raise our Conference collections, our boards are indeed going to be in an embarrassing position this fall.

TOMMY'S THANKS.

I'm thankful for a lot of things,
I'm thankful I'm alive,
I'm thankful that I'm six years old,
Instead of only five.
I'm thankful for my tops and toys
And for my Kitty Gray;
I'm thankful for the big outdoors
Where I can run and play.
I'm thankful for the things that grow,
The apples—aren't they good?
The corn where we play hide and seek
As in a little wood.
I'm thankful for the pumpkins round,
Just like a golden ball,
And Jack-o-lanterns, big and queer—
They don't scare me at all.
I'm thankful for Thanksgiving Day,
For pie all in a row;
I'm thankful Grandma made them sweet,
She knows I like them so.
I'm thankful for the turkey, too—
How brown it is and nice!
And I'd be very thankful, please,
For only one more slice.

MASIE'S KIND DEED.

By M. Janis Franke.

Masie had been to Sunday school, and now was walking home. Maise was troubled. The lesson was about helping others, and her teacher, Miss Malone, had said that one who did the kindest and most helpful deeds during the coming quarter, should receive a beautiful Bible. She did not know anything to do. It was her disposition to try to help others all she could and all her friends could testify if consulted about the matter. What could she do?

"I simply must do something to get that Bible, but I don't know anything to do. I help mother all I can, anyway, and I would not call going to see Aunt Mary or grandmother kind deeds, for I just love going there."

"Meow, meow," something cried behind her. Masie was so absorbed in her thoughts, she jumped. Turning, she saw a thin, starved little kitten coming her way. Masie had a tender spot in her heart for all cats, and a poor little cat in the condition as the one she saw behind her, made her heart throb with pity.

"Oh, you poor little dear," said Masie, almost crying, and then she saw further back a poor, ragged boy almost as pitiful as the cat. She just stared. His hair was tangled, his toes were entirely through his shoes. He had no stockings on; his hat was torn and dirty beyond any description. His trousers were the worst of all; both pockets were torn away, the legs were too long, and were fringed around the bottom with rags. An old pair of suspenders held the ragged trousers up.

"Hello," said the little boy pleasantly. "How do you like me cat?"

"It looks hungry—a little pitiful," stammered Masie, who had not recovered from her astonishment.

"Hungry," scoffed the boy, "it can't be any hungrier than me an' Ellie."

"Is Ellie your sister?" Masie wanted to know. The boy nodded. There was a pause, as the boy and the girl eyed each other uncertainly, while the cat walked over to Masie, and rubbing its nose against her leg, began to purr loudly.

"What is your name?" suddenly asked the boy. "Mine is Dick," said the boy, then whistled through his fingers so loudly that Masie was forced to close her ears. Presently, a small girl appeared, who was even more pitiful looking than the boy, if that were possible. She stared at Masie until she was forced to say something.

"Do you want something to eat?" finally asked Masie. At that, the little girl seemed to lose all doubt, and placed her soiled little hand in Masie's clean one.

"I should say we do. We are always hungry." Both children replied at the same time. Masie knew it without the response given instantly, by the pinched faces of the children.

"Well, come with me," invited Masie, even though she was a little doubtful as to how her mother would take it.

The three children made a queer picture walking along together; Masie with a fresh dress of pink and white, Dick with the trousers that were too long and too ragged for the rag-man; and Ellie with a dress of uncertain color much too small for her.

As they were turning in at the gate, Mr. Stone, Masie's father, was coming down the walk looking at the flowers. When he saw Masie and her friends, he smiled quietly to himself, for well he knew Masie never left undone an opportunity to "mother" either humans or dumb animals. A thrill of thankfulness for the unselfish heart of the little girl was felt by the father.

Dick and Ellie shrank from him, for they felt he was coming to send them away, but when Mr. Stone saw the expression on the faces of the children, he hastened to make them at ease, which he soon did by his sunny smile.

"Well, well, whom have we here?" he asked. He was quick to sense the fact that here, indeed, was an instance of the old adage, the way to win the approval of some children is through their appetite. He invited them into the kitchen to see what they could find to eat. Dick and Ellie decided they liked Mr. Stone even as well as they did Masie. While they were eating their fill of what was left from the noon lunch, Masie went to find her mother. She called softly at her mother's door. "Mother?"

"Yes, dear," replied her mother, as she came from her room.. "I have seen the children," then she waited for the little girl to speak, noting the glowing face of Masie.

"Your father and I have known about the family for several days. You may gather up such clothes as you do not need for the little girl. Surely, we can find some one willing to supply clothes for the boy. Two days a week you may go there and do what you see to do. I could do this, but it will be good training for you, so you may have full charge." Masie went away, too happy to speak.

The days flew so swiftly that the quarter was up before Masie realized it. She felt regret that she had no long list of good deeds to report, but somehow, the time had flown by so quickly she had seemed to have no time for hunting deeds to do.

When at last the Sunday had come for the coveted Bible to be given away, Masie had persuaded Dick and Ellie to go to Sunday school with her. How different they were from the time Masie had found them! Hair was neatly combed, clothes were neat and clean, and both had a happy expression on their faces. They seemed to shrink from the other children, and stay close by Masie.

The entire class seemed restless. They wanted to know who would receive the beautiful book. But at last the time came. Miss Malone held the book in her hand.

"I am going to give this book to a very worthy person," she began. "All or most of you have done good deeds, but one of you has done the best. Will Masie Stone come forward?"

Masie could hardly be persuaded to go forward, so great was her surprise. She had not been conscious of doing any kind deeds, whatever. When she was able to speak, she mumbled her thanks in a choking voice, and slipped crying from her room. But Miss Malone had enough thanks, and as she turned to dismiss the class, she said under herbreath, "And a little child shall lead them."—Exchange.

FLOWERS AMONG THE CABBAGES.

A friend told me of a woman whom he knew who planted flowers between the rows of cabbages which she grew in her small cottage garden. What a beautiful mind she had, to grow flowers among her cabbages. I was told nothing else about this woman but that one fact, and yet I feel I know far more of her. A woman who could look for the beauty of life among its commnoplace things must have been serenly happy. She had the soul which can find a cathedral in a kitchen. She was poor in material things, but rich in the treasures of the heart. "Hats off" to the nameless woman who planted flowers among her cabbages.

To most of us life is a humdrum affair. We awake every morning to the same tasks and to face the same difficulties. To some life brings ill health, bad luck, and continual disappointment. The garden of life is planted with cabbages, among which weeds of discontent have sprung up where we might have grown a few flowers of happiness.

C. H. Towne, tells a beautifully sad story of a man who was suddenly stricken with an illness which necessitated his lying upon his back for the rest of his life. "If I must lie on my back," he said, "I will not live in a dull room but upon my roof, looking at the stars and the moon and the wonderful storms that make the heavens glorious." So he caused a little roof garden to be built for him in the heart of the city where he dwelt, a garden in summer and a roof with a glass top for stormy days. To this he was taken, and there he found time to study astronomy. "He smiled at the heavens, watching the miraculous processional of flame as it marched on its endless journey; he saw the inconstant moon and timed his life by her moods; he reveled in the lightning when it flashed in mysterious patterns on the dark velvet of the clouds. And many a night he forgot his pain in the great cosmic forces above him. He studied the stars. He made the most of a great misfortune. He found beauty—which is God."

This brave man was undaunted by his misfortune. He planted flowers among his cabbages and saw the Lord God walking in a garden, as in the days of old.—J. G. Beaumont, in the Brotherhood Outlook.

TRUE HEROISM.

One day while strolling on the campus of Northwestern University, I was drawn to examine a rather plain-looking stone. I saw at once that it was a memorial, and I hardly stopped to read it. My companion, however, gave it a second glance, and exclaimed, "What a text for a high school address!" I looked again, and this is what I saw:

To the Memory
Of Jim Hansen
Soldier—Scholar—Athlete—Gentleman
Winner of the Congressional Medal
Cited for the Croix de Guerre
Died in France
Saving the Life of a Comrade
"He played four years on the scrubs.
He did not know how to quit."

Undoubtedly it was the training he got on the scrub football team that made this young physician a hero in the war. The ordinary, and even unpleasant and often despised, duties of life, faithfully discharged—these are what make heroes.—H. Howard Fuller.

SHORTENING.

Some years ago my wife was ill, and I had to do the cooking. I had learned something of this in boyhood, but I was out of practice. I tried to make biscuits; but I left out some ingredient, I felt sure; yet I did not know what it was. My wife tasted one, and told me that I had omitted the shortening.

Some sermons are spoiled for lack of shortening.—J. M. Kailin.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. L. Rogers, Webb, Miss., has our thanks for two subscriptions—one of them for two years—recently sent in.

"We are closing out the best year of the three on the Baker charge," says Rev. George D. Purcell, of Baker, La.

The presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference held a meeting at the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, on Wednesday of last week. All the presiding elders were present.

Mrs. S. E. Peairs, of Deerford, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, states that she has been taking the paper thirty-five or forty years, and that she cannot well do without it.

Rev. Sam J. Starkey, Dubach, La., writes: "Everything is going nicely on the Dubach charge. We have built a $10,000 church at Lisbon. It is the nicest that I have ever seen in a country community."

The American Bible Society has designated the first Sunday in December as "Universal Bible Sunday." The slogan for its observance is: "Not an offering, but a hearing; not a collection, but a presentation."

A specimen of the wit of Bishop Warren A. Candler, appearing in a sketch of his life in a recent number of the Atlanta Journal: "My first circuit paid me the handsome salary of $115 for the year, all of which, except $100, I probably earned."

Mr. George D. Purcell, Jr., and Miss Edith Douglass were married at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Clarence Douglass, in Natchez, Miss., on Oct. 16, Rev. George D. Purcell, father of the groom, officiating. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

The National Association of Manufacturers will hold its annual convention at Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 25-27. Mr. J. E. Edgerton, one of the outstanding laymen of our church, who served so efficiently as Centenary treasurer, is president of the Association.

The Southern Methodist Press Association will hold its annual meeting in Jackson, Miss., Dec. 15, immediately following the session of the General Missionary Council. Dr. A. W. Plyler, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, is president of the Association.

The Publishing Committee of the Advocate met in annual session on Thursday of last week. All the members of the Committee were present. The Secretary will furnish a report of the proceedings in due time.

Rev. J. A. Poe, in writing to have his Advocate changed from Sebree, Ky., to 505 Letcher Street, Henderson, Ky., states that he has been appointed pastor of the Bennett Memorial Church in Henderson, which is a nice station, with a fine modern church and parsonage. The year starts well.

At the recent session of the Pacific Conference, the following appointments of interest in this territory were made: Dr. S. H. Werlein, presiding elder of the San Francisco District; Wesley Church, San Francisco, Rev. H. W. Jamieson; San Bernardino, Rev. A. Inman Townsley. All these brethren were formerly members of the Louisiana Conference.

The corner stone of the educational building of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., was laid last Sunday afternoon, the Masonic Grand Lodge performing the ceremony. The principal address was delivered by Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District and Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge. Dr. Cleanth Brooks is the pastor at Alexandria.

For the first time since the Reformation, one of the largest secular French publishing houses has undertaken to distribute a New Testament to the public. The publisher, Bernard Grasset, Paris, expects to have copies ready for the Christmas trade. Many university professors in Paris and elsewhere have expressed the interest with which they await the new publication.

Under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches, a project of international friendship between the young people of Mexico and the United States has been announced. The plan is for "Friendship School Bags" to be sent by the children of the United States to the school children of Mexico, each bag to contain articles of interest and help in the life of school children. These bags will be officially distributed on Mexico's Independence Day, Sept. 16, 1928.

In connection with the Whitworth College Sunday school, which is conducted in the Y. W. C. A. building on the campus each Sabbath morning, two standard training classes are being taught: One, "The Missionary Message of the Bible," by Miss Adele Holtwick, Professor of Mathematics, and the other, "Methodist Church and Its Work," by Mrs. Genevieve Jones, Professor of English. The student superintendent of the Sunday school is Miss Eleanor Waits, with Miss Pauline Lewis, Professor of History, as Faculty Advisor.

There have been several changes in the editorial ranks of Southern Methodism recently. Dr. S. K. Cockrell, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, has returned to the pastorate, and Dr. Carlton D. Harris, a former editor, has been appointed editor again. Dr. W. L. Reid, of the Methodist Advocate, organ of the Western Virginia Conference, has returned to the pastorate, and Dr. F. S. Pollitt has been elected to succeed him. Dr. John A. Rice has been elected editor of the Oklahoma Methodist, to succeed the late Dr. D. H. Aston. Dr. M. E. Lazenby, in spite of his announced intention not to stand for re-election, was re-elected on the first ballot by the Publishing Committee at its meeting recently. The retiring editors have wrought nobly, and the newly elected ones are worthy and well qualified for the work to which they have been called.

DEATH OF TWO GOOD MEN.

Dear Advocate: I reached home this morning at 1:30 from the meeting of the Publishing Committee in New Orleans yesterday. I was awakened about 7:30 with a call over the 'phone from Duncan announcing the startling and sad news of Rev. Charles P. Moss's death, the popular and beloved pastor of Duncan and Alligator charge.

He died in the Methodist hospital at Memphis, where he had been carried for treatment only a day or so before.

I was with Brother Moss in his fourth quarterly conference only last Sunday night at Alligator, and a great conference it was. A large crowd of expectant and happy people were there, and a unanimous petition signed by his board of stewards was handed me, besides many persnoal expressions of love and wishes, for his return.

Also, a phone message following closely upon the one announcing Brother Moss's death was one from Brother N. J. Golding at Columbus announcing the passing of his father yesterday. "John Golding," as he was familiarly and lovingly called by his great hosts of friends and preachers who had been his pastors and presiding elders, was certainly one of the finest characters and noblest men I have ever chanced to know. He was a layman of rare ability, lofty devotion and unsullied name among those who lived by him and knew him through all the years.

His church will miss him sorely and the Columbus District where he was loved and known by wide circles of church activities.

Peace to our dear departed brothers, both of whom I dearly loved!

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: We are very happy to have the one hundred and fourteenth session of the Mississippi Conference held in Galloway Memorial Church. Arrangements are rapidly being perfected for the entertainment of our guests, all of the Methodist churches of Jackson delightfully co-operating in this work.

The opening service on Tuesday night, Nov. 8, will be a kind of resume of Methodism in Jackson for the past fifty years. Rev. J. Loyd Decell, the active and efficient presiding elder of the Jackson District, is arranging the program for this hour, the speakers to be announced a bit later on.

Bishop H. M. DuBose will be the honored guest of the Conference, and at a suitable hour will preach his semi-centennial sermon.

On Wednesday night the Conference Sunday School Board will observe its anniversary, at which time Dr. C. A. Bowen, of Nashville, our associate Sunday school editor, will be the principal speaker.

Thursday night will be given over to the Board of Finance, with Senator Pat Harrison as the special speaker. Friday night the laymen will have charge of the service. President Harvey W. Cox, of Emory University, has been secured as the speaker for that hour.

Special emphasis will be given to the preaching services each afternoon at 3 o'clock, and we trust that these hours spent together in worship will bring a rich blessing to all.

It is earnestly hoped that Bishop Candler, as he has done in the past, and in such a helpful and uplifting way, will bring a message from God's Word at the opening of each morning's session.

As a final word, let me say that we are doing our best for the comfort of our guests, and are happy to serve them in every way possible.

NORTHERN SEMINARIES AND SOUTHERN PREACHERS.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Conservatism has generally prevailed in the Presbyterian churches of our country, both in the Church, North, and in the Church, South.

The Presbyterian Church in the South has been most firm in the faith, but the Presbyterian Church in the North has not wavered as much as some other denominatinos have.

It is therefore surprising to read the following statements published in the Presbyterian of Philadelphia in its issue of Sept. 22:

"In the thirteen seminaries of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., there are 865 students, an average of a little over 66 students to a seminary. Out of the 865 students, only 616 are college graduates. This indicates an influence at work which threatens the reputation of this church for maintaining a scholarly ministry. A still more serious matter is the fact that out of the 865 students, only 461, or less than 54 per cent, are studying for the Presbyterian ministry, and of these, only 363, or less than 41 per cent, are college graduates. This looks rather discouraging for the prospects of the Presbyterian ministry. What is the cause of all this? Doubtless there are different elements entering into the cause, but the chief and most threatening element is the propagation of anti-evangelical teachings in our college and seminary chairs. If Jesus Christ is only a great man filled with the Spirit of God, then he has no power to deliver men from the guilt of sin. If Christ has not been raised from the dead, then, as Paul says, Christians are of all men most miserable and hopeless, and there is nothing left but to eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die. If the Bible is simply fine human literature, since it presents matters which in their nature are supernatural, then it is only fiction and there is no sure message concerning God and the redemption and the future state to preach to men, and therefore no function for the ministry. Young men of intelligence under the circumstances, and especially college men, will increasingly turn their backs on such a gospel and such a ministry."

These statements are made under the caption, "Startling Figures on Presbyterian Seminaries."

The figures are indeed startling and they are worthy of consideration by all the Christian churches of the United States.

The Editor of the Presbyterain in commenting upon these figures speaks as follows:

"All this presents a serious condition to the Presbyterian Church, and the General Assembly would do well to use its energy in resisting the tide of false teachings which is rushing into its own communion, instead of attacking Princeton Seminary, which stands firmly for the faith. The enemies are striking boldly at the foundations of the faith, and the church must awake to the real situation or meet her account of unfaithfulness. More than one young man whose face was turned toward the ministry has been turned away by the loud proclamations of destructive or indifferent teachings in colleges, seminaries and pulpits."

If these facts are well established, and they can scarcely be doubted, our young men who are candidates for the ministry should be very slow to go for their ministerial preparation to Northern seminaries. If the Presbyterian seminaries have grown thus lax in their teaching and liberalistic in their tendencies, what must be the case in the seminaries of other churches which have been less faithful?

A recent book entitled "The Leaven of the Sadducees" shows facts which more than confirm the statements made by the editor of the Presbyterian. That book can hardly be discredited in the matter of facts which it sets forth. The author is specific and careful in his statements, and efforts to verify his statements have been justified in every instance which has been investigated by the writer of this article.

The South has been and is the stronghold of evangelical Christianity, and it is increasingly evident that the Southern churches must maintain their historic and worthy position if evangelical Christianity is to prevail in our land.

It behooves them, therefore, to strengthen their own institutions of learning at which our young praechers are prepared for the ministry, and then to see that loose teachings do not enter into the institutions which they thus strengthen. It is scarcely safe for our Southern seminaries to seek in the North men for their faculties. The North will retain all the strong and orthodox men possible; and when Southern seminaries take what is left, they generally get what is undesirable.

When the young Romans went to Greece for education, the characteristics of Roman life were Grecianized. And when candidates for the ministry in Southern churches go North, the chances are they will be damaged and distracted by rationalism.

Strong personality and marked native ability are more to be desired in the men who instruct our youth than any aggregation of academic degrees. The degree business has been very much overdone, and is quite delusive. Some of the veriest cranks embellish their names with the longest list of alphabetical decorations, and some of the most dangerous heretics clothe themselves in the same sort of literary apparel.

A strong man who is consecrated to God is worth far more than any academic product who is lacking in ability and piety, and who is rich in pretense and arrogance. Above all, it is indispensable that godly men instruct the candidates for the Christian ministry in order that these men who are to serve in the sanctuary be thoroughly furnished to every good word and work.

In these reflections there is no appeal to sectionalism or sectarianism. The North should be interested in the maintenance of evangelical Christianity in the South; for the day is not distant when liberalism will have run its course and the churches will earnestly desire evangelical preachers, and no other, to serve in their pulpits.

The welfare of the entire country is involved in the maintenance of evangelical Christianity in the South. This nation was founded by men who exemplified this high and holy type of Christianity, and the foundation cannot now be subverted without the superstructure being imperiled.

The "Great Revival of 1800" began in the South, but its blessed influence extended to all the sections of the young Republic. It may be said that it saved in a great degree the people living in the region now comprised in the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. The revival began through the ministrations of two brothers named McGee, one of them being a local Methodist minister and the other a Presbyterian pastor. Imagination cannot conceive of what dreadful conditions were cured and what direful consequences were averted by that great visitation of grace.

Again, our country needs such a movement to rescue it from grave perils; and in so far as human eyes can see the probability is that such a movement must originate in the South or it will not come at all. Such being the case, it is of the last importance that the Southern churches and the Southern preachers maintain their evangelical doctrines and spirit.

In the light of the statement and observations quoted from the Presbyterian, it is idle to quibble about sectionalism and sectarianism. The grave issue for serious consideration is the question of how to save our Southern churches from great damage and real danger,

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT HORNBECK, LA.

On Friday night, Sept. 16, we began a meeting in Hornbeck, La., Brother Otis Spinks preaching a good sermon and leading the singing. Next night Brother Dan E. Kelly was there, and preached in his inimitable way for two full weeks, or until Friday night, Sept. 30. With Brother Kelly preaching and Brother Otis Spinks singing and leading the choir, we had a wonderful meeting all the way through. With record-breaking crowds, the interest was fine all the time. Several nights Brother Kelly had an old-fashioned testimony service, in which Methodists, Baptists, Apostolices and others gave testimony to the great experience of old-fashioned religion, and how much they had enjoyed the meeting all the way.

Sister Kelly was present the last week of the meeting, and we all enjoyed her presence and fine spirit.

Hornbeck people would be glad indeed to have Brothers Kelly and Spinks back again at any time. These two men of God truly make a real, sure enough team in a revival meeting.

The visible results of this meeting were twenty applications for membership in the Methodist church, and some to the Baptist. About seventy-five men and women gave Brother Kelly their hand, saying thereby that they would lead a prayer meeting if called on to do so. The crowd contributed $341 for Brothers Kelly and Spinks for their services. All in all, it was a great meeting.

BIBLE IS MOST WIDELY READ BOOK IN PHILIPPINES.

A dispatch from Manilla states that figures compiled by the Philippines branch of the American Bible Society show that there are more than 2,000,000 Bibles in use throughout the archipelago. The Bible holds a unique place in the life of the Filipino people. Millions of Filipinos seldom read any other book, and many of them believe the Bible is the only real book in the universe.

The annual distribution of the Bible in the islands is greater than the combined circulation of all newspapers, exceeding 125,000 copies annually. No other book has attained a circulation in excess of 1,000 a year.

Printed in Manila.

Most of the Bibles read in the islands are printed in Manilla now, and the work constitutes the first publishing industry of the islands. Before the Japanese earthquake, English editions of the Bible used in the islands were printed in Tokyo; but the plates were destroyed in the fire which followed the great disaster and the publication then was started here.

The American Bible Society started the work here twenty-five years ago, and the Bible now is printed in many native dialects. More than one-third of the Bibles used are in Eiglish, however, and the Society claims the Bible may be classed as the greatest teacher of English religious force in the archipelago.

No Advertising.

No advertising or promotion work has been necessary to bring about the great annual sale of Bibles, the Society asserts, as the Bible is popular with all classes of Filipinos (except, possibly, the Mohammedan Moros), and is the chief literary delight of a majority of the population.

Considering the standards of education, the Flipinos may well be called one of the greatest Bible reading peoples of the world.—Foreign Missions Bulletin.

ROBERT S. McCOY was born Oct. 2, 1866, and died at his home near Coushatta, La., Aug. 12, 1927. When an infant his parents moved with him from Mississippi to Arkansas. At 23 he made Louisiana his home. On Dec. 7, 1892, he was married to Miss Sallie Watts, of Coushatta, La. Brother McCoy became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when a youth. He remained a loyal member to the end, serving as steward for twenty-five years or more. Of congenial and cheerful spirit, he was capable of friendship, and people had confidence in him. He leaves to mourn their loss, his wife, aged mother, five sisters, one brother, two sons, one daughter, and several grandchildren. On Aug. 13 his remains were laid to rest in Armistead Chapel cemetery, the site of the old church he loved so well. He is missed in the home, the church, and elsewhere, but our sorrow is not as those who have no hope. We expect to meet again.

R. T. PICKETT.

FROM MAGEE AND SANATORIUM.

We are closing up our four years with these people. They have been years of joyful service and rich experiences.

We have made some progress, but not keeping step with the material prosperity of our people. We have a good, active Sunday school at Rials Creek, where there has not been a Sunday school in many years. The Sunday school at Sharon has been reorganized and put on new life. We are making some advancement in the Sunday school at Magee.

We had good revival meetings at each church. Brother V. G. Clifford assisted us at Magee and Rials Creek, and Brother J. B. Shearer at Sharon. Both did acceptable and effective work. All assessments at each church will be in full.

The work at the Sanatorium has grown each year. The necessity and importance have become a burden on my heart. Coming in personal touch with over three hundred sick, and some dying, begging for the bread of life, and the comfort of the gospel, impels one to do his best. The patients and staff are appreciative, and the realization of bringing blessing to these needy ones makes this a most joyous service.

Let him whom the bishop appoints here for another year know that he will have a wonderful opportunity for joyous, helpful service.

J. B. Holland, with Misses Tarry, Thompson and McDonald, of Meridian, gave the Sanatorium congregation a very enjoyable and helpful service the 9th instant. They make a strong team, and would bring a blessing to any congregation.

We have a congregation of about one hundred patients who are able to go to meals and services, and are preparing to return to their homes. Some are leaving each week. That is a happy time for them. We are praying for the direction of the Holy Spirit in every appointment at our Conference.

W. M. WILLIAMS.

HOME-COMING AT CANTON, MISS.

Annual "Home-Coming" services were held at the Canton Methodist church, Sunday, Oct. 2.

Autumn flowers, including beautiful zenias and goldenrod, were used for decorative purposes. These has been effectively arranged in baskets by the decorating committee.

Two ushers stood at each of the four doors to greet the "newcomers" as well as the "regulars."

Mrs. Duaine Morgan was at the organ. After an organ prelude and an anthem by the choir, the congregation sang, "Hark, Ten Thousand Hearts and Voices."

Next in order were: The Apostles Creed; prayer, Rev. L. L. Roberts; anthem, choir; responsive reading, Psalm 85; "Gloria Patria;" Scripture reading, Exodus 25; announcements; offertory; solo, Mrs. Gant.

From the text, "Let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them," Rev. L. L. Roberts delivered a masterly and inspirational sermon, in which he showed that God's commandment to Moses concerning the erection of a sanctuary is applicable to us of to-day. He commended the people of Canton for the erection of such a magnificent building, at the same time impressing the truth that unless Christ absolutely sits enthroned in the lives of the people, our brick and mortar is as nothing in the presence of God. Outstanding questions and statements in his message were:

"Do you meet with God here Sabbath after Sabbath?

"Do you feel the presence of God as you come here?

"The veil of the temple is rent in twain and you are invited to come into the holy of holies.

"There is a blessedness in the idea of communion.

"I am appealing for a communion of saints with God."

After this message, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, followed by the benediction.

We of the church feel that this "Home-Coming" service has brought about a reunion among ourselves and a closer communion with God.

REPORTER.

A FEW WORDS FROM RICHTON, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am now completing my fourth year on the Richton charge, and in several respects this has been the best year of the four. Congregations have improved, and greater interest is being taken in the work of our Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues than ever before. Forty-seven members have been received this year on profession of faith, and fifteen by certificate, making a total of sixty-two additions to the church. During the quadrennium I have received 184 members on profession of faith, and 127 by certificate, making a total of 311 additions to our membership. We have lost heavily by removal and otherwise—167 in all. Notwithstanding the fact that many of our members have changed their place of residence, there is a net gain of 144 for the quadrennium.

Three years ago an up-to-date Sunday school annex was built at Richton at a cost, including equipment, of approximately $7,000. The Richton church now has a standard "B type" Sunday school, which graded 90 per cent this year. Thanks to the faithfulness of our stewards, our regular assessments will be paid in full, and also most of the quota for the Superannuate Endowment fund. During the past three years $1,362 has been paid on Centenary pledges by the members of the charge, and the "mission special" has been met in full. I have had splendid co-operation from our laymen, and I take pleasure in saying that I have never served a more loyal or generous-hearted people than the members of the Richton charge, each congregation having done nobly.

Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK, Pastor.

Oct. 12, 1927.

FROM SIDON AND CRUGER.

Conference is nearly here. There is lots to be thankful for on Sidon and Cruger charge. One thing—the pastor's family are all real well again. Then, too, we had a real good revival at Sidon. Rev. J. D. Wroten did the preaching. The people were pleased with his earnest presentation of the gospel. There were nine additions to the church on profession of faith.

Cruger was fortunate indeed when we secured the services of Rev. W. M. McIntosh and splendid wife. They made every one feel that they were not only preaching the gospel, but living it. Two more choice spirits were never in a revival. The only way to keep from being revived was to stay away from the services. They left a fine spirit with us and seven additions on profession of faith.

Two Sunday schools, a prayer meeting and two of the most active Woman's Missionary Societies make up only a few things that we and the splendid people of this charge are thankful for. We hope to report assessments in full. We have recently raised about $100 for the superannuates, and our Work Day will make a good report for Orphans' Home.

We are truly thankful.

Yours and His,

E. M. SHAW, P. C.

ZONE MEETING AT PACHUTA, MISS.

With Mrs. Mason presiding, a splendid program of zone 2, Meridian District, was held at Pachuta, Sept. 22. The meeting opened with devotional, conducted by the president of Crandall auxiliary, Rev. Mr. Allums, of Pachuta, leading in prayer.

The address of welcome, in a most cordial way, was extended by Mrs. Allums, and the response made by Mrs. Mason, of Quitman. Then Mrs. Mason, in her usual gracious manner, introduced the ministers that were present.

The minutes of last meeting were read, and the roll was answered by Crandall, Quitman, Shubuta and Pachuta; the Baptist auxiliary of Pachuta also meeting with our zone on this occasion. The leader's message to the meeting was very impressive, using quotations from minutes of the Annual Conference.

"He Knows the Way," was ably rendered by Miss Blanche Bethea, of Quitman.

In "The Jubilee—Its Plan and Purpose," Mrs. Weems, of Shubuta, gave a new vision of the work, urging each woman to reconsecrate herself. Mrs. Watkins, of Quitman, brought an inspiring message through "Our Spiritual Resources." The Children's Work was presented briefly by Mrs. Hand, Jr., and the "Voice," by Brother Dawson, both of Shubuta. Many good suggestions were made in the Bible study discussion conducted by the Bible leaders, and Brother Allums feelingly sang, "Ready."

Round table discussion on "How Can We Get All Our Methodist Women to Be Members of the Auxiliary?" and "How and Why Study the Conference Minutes?" with an invitation from Quitman for next meeting in November, and prayer by Brother Dawson brought the meeting to a close.

A pleasant social hour followed, during which delicious refreshments were served by the hostess church.

MRS. MASON, Leader.

A REQUEST.

Leaders, Secretaries and Superintendents of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences:

May I ask you please for a little more "goods" for our page? Each week I forward all that I have on my desk and could sometimes use more copy. Will you please send me notes of your interesting meetings? If they are not worth writing up, make them so. One other thing: It will help the Advocate, which is so graciously kind to us, if you will send all material for this department through my hands. I also beg the aid of your prayers in this so great a responsibility.

Thanking you most warmly,
MRS. J. E. BROWN.
Gloster, Miss.

ZONE MEETING, COLFAX, LA.

The third quarterly meeting of Minden District, zone No. 3, was held at Colfax on Sept. 28, and was as well attended as the inclement weather would permit.

The rain came down in torrents at intervals all day and the carefully arranged plan for a picnic lunch on the green was made quite impossible; but it was no less a delicious repast, which was served on the veranda of the parsonage, to a large number of guests, by the hospitable ladies of the Colfax auxiliary.

Following this delightful and refreshing social hour a program was given at the church. It was a great pleasure to have with us Mrs. Dan W. Kelly, of Winnfield, District Secretary, who, in the absence of the zone leader, presided at the meeting.

The devotional was given by the pastor, Rev. W. C. Lahey, and a short business session followed.

Four auxiliaries answered roll call, Colfax, Montgomery, Davis Springs, and Coushatta, with a delegation from Winnfield as visitors.

Items of interest were discussed, Mrs. Kelly giving helpful ideas and encouragement toward the better solution of perplexing problems.

The Colfax ladies gave a playlet, "First Church Missionary Society," which was well rendered.

The Coushatta Society presented a candle lighting service, which was dedicated to the outgoing missionaries and deaconesses.

A free will offering was made in the interest of the rural work of Louisiana.

After a closing song the benediction was pronounced by the pastor.

It was altogether very enjoyable, and we came home with the feeling that it was a day well spent in the Master's service; that our irganization is one that is worthy of our best efforts, and a fuller comprehension of the greater tasks to be accomplished for the welfare of the world.

MRS. ASHLEY HAZARD PERRY,
Superintendent fo Publicity,
Coushatta Auxiliary.

ZONE MEETING AT RED BANKS, MISS.

Red Banks, Miss., was hostess Saturday afternoon to the third zone meeting, Sardis District, Sept. 24.

The meeting convened at 8:30 o'clock with sixty-five representatives present from the different auxiliaries. Mrs. C. C. Kerr, Olive Branch, presided; Mrs. Sallie McElwrath, Mineral Wells, was secretary; Miss Johnson, Red Banks, gave the piano numbers. Rev. Mr. Mayo conducted the devotional. Mrs. Annie Holloway, Emory, responded to the welcome address, which was given by Miss Roy Scott, Red Banks. Mrs. C. T. Hicks, Byhalia, gave a talk on Missions and Bible study.

Posters were presented by Mrs. Irving Mills, Fountain Head; Mrs. E. E. Eason, Olive Branch, and Mrs. C. T. Hicks, Byhalia.

The assembly had the pleasure of hearing two missionaries talk. Miss Elberta Wilson, rural worker of the Sardis District, gave an inspirational talk on her rural work. Miss Myrtle Pollard, a returned missionary from Chihuahua, Mexico, gave an outline, comparing the work to the five fingers on the helping hand, that was being done by the auxiliaries in the Sardis District through her as their missionary.

The Sardis District is fortunate in having Mrs. C. C. Kerr as zone chairman. Through her zeal and untiring efforts to carry on great things for the cause, we believe much good will be accomplished this year in the work.

Afterwards delicious ice course was served.

The zone meeting adjourned to meet again in Byhalia the last quarter.

MRS. WALTER WINDERS,
Press Chairman.

ZONE MEETING AT BETHEL, LA.

The second zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society met last Sunday with Bethel. Delegates and visitors were also present from Homer, Athens, Wesley Chapel and Haynesville.

The meeting opened at 3 o'clock with the words of the grand old hymn, "Jesus Is All the World to Me." After the fervent prayer voiced by Mrs. Pitman, we were all in good spirit for the service. Devotional was conducted by Mrs. Lee, of Homer.

Mrs. Pitman, of Athens, gave a reading of the last zone meeting, which was held at Wesley Chapel. Mrs. Carolyn Dawson gave a wonderful presentation of the "Standard of Excellence." Mrs. Garrett, of Wesley Chapel, spoke on the "Week of Prayer," and also to whom and where our offerings go.

Athens Junior boys and girls favored us with a play, "Americus America."

After the meeting closed, refreshments were served.

MRS. CLAY WATSON,
Voice Agent.

ZONE MEETING, HERMANVILLE, MISS.

On Aug. 29, the Missionary Societies of this part of the Vicksburg District held a zone meeting at Hermanville, with Miss Pearl Fisher, of Cayuga, presiding, and delegates present from Utica, Burtonton, Rocky Springs, Port Gibson, and Hermanville.

Rev. Otto Porter, of Port Gibson, conducted the devotional; welcome was given by Mrs. Furr, and the response by Mrs. Boothe, of Burtonton.

Mrs. Otto Porter gave an excellent address on the Jubilee; and Cayuga, Hermanville and Port Gibson each re-

MOTHER!

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Be good now and send reports on the observance of Children's Week. The task is not complete until the report comes in to my desk. If you did not receive the blank for this report, please let me know and another will be sent.

Speaking of reports, send in any left-over Sunday School Day money and missionary offerings to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville, Miss., so your report can get in the first day of the Conference.

We are gathering pictures of new buildings, hand-work done by children, and other materials that show something of the progress made in giving religious education. This is a call to every individual in the Conference who can lend a helping hand. The success attained in the Sunday school is not due to the work of one or two or three persons, but is an achievement wrought by hundreds of faithful workers. Our joy is in doing the work; the glory belongs to our Lord.

We are calling for one hundred volunteers to teach one or more classes the coming year. This is much better than paying some one to do all the teaching. The need for trained workers is so great we must multiply our teaching force to the extent we can reach every school in the Conference. We should not employ teachers to give instruction in a school where the pastor or some one appointed by him is able to do this work. Already some of the strongest men in the Conference have agreed to join the One Hundred Volunteers. A man multiplies himself by the number he teaches. "One can chase a thousand and two can put ten thousand to flight." God knows how to multiply his power. Let us fall into his plan of saving a lost world.

There are many who are praying that the Holy Spirit will completely overshadow us as we meet at Clarksdale. When the Spirit comes in, all criticism, suspicion, and fault-finding must pass out. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By C. D. Atkinson.

Training Schools are still leading the field in the Sunday school work, with one in progress at Monroe this week, and Shreveport to follow next week.

On Saturday night the writer was in Shreveport assisting Dr. Holmes in the gathering up of loose ends in preparation for his school there. Sunday was spent in Monroe and West Monroe, where, at the latter place, we brought the morning message on "The High Cost of Seeing." Dr. Lutz, the pastor of the "Forward Looking Church," is still abed, but doing nicely.

In the afternoon a classification and enrollment meeting was conducted at First Church, Monroe, with Mr. A. W. Trotter in charge of the registration. About forty workers were present.

At West Monroe an offering for the Ruston Orphanage was taken, amounting to $239, and the pastor of the Monroe church said the offering there would equal the fine one of last year. We noted on the bulletin board in the Monroe school that the attendance was at high water mark, there being 480 in general attendance, while Mr. Trotter reported eighty-eight present in his Intermediate-Senior Department.

We remained in Monroe until Tuesday, rendering what assistance we could in the school. Official report of the school will be written up later.

The writer is rich in invitations this week, and finds it very unfortunate that he cannot have the pleasure of being in various places at the same time. The Shreveport Training School calls his attention on Sunday, the 16th; Brother Lowrey has issued a pleasing invitation to visit his circuit and speak five times on that day; Elizabeth has invited him through Brother Hines; and Alexandria, First Church, has invited him through Dr. Brooks to be present for the laying of the corner stone in the new educational building.

We have received a delightful letter from Mrs. W. W. Tempelton, of Atoka, Tenn., telling us of the pleasure it has afforded her to teach in several of our Standard Training Schools.

Many congregations in our Conference are in the midst of revivals especially planned and carried out for the young people of the Epworth League. Fine speakers are meeting these groups nightly, and a great awakening is expected.

* * *

Mrs. L. D. Chaffee, of New Orleans, missionary superintendent of that district, has sent us a splendid review of the joint Rally and Promotion Day service recently held at First Church in New Orleans, at which time the "threefold" missionary program was presented by Mrs. Chaffee.

We are in receipt of a request from Brother H. W. Ledbetter, pastor at De Ridder, asking for articles on Evangelism in the Sunday School, leading up to Decision Day. This strikes us as a very fine thing to start immediately after the opening of the new Sunday school year to work toward this most important day of the year in our schools.

The latest report on training credits shows Louisiana with 109 credits for September. Little Rock Conference, 74 credits; Mississippi Conference, 4; North Mississippi Conference, 16. The June report showed Louisiana Conference with 849 credits, which led all Conferences for that month.

Several Cokesbury courses have been included in Standard Training Schools this year. The largest number of Cokesbury credits was issued in the school at Leesville. A Cokesbury class is in session this week at Davis Springs church, near Campti, with Brother A. K. McLellan instructor.

Dean R. E. Smith's book, "Old Lands Ever New," is just out. My copy reached me this week. I knew the Dean was a great teacher, but did not know he was a greater writer than teacher until my book came. The Dean dedicated his book to his Bible class, which is the largest in our Conference, perhaps the largest in Methodism.

Let me tell you a story about a birthday party at River Side Hospital. Monday morning, Oct. 10, at the breakfast table in the West Monroe parsonage Mrs. Lutz announced, "To-day is Albert's birthday." All arrangements were made by the time the children came home from school in the afternoon. The cake was baked, the ice cream secured and gifts collected. The family car reached the hospital with its happy group—Mrs. Lutz, Miss Cena Lutz, of New Orleans, sister of Dr. Lutz, the two children, Miss Simpson, of Greenwood, and your scribe. The trained nurse in Dr. Lutz's room joined our party. Several rooms down the hall was where Brother Dan Barr was. His two daughters, Mrs. Files and Mrs. Brothers, were invited to share the occasion with us. Dr. Lutz entered into the spirit of the party, took the knife and cut his birthday cake. The party must have done the Doctor good, for the next day his doctor said he could go "home."

RESOLUTIONS OF STARKVILLE QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

Whereas, the Rev. Mr. J. B. Randolph has served as presiding elder of the Columbus District, of the North Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during the past three years; and,

Whereas, the Rev. Mr. Randolph has, by his great interest and earnest effort, stimulated the churches of the district to greater zeal in Christian service and activity; and,

Whereas, the Rev. Mr. Randolph has increased the spirit of loyal cooperation within the churches and between the churches of the district;

Therefore, be it resolved by the fourth quarterly conference of the Starkville Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in regular meeting assembled, That we respectfully petition Bishop Candler and his cabinet to return the Rev. Mr. J. B. Randolph as presiding elder of the Columbus District for another year.

Signed: F. L. Wier, chairman; J. J. Gill, H. W. Moody, Committee for the Quarterly Conference.

Whereas, the Rev. V. C. Curtis has served as pastor of the Starkville (Miss.) Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for two years, now closing; and,

Whereas, the Rev. Mr. Curtis, by his earnest sincerity and tactfulness, has been able to secure whole-hearted co-operation on the part of the entire membership of the church so that the membership has unitedly advanced with a solid front in all phases and divisions of the work; and,

Whereas, through these favorable conditions, the church has advanced, under his leadership, to the completion of a building program and now occupies a modern, commodious building which affords facilities for every phase of church activity; and,

Whereas, because of these facilities, while the usual and former activities have progressed to new successes, new activities, such as the Men's work, the Every Man's Bible class, the Wesley Brotherhood, have been organized and are bearing fine fruitage, and the church has been able to entertain district conference meetings and other acitivities which could not have been undertaken before;

Therefore, be it resolved by the fourth quarterly conference of the Starkville Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in regular meeting assembled, That we respectfully petition Bishop Candler and his cabinet to return the Rev. V. C. Curtis to the Starkville charge for another year.

Signed: F. L. Wier, chairman; J. J. Gill, H. W. Moody, Committee for the Quarterly Conference.

Georgia Man Tells How He Found Relief for Many Complaints by Using An Old Home Remedy.

Athens, Ga.—"I have been married 51 years, and am the father of ten children," says Mr. J. C. E. Weatherford, R. F. D. "A," this city. "About the best home remedy I have ever found is Black-Draught. I can't remember when we haven't used it in the family, giving it to the children for colds and minor ills where a laxative is needed.

"We must have used Black-Draught for 40 years, anyway, and in that time we have tried it for many complaints. I would have dull, stupid feeling, and my head would ache and when I would lean over, I would get dizzy. I found that a couple of doses of Black-Draught would relieve this. I used to have gas on my stomach, and would spit up grease. Black-Draught relieved this.

"It is just an all-round good medicine. Now that I am 72 years old, I have to take a laxative, and Black-Draught acts easy and gives me satisfaction."

In use for over 85 years.

Costs only one cent a dose. NC-181

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT Purely Vegetable

REPORT OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY SUB-AGENCY.

The voice ceases, the Book abides.

My report from the Sub-Agency of the American Bible Society at 900 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La., for the month of September, 1927, is as follows:

The distribution has been 154 Bibles, 201 Testaments, 4,571 Portions. Total, 4,926 volumes.

The distribution since Jan. 1 (nine months) has been 1,778 Bibles, 3,387 Testaments, 83,015 Portions. Total, 88,180 volumes, value $2,879.85; $2,270.09 have been sales, $609.76 donations and discounts. About half of this donation was to flood refugees.

During these nine months we have received from our friends $110.50 to help push this work at New Orleans, for which we are very thankful.

We have rented an adjoining room now and have larger quarters. About six years ago we commenced work here in this room with three boxes of books, we used these boxes for shelving; we now have ninety boxes cased up and painted for shelving, and will have one hundred before the end of this week.

If the State of Mississippi were in this agency, where it belongs, there would be no good reason why New Orleans should not be second only to New York as a Bible Depository in five years. At one time in New Orleans' past history the Bible was almost an unknown book; now it is being scattered far and wide and planted in many a dark corner; yet there is a great task before us. In one of our Baptist papers we read: "For many years our great Baptist family have regarded the city of New Orleans as the most needy single mission field in the bounds of the Southern Baptist Convention."

Despite the flood, this part of the Sunny South is fast coming to the front in many ways. The piney woods north of Lake Pontchartrain are going to be one of the greatest health resorts in the world.

New Orleans is one of the leading seaports of America—ninety steamship lines reach every seaport in the world from New Orleans. The Bible can be given to the nations of the earth from New Orleans. If we can kindle a beacon light here, its guiding rays will shine around the world.

Pray for us, in Jesus' name,

G. A. PERKINS.

A WEEKLY LETTER FROM OUR FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Leaguers: In spite of all the rain we had this past week, I can report some splendid meetings among our young people. I've found that real Epworth Leaguers, with enthusiasm and interest in their work, don't let rain, or weather conditions keep them away from League meetings. That's the kind of League members we want all over Louisiana; then we will accomplish great things for the youth of our church.

I want my League friends to know that the little League of Selma, La., deserves special mention because of its splendid record of work. Although they do not have a comfortable place of meeting, sharing their church at the same time with the B. Y. P. U., I found them carrying out the work of every department, their secretary's record book up to date, and their pledges being promptly paid. With the leadership of their president, Miss Carmen Moffett, they are anxious and eager to do everything to make Selma League a standard League this year. Hurrah for these splendid Leaguers!

On Saturday night we had a weenie roast at Dubberly, La., and a splendid group of young people were out. Dubberly League is also going to do big things this year. Miss Susie Batton is their president.

On Sunday evening we had a splendid devotional meeting at the Minden Senior Laegue. I want especially to thank Rev. and Mrs. L. I. McCain for their splendid leadership among the young people of their church. Mary Searles, the president of the Senior League and also secretary for Minden District, is doing some wonderful work in her district, as well as in her local League. The Searles family is a "League family," and we are proud of them. Minden District is comparatively a new district, but we are proud of the progress it is making.

There are a number of Leagues in Minden District that I did not get to visit while in the district. Some of them I will go to at later dates. I am planning to visit Ferriday Oct. 13, and Winnfield Oct. 27.

While in Minden District I visited eleven Leagues, organized one, interviewed seven pastors, the presiding elder, the district secretary, assistant district secretary, held four Council meetings, three business meetings, seven devotional meetings, and three pep parties.

At the time that this report goes in I am in the Shreveport District. If I have not yet visited your League, I will some time before Conference, so let's be prepared for a good report of work. May God bless your League abundantly during the coming year.

In his service,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

News Items.

We are glad to know that so many of our Epworth Leagues are holding Young People's revivals this month. This great evangelistic campaign is one of the greatest steps ever taken in Leaguedom. If your League is observing this splendid program of work and we do not know about it, let Mr. Charles White, of Alexandria, your State president, hear from you.

The Field Secretary spent last Thursday night in the home of Rev. and Mrs. James T. Harris. Leaguers will be glad to know that "Cora" and "Jimmie" are as happy as can be.

The district secretaries over the State are wondering if all quarterly reports will be in to them by Oct. 10. Remember, Leaguers, that this is one point on your Standard of Efficinecy!

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup
Better than ready-made cough syrups and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the valuable properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real healing power as there is in this home-made cough syrup, easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

ported having elected their historian.

Miss Fisher, our efficient leader, called on the ministers present to name what they would like the auxiliaries to do at home, and the following responded in a most gracious manner with splendid suggestions: Rev. Otto Porter, Port Gibson; Rev. J. B. Holyfield, Hermanville; Rev. Wesley Ezell, Rocky Springs; and Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, Utica.

The people of Hermanville treated the delegates in a most royal manner, the ladies serving a bounteous luncheon at the noon hour, and the spirit of fellowship, co-operation and interest from those present was a great inspiration to all.

ZONE MEETING AT BASTROP, LA.

A very enthusiastic zone meeting was held in Bastrop, La., on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 29, with an attendance of 150 members and visitors.

Mrs. W. E. Sisson, of Mer Rouge, occupied the chair, and was responsible for the fine program.

Devotional on "Prayer" was given by Mrs. Hadley, of Bastrop.

Roll call and reading of minutes were followed with a reading, "The Potters," by Mrs. Binion, of Oak Ridge.

A chapter from the Mission Study book, "A Straight Way Toward To-Morrow," dealing with the importance of Christian training in the home, was given in the form of a conference between Mrs. Gallagher, Mrs. Higginbotham, Mrs. Worley, and Mrs. Davenport, of Mer Rouge, this being preceded by a solo, "Home, Sweet Home," sung by Mrs. Holloway, of Monroe.

The question, "Why Should I Carry a New Religion to the Orient?" was discussed by Mrs. Holloway.

Four ladies, members of the Monroe church choir, rendered a very beautiful quartet, "He Is Mine."

Short accounts of the work of some of our foreign missionaries in the field were given by Mrs. Davidson, of Mer Rouge; Mrs. Rawlinson, of Bastrop; Mrs. Sutcliff, of Monroe, and Mrs. Perritt, of Oak Ridge.

Mrs. Shaedel, of Monroe, who, with her husband and children, expects soon to return to their work in Africa, told of former experiences there, and very touchingly appealed for sympathy and prayers.

The Prayer League recently formed in anticipation of the Jubilee year in 1928 was outlined and explained by Mrs. Pollard, of Monroe.

Mrs. Leavell, of Bastrop, very graciously extended words of welcome, and a closing poem was read by Mrs. Early.

Light refreshments were served in the social hall of the church; next meeting to be held in Monroe during the month of December.

MRS. ALONZO EARLY.

ZONE MEETING AT DAVIS' CHAPEL.

Zone No. 6 of the Woman's Missionary Society, of the Sardis District, met at Davis' Chapel, Sept. 25, 1927. The president was absent, and Mrs. J. T. McCafferty presided over the meeting.

There were many inspiring features, among which Miss Myrtle Pollard gave an inspiring address on the great work being done in Mexico. Miss Pollard is on her vacation from that field. We were all greatly helped by this first-hand information. The meeting closed in due form.

MOTHER OF SEVEN CHILDREN

Helped in Caring for them by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Glasgow, Ky.—"I am the mother of seven children, the eldest being only 12 years, and I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to pull me through the roughest places of my married life. At one time I was so downhearted that life was a misery. A friend in Indianapolis, Indiana, told me of the Vegetable Compound, and after taking a few bottles of it I became myself again and it was a pleasure to do my housework and gardening. Since then I always use your medicine when I feel weak from overwork and it straightens me out."—Mrs. Melissa Barbers, Route 2, care of O. F. Steenbergen, Glasgow, Ky.

New Orleans, La.—"I could not do a thing after my first boy was born. I was so weak, I had no appetite, lost weight and was not able to do my work. I was this way for seven weeks, then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got wonderful results from it."—Mrs. C. Faurie, 4014 Dauphine St., New Orleans, La.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been growing in popularity among women for over fifty years.

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men

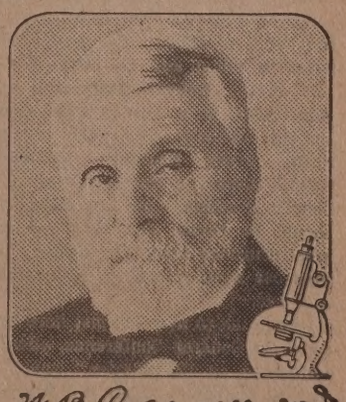
As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr.



W. B. Caldwell M D
AT AGE 83

Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. It is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home,—where many live someone is sure to need it quickly.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

FROM ELLISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have had all our meetings. The first two were conducted by Brother Claude P. Jones, at Ellisville and Moselle, which have been reported in the Advocate. The last two, Hinton and Mount Zion, were conducted by Rev. G. E. Allan, of Laurel.

Brother Allan preached splendidly, and his congregations appreciated him highly. Brother Allan is a splendid man to be associated with in a meeting, always pleasant and brotherly.

The meetings were a great help to these congregations. We hope to have a fine report at Conference.

PERCY VAUGHAN, P. C.

A LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Dear Doctor: I have been off Louisiana soil for more than a year, and somehow I feel that I owe to you the statement that I have not lost the eagerness of my first week with which I look for the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the news of the brethren with whom I labored so delightfully for seventeen years. I have found pleasant fields in West Virginia. The cordiality with which I was received here was all that could be desired. I fell into the tracks of Drs. B. P. Taylor and C. W. Crisler, and soon discovered that the paths they left were lined with friends, and fine Christian friends at that.

My first report to the Western Virginia Conference was made in Huntington the latter part of September. We had 205 accessions and a full finaicial report. Our invitation was accepted, and next year we will have the Annual Conference in First Church, Charleston. You are here and now most cordially invited to attend said Conference and represent the Advocate.

The Western Virginia Conference has in it some very fine men. Here is the home of Bishop Darlington. His name is called and he answers the roll at the Annual Conference session. This is a border Conference, and that means that alongside of practically every Southern Methodist Church there is a Northern Methodist Church. It seems to me that prejudices should be buried and that our two great churches would get together and wipe out such things in this enlightened age.

Permit me to mention just here that our next General Conference, when it deliberates on "Boundaries," would do well to deliberate about the Western Virginia Conference. There are six districts in this Conference, one of which is located in Kentucky. The Lewisburg District of the Baltimore Conference is located in West Virginia. The Bluefield District of the Holston Conference is located in West Virginia. Both these districts lie alongside the Western Virginia Conference, and if they were in this Conference it would make it one of our strong Conferences. With them separated from their respective Conferences the same Conferences would yet be among the largest in Southern Methodism.

If we had a West Virginia Conference we could cope aggressively with our educational problems. Whatever else may be said of the love we have for each other, it is hard to get a resident of one State very enthusiastic about the problems of another State. But since you and I are not called on to settle these problems, perhaps I have taken enough of your time. Personally I hope to wave the suggestion before the proper authorities and endeavor to get a hearing when the time comes.

With best wishes for you, and all the works and workers of the Louisiana Conference, I am,

Yours truly,

A. J. GEARHEARD.

A MILLION FOR CHRIST IN JAPAN.

Shall we win a million souls for Christ when the great revival of 1928 is launched in Japan? Already a movement for a nation-wide revival has been inaugurated, led by Mr. Kagawa, the great social and labor leader, and the slogan of his movement is, "A million souls for Christ." Methodist missionaries in Japan are hoping to co-operate with this great movement directed by Japan's church leaders, and are praying that during the year 1928 such a revival fire will be lighted in Japan as will sweep throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Crowds are flocking to hear Mr. Kagawa when he speaks, and already there are large numbers of probationers as a result of his meetings. His large audiences, it is thought, may be due in part to his national reputation as a labor leader, and partly due to the fact that he is a splendid evangelist.

The story of Kagawa Toyohiko, say the missionaries, is one of the most popular in Japan to-day. Mr. Kagawa has long been known as an outstanding Japanese writer. He was converted some years ago under the preaching of Dr. H. W. Myers, of the Southern Presbyterian Mission, and went into slum work. To-day he has three settlement houses in Japan's worst slum sections—one in Kobe, one in Osaka, and one in Tokyo. These settlements he is supporting himself from the royalties of his novels, which deal largely with Christian work in the slums. The royalties on his first book alone, which portrays his own experience, are said to have amounted to more than 150,000 yen ($75,000), all of which he has used in his social service work. Mr. Kagawa dresses as a common workman and leads a very simple life. He is now suffering from a disease of the eyes and is able to see but dimly, and even finds it difficult to get about, but this trouble is not able to quench his dauntless spirit. All Christian missionaries are hoping for great things in Japan under God's guidance from this great movement for one million souls inaugurated by one of the noblest of Japan's Christian leaders.

"Japan has long needed just such a touch as this," says the Rev. J. T. Meyers, in charge of the Ashiya-Toyonaka circuit. "May it lead to a revival of hope and vision and strong, courageous faith in the churches and a serious purpose to win souls. Pray that God will give the churches the full guidance of his Spirit until this nation shall be won for Christ. Pray that we may win a million souls for Christ!"—Board of Missions Bulletin.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

GOD WILL DO HIS PART.

Somestimes we run across people who seem to be afraid that God is not going to do all he can to save the world. They are constantly worried about what God is going to do, apparently fearing that he is going to lose heart and give up the fight.

We may be sure God will do all of his part. The thing to be really concerned about is whether or not we are doing our part. God has made us his fellow-workers. That means that the accomplishment of the task is partly dependent upon us. If we fail—the cause fails. But the responsibility will rest upon us for the failure and not upon God. It is very well to pray as if everything depends upon God; but if we forget that we must work as well as pray—and work as if everything depends upon us—we are expecting too much of God and demanding too little of ourselves. God will do his part—we may be sure of that; are we doing our part?

A GOOD SUNDAY SCHOOL TO-DAY MEANS A GREATER CHURCH TO-MORROW.

There may be some better way of building up the church, both in membership and efficiency, than by training the children and young people in the principles of the Christian religion and enlisting them in Christian service—but we do not know what it is. The hope of the future is in the young people, and the hope of the young people is in the Sunday school.

For this reason we do not believe too much emphasis can be placed upon the value of our teacher-training system, including both Cokesbury and standard training schools, as a means of developing efficiency in our Sunday school work. We are not sure that our pedagogical experts have worked out the final form of teaching or the ideal arrangement of lesson material; in fact, we are pretty sure they have not done so. We think they will ultimately go back to some of the things they have discarded—the catechism, for example; but they are working at the job and they are accomplishing results, and we rejoice in the magnificent record that is being made by our Sunday school department in raising the standard of teaching efficiency.

"Now is the time for every good pastor to come to the aid of his Sunday school workers."

ENERGY AND COURAGE.

Really great men in the Kingdom of God have many characteristics that set them apart from the ordinary mortal. There are two of these characteristics without which no man can rise above the level of mediocrity.

The first of these is energy. Those who are familiar with the record of the calling of the prophets in the Old Testament and of the disciples in the New Testament must have been struck by the fact that in several cases those called were busily engaged with their every-day tasks when the call came. They were working men. Just as in the world it is hard to find a place of honor for the lazy man, so we imagine God reserves his high places for those who both can and will work. Election is not an arbitrary selection of individuals or nations for a noble destiny; it is a choice based upon actual or potential powers that equip for a particular purpose. Therefore when work is to be done, God wants a man who can and will work.

A cowardly man can never lead a great cause, nor can he contribute much to the success of the cause as a follower in the ranks. The mark of the brave man is not a loud protestation of fearlessness; not a fierce declaration to "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they will;" not a flagrant disregard of the proprieties of life in driving roughshod toward a goal; rather, it is the quiet determination to do the task assigned no matter what the cost may be; the willingness to go ahead when others are ready to turn back; the spirit to dare when the odds all seem to be the wrong way. The man who can fight his heart out for a cause he believes to be right, no matter what others may do, and through it all keep his temper and maintain his poise, is a brave man. God can—and does—use such men for the promotion of his Kingdom.

Hard-working, brave men are the ones who are doing the world's work today; and they are the ones who will do it tomorrow.

INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETICS

So far as he knows, the editor has never been accused of being an opponent of intercollegiate athletics, properly conducted. He certainly cannot be accused of being opposed to football, for he is an ardent admirer of the game and attends as opportunity affords.

But he never has believed, does not believe now, and thinks he never will believe that football or any other form of intercollegiate athletics is the main thing in college life. The evils connected with these sports are not necessarily connected with them, and those that have arisen can be eliminated; but it is a self-evident fact that some evils exist.

We believe the basis of all these evils is the consuming desire to have a "winning team." There is no criticism of the desire to win—that is right; but it is manifestly wrong to want to win at any cost. The right kind of athletic management takes the material legally available, devotes a reasonable amount of time to its development and training, spends only as much money as is necessary for comfortable equipment, employs only coaches of high moral character at reasonable salaries, schedules only such games as can be played without spending too much time away from classes, promptly suppresses any form of rowdyism among the players, on the field or off, and never lets the coaches, the team, or the student body imagine for a moment that athletic prowess can take the place of academic proficiency.

What we have written above is more in protest against a tendency than a recital of conditions. "Too much football" is a danger rather than a fact. But it is a danger that must be guarded against.

Having thus expressed our sentiments on this Saturday afternoon, we will now go across the street for a look at the score board to see how the games scheduled for to-day are progressing.

THE UNKIND WORD.

We suppose more souls have been hurt by unkind words than ever were bodies scarred by swords and bullets in battle. The reason is that everybody does not go to war, but everybody does talk. There is this difference, too—swords and bullets are made to hurt, while words are made to bless. But it is so easy to say an unkind thing—and there are so many people about whom unkind things can be said—that we give way to the temptation, and hurt, when we ought either to keep silent, or speak a good word. The tongue is indeed an unruly member! Yet it is not untamable. Bits are put in a horse's mouth and the noble beast becomes a servant to his master. What a sweet world this would be if we all put checks on our tongues!

A SORRY PLIGHT.

The case of the theatrical producer of New York who was charged with "pulling" a wild party and afterward was convicted of perjury and sentenced to a term in the federal prison at Atlanta, attracted a great deal of attention at the time. The case has again been on the front pages of the papers because a parole has been granted and the convicted man is probably now back in New York preparing to resume his theatrical activities. Some of the conditions of his parole are that he shall not leave New York, he shall not drink intoxicating liquor, and he shall not be seen in questionable company. His is a sorry plight. He is out of prison, but he is not a free man. His former conduct was of such kind as to bring upon him the condemnation of the law; and while he has in part paid the penalty for his misdoings, he is still on probation. He seems to be properly penitent—we hope he is. The tragedy of it is that a man of undoubted ability should now bear the stigma of a prison term. But he has nobody to thank but himself for the predicament he is in. He probably realizes the truth of the statement, "The way of the transgressor is hard." The way of the transgressor is hard, and those who think they can make it easy are sadly mistaken. They may not suffer the judgment of men, but God will hold them to account.

WEEK OF PRAYER FOR THE CHURCHES.

Sunday, January 1, to Saturday, January 7, 1928.

To the Churches of Christ in America: The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America joins with the World's Evangelical Alliance of Great Britain in inviting all churches and followers of Christ to unite in a "Universal Week of Prayer" at the opening of the new year. The devotional program here presented will not only be circulated through all English speaking lands, but will be translated for use in over fifty countries. He whose right it is to rule desires us to be one in prayer "that the world may know." All things are possible when Christians agree and not before. Never was the need more urgent.

The supreme need of the hour is for a personal experience in the things of God. Until we ourselves have come into vital relationship with Him as Savior and Lord we cannot hope to carry forward any great and lasting movement for the betterment of the world. To know him, whom to know aright is life eternal, must be the basis of all our endeavor. The church cannot hope to successfully combat the spirit of lawlessness and of international suspicion until there is peace within her own borders. She must set the example for peace on earth and goodwill among men. We would remember with unspeakable gratitude that the Lord who orders the ages (Heb.i. 2.) is on the throne. All authority in heaven and on earth is in his hands. He is aware of all the present portents. Through the changing years he himself remains unchanged; and he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think in meeting the needs of his people and the heart-hunger of all mankind. "Jesus Christ is the same . . . . to-day," (Heb. xiii. 8). As we gather in his name let us remember, concerning prayer, three outstanding facts for our encouragement: I. It is God's will; II. Christ has set us the example; III. Christ promises his presence.

During the Week of Prayer, from Sunday, January 1, to Saturday, January 7, let us all unite with our brethren in many lands to demonstrate afresh the release of God's power as we pray with one accord in the name and spirit of Jesus Christ our Lord.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,
WILLIAM HORACE DAY, Chairman.

REV. C. M. MARTIN.

Charles Monroe Martin was born near Tuskegee, Alabama, December 10, 1855, the son of Pinkney and Susie Noble Martin. He was reared on his father's farm in a family of eight children. Thus he was brought up in the open, and he developed into a strong, vigorous manhood, and coming in contact with nature he learned the secrets of her sunshine, her rain, and her soil, and came to be a successful tiller of the ground, which pursuit he followed. These secrets he never forgot and was one of the most successful vegetable growers among his brethren, and took great delight in it. The neighbors did not have to supply his parsonage home, but he had abundance to divide with them, and was always willing and glad to do so.

In his boyhood day educational facilities were limited, and about the time he was old enough to be in school, at the age of six, the Civil War broke out, destroying homes, wrecking business, devastating farms, closing schools, slaying the people, leaving in its wake poverty, wreck and ruin, and young Charles was deprived, like many others, of a college education, but had private tutors and attended high school. But he felt the call to preach, and did not confer with flesh and blood. The date of his license is not known, but there are records to show that he was licensed to exhort on October 30, 1875, at the age of 20, on the Tuskegee circuit, and the license is endorsed as renewed in 1877 and 1878.

He was licensed to preach not many years after he became an exhorter, and he was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference, it is believed, about the year 1883. He was ordained deacon by Bishop John C. Keener at Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 19, 1886; and in 1889, at Greenville, Ala., he was ordained elder by Bishop W. W. Duncan. How long he remained in the itinerant service in that Conference is not known, but for a period he sustained the relation of a local preacher.

Brother Martin was married to Miss Lucy Pope, in Alabama, April 12, 1885, soon after he joined the Conference. After her death he remained a widower for several years. He moved to Mississippi, and was re-admitted into the Mississippi Conference at the session held at Meridian, December 9-14, 1903. He was married to Miss Mabelle Beesley, June 20, 1906, at Wesson, Miss. She lives to mourn his departure. From this Conference he was sent to Middleton circuit, and in addition to that served the following charges: Bayou Pierre, Wilkinson, Vancleave, Escatawpa, Walnut Grove, and Porterville. His name no longer appears on the effective list after 1912, but he was superannuated at the Conference at Hazlehurst, Dec. 11-16, 1912, Bishop H. C. Morrison presiding, and remained in that relation till the day of his death.

In his work Brother Martin was earnest, faithful, and devoted. He was a good pastor and diligent in visiting his people and in rendering pastoral help to the suffering and needy, at times supplying their needs out of his own resources, and was unassuming in all his ministrations. Sympathetic in his nature, he would gladly respond to the calls and demands of duty. He was cautious, careful, discreet, and very reserved in his remarks about his brethren of the ministry and the people whom he served. An unguarded word seldom, if ever, fell from his lips, and I am sure he had no need to apologize for anything he had ever said about his fellow-man. This is certainly the impression made upon the writer of these lines during a number of years of association with him. He was selected to fill certain appointments in the Conference because of these qualities, and he measured up to the expectations as well as any one could. He was good-natured, humorous, and greatly enjoyed a hearty laugh.

It was the privilege and the pleasure of the writer to be his presiding elder for two years, and to be in his home frequently. Here one always found a hearty welcome, to enjoy the genial companionship of him and his wife, and to receive their delightful hospitality, and to partake of their delicious festal board.

His wife, who survives him, was a helpmeet indeed. She entered into all his sympathies, shared all his sufferings and hardships, and gladly joined hands with him in every good word and work. It was her delight ever to be present at his services, and to render at all times every assistance possible. In the latter years of his life he suffered much physical pain, and the prayers, ministrations, loving deeds, and gentle touches of her hand were very consoling to him, and if "Mabelle" could be present, all was well. Her kindness to him is to be emulated. About three years before his death his eyes failed him, and were closed to the scenes of this world; and about one year before he left his earthly home, one of them had to be removed because of disease and pain. In it all he was heroic, and bore his suffering with patient endurance and Christian fortitude. He enjoyed the presence of his friends, and highly appreciated any courtesy at their hands. He felt sure the Lord was leading in it all, and was willing to lay his hand in the Father's hand and follow wheresoever he led.

This soldier of the cross loved the church and gave to her the full measure of his devotion, we may be sure. He could heartily sing:

"For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and toils be given;
Till toils and cares shall end."

He was glad when they said unto him, "Let us go into the house of the Lord," and constantly, when able, attended her services. He assisted the pastor, Rev. J. L. Sells, in laying the first brick in the new East End Church, Meridian; and he expressed a desire to assist in laying the first brick in the Fifth Street Church, yet to be erected. Meridian was his home and East End Church his place of worship. He attended Sunday school on the last day of his earthly existence. He saved his tithe for the church, the last of which was paid into her treasury after his demise. Thus his account with God was settled in full.

Surviving him are three brothers: J. W. Martin, Portsmouth, Ohio; W. G. Martin, Brewton, Ala.; W. P. Martin, Meridian, Miss. Three sisters and one brother preceded him to the grave.

He was not aware that the end was so near. He conducted family worship before the church services of the evening of his death, which his wife attended; the prayer was unusually fervent and touching, and seemed to reach the throne on high. He retired; and after receiving a report of the evening service, which was conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. Robert Selby, and after conversing pleasantly for a bit, he lay down to rest and to sleep; but in a few minutes his sightless eyes were closed to open on the beautiful scenes of heaven. He passed away Sunday night, July 31, 1927, at 10:15 o'clock.

The funeral rites were held in the East End Church, Tuesday, August 2, and were largely attended; and the profusion of flowers showed the high esteem in which he was held. The services were in charge of the pastor, A. M. Broadfoot, assisted by Robert Selby, A. F. Watkins, Rolfe Hunt, W. B. Alsworth, J. H. Jolly, and W. B. Jones. Special music was rendered by the choir of the East End Church, assisted by a special friend, Mrs. C. W. Cochran, of Central Church. His remains were tenderly laid to rest in the Magnolia cemetery, Meridian, Miss., there to await the resurrection morning.

THE LETTER VS. THE SPIRIT.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

Jesus said, "The letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive." Paul said, "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

One's creed is the letter. One's life demonstrates by what spirit one is dominated.

One's creed may be righteous, pure, holy and orthodox, while one's life is dominated by the spirit of bitterness, harshness, self-will and bigotry.

One's life may be pure, holy, brotherly and Christlike, while one's creed may be estimated by the ultra-fundamentalist as unorthodox.

If Jesus knew what he was talking about, and if Paul spoke by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the man who demonstrates in his life the spirit of Christ is more nearly God's ideal of what God is trying to build into the human life than is the man with the perfect creed who is dominated by the spirit of bitterness, harshness, self-will and bigotry.

The Christ-spirited man does not spend his energies hunting down and executing heretics, but rather spends his time seeking to build the kingdom of God in the hearts and lives of men, while he prays for those who have gone astray. Saul of Tarsus lived by the letter of the law; Paul, the apostle, lived by the power of the spirit of Christ.

Creeds are the fruit of one's mental cogitations. The Christian life working in a human spirit is the fruit of the divine life as it dominates the soul. Only a Christian man who is dominated by the Christly spirit can really subscribe to the Christian creed. A Pharisee can and often does make a mental assent to the Christian creed as a body of doctrine to be mentally assented unto, but said Pharisee does not really subscribe to the Christian creed because of the spirit of the Pharisee by which he is dominated. He is dominated by the spirit of harshness, bitterness, self will and bigotry, while he makes a mental assent unto the Christian creed. If a brother fails to say Shibboleth with just the accent, intonation of voice, et cetera, that the Pharisee prescribes, then the Pharisee, in his self will and bigoted spirit, chops off the head of his brother, and says he did the deed by the will of God. And he did. But it was by the will of his God, which happened to be his own will.

Try the spirit to see whether or not it be of Christ.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE LAY LEADER WRITES OF CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS.

Dear Dr. Carley: In spite of the flood, I am sure that we Methodists in Louisiana have so much to be grateful for that we ought, as the least return, to pay the benevolences, which we commonly refer to as the Conference collections, in full. There are, of course, some places in the flooded areas where it may be rather hard to do, but if the rest of the Conference will make a thank offering in addition to the assessments laid upon them, it ought to be possible to pay in full. The very fact that the flood has injured many places makes it all the more necessary that the benevolent claims be paid in full. Our Board is using its best endeavors, and I am handing you herewith part of the report of the Committee on Benevolences of our Board made at the annual meeting at Lake Junaluska, and will appreciate it if you can find space to publish it.

Fraternally yours,

T. W. HOLLOMAN,
Conference Lay Leader.

Report of Committee on Benevolences.

Your committee is of the opinion that the fundamental question now before the church is whether or not the benevolences can be paid in full. These benevolences or Conference collections constitute the primary obligation of the church, and without them the church cannot exist. For many years our people have lacked in information on this subject, and we believe that such lack has been the primary reason why there has been a constant decline in the percentage of payment of these claims. There has been some awakening on this subject, and this awakening has resulted in the legislation of the last few years.

Prior to 1922 the responsibility for the benevolences, or Conference collections, was placed by the law of the church on the pastor in charge, and the legislation of 1922 seemed to shift the responsibility from the preacher in charge to the lay organization. The General Conference of 1926 placed the responsibility where in our opinion it properly belongs; that is to say, it relieved nobody from responsibility, but placed the responsibility on bishops, presiding elders, preachers in charge, lay leaders, and individual members of the church. This General Board of Lay Activities is not disposed to avoid any of its responsibility, but accepts full but not exclusive responsibility for the Conference collections or benevolences. We believe that our people are fully able to pay 100 per cent, and we will not be satisfied with anything less than 100 per cent. Our people have grown richer, but the last General Conference made no increase in the amount of these assessments. Insistence was properly placed on payments in full. History has shown that no people nor any nation is in more danger from adversity or poverty, but there is much danger in an accumulation of wealth which is not devoted to the proper ends. We believe that our people can pay this Conference year 100 per cent of our Conference collections in the several months remaining before the session of the Annual Conference, and we urge that these months be used in an intensive effort to bring these claims up to 100 per cent payment.

In future years we believe that an Every-Member Canvass should be conducted in every charge immediately following the Annual Conference, and that the aim should be to collect 50 per cent of the benevolences by the time the district conference is held, and the second 50 per cent before the meeting of the next Annual Conference. We urge that full payments be made monthly if it is possible to do so.

Wherever the budget system is used we insist that the benevolences be paid from the monthly budget with the payments paid for ministerial support and all other causes included in the budget.

We heartily recommend the use of lay speakers, and we believe that where a church feels that it cannot afford to buy literature the lay speakers will be effective in accomplishing much toward the full information of the people.

THE PERAMBULATOR PERAMBULATES.

The Grand Canyon—Fearful, Stupendous, Majestic.

By Van Carter.

When journeying to the Grand Canyon, the railroad gives to you so many folders descriptive of its many wonders that you try to think out what you will see first and which trip you will take the one day you are there. On arrival, though you are so struck with the uniqueness of the railroad station, which is built of logs and is very picturesque, that you find yourself gazing at it in wonder, when your thoughts are broken in upon by the cry of the hotel bus man for your grip and yourself. The more elite of the crowd take the bus, though its free, while the majority of the "common herd" begin ascending the three flights of steps which land at the south side of the El Tovar Hotel, less than 100 yards from the depot. As you arrive at the top landing you get your first glimpse of the Canyon, for there bursts suddenly upon your horizon the rim of the north wall, and you behold the most beautifully colored rocks you have ever seen. In your eagerness to see more—to look down into what seems like a tremendous gash in the earth—you press forward with the crowd, passing by the hotel and forgetting all about breakfast, and move forward to the rim some sixty yards ahead. As you approach, your eyes doubt themselves and your mind is thoroughly aghast at what your eyes behold! Before you lies a vast gash in the earth's surface—a tremendous chasm—thirteen miles wide and a mile deep. In this stupendous gash as far as the eye can see are mountains and mountains and mountains of all sizes and all shapes and colorings of the most gorgeous display. There is only one thing to do—and every one does it—stand and silently gaze upon this most awe-inspiring sight.

Looking down into the Canyon you see, as it were, a great pasture, and to one side a cluster of trees, and you exclaime, "There's the bottom, but where's the river?" Then some one who knows says: "That's not the bottom, that's only half-way down and what you see is Rest Cottage—the half-way house of Bright Angel Trail. See that tiny path leading to the end of the plateau down there? It looks like the jumping-off place, but such is not the case, for at that point the trail again begins to descend and continues for three miles down the mountain side before it leads you to the Colorado River."

You continue to stand, looking and thinking; and then the Canyon's vastness seems to steal over you, and before going further you feel as though you want to take time to adjust yourself to the majesty, the tremendous bigness and the glorious colorings that have so suddenly been thrust upon you.Then it is that you come to earth and wend your way to the hotel for breakfast.

Breakfast over, you have the difficulty of choosing how you will spend the day; and it's no easy task, for the trips are so many and the scenes are so different. You may choose an auto ride along the rim towards the west to Hermit's Rest, and the scenes from the various points where stops are made, will each present to you different and wonderful views of the canyon. At several of these places you will see the Colorado River wending its way between canyon walls thousands of feet high and apparently but a stone's throw from bank to bank. One may auto east and visit Grandieur Point, Yavapai Point, Yaki Point, and have views just as glorious and just as different. You may prefer a trip to the river, and if so, Bright Angel Trail and Yaki Trail are open to you with a burro and guide. Such a trip you will remember always, and all the remembrance will not be due to the seven miles of beautiful scenery, for the burro will leave impressions that will ever afterwards be a reminder to you of the one day you spent at the canyon. The memory of my first visit in 1911 taken in this manner lingers with me still. For those who desire to spend a week at the canyon, camping trips with pack and saddle are at their service with experienced and pleasant guides.

This being my second trip to the canyon, I chose to go afoot, for I wanted to be free to see what I wanted to see, where I wanted to see it. After breakfast I again approached the rim in front of the El Tovar Hotel and drank in once more the majestic stupendousness of the canyon, and looked through the telescope at the mountains rising out of the canyon, that, because of their architectural formations, are known as Confucius Temple, Cheops Pyramid, the Battleship, Buddha Temple, Zoroaster Temple, etc.

Deciding to go east, I took the rim footpath, stopping every few minutes to feast my eyes upon the hundreds of scenic wonders that greet the eye and enthrall the soul upon every hand—mountains, mountains, mountains within the canyon, carved by erosion into all kinds of shapes, and each one giving forth such color shadings that a panorama of rainbows is continually before you. Then there come slowly to you the realization of the utter quietness of the canyon—the peace that passeth understanding as it were—you know that you are in the most quiet place in all the earth, and some way, somehow, God is with you.

In the afternoon we took the footpath west and found the views just as wonderful and entrancing. Sunset found us at Hopi Point, and such colorings and shadings as the sun and its shadow cast one cannot conceive. Such beauty one must see for himself, and having seen it, it is beyond the power of man to picture to those who have not seen.

Do not get the idea that the canyon is only towering mountains and vast canyons. These are outstanding, but there are such lovely places as Hermit Cabin, situated on the inner plateau on Hermit Creek, which is 3,700 feet below the rim of Grand Canyon and yet 2,300 feet above sea level, where one may make his headquarters and explore the canyon at will. There is Phantom Ranch across the Colorado River on Bright Angel Creek, a paradise of streams, birds, trees and flowers. Then there is beautiful Ribbon Falls in Bright Angel Canyon, where the water, falling in sparkling brilliancy upon a natural rock altar, paints up the blackboard of your mind, an ever-to-be-remembered scene of beauty.

The Grand Canyon is the most indescribable thing I know of. It is not a part of any mountain range, and yet there are in it mountains by the hundreds. It is a vast arid plateau of 100,000 square miles with a crack 7,000 feet deep and ten to thirteen miles wide, filled with hundreds of mountains taller than any mountain east of the Rockies; and so big is it that if you would place Niagara Falls in it over night and return the next day, you would require a telescope and a guide to locate it for you; you could place several mountains in the canyon, and unless your attention was called particularly to them you would not know anything had been added, so stupendous is this mighty gash in the earth's surface we call the Grand Canyon. To realize its magnitude and majesty, its grandeur and glory, its fearfulness and flashfulness, one must see it. It is truly fearful, stupendous, majestic.

To see the Grand Canyon and its many stupendous wonders should be the privilege of every American; so we are including it in our itinerary to the World's Sunday School Convention which meets in Los Angeles next July, that our own Louisiana workers may experience the real thrill that a day spent there brings to them in the realization that "this is my Father's world; I rest me in the thought of rocks and trees, of skies and seas. His hand the wonders wrought."

THE MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

At the call of the chairman of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the committee met on Thursday, Oct. 13, in the office, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Every member from the three Conferences was present. Three new faces appeared with the committee—Brother L. M. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference; Brother J. Early Gray, of the Mississippi Conference, and Dr. R. H. Harper, of the Louisiana Conference.

The reports of the Business Manager, Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, and of the editor, Rev. H. T. Carley, D.D., revealed the condition of the paper.

Financially, conditions were much above the low level of two years ago, and the subscriptions two thousand and five hundred above that level. The committee realizes that this condition is far from what it should be—not more than one-half the number we should have as a minimum.

If the paper is to be an educative agency and the medium of information, the people must take and read the paper. People will not take interest in something they do not know about. A committee was appointed to draft a plan and policy for the next year.

The following report was made and adopted as our plan next year:

"First, that the price of the paper remain at two dollars per year.

"Further, being the property of the three patronizing Conferences, and the editor and publisher being our servants, we owe it to ourselves and our people to give the paper our unqualified support.

"We suggest that a graduated price to clubs be worked out on such basis as seems practical, by the Chairman of the Publishing Committee, the Editor and Publisher, the same being the action of the whole committee.

"Second—We recommend that the matter of the employment of a circulation manager be left to the judgment of the Chairman of the Publishing Committee, the Editor and the Publisher."

Signed by J. H. Felts, W. W. Drake, J. E. Gray.

One from each Conference was appointed to bring before the approaching sessions of the Conferences the matter of the circulation of the Advocate, requesting the Conferences to set some opportune time and give the Advocate cause right of way.

Our success of two years ago reveals the fact that if we all pull together and for the right thing, we can do this work.

Dr. R. H. Harper will put the matter before the Louisiana Conference, Brother J. T. Leggett will act for the Mississippi Conference, and Brother L. M. Lipscomb will present the matter to the North Mississippi Conference.

The same arrangements with the publisher and editor continue as last year.

Dr. Harper, J. T. Leggett and L. M. Lipscomb constitute the executive committee.

A resolution of appreciation of the faithful services of the Publisher and the Editor was passed, and a pledge of our loyal support and co-operation for the coming year.

We missed three familiar faces, who have appeared from year to year for several years—Rev. John Foster, D.D., of the Louisiana Conference; Rev. C. C. Miller, of the same Conference, and Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference. These brethren have rendered efficient service and made for themselves a warm place in the hearts of the brethren.

The charter of the building in which the Advocate is published requiring that the chairman be a resident of the city of New Orleans, Rev. R. H. Harper, D.D., was elected chairman of the commitee, and W. H. Saunders was re-elected Secretary.

W. H. SAUNDERS, Secretary.

WHY PROMOTE THE CHURCH PAPER?

(A Prize Winning Article in Zion's Herald.)

By J. W. Eller.

The church paper should be promoted because it is official. It speaks with authority concerning matters pertaining to the church organization which it represents, and uses theological phraseology characteristic of that church. The laity should be informed on matters pertaining to their own church at home and abroad. This they cannot be when the church paper is omitted from their reading. All the general news from the other churches will be inserted in their own paper. Before they spend their time reading independent and foreign journals, they should learn to know their own church first.

It should be promoted because it sharpens the edge of every reader to keener thinking. We cannot have an efficient church without a thinking membership. They will not think as they should unless they read discussions on every phase of all questions.

It carries with its spiritual emphasis a second to the inspiration of the pulpit, prayer meeting, the personal touch of the minister, and the reader's own personal devotion.

It rides the waves of a stormy sea of modern religious unrest, bringing back gold, silver, and precious gems from foreign and nearby ports of thought, where the reader either has not time to go or fears to make the venture.

It clarifies the smoky, foggy, murky air of disease germs of doubt, discouragement, and depression, so that the sunlight of truth and righteousness may shine through.

It, by its news sketches, stirs up a righteous pride in the hearts of its readers, or, always telling the truth, flushes the reader's face with shame at actual failure.

It goes oftener than I can go; it speaks when and where I must keep silent; it preaches my imperfect expressions over more perfectly; it becomes my silent assistant to complete victory in going over the top for moneys, for loyalty and efficiency in church programs, and the winning of souls.—Zion's Herald.

READING THE BIBLE THROUGH.

By Allen F. Godat.

I sometimes wonder what some Christians, including some Methodists, think the Bible is for. My wonderment would probably shock them, but judging from their use of it, or rather their non-use of it, my wonderment is probably justified. I call to mind a militant fundamentalist who prides himself on " believing the Bible from cover to cover," who admitted to me that he had never read it through. Sublime faith in the unknown! Many preachers use it very little in the public services, and Sunday school teachers prepare their lessons from magazines, quarterlies and leaflets, and teach their classes from the same. Leaders of Missionary Societies, Epworth Leagues and other organizations study the Scripture lessons for their members, and all the rank and file get is what their leaders can impart in short devotional talks. The result is spiritual poverty, and an ignorance that causes many to be led astray by fluent writers and talkers whose knowledge of the Scriptures, though limited and superficial, is greater than theirs.

There is only one way to know the Bible, and that is to read it through from one end to the other, and then to reread it again and again, and thereby become familiar with its contents from Genesis to Revelation. Scrappy reading of specially selected passages, however well chosen, will not suffice. Special passages must be the basis of intensive individual or group study, but they can only be fully appreciated in their full significance when taken in connection with all that has gone before and that comes after. The truest and safest teachers of the Bible are those who know it in its entirety, and those who know it thus are the ones who most fully appreciate the preaching and teaching of others, and are best able to detect erroneous or inadequate presentations of religious truth.

I had been a Sunday school teacher and religious worker a long time before I read the Bible through. I had studied the required passages, home readings, etc., and had gotten much from them, but I found the Bible a far more interesting book when, in addition to such preparation I had to make, I read it from the first chapter to the last. The result amply repaid the effort.

To one who for the first time thinks of reading the Bible through, and then looks at a Bible, the task seems very formidable. Many suggestions have been made for dividing it up. Dr. Campbell Morgan says it can be accomplished in sixty days by reading an hour a day. He says that a friend ridiculed the statement, but on being challenged to test it, did it in forty hours. Another suggestion is to read three chapters on week days and five on Sundays. Both of these are rather heavy allotments for the average Christian. Shorter portions and a longer period had better be chosen. There are 929 chapters in the Old Testament and 260 in the New Testament, or 1,189 in all, and at the rate of one chapter a day would require over three years. That is too long a time. A better plan would be to read one chapter a day in the New Testament and one in the Old. It would thus require a little less than nine months to read the New Testament through, and somewhat over three times as long to read the Old Testament. After finishing the New Testament it could be reread twice while the Old Testament was being completed. Without making invidious comparisons between the two, most Christians would feel that that is about right. It would be well to read each chapter twice, re-reading yesterday's chapter to-day, and then reading to-day's. The time required may seem long, but most of us think we are going to live a long time, and those who believe they are going to die soon should read larger portions.

Those who have not tried it can have no idea of the blessing that will come to them in the enrichment of their religious lives, nor how much easier it will make the study of the lessons they are called upon to teach in Sunday school or elsewhere. And what a joy it is to meet in their own setting, passages and texts we have long known and loved only as passages and texts! To the controversially minded it will give a sense of sureness because otherwise they will always have an uncomfortable sense of fear that an antagonist may cite some passage of which they are ignorant. And then again, we will know the Bible as it is, and not as we think it is, or ought to be. I have little fear of the stability of any Christian who knows the whole Bible as it is. Such a one will believe it, not merely think he believes it.

But there are difficulties. It must be frankly admitted that not all passages of the Bible are equally interesting, or that all are equally spiritually nutritive. The genealogical tables in Chronicles are not very thrilling, nor can I see that they are of much value to us now. There are passages in the prophets that are hard to understand, and when first read one is likely to wonder what they are all about. But, perservere. Go on. In the midst of the least interesting passages one will suddenly discover some gem. The second "great commandment," "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," is imbedded in a long list of sundry admonitions to the Israelites, and when Jesus and the scribe saw it for the first time, they were reading through a chapter which has little appeal to many of us. And so with many another beautiful gem, or precious promise. We have all sung: "As thy days may demand, shall thy strength ever be," but how many have read the original promise in the thirty-third chapter of Deuteronomy: "And as thy days, so shall thy strength be?" The beautiful last chapter of Malachi will be reached sooner or later, and so will be the still more beautiful twenty-second chapter of Revelation, and then there will be a song of exultation in the heart, not only because a worthy task has been finished, but because of the rich harvest of spiritual truth that has been garnered.

It is not intended that such reading shall take the place of the regular Sunday school or League lessons, or of other Bible study. It should be both supplementary and paramount to them. It would make those lessons clearer, bringing to their understanding a wealth of Scriptural knowledge that would not otherwise be had. And when suddenly called upon to teach a Sunday school class or lead a devotional meeting one would never be wholly unprepared. To young Christians this plan is specially commended. Its adoption will mean much in the present, and as the years pass, mind and heart will be more and more richly stored with the most precious portions of God's word, and there will always be ample resources with which to meet the trials and temptations of life.

In closing, we cannot do better than quote the following lines by Amos R. Wells:

"I supposed I knew my Bible,
Reading peacemeal, hit or miss,
Now a bit of John or Matthew,
Now a snatch of Genesis,
Certain chapters of Isaiah,
Certain Psalms (the twenty-third!)
Twelfth of Romans, First of Proverbs—
Yes, I thought I knew the Word!
But I found that thorough reading
Was a different thing to do,
And the way was unfamiliar
When I read the Bible through.

"You who like to play at Bible,
Dip and dabble, here and there,
Just before you kneel, aweary,
And yawn through a hurried prayer,
You who treat the Crown of Writings
As you treat no other book—
Just a paragraph disjointed,
Just a crude, impatient look—
Try a worthier procedure,
Try a broad and steady view;
You will kneel in very rapture
When you read the Bible through!"

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Please let us again call your attention to the importance of handing in your reports early in the session of the Conference—not later than the morning of the second day; also the importance of making out reports correcly; adding up all figures; putting your name, district and charge at the top of report, also on back of envelope containing report and checks.

Write separate check for each claim, stating on check what it is for.

Complying with these requests will save time and confusion, not only for the auditing committee, but for the statistical secretaries and those who make up the minutes of the Conference.

Hand reports to W. T. Griffin, W. H. Lane or the writer.

Fraternally,
T. B. COTTRELL, for the Committee.

A SUNDAY REST DAY FOR WASHINGTON.

Before the sixty-ninth Congress adjourned, Congressman Lankford, of Georgia, gave notice on the floor of the House that he would re-introduce his bill for a Sunday Rest Day Law for the District of Columbia, as soon as the seventieth Congress convenes.

With this in mind, the various organizations interested in the preservation of the civil Sabbath, met in conference in Pittsburgh, in June, and formed a United Council looking toward a more perfect co-operation in this work in the future.

The societies represented at this gathering were the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, the Lord's Day Alliance of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, and the Pittsburgh District, the National Reform Association, the International Reform Bureau, the Board of Temperance and Moral Welfare of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., the American Sunday School Union, the Washington, D. C., Bible School Association, the National W. C. T. U., the Reformed and United Presbyterian churches. Other organizations interested are invited to enter this Council whenever they so desire.

The Rev. David G. Wylie, D.D., of New York, president of the National Lord's Day Alliance, was chosen president of the United Council, and Mrs. H. Moffatt Bradley, of the Washington, D. C., Bible School Association, Washington, D. C., was chosen secretary.

A second meeting of this United Council was held in Philadelphia, Pa., on Oct. 7, 1927. These societies have agreed to stand squarely for a bill which forbids all unnecessary business and labor on the Lord's Day; all commercialized amusements and entertainments, whatever unnecessarily disturbs the peace of the Lord's Day.

All organizations of every sort that are interested in the preservation of the American Civil Sabbath and improving the moral conditions of the nation's capital are urged to co-operate.

THE PRAYER LEAGUE OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Since Brother T. H. Lipscomb has announced that the writer has been chosen to act as chairman for the Prayer League at our coming Conference, and that further announcement would be made by him, he submits the following suggestions to all who are interested:

1. If you have a copy of E. M. Bounds' "Preacher and Prayer," please take time to reread it during the next few days. We hope to have a supply of this book at the Conference from the Publishing House, and those who have not the book and are interested may get a copy upon arrival for 85 cents. It is undoubtedly the most heart-searching book on prayer outside the Bible a preacher can read.

2. Plan to spend a few minutes each day before leaving your room, preferably the first few moments upon rising from bed, in private devotion. We suggest that all select Phil. 2:1-11 for devotional reading on Wednesday morning. A Scripture lesson will be suggested each day for thought and meditation in your private devotions.

3. Come with one consuming desire and passion—to exalt the Christ, to honor the Holy Spirit, and to receive a visitation of power from him. Remember at all times that "we be brethren," and may we all seek the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace.

Your brother in Christ,

H. P. LEWIS.

"WE HAVE WITH US TO DAY—"

Some years ago when Bishop (then Doctor) E. E. Hoss was editing the Christian Advocate, Nashville—and Methodism never had a greater editor; as for that matter we can take in a great deal of territory, all the territory there is, and say that Christendom never had a greater editor—he preached for a colored congregation out in the "sticks" near Nashville.

It happened in this wise:

Doctor Hoss had been out preaching at one of our country churches in the morning, and after a good dinner was driving home in his buggy with a preacher friend. It was in the summertime, and as they were within a few miles from home they noted a Negro church on the side of the road surrounded by a circle of oaks, and a crowd of ebony-hued worshippers entering the building. It was afternoon preaching time. The Doctor had always a warm spot in his heart for his brother in black, and he liked to hear him preach; so he suggested that they slip in quietly and take a seat at the back. They began the service by singing some camp-meeting songs—they now call them "spirituals," taking away about fifty per cent of the flavor, and reminding us of a Colorado-madura tinted coloratura soprano, in decided decollete, and highly rouged, red on black, singing the "Jewel Song" of that decided blonde and Teutonic Marguerite, whose two huge braids of yellow hair hang down in front as a distinguishing feature.

Pretty soon the vibrations became contagious, and they began to "put the rousements" into the meeting. However, just as the service was getting real interesting a most highly organized brother-in-black marched up the aisle from the rear of the church, looking as important as a long-delayed bride at a wedding. He wore gold glasses, a mark of distinction in that day among the colored brethren, and in spite of the heat had on a long, Jim-Swinger broadcloth coat, white vest, white lawn tie, and carried a huge Bible under his arm. All he needed was a pair of spats and a cane to complete the glory of this sartorial tout ensemble. Solomon had nothing to wear compared to him. He was a preacher—no mistake about that—and an especially important preacher; no mere ordinary circuit-rider or station preacher could put that much "dog" into that march up the aisle, which was more than a march—it was a triumphal procession. There was only one explanation, and it proved to be the correct one: he was a presiding elder, and what was worse and added to the agony, a newly-appointed one. And where can you find more importance bound up in the human cosmos? The presiding elder marched up to the platform and took his seat. There was quite a flurry in the congregation. Presently this super-important personage got up to make an announcement, and he spied the two white brethren on the back seat. Now there is one thing that a Negro preacher hates to do, and that is to preach before the white folks. He viewed the landscape o'er, and concluded that the white brethren on the back seat were preachers, and he did not intend to get up and try to preach to them; so he whispered a few words to the preacher, who went down and accosted Doctor Hoss in this wise: "Youse a preacher, aint you?" "Yes," said Doctor Hoss. "Well, come on up and preach for us. We'd be powerful delighted to hear you." So the Doctor consented.

The time for the sermon arrived, and the presiding elder was to do the introducing. He turned to the Doctor and said, "What's your name, Doctor?" "Hoss," said the Doctor. He blinked; he was hardly able to credit his ears, but he determined to do the thing up right, and so he began to give as ornate an introduction as only a Negro preacher can. "Brethren and sisters, we has with us to-day one of the most distinguished men in the country. He is a preacher of note, and you will be translated by his eloquence. We certainly are favored to have with us one whose name is a household word on the lips of all God's people, both white and black. I now takes great pleasure in introducing Doctor—" here the speaker turned down to Doctor Hoss and whispered, "What did you say your name was?" "Hoss," said the Doctor, smiling.

So the elder took a new hold, and started out again: "As I was saying, brethren and sisters, we are certainly highly favored to have with us to-day one of the greatest preachers in the country; a man who can dispense the Gospel with rare eloquence; who can give us the law like a Son of Thunder, and the Gospel like a cooin' dove. When the sermon is concluded his name will be as well known in Mt. Zion Church as it is to all the great Christian leaders to-day. I now take great pleasure, as I said before, in introducing—" here the speaker again turned and whispered, "I jest didn't get that name the last time, Doctor. What did you say your name was?" "Hoss," said the great editor with a smile. "H-O-S-S," and he spelled it out.

The colored brother, like all his race, had a great deal of canniness. He loves a joke, but does not like to be the subject of it, and he smiled broadly as he thought how he would keep his white brother from playing "hoss" with him, for he thought it incredible that any one should have a name like the one his ears had just heard; so he smiled good naturedly and said, "Brethren and sisters, I takes great pleasure in introducing Doctor (spelling it out) H-O-S-S, and we will now all take a ride."—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

THE RED CROSS AND THE CHURCHES.

By Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

The eleventh annual roll call of the American Red Cross, Nov. 11-24, assumes exceptional interest this year because of the extraordinary burden placed upon the Red Cross by the Mississippi flood. It met the emergency so splendidly as to deserve the gratitude of the nation. Its continuing responsibility for dealing with the after-effects of the flood gives it a special claim upon our generous support at this time.

Not since the great war has there been such a demonstration of the value of the Red Cross, and its capacity to handle the greatest disasters, as during the year that is closing.

I believe the American Red Cross merits and has the confidence and unqualified support of the churches of the land. As President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, I express the hope that all the members of all our churches will participate in the inspiring work of the Red Cross by enrolling as members. Surely every citizen who has caught the spirit of religion will desire to contribute a dollar to this great humanitarian service and with the gift breathe a prayer to Almighty God that the people of this nation may be lifted to higher planes of living through sharing with those who suffer in great disasters.

PITY THE POOR CORNETIST.

One great disadvantage of present-day drives and movements in the church is that they tend to transform the quickening experience of worship into a Cook's tour over a long itinerary of special days, which follow each other with the monotony of a railroad time-table.

The congregation becomes somewhat like the occupant of a sight-seeing car in which all the details of various organizations are pointed out through a megaphone, announcing alternately, "On your right you see the Foreign Missionary Society which has 109,174 members, and furnished 214,999 meals last year in twenty-thre different languages."

Followed next Sunday by, "On your left you see the Tract and Publication Society, which produced last year 84,911,688 pages of printed literature."

It is reported (on poor authority) that the Sanhedrin of one promotion agency was once humiliated to discover that the month of March, instead of having four Sundays, as any respectable month should have, had five, and the fifth Sunday was left entirely unprovided for! Consternation reigned, for there was no telling what might happen if the congregation had a whole Sunday at leisure to worship God!

A composer once wrote a piece containing a long part for the cornet player. The piece was first rate in every respect except that it could not possibly be played, because the composer did not leave any place for the cornet player to take a breath. Frequently a local congregation is trying to sound out the cornet player's notes without having a chance to stop to fill his lungs with a breath of inspiration.—H. E. Luccock, in "Skylines."

SALVATION PLUS A LIFE.

I remember a statement which I heard the late Dr. W. B. Hinson, of Portland, Ore., make regarding a unique baptismal service which he conducted while pastor of the First Baptist Church of Vancouver, British Columbia. He told us that as he baptized a man over 80 years old he said, "I solemnly baptize you in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;" but that when he came to a boy in his teens, he said, "I joyfully baptize you in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

When we asked him the significance of the change of formula, he answered, "The old man had become a Christian minus a life, while the boy had become a Christian plus a life."—Walter S. Ryder.

POLLY'S TREAT.

By Emma Gary Wallace.

It seemed very silly to Polly that she was forbidden to ride her new tricycle beyond the corner. The pavement was just as wide, and as far as Polly could see it was just as safe down that street which led to the business section as on the street where they lived.

Polly reasoned that it couldn't possibly make much difference if she just turned the corner and went a teenty, weenty ways. Besides, her mother was busy making a batch of spice cookies and wouldn't know.

Of course Polly's heart thumped and she knew she was doing wrong, but nothing happened to her. She went back, but the next time she turned the corner, she went farther. Still nothing happened, all of which proved to Polly that her mother was more nervous than was necessary.

The third time the little girl forgot caution entirely, for down in the next block was a wonderful monkey dressed in a red jacket and climbing about on the top of a hand-organ from which entrancing music was being ground out by a dark-skinned, bushy-whiskered little man.

Polly threw caution to the winds and pedaled down as fast as she could. There was a crowd of children there, and she was soon lost in the midst of them.

The monkey was very, very funny, and Polly was enjoying herself when suddenly a stern voice quite near said:

"Polly Pratt, what are you doing down here?"

She looked around and there was her very own daddy. He took her home and there was no conversation on the way. Polly didn't need to be told that he was displeased.

Her mother had missed her, and when Mrs. Pratt found that the little girl was not on the street, she had gone searching anxiouly about the neighborhood. That was the reason a whole ovenful of the delicious coookies had socrched so they would have to be fed to the neighbor's checkens.

"I must hurry and get back to the office," Polly's father said, "but Mother, I would suggest that this disobedient little girl should not be given any ice cream for a whole week. She was down in that crowd of children right out beyond the curb, and the automobiles were coming very fast. She might have been injured. She doesn't appreciate her privileges and so she must not be given any treats."

Polly thought this a very heavy punishment, but her mother decided that she was not to have her regular 4 o'clock dish of ice cream for a whole week. She had been in the habit of going up to the little bakery just above them each warm day. Here she would get a delicious little mountain of sweet, frozen cream on a small, crinkly-edged, paper plate. Then she would come home and have a little tea party with her dolls on the lawn. Now her mother said she would have bread and butter and a glass of milk—but no ice cream.

That week seemed like a long one to Polly, for the weather was the warmest they had had during the whole summer. But she knew better than to ask for even a taste of ice cream, for when her mother and father said "No," they always meant it.

One morning when her punishment was over, her daddy smiled at breakfast and remarked:

"Well, how about it, Toodles," for you see he often called her Toodles when he wanted to use a pet name. "To-day is ice cream day, isn't it?"

Polly nodded joyously.

"And you'll obey mother after this, will you not?"

"Oh, yes, Daddy, I'll never go beyond the corner again," she promised eagerly.

"Not so fast, my dear," smiled her father. "You mean that you'll not go beyond the corner unless some one is with you or until you are older and have permission to go alone."

"Yes, sir," said Polly soberly, "I mean I'll be good."

"All right," agreed Mr. Pratt, "here's a dime and you may get your cream this afternoon if mother is willing."

Polly could scarcely wait for 4 o'clock to come, but her mother would not let her go for the cream a minute before.

"You must learn to wait patiently," said Mrs. Pratt. "That's something very necessary to know how to do as we get older."

At last the time came, however, and Polly put the dish of cream on her little table under the maple tree. Betty, her best doll, was in the chair at the other side. She was all ready to enjoy the treat when she looked up to see a hungry, ragged, and none-too-clean little girl watching her hungrily from the nearby pavement.

Polly stopped and smiled, for you see, she was very happy herself.

"Do you like ice cream?" she asked the little stranger.

"I don't often have any," replied the little girl. "My Grammy washes and there isn't any money 'cept for bread and porridge and things like that."

"Why don't you get some money from your father and mother?" Polly persisted.

The little girl shook her head.

"I haven't any father and mother," she said soberly.

A struggle was going on in Polly's breast—would she or wouldn't she?

Once or twice she started to put her spoon into the ice cream, for she was both hungry and thirsty. The little girl on the pavement started to walk along slowly. Then Polly ran after her.

"Come back, little girl," she said, "I'm having a party and I want you to come to it."

She smiled at the astonishment on the small stranger's face.

"Come," she said, and she took the little stranger right by the hand and led her back to the little table under the tree.

"Sit down here," she beamed, "and wait a minute till I come back."

Then she ran into the house and whispered something to her mother, who said, "Yes."

When Polly came out, she had two of the delicious spice cookies in her hand. She laid the spice cookies beside the ice cream.

"That's the party," laughed Polly. "Go ahead and eat it up!"

"You—you don't mean the cream'n ever'thing!"

The little girl could scarcely believe her ears and eyes.

"Yes, I do," said Polly.

The little girl ate hungrily, and in the happiness of watching her enjoyment, Polly forgot how much she had wanted that cream herself.—The Presbyterian and Herald and Presbyter.

THE PONY THAT POUTED.

By Emma Mauritz Larson.

When Uncle John brought home the red racer wagon for Danny and Cousin Louise to play with, they were happy over it. There were so many fine games to play with it.

Sometimes they brought apples from the orchard with it. That helped mother. They liked to do it, too. They played then that they were gardeners and going to town to market like Mr. Green, the man who went driving by on the road every day and who always called out: "Hello, want a ride?"

Several times they had had a ride with him as far as the schoolhouse and back again. The seat was very high, and the two horses, Whitey and Bob, went galloping along. Danny said he liked it better than an automobile and that when he was grown up he was going to have a big team and take tomatoes into town, too. And Louise liked it, too, and said that Mr. Brown was the best friend they had, and when her birthday came she was going to give him two sticks of her nicest candy.

Mr. Green just laughed and said: "Thank you, that will be fine. And some day before long your mothers have said I may take you way over to the river with me. If I get through early enough some afternoon, I'll stop and pick you up and quickly we'll drive over. I shouldn't wonder if you could each catch a fish over there with Billy Marvin's fish pole while I talk to him about some berry bushes.

After that, every day while they were playing that the wagon was an auto or a pony cart or a train that they were going to New York or London, Danny and Louise kept looking, too, for Mr. Green to come. If he got through early, maybe they would go to the river to-day. But he didn't come until almost supper time because he was so busy at the market in town.

One morning it was Louise's turn to choose what they would play. So she said: "You can be the horse Bob, Danny, and I'll be Mr. Green. And we'll go galloping out and get some windfall apples from the ground. Mother won't care if we take them, and we'll play we're selling them to lots of people."

"I don't want to be a horse," Danny pouted.

"Well, then, you get in and be Mr. Green and I'll be Whitey," Louise laughed. "I look a good deal like Whtey with this dress on."

But Danny seemed very cross to-day, and that didn't suit him, either.

"Well, then, let's play automobile and go to New York," Louise said again.

"I don't want to play auto, either," Danny said. And he just sat on the front of the red racer wagon and wouldn't look up at all.

Then suddenly from way off on the road next to the orchard Louise heard some one calling. "I don't know who it is," she said, "but maybe they are calling us. I think I'll run and see. Nobody that we know goes by at 10 o'clock in the morning."

So she left the pony pouting on the edge of the red racer wagon and flew through the orchard. But in a minute she was back again, calling: "Danny, we're going fishing for the whole day. It's Mr. Green and he said another man took his tomatoes in to-day to the market, so he could have a holiday all day. And we're going to the river, and he's got dinner for us in a basket, and he says he knows we'll catch ten fishes."

After they had told mother all about it, they started off in a nice little buggy that Danny and Louise had never seen before. They had a gentle horse, Velvet, that Mr. Green said they might try to drive sometime. And then he said: "I almost went without you to-day. I looked all along the orchard and the places that you usually play. And I called, too. I thought perhaps you had gone away and that I couldn't take you to the river after all. Where were you two playing?"

"O, we were just over by the Linden trees," Louise said. "We hadn't come out to the orchard to play yet this morning." She didn't want to tell him that Danny had just been pouting and wouldn't let the wagon move toward the orchard at all.

But Danny said: "It was my fault, Mr. Green. I was cross. I wouldn't be Bob, and I didn't want to play auto or anything. But now I know that the boys who pout just spoil everybody's fun; so I won't do it again."

And he never did.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Mark Terrell, general evangelist, is scheduled to begin a meeting with Rev. D. B. Boddie, Opelousas, La., on Nov. 6.

The executive committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Education held a meeting in Shreveport on Wednesday of this week.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman, pastor of the Epworth Church, this city, began a meeting with Rev. W. D. White, at Sour Lake, Tex., on Oct. 19. Splendid interest is reported.

Rev. C. C. Clark, of Benton, Miss., in sending a new subscription to the Advocate, for which we thank him, takes occasion to say some nice things about the paper; and we thank him for that, too.

Rev. A. L. McQueen, the pastor, announces that the church at Springhill, La., will be dedicated on Sunday, Nov. 6. Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, will preach the dedication sermon.

Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., says: "Our enrollment from the beginning was up to the number allowed by the board of trustees. We have been forced to refuse a number of students for the want of space."

Dr. Briscoe Carter, Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, passed through the city last week en route to Biloxi, Miss., to attend a meeting of the trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School. He was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office while here.

A series of meetings is being held this week throughout Louisiana in the interest of the eleventh annual roll call of the American Red Cross. Dr. Cleanth Brooks, pastor of the First Methodist Church, is on the program for the invocation at the meeting in Alexandria.

From the Methodist Messenger, bulletin of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La.: "At the 11 o'clock service both the auditorium and the balcony of the church were crowded to capacity, and chairs were placed in the aisles and other available places to seat the congregation."

Rev. Percy Vaughan, our pastor at Ellisville, Miss., writes: "We have begun a Cokesbury school with quite an interesting attendance, both at Ellisville and Moselle. W. J. Dawson, of Shubuta, is teaching. We hope for a great improvement in our Sunday school interests."

Rev. W. R. Lott writes us that the church in Amory, Miss., has suffered a distinct loss in the death of Brother N. T. Wax, on Oct. 15. Mr. Wax had been a steward in the church for more than forty years and had been useful in many capacities. That makes the third member of the board of stewards of that church to die this Conference year.

We thank Rev. A. R. Beasley, Lake Cormorant, Miss., for a list of five subscriptions to the Advocate, with check to cover. In connection with his work, he says: "We are closing out a good year on this charge. We are expecting to be able to report, 'Everything in full, Bishop,' at Conference. The district will be able to make a good report, I think. We are very proud of our new presiding elder, Brother Lipscomb. He has done a fine work this year."

The New Orleans District Standard Training School began its session in the Educational Building of Rayne Memorial Church last Sunday afternoon. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the Conference Sunday School Superintendent, was present at the opening. Rev. Clem Baker, of Arkansas, is teaching the course in "Administration." Rev. H. L. Johns, of Natchitoches, La., is also a member of the faculty. Brothers Atkinson, Baker, and Johns were speakers in the city pulpits on Sunday.

As a result of the meeting at Gulfport, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, was assisted by Miss Hosford, there were 65 additions to the membership of the church—51 on profession of faith and 14 by certificate. Forty joined other churches of the city. One of the features of the meeting was a children's choir, composed of about 400 children. Miss Hosford goes from Gulfport to Syracuse, N. Y., for her next meeting.

Mrs. Addie Williams, of Montpelier, La., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for many years—now in her seventieth year, she has been reading the paper since childhood. In renewing her subscription, she speaks of the protracted meeting at Monpelier, just closed, in which the pastor, Rev. J. T. Parsons, was assisted by Rev. J. S. Rutledge. Though she was unable to attend the services on account of infirmities, the meeting was a blessing to her, as Brother Rutledge was a guest in her home much of the time.

Mr. A. F. Godat, for many years an active Methodist layman in New Orleans, recently transferred to New York City in a responsible business position, is happily situated in his new home. We take the liberty of quoting a few sentences from a personal letter: "We have a very nice Methodist church here in Astoria (which is a sort of Carrollton). The pastor, Dr. Poten, is a good preacher and a very fine man. The people are very friendly and have made us feel right at home. I already know about as much of New York as the average New Yorker—I know where I live, where I work, and the shortest means of getting from the one place to the other."

In a personal note to the editor, Dr. Charles O. Ransford, editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, speaking of recent transfers between the Louisiana and the St. Louis Conferences, says: "You will like Dr. Wells. He is a good preacher, a pleasant gentleman, and an all around good man. We shall welcome Dr. Taylor to his home State." The St. Louis Christian Advocate says concerning these two brethren: "The session of the St. Louis Conference marked the close of the quadrennium of Dr. Frank L. Wells as presiding elder of the St. Louis District. He has been untiring in his labors and has wrought well. Preachers and people hold him in high esteem as a Christian gentleman. His leadership has been a large contribution to the work of Methodism in the city. He has well represented the church in all inter-church movements. * * The city will extend to Dr. B. P. Taylor, the new presiding elder, with whom Dr. Wells exchanged appointments, a cordial welcome. He will find every congregation well organized and the people loyal and responsive to all church programs."

Brother T. H. Lipscomb, our pastor at Louisville, Miss., writes: "Rev. H. M. Ellis, Mississippi Conference evangelist, has recently held an unusually successful revival with us at Louisville, Miss. Sixty-seven applied for membership in the various churches, and forty-five were received, thirty-five by baptism and profession of faith, into the Methodist church the closing Sunday morning. The pastors and people of Louisville were more than satisfied, they were delighted and edified with the able, earnest, spiritual expositions of Scripture by Evangelist Ellis, and all recognized in him a rarely gifted expounder of the Word of God. At the end of the first week the official board of the church unanimously requested that, though Conference was near at hand, he should continue with us for a second week, and the fine attendance of all denominations, filling the auditorium and galleries at times, evidenced the interest and blessing received. There was nothing clap-trap or compromising, and a more genuine scriptural proclamation of the truth we have never heard. Evangelist Ellis' sermons to children were also very interesting and effective, as many as two hundred children coming week-day afternoons from school to church, evidencing their interest. It was advertized as 'A Revival for Everybody,' and to an unusual degree it realized that ideal. Eighty-six have been received into the church at Louisville this year."

MEETING OF THE SEASHORE CAMP GROUND SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School met in the Tabernacle on the Camp Ground at 10 a.m., October 20, 1927.

In the absence of the president, C. Gerard, the vice president, J. L. Sells, presided.

Several items of important business were transacted, the most important being the memoralizing of the Alabama, the Louisiana, and the Mississippi Annual Conferences, the three controlling Conferences of Seashore Camp Ground School, to endorse and support a building and development program projected a short time ago by the Trustees for the purpose of developing Seashore Camp Ground into a suitable site for church assemblies, such as Bible institutes, Sunday school conventions, camp meetings, etc., and building on the ground a Junior College.

During the month of September, Bishop Warren A. Candler gave a full week to speaking at different points on and near the Mississippi Gulf Coast in the interest of this building and developing program, and Brother Sells reported at the meeting of the Trustees that through the efforts of Bishop Candler and others, about $45,000 in cash and subscriptions has been secured.

Seashore Camp Ground is one of the most beautiful and valuable pieces of property owned by the Southern Methodist Church. It has a frontage on our great Southern Gulf of 1410 feet, and is practically level throughout, and yet is well drained, and its climate is so mild as to make it a desirable place for assemblies either winter or summer.

The entire tract of land consists of about 280 acres—about 147 acres lie north of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and the remainder between the railroad and the Gulf of Mexico. The Trustees believe that the land that lies north of the railroad can be sold to advantage; and the proceeds of that sale added to the amount already secured would form a substantial nucleus with which to begin real development of the land lying between the railroad and the Gulf of Mexico, and they believe that when worth while developments have been begun on the grounds, it will not be difficult to secure sufficient funds to carry their building and development program to completion.

An attractive assembly ground on our Gulf Coast is very necessary at this time, for there can hardly be found any section in our entire country that is undergoing greater material development at the present time than is this coast country. This material development, the balmy climate, and beautiful scenery are attracting many tourists from practically every State in the Union. If the church does not make adequate provision for taking care of the spiritual life of these people, no doubt they will be overwhelmed by the luring attractions of the world, and lost to the church.

If the three controlling Conferences will but support the Trustees in their endeavor to develop a plan that will meet the present need at this place, they will doubtless save to the church, and for heaven, many who will be lost if no provision is made to meet the obligations that present conditions have thrust upon us.

T. J. O'NEIL, Secty.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION CONCERNING REV. J. A. GEORGE AND REV. E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

After a number of officials and other members of the church gave expressions to the great work that Brother George has rendered here as pastor during the four years' term he has served, together with their love for him and his faithful wife, mentioning the many, many requests of men and women from communities where he has held revival meetings that it might be possible for the Annual Conference to return Brother George to this charge even though he has served the specified term of four years, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the officials and members of the Methodist church at the fourth quarterly conference held October 9, 1927, at Ripley, Miss.:

Whereas, Our beloved pastor, Rev. J. A. George, has served the Ripley station for the full term of four years and has rendered unusual service during this time in the building of a new, modern house of worship, and has preached earnestly and fearlessly the Gospel of Jesus Christ as the only way of salvation, opposing all forms of evil from the pulpit and in his daily life; and, has made his influence felt for righteousness throughout the bounds of Tippah and adjoining counties through the many revival meetings he has held during these four years, giving several weeks each year to this work which has resulted in the building up of many rural churches, thereby placing Methodism of Tippah and other counties in position to render greater service in the building of the Kingdom; has answered cheerfully every call from those in sorrow and with burdens to bear, giving comfort and cheer as only a faithful pastor can; we, therefore, the officials and members of the Ripley Methodist Church, wish to express and have recorded in the minutes of the quarterly conference, and sent to the county and church papers, our heartfelt appreciation for his hard work as our pastor during these four years and assure him and his loyal and faithful wife of our continued interest and prayers for the success of their future labors for the cause of our Master.

And whereas, this being the third year that our faithful and efficient presiding elder, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, has served the Corinth District, and in appreciation of his faithful services, express the wish that he may be returned for his fourth year as our beloved presiding elder.

(Signed),
H. E. FINGER,
Secretary for Quarterly Conference.

DOING THE IMPOSSIBLE.

"Impossible," said Napoleon, "is the adjective of fools." In his case it was the adjective of an autocrat. It might be more exact to say that a fool does not know when a thing is or is not impossible. He is a man who deals mostly in negatives, giving up before he begins, and failing to see an opportunity when it is offered, whereas the wise man fairly well estimates the limits of the possible, and never stops this side of what may be done. Not all things are practicable, and many things are there which are not worth doing at all. Discrimination, then, in one's plans and purposes is necessary in order to employ time and energies without wasting them.

It is only fair to say, however, that the impossible is a relative matter, and the prospects of doing a difficult deed should always be estimated in terms of the environment which surrounds the adventurer. It is nothing nowadays for a torpedo-boat destroyer to dash across the Atlantic from England to the West Indies, but it seemed to men of Christopher Columbus' day next to impossible for him to cross that dragon-infested Western Ocean. As history advances, the same amount of daring goes farther because of the added appliances which by science and invention are put at the service of men.

Ideas progress, too, and various superstitions and mistakes are outgrown as the light of truth breaks more widely through the benighted or belated regions of the earth. So the trammels of ignorance or the dissuasions of fear cease in time to deter from the essaying of great enterprises, as the mind of men rises to fulfill its God-given task to subdue the earth. By studying the laws of "nature," which are the laws of God, men find the limits of the "impossible" to shrink, as with more and more insight and success they adjust adequate means to highly important ends. It becomes hazardous, then, to say that this or that thing cannot be done. What we mean is that it has not been done yet.

There are things, of course, which are intrinsically impossible—as to be happy while leading an utterly selfish life, or to attain great knowledge without paying the price in hard, concentrated work for years. But most of us are far too modest in our programs, grubbing in dark places like moles instead of building high aeries among the mountains. It would be well, then, for each one of us to look over the ground of his own circumstances and, with due regard to his resources and peculiar aptitudes, to resolve to convert more of the "impossible" into possible situations, remembering that a thing dared is half done, and that it is better to fail after having tried than never to have tried at all.—Zion's Herald.

WHAT IS A MAN'S RELIGION?

Not the church creed which he professes, the articles of faith which he will sign and in words or deeds otherwise assert; not this wholly; in many cases not this at all. We see men of all kinds of professed creeds attain to almost all degrees of worth or worthlessness under each or any of them.

This is not what I call religion, this profession and assertion, which is often only a profession and assertion from the outworks of man, from the mere argumentative region of him, if even so deep as that. But the thing a man does practically believe (and this is often enough without asserting it to himself, much less to others), the thing a man does practically lay to heart, and know for certain concerning his vital relations to this mysterious universe, and his duty and destiny there—that is in all cases the primary thing for him, and creatively determines all the rest. That is his religion; or, it may be, his mere skepticism and no religion.—Thomas Carlyle.

In the early morn, ere the stars had gone down, there came a knock at the door of our friends, Mr. and Mrs. M. Falkner, of Germania, Miss., an angel entered and bore to the celestial city their darling little daughter, SARAH BONNEY. Two short years she had lived, though God took her for his own. She was too tempting a bud for the Reaper to pass—he claimed her, yet fresh from the dew of this life's morn. Our hearts yearn and long to hear the sweet voice raised in song. The Shepherd had need of her, and transplanted this lovely flower to a more beautiful garden. To mourn her loss she leaves father, mother, three sisters, a brother, many near kindred, and friends. She was laid to rest in Wesley Chapel cemetery, Phoenix, Miss., to await the coming of Christ. Weep not, dear parents, for Christ has said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." Your darling has only gone before to beckon you heavenward, and is the link in the chain to bind you to a bright and better home; and may dear little Sarah Bonney be at the beautiful gate to welcome us over there.

BROTHER W. H. MACK was born in St. Helena Parish Aug. 3, 1857, and departed this life July 26, 1927, aged 69 years, 11 months and 25 days. His death came as a surprise. Apparently he was getting along fairly well. He was the father of nine children, six boys and three girls, two of the daughters being dead. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn their loss. Brother Mack was a man of fine Christian character, a loving father, a noble husband, a true Christian and a friend to all. Every one spoke well of Brother Mack. Tender hands lead this good man to rest in the Pine Grove cemetery on July 29, 1927, amid flowers and friends, to await the glorious resurrection morn.

AT THE OLD SALEM CAMP GROUND.

Dear Mr. Editor: In the early hours of the morning of Oct. 5, I, with a party of friends from Hazlehurst, turned my face southward toward old Salem Camp Ground, nearly 200 miles away. We were well on our way when the sun peeped from behind the eastern horizon. Only a few stops and we found ourselves at the camp at about 12:30, having missed the morning service.

After partaking of refreshments, we heard the familiar sound of the old conk, which, I am told, has called the people together for the past seventy-five years.

We gathered under the tabernacle at 2:30 to feast upon the good things Brother O. C. Hull had in store for all. This was my first time to hear this man of God, but we found him brimful of the great messages from God, to be given out to his hearers both day and night for almost a week.

People were made to rejoice, and many were filled to overflowing and could but shout their praise to him from whom all blessings flow.

I wish I were able to quote all his texts; but being unable to do so, will only touch on a few which most impressed me.

"Home" was a subject on which the real facts were made plain. He spoke of those humble homes where love and God dwell, though they may be only huts, but if God dwells there they are indeed homes. Then he spoke of the more palatial homes, where wealth abounds, but said that without God and love they were not real homes, but just a dwelling place. God pity these homes where God does not reign!

From another text he gave us some strong language, based on desecration of the Sabbath and immorality. He also warned us that this great nation is tottering on the verge of a downfall and in danger of being enthralled as all others that have already fallen. He placed these two sins as the most vital cause of the fall of other nations, which would be ours unless there comes a reform.

I was made to wonder if the women of this fair land of ours would again (as mother Eve did) cause God to frown upon us, and again we would be driven from the Garden of Eden. Mothers, wives, sisters and daughters, let us wake up and drive this demon from our homes and close the doors forever behind him, and save our great nation.

These powerful sermons will long be remembered by the writer, and I only wish it were possible for Brother Hull to present them to every congregation in this great America.

Time and space forbid me to write more; suffice it to say we all returned feeling that our trip had not been spent in vain.

May God's richest blessing be upon Brother Hull and his labors for many years yet to come.

MRS. M. E. GILLIS.

"Every day is a new beginning,
Every morn is the world made new.
Ye who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you—
A hope for me and a hope for you.

"All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed;
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover,
Yesterday's wounds which smarted and bled
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

"Yesterday now is part of forever;
Bound up in a sheaf which God holds tight,
With glad days and sad days and bad days, which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and blight,
Fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

"Let them go, since we cannot relieve them,
Cannot undo and cannot atone;
God, in his mercy, receive and forgive them.
Only the new days are our own—
To-day is ours and to-day alone!

"Here are the skies all burnished brightly,
Here is the spent earth all re-born,
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun and to share the morn—
In the chrism of dew and the cool of morn.

"Every day is a fresh beginning;
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain;
And spite of old sorrow and older sinning
And puzzle forecasted and possible pain
Take heart with the day and begin again."

ZONE MEETING, BUCKATUNNA.

The third quarterly meeting of zone No. 1 of the Meridian District was held at Buckatunna, Sept. 28. Waynesboro, State Line, Buckatunna, Clara, Pleasant Grove, Chicora, and Hiwanie were represented, the attendance being ninety-eight. Among the visitors were Mr. Howard S. Williams, lay evangelist, and his band of workers, who were conducting a revival at Waynesboro at that time.

Mrs. W. A. Hays, the zone leader, presided over the meeting. The morning session was opened with devotional exercises, led by Rev. E. T. Nicholson.

Mrs. L. R. Newsom, of Buckatunna, extended to the visitors a cordial welcome, to which Mrs. C. A. Massey, of Clara, responded.

Mrs. Rowlston Huggins discussed plans for the "Jubilee Year."

Mrs. R. J. Briggs, Jr., read an excellent paper on "The Advantages of the Missionary Society." Mrs. Harry Batchelor gave an inspiring message on "Our Great Commission."

A vocal duet, "Lead Me Gently Home," was rendered by Mmes. Grey and Slaughter. A reading, "Laddie," given by Miss Mina V. Chapman, brought tears to the eyes of her listeners. Little Aline Nicholson read "The Troublesome Call," and sang, "I Want to See Jesus, Don't You?"

At the noon hour a delightful luncheon was served by the hostess Society.

Rev. W. A. Hays, of Waynesboro, led the afternoon devotion.

Miss Lamonte, a member of Mr. Williams' band of workers, was introduced, and made a very interesting talk.

Miss Lillian Knobles, our missionary to China, spoke on "Religious Customs and Ceremonies in China."

A violin solo by Miss Bessie Chapman added much to the enjoyment of the program.

A round table discussion on "What the Zone Meetings Mean to Me" was led by Mrs. Hays.

The meeting closed to meet next at Waynesboro.

MRS. ROULSTON HUGGINS.

ZONE MEETING AT SILVER CITY, MISS.

A zone meeting, composed of Louise, Holly Bluff, and Silver City Missionary Societies, was held in Silver City, Wednesday, Oct. 12, with Mrs. W. T. Hegman, zone chairman, presiding, and Mrs. J. F. Slaughter, recording secretary. This was indeed a "Jubilee" meeting for these Societies, having with them at this special meeting three of the Conference officers—Mrs. L. W. Alford, President; Mrs. G. P. McKeown, District Secretary, and Mrs. W. T. Hegman, Superintendent of Supplies—each giving a message that found its way to the hearts of those present, and making them feel a greater determination to be better women and better workers.

Meeting was called to order by the chairman; prayer, by Rev. F. B. Ormond; theme for the day, "Victory," chairman; welcome address, Mrs. R. L. Nelson and Rev. F. B. Ormond; response, Mrs. Earl Sledge, of Louise; the message of the "Jubilee," Mrs. L. W. Alford; prayer, Rev. I. H. Sells; song, Mrs. C. D. Nixon.

At 11 o'clock Prof. E. M. Britt, with all the teachers and school children, came in to hear a special sermon by Rev. M. L. Burton, after which the visitors were invited to the parsonage, where a bountiful dinner was served.

At 1:30 the afternoon session was opened with prayer by Rev. F. B. Ormond. Song, "He Leadeth Me;" "Give More Thought to Childhood," Mrs. Ben Kearn, of Louise; "How to Crown the Year With Victory," Mrs. G. P. McKeown; "A Society in Every Church and Every Woman a Member," Mrs. R. L. Nelson; "What the Society Should Mean to a Pastor," Rev. F. B. Ormond.

After a few minutes of general discussion, a rising vote of thanks was given the Silver City Society for their generous hospitality, and a special prayer by Rev. M. L. Burton in behalf of zone societies. Mrs. W. A. D. James, of Midnight, was elected zone chairman, and Mrs. Hunter White, of Holly Bluff, recording secretary for the following year.

The meeting closed by reading a pledge of consecration, led by Mrs. L. W. Alford.

ZONE MEETING AT ANGUILLA, MISS.

A most enthusiastic meeting of zone No. 1 was held Thursday, Oct. 13, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., at the Methodist church in Anguilla, with the Anguilla auxiliary as hostess. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Elliott, of Mayersville, the chairman, with a song, "I Am Thine, O Lord," Mrs. Leon Fields, of Anguilla, acting as secretary. Mrs. H. C. Green, president of the Anguilla auxiliary, extended a most cordial welcome to the visiting auxiliaries, responded to by Mrs. W. H. Clements, of Rolling Fork, for the visiting auxiliaries.

The following program was rendered: Devotional, Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Mayersville; musical number, Mmes. G. C. Fields and D. D. Mullins, accompanied by Mrs. W. T. McKinney, of Anguilla; song, "Living for Jesus;" message from Mrs. Alford, our president, of McComb, Miss. She gave a most enthusiastic talk about the Jubilee year, the motto being "Looking Backward and Thinking Forward." She then told of our work in Japan, China and Mexico, and of work needed to be done in our own United States.

A musical number by Mrs. Graft, accompanied by Mrs. L. C. Hicks, of Rolling Fork, song, "Enough to Know."

Reports from different auxiliaries: Catchings, two members present, no report; Fitlers, no report; Rolling Fork, twenty-two members present and a splendid report; Anguilla, twelve members present and a good report; Mayersville, sixty-five members present and a good report. Report from District Secretary, Mrs. McCowan, of Woodville.

During the social hour a delicious salad course was served.

Mrs. H. P. Kirkland, of Mayersville, was appointed chairman of district 1, and Mrs. T. W. Fields, of Anguilla, secretary. There being no further business, the meeting adjourned with a prayer by Mrs. Alford, of McComb, Miss.

Delta City auxiliary extended an invitation to have the next zone meeting with them.

MOTHER!
Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruity laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

We begin our comments this week with a word of appreciation for what the editor has to say on the front page of the Advocate in support of Sunday School Day observance. And why not? We give below the latest figures by districts, and urge that ere the Conference date rolls around to end the fiscal year, these amounts will have been doubled:

Alexandria District	$ 86.00
Baton Rouge District	148.94
Lake Charles District	127.18
Minden District	80.72
Monroe District	99.27
New Orleans District	282.97
Ruston District	140.25
Shreveport District	226.68

The sixteenth Standard Training School of this year in our Conference will open in New Orleans on the 23rd. This will be a fine school, offering six courses, and will be the seventh session of the New Orleans Standard School. Last year they issued 107 credits, and hope to go beyond that number this year.

In 1925 Shreveport issued 111 credits. The Shreveport school is in progress at this writing, which is the third in the Shreveport District this year, and a complete tabulation of credits is not available. Baton Rouge is leading so far this year with 76 credits, with the Haynesville, Hammond and the Ruston schools close runners-up. Many of the small schools have issued credits in sufficient numbers to make them compare very favorably with the larger schools.

The past "week-end" was the busiest the writer has had in some time. Early on Sunday morning we presented ourselves to Dr. Holmes at Shreveport by telephone to inquire what schedule he had arranged for us. A full day followed, beginning in Bossier City. The writer was greatly impressed with the teaching corps of this school and the splendid work they are doing. We reached Mangum Memorial before the close of the school, and received a royal welcome from the pastor, Brother Brown, and the superintendent, Brother McGuirt. There is no place one enjoys a visit more than at Mangum.

The 11 o'clock hour found us at Texas Avenue Church, where the writer preached. There is a beautiful spirit of appreciation shown by this congregation for what the people of Shreveport Methodism have done for them. One of the ways this has evidenced itself was through the attendance at the training school, for Texas Avenue sent to Noel Memorial the largest number of students outside of Noel Memorial itself. The hospitality of the Texas Avenue parsonage was enjoyed at noon, followed by a visit to the site of the new church. A very striking thing about Brother Ware, the pastor, is that he is entirely up with his Conference collections and has never yet fallen short on them.

In the evening I had the pleasure of preaching at Claiborne, reaching there in time for the Epworth League service.

Monday night the training school opened with about eighty enrolled, the largest single class being in "Primary Worship." The type of work being done in the school is of the highest, but the writer was especially interested in the class on "Sunday School Administration," taught by Dr. Holmes, presiding elder. In this class were a number of pastors and superintendents, and there is no finer way for a presiding elder and his preachers to work out the salvation of their Sunday schools than through these classes on Administration taught by the presiding elder and attended by the pastors and superintendents. This is the second class on this subject that Dr. Holmes has taught in his district this year.

On Tuesday morning, in company with Dr. Holmes, Dr. N. E. Joyner, of Monroe, and Brother H. L. Johns, of Natchitoches, I visited Oil City, where a zone meeting of the Missionary Society was being held; and Tuesday afternoon we visited Greenwood, where, at the country home of Mr. A. J. Scott, superintendent of the Greenwood Sunday school, a splendid meeting was being held as a part of the Enlarged Children's Week program. Brother Scott and his estimable wife entered whole-heartedly into this week day activity of the school, furnishing a most delightful barbecue with several kinds of meat, and all the good things that go to complete such a spread. Your Conference Superintendent and Rev. H. L. Johns were the speakers. The Greenwood Sunday school is not large in numbers, having an enrollment of over 100 (of course the attendance at the barbecue was larger than this), but it is up to the minute in every particular, with a live bunch of workers backing up Brother Scott. They have taken for their forward step the matter of getting the church in shape for dedication, including new pews that have never been supplied since the building was completed. The pastor of this wide-awake little congregation is Brother W. E. Akin.

A very fine and interesting meeting was held at First Church, Shreveport, on Monday last, when the various district missionary superintendents from over the State responded to the call of the chairman, Dr. W. W. Drake. Those in attendance were: Rev. H. E. Pfost, of the Minden District; Mrs. Chaffee, of the New Orleans District; Mrs. E. M. Venable, of the Shreveport District; Rev. A. K. McLellan, Dual Extension Secretary; Mr. A. M. Mayo, Conference Treasurer, and the writer. At the noon hour we were joined by Dr. Holmes at the Y. M. C. A. for lunch.

We were interested to learn from the proud grandfather, Brother A. M. Mayo, that a young heir has arrived in the home of Rev. Claude Mayo, at Clay, La. The young man will bear the name of Seemon Alvin Mayo, and we are delighted to extend our hearty congratulations to the parents.

Interest in the "Conference Staff" meeting to be held at Alexandria on Nov. 8, at 9:30 a. m., is growing, and it is hoped a full attendance will result.

Sunday was a big day in Alexandria, especially to the faithful workers at First Church. The occasion was the laying of the corner stone of the beautiful new educational building that is rapidly taking on proportions. At the 11 o'clock hour a most inspiring sermon was brought to the congregation by Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and also chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Louisiana. Dr. Harper also delivered a beautiful address at the laying of the corner stone service in the afternoon, and preached again at night.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I wish to call attention to the very pressing need of all the stoves in all the Methodist churches being fixed and made usable. We are facing a cold Sunday most any time now, and we ought not to wait till this very cold Sunday comes before the stove is in condition.

The windows ought to be fixed and everything gotten ready for cold weather. No one can blame people for not wishing to go to church when they know they are to be uncomfortable. If they go one time and they are cold, who can tell them it won't be repeated?

See that the wood and kindling or the kindling and coal are in place and ready for use. What doth it profit a man to have a beautiful stove and nothing to burn in it? If our Sunday school and church services are to be held this winter, now is the time to get ready to hold them in comfort.

These words are written to remind all boards of trustees and Sunday school workers that it is too pressing a matter to let alone. Some one must take the lead in this.

From the returns last year the Sunday School Board based its budget on a substantial increase in its Sunday School Day offering to take care for the increase in its operations. This morning we are behind last year in money received $6.99, and we have nine fewer names on the Honor Roll than on this same day last year.

This state of affairs will mean in place of a substantial increase in our funds, there will be a decrease. We trust that every school that has not at this time sent in a Sunday School Day offering will do so. Your Board will appreciate your activity in this matter.

The Brookhaven District has fourteen Sunday schools not reporting at this writing; two of these schools have reported taking the offering, but have not sent it in. If every Sunday school in the district sends in an offering before Conference meets, the presiding elder's name will go on the Honor Roll for Sunday School Day. The Brookhaven presiding elder is near this goal. The district is $156.03 behind its allotment.

The Hattiesburg District is behind $140.28 on its allotment. There are only ten Sunday schools in this district not reporting at this writing. How very close this is!

The Jackson District is behind $55.74 on its allotment. My, this looks like out! Only eighteen schools not heard from.

Meridian District is behind $128.67. This is not too far behind to catch up. Twenty-three schools not heard from.

Newton is behind $219.08, and has fifty schools unheard from. Seashore is behind $171.84, and has twenty-seven schools that have sent no offering. Vicksburg lacks $136.03, and has eighteen schools not heard from.

The whole Conference is within striking distance of meeting in a large way the allotment. These statements are not made by way of discouragement, but to let all know the conditions, that the allotments made be made and that the elders' names may grace the Honor Roll.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Conference Superintendent.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Literature for the observance of Children's Week has been sent to fifty schools; so far, I have received reports from eight schools. The majority of the schools will hold the services the fourth Sunday night. The report can be made out and mailed in five minutes. Please send it to me Monday morning so your work can be reported.

The week was observed with marked success at Macon under the supervision of Rev. and Mrs. W. N. Duncan. Ninety-eight homes were visited; the forward step, a piano for the Primary Department; six members of the Junior Department were received into the church. The services were properly advertised. Under the head of Remarks, the pastor writes: "The whole day of Sunday, Oct. 16, was devoted to the interests of the Sunday school. Six members of the Junior Department joined the church at the close of the eleven o'clock services. The attendance upon the night service, at which the Children's Week program was given, was most encouraging. It appears, also, that the impression made by the observance of the Week was highly favorable both for the Sunday school and the church."

The year has been one of marked success in our Sunday school work. Under the leadership of Rev. E. G. Mohler, Conference Extension Secretary, Cokesbury schools have been held in as many country churches as our funds would permit. As a result of these schools, our Program of Work has been adopted and is being used as a guide by a large number of schools. Surveys have been made and used to increase the membership of the schools. These surveys have made the church see how little it is doing to reach the people and has quickened the interest of the workers. There has been a gratifying increase in the number of small and large schools that are giving missionary instruction and a missionary offering for our work in the Conference and for our European missions. The presiding elders, pastors, superintendents, and teachers have given hearty co-operation in nearly every community where we have worked. We believe that "a little leaven will leaven the whole lump." The work will abide long after the workers have ceased to labor.

Our hope for extending and deepening the work is based upon three lines of endeavor: First, one hundred volunteers who will teach one or more classes during the year; second, an increase in the number of schools that will observe Sunday School Day; third, an increase in the number of schools that will give missionary instruction once a month and make an offering for our Conference and European work. The first mentioned project will be the most difficult to do, but it is the thing that will bring the largest and most satisfactory results. An ever-increasing number of leaders must train the local leaders to do the work of building the Kingdom.

In all sincerity we have tried to teach the things Christ said must be taught. We have tried to hold the standard high and have called the people to a more faithful performance of the task our Lord has assigned us. The work of the year, of all of us, goes before Him to judge.

FROM SPRINGFIELD, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: If you will give me space, I will report the work on the Springfield charge.

We have had real revival meetings on this charge this year. The church has had a real spiritual awakening. There have been sixty-eight additions to the church—fifty-four by profession of faith, fourteen by letter.

Our Sunday school, Epworth League and Woman's Missionary Society are working nicely. We have a Wesley Brotherhood here at Springfield that we can justly boast of—fifty-nine members, as fine a body of men as you will find anywhere on earth, that are doing work for the Master.

We have taken up another preaching point since Conference at Albany. Brother L. W. Cain and myself held a nine days' tent meeting at Albany. As a result of this meeting, we will organize a church with nineteen members, and are planning to build a church costing $2,500. We have our plans under way. Albany is a nice little town nine miles west of Hammond, on the B. R. H. and E. Railroad. There is no church building of any denomination in the town, and a church is certainly needed here. To build this church is going to be a great undertaking for this little band, but by the help of God and the good people we are going to build a home for the Lord. We ask any one that will, to help us in this worthy undertaking. You can send your gift to Mr. Arthur Stratzner, Albany, La., or Rev. A. L. McQueen, Springfield, La. A response to this appeal will be greatly appreciated.

COKESBURY SCHOOL AT PLEASANT HILL, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a very successful training class in the Cokesbury course, "The Small Sunday School," at Pleasant Hill.

The school opened Sunday evening, the 16th, and closed Thursday night.

The devotional services were conducted by the pastor. The great interest Brother McLellan had in his subject, and the earnestness with which he presented "The Small Sunday School" were caught by all attending the course. His manner of the presentation of the subject was clear, concise and very instructive.

Some of the workers taking this course came a distance of twenty-eight miles every night.

We feel sure there was one condition in the school hard to duplicate—all of the officers and teachers of two large schools, one being fourteen miles distant, attended.

There will be twenty credits issued to thos attending.

Brother McLellan did double duty by teaching a school at Pelican in the afternoon.

We all appreciated his work very much, and we feel that our people were fortunate in having him with us.

May we as Christians all "study to show ourselves workmen approved of God, that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

D. F. ANDERS, Pastor.

FULL DAY AT BAY SPRINGS, MISS.

Sunday, Oct. 16, was a full and constructive day at Bay Springs. At 11 o'clock Brother Alford brought us his best and last message as presiding elder, using the subject, "Facing Your Record." It was unusually appropriate for the occasion, and bore fruit the day it was preached. This presiding elder has made an admirable record on the Newton District, and it will be no little undertaking for the next one really to take hold where he will leave off.

In the afternoon our fourth quarterly conference was held, and there seemed to be evidence that presiding elder and pastor would be paid in full and the Conference assessments pushing the top mighty close. It's been sixteen years since the charge has paid its Conference assessments in full. At this conference, Bay Springs agreed to take another Sunday and let Fouke go to the Rose Hill charge. This makes Bay Springs three Sundays a month, and they took on one Sunday morning at the beginning of this Conference year. All this means added financial responsibilities for Bay Springs, but they are able to do it and are doing it in fine spirit. "Watch Bay Springs grow."

In the evening of this full day there was rendered in the church auditorium one of the most touching, spiritual and educational programs one ever heard, entitled, "Home and Family." It was under the auspices of the Sunday school and Epworth League, sponsored by Miss Georgie Terral, teacher of the "Susanna Wesley" Bible class. From every angle it was of the very highest order, and will mean much for our homes and our church, spiritually.

I am winding up the year most happy and hopeful, and can report some genuine conversions, some little progress generally, in a spiritual way, and I am still praying for and working that financially we'll have a clean sheet.

FROM GONZALES, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: A few lines from the Gonzales charge. Everything is moving on nicely. Mission Special in full and over; also we observe fourth Sunday for missions; Superannuate Endowment fund, increase of 300 per cent over previous years; Conference claims, so far, 30 per cent paid in, with prospects of more before Conference (minutes show for past three years nothing that way); Orphanage, a substantial increase over last year; preacher and presiding elder almost doubled past two years' record.

We have received fifteen into the church, nine on profession of faith, six by letter; baptized sixteen infants and children; and lastly, but not the least, the folks have been very good and kind to this preacher and family.

We have held six meetings on the charge, and assisted several of the brethren in song service on other charges.

I wish to say, as others are saying, "It can be done." You know that this charge is a part French missionary charge, yet the faithful followers of this charge have responded readily to all appeals as they were put forth and explained. (Note emphasis on "explained.") Of course, all praise and glory is due the Lord, who blessed this charge with this victory this year. We are looking forward to greater work next year.

Yours in his service,
J. P. BONNECARRERE AND FAMILY.

P. S. May report at Conference the starting of a new church at Gonzales. Am also talking up about the Advocate, and believe that we will be ready by the beginning of the new year to put over the Advocate special—have already the assurance of several.

NEW ORLEANS YOUNG PEOPLE'S REVIVAL A DECIDED SUCCESS.

The Leaguers and young people who attended the Young People's revival, held at First Church during the week of Oct. 7 to 14, were greatly inspired and helped by the stirring messages presented by Rev. B. C. Taylor, whose understanding and deep insight into the needs of his hearers won from them a response that cannot be overestimated. His eloquent sermons ceased to be sermons alone and became heart-to-heart talks, touching the vital spots. The sins of indifference, carelessness, irresponsiveness and ungodliness were hurled against the challenge to live the Christ-like life.

Rev. Mr. Taylor's subjects were: "The Upward Look," "The Young People's Relation to the Church," "Hindrances to the Christian Life," "The Unescapable Christ," and "The Inevitable Christ."

This is the first time that a Young People's revival has been attempted by the Leaguers, but it is felt that its effects have been far-reaching, that the Leagues will be strengthened by its influence, and that the church as a whole will reap the benefits of this great meeting.

MORGAN CITY AND BERWICK HOLD YOUNG PEOPLE'S REVIVAL.

The Leaguers of Morgan City and Berwick are co-operating in holding a revival the first week of November. The meeting will be led by Rev. Adrien M. Serex, of New Orleans. This will be the second meeting of its kind to be held in the New Orleans District. The New Orleans Leaguers extend greetings and pray that this meeting may be a great success.

WEEKLY LETTER FROM YOUR FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Leaguers: At the time that I write I have completed my itinerary in Shreveport District, and am now in Monroe District. With the valuable assistance of our Shreveport District Secretary, Mr. Alvin Smith, of Centenary College, I reached almost every League in that district. Those Leagues that did not meet with us in Logansport at our De Soto Union meeting, or in Shreveport at our City Union meeting, I tried to visit in person. Due to a very limited time in the district I'm sorry to say that there were a few chapters I did not get to meet with.

In one week's time I visited Mooringsport, Oil City, Vivian, Belcher, Ida, Hosston, and Shreveport. I interviewed seven pastors, held four business meetings, four devotional meetings, two pep parties, organized one Hi League and talked with the district secretary and presiding elder.

I wish all of our Leaguers could have the pleasure of knowing Mrs. W. E. Cubely, of Mooringsport, for she is indeed a wonderful Christian character and a most valuable leader among the young people in the Hi League at Mooringsport.

Miss Elsie Pullen, of Vivian, is also a splendid character and a great inspiration to the Senior Leaguers as well as to her Sunday school class at Vivian. With her leadership the Leaguers have converted the old parsonage into an ideal League room. They removed the partitions, papered the walls, rewired the building, bought new chairs and are now paying for a new piano; and all of this has been accomplished in less than two years' time. We are proud of the Senior League at Vivian, and pray for its constant growth and success. Rev. J. M. Alford is their pastor; and although his family has been very unfortunate in having two cases of typhoid fever in the past two months, he and his wife are very much interested in League work, and are doing all they can to promote its welfare.

We organized a Hi League at Belcher with twelve splendid Leaguers. Rev. Guy M. Hicks, their pastor, pronounced them "the twelve disciples," and has warned them against one of them being the Judas!

At Ida and Hosston Rev. W. F. Roberts has two splendid Leagues. Brother Roberts is very greatly interested in the progress of his Young People.

On Monday night our Young People's revival for Shreveport City Union began. Rev. James B. Grambling is preaching each night, and Mr. L. F. Rau is leading the song service, with Mrs. Rau at the piano.

We are just so happy over the results of our Young People's revivals over the State. Pineville League is conducting theirs this week, with Rev. Guy Hicks and Rev. Don Dulaney preaching. Alexandria League begins its revival Oct. 23, with Rev. J. B. Grambling preaching. Arcadia's Young People's revival started Oct. 18, with Rev. Otis Spinks preaching. Brother Spinks will go from Arcadia to Jonesboro, where he will lead that League in a revival. In spite of flood conditions Ferriday Leaguers have just closed a very successful revival. Many other revivals are being conducted over the State, and we would like to hear of their dates and the results of their meetings. The Leaguers want to thank Rev. Don Dulaney, of Bossier City, for promoting this program of work over the State.

In his service,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

Leaguers of Ruston District are looking forward to a big day on Oct. 23, when the district will hold an all-day rally at Arcadia. A splendid program of work has been planned, through which the Young People will receive help and instruction concerning every phase of League work. Rev. G. A. Morgan is opening the doors of his church to the Leaguers for this meeting. As the Young People's revival in that church will close on that day, Rev. Otis Spinks will address the Leaguers at the morning hour. After a picnic lunch and fellowship period together, departmental classes will be conducted as follows: "Class on Administration," Elizabeth Langford, field worker; "First Department," Mr. Charles N. White, State League president; "Second Department," Miss Anna Pharr Turner, Shreveport; "Third Department," Miss Mary Searles, Minden District Secretary; "Fourth Department," Miss R. Langford, Monroe District Secretary. A business meeting and open forum will close the program for the day. Miss Gladys Dickerson, Ruston District Secretary, will preside at the business meeting. All Ruston Leaguers are expected to be represented. Let's have a large attendance!

AN EXCELLENT EPWORTH LEAGUE AT STATE TEACHERS' COLLEGE, HATTIESBURG, MISS.

I must take the liberty to convey to the readers of the Advocate some of my very pleasant experiences with the Methodist young people who are now attending State Teachers College at Hattiesburg.

They have one of the best Epworth Leagues that it has been my privilege to visit in a long time. An interesting and inspiring program was rendered by these young people during the eve-

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE
Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

FROM THE EROS CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few words from the Eros charge. We closed our last meeting Sunday night, the 8th, at Eros. Brother I. A. Patton did the preaching. We received eight members, with more to follow. Brothers Cudd, Henderson and Caraway did the preaching at the other churches. I feel that good was accomplished in all the meetings.

We have received twenty members this year. Conference is drawing near. We have had a very good year and hope to bring up a real good report, but can't say, "In full, Bishop."

The people have been nice to us in many ways. Best wishes to the Advocate.

H. C. MURPHY.

FROM COTTON VALLEY, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We closed a good meeting here last night. Brother J. B. Williams was at his best; he preached the old-time gospel with power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. His messages were great and appreciated by all who heard him. The church membership was largely revived, and there were several additions to the church.

This brings us to a close of the revival meetings on the charge. In this connection, I am glad to state that we had good meetings at the other two points on the charge. We were assisted at Bethel by Rev. D. H. Cassels, of Mississippi, who is a good preacher, and rendered good service. There were some added to the church roll.

At Pleasant Valley we were assisted by Brother H. W. Cudd, our pastor at Jena, La. Brother Cudd did some real good preaching, and is splendid help in a meeting. He won the hearts of the people. There were six additions to the church on profession of faith, and the spiritual tone of the church seems to be better. Upon the whole, we've had a good year. We've built a church here at Cotton Valley, and made some advance along most lines of church activity at each of the churches. We shall carry a good report to Conference, for which we give God the praise.

FROM THE METHODIS YOUTH OF CZECHOSLOVAKIIA.

The first gathering of Methodist youth ever held in the history of the Republic of Czechoslovakia was held at Slany, Aug. 13-15, 1927, with approximately 100 young people in attendance. Although only a district Epworth League convention, ten out of the eighteen Epworth Leagues in the Republic were represented by regularly appointed delegates.

Mrs. J. P. Bartak, Conference Secretary of Epworth Leagues in Czechoslovakia, declares that the meetig was most successful in every way. Probably one of the most interesting features was the fact that the young people paid all expenses of the gathering themselves, the expenses of the speakers and other necessary items being met by collections and contributions from the individual Leagues, and leaving, after all expenses had been paid, a balance of about $4. Methodists of Slany furnished rooms for the delegates, and in some instances board as well, while some of the delegates paid their own expenses. Mrs. Bartak believes that the time has come for a great National Assembly of Epworth Leagues of the Republic of Czechoslovakia.

From this convention the following letter of greeting was sent to Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, in charge of Methodist work in Europe:

"Dear Bishop: The Methodist young people from our ten congregations, assembled at the first gathering of the Methodist youth of Czechoslovakia at Slany, take the liberty of sending you their heartiest greetings as well as assuring you that the young people of our Epworth Leagues realize their tasks and their work for the kingdom of God. We believe that God, who has been with us until to-day, will also in future guide and bless us.

"God bless you in your work and be with you in your travels.

Signed: "LADISLAV SCHNEIDER,
"President of the First Gathering of the Methodist Youth."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

ning of my last visit. It portrayed excellent leadership and intense interest.

The enrollment in this chapter at the beginning of this session was seventy-two. It has now increased to one hundred and forty-four. There are one hundred and fifty-seven Methodist young people registered at the college. This indicates that about 100 per cent of our boarding students are members of the Epworth League, as the remaining few are very likely residents of Hattiesburg and are associated with the city Leagues.

The departments are well organized. Extra committees have been appointed to help carry out the extensive program of worship and training that is possible with such a large group of active Leaguers. The activities of the chapter are kept before the members through the medium of bulletins and posters.

The officers of State Teachers College chapter solicited the appointment of a student Methodist secretary for their college. These Leaguers, with the assistance of Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of Hattiesburg District, secured the services of Mr. E. B. Ellington, a sterling young man, who is now preparing for the Christian ministry. Mr. Ellington has jumped right into his work with a will. He is exerting every effort to have all the Methodist students enrolled in the city Sunday school and church of their choice. His efforts are already bearing fruit in the college Epworth League.

Following are the officers who are leading in this fine work: President, Mr. R. A. Anderson, of Wheeler, Miss.; vice president, Miss Ruby Ratliff, of Kosciusko, Miss.; secretary, Miss Jimmie Caldwell, of Sherman, Miss.; treasurer, Miss Elzie Penn, of Mount Olive, Miss.; Era agent, Mr. W. D. Cannon, of Pittsboro, Miss.; superintendent first department, Mrs. R. E. Crocker, of Lucedale, Miss.; superintendent second department, Miss Maysel Holmquist, of Amory, Miss.; superintendent third department, Miss Ivon Graham, of Pascagoula, Miss.; superintendent fourth department, Miss Hazel Dickerson, of Ripley, Miss.; chairman of program committee, Mrs. Audie Fugitt, of Hattiesburg, Miss.; choir leader, Mr. V. O. Franklin, of Pelahatchie, Miss.; chairman of music committe, Miss Gertrude Phillips, of Gatman, Miss.; reporter, Mr. W. D. Mitchell, of DeKalb, Miss.

B. F. HARRELL, Secretary,
Hattiesburg District Epworth League.

HARPERVILLE CHAPTER JOINS THE FIFTY-FIFTY CLUB.

At the last missionary program rendered on Sept. 28, the Leaguers of Harperville voted to join the Fifty-Fifty Club, and the vote was unanimously in favor. This chapter has about forty members, and their mission special pledge will be about $61. We congratulate this chapter upon this splendid decision. We know that they are in earnest about this pledge, since the Leaguers picked cotton and gave the money earned for the mission pledge.

ACHED ALL OVER

Was Suffering Dreadfully, Just "Wasting Away." Took Cardui, and Says It Helped Her.

Arlington, Texas.—A resident of this town for many years, Mrs. J. H. Jackson, says:

"I had suffered dreadfully with an aching all over my body. At times my head would give me so much trouble I could hardly stand it. I had been in bed for weeks and it looked like I was just wasting away.

"I took 9 bottles of Cardui and my strength began to slowly return.

"Since that time I have used this medicine a good many times and it has always helped me.

"At one time I took Cardui for several months regularly. I would be afflicted with sudden spells of dizziness when I could not stand on my feet. Everything would turn black before my eyes and I would feel as if I were going to faint. At times I would be quite nauseated. I turned at once to Cardui and took it till I was safely through."

Cardui is a mild, medicinal tonic, made from purely vegetable ingredients. It has been in use for over 50 years, and in that time thousands of women have written that Cardui helped them back to good health.

LUTHER MURRY RICHEY.

The death of Luther Murry Richey occurred in the Baptist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 13, 1927.

Mr. Richey was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Richey, of Ripley, Miss., and was loved by all who knew him. He finished at McTyere Training School in 1914, and was in Vanderbilt University two years, a member of the Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity. He taught at Massey School for two years, after which his health failed and he returned to his home at Ripley, Miss. Here he worked for the Ripley Drug Company and for life and property insurance companies.

He had an unusual love for Masonry, and was a steward in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Ripley, Miss. Old and young felt the influence of his life, and his splendid courage and fortitude during all the years of patient suffering.

From the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, Sept. 21, 1927:

Quoting a personal letter from Colonel Massey (now dean of the University of Tennessee) to his parents at this time: "I should be untrue to my feelings, if I did not write you a few lines about your son, Luther M. Richey, who is about to leave us. During a period of eighteen years I have not known a finer man. He is not only a most excellent teacher, but he is just such a man as I should like to have my little sons know during their formative period. They love him devotedly. His life at all times has been forceful and helpful among the boys here. In fact, we have never had a man of finer influence. To say I am sorry to see him go does not begin to express my feelings. During the trying days this year (the memorable flu epidemic of '18-'19) he has been my mainstay. I pray he may soon be strong again."

Resolutions of Ripley Methodist Church.

"An all-wise and far seeing God, in his infinite wisdom, having seen fit to take from the town of Ripley one of her most splendid young men, from this church and Sunday school one of their most faithful members, from his family a tender and loving relative, and from his associates a true and trusted friend, in the person of Brother Luther Richey;

"And, whereas, the Methodist church and Sunday school of Ripley, Miss., feel that we have sustained an irreparable loss in the going of this faithful member of our body, one who ever stood for those things which tended towards the moral, social and religious development of our community;

"And, whereas, we glory in his steadfast faith and in his marvelous courage, as displayed by his inspiring fight for physical health, which lasted over a period of many years and was marked by a fortitude, a bravery and cheerfulness which could indicate none other than a sterling Christian character;

"And, whereas, our hearts go out in deepest sympathy for his family and loved ones in their bereavement and sorrow at the loss of a dutiful son and devoted brother;

"And, whereas, we desire to express our feeling of appreciation for the splendid life which this noble, courageous and exemplary young man lived in our midst, as well as to signify our feeling of loss at his going;

"Therefore, be it resolved by the Methodist church and Sunday school in session assembled, That while we feel that a vacant place has been made in our organization that cannot be filled and we have lost a splendid Christian gentleman whose promise of future usefulness was unlimited, still, we realize that God always knows and acts for the best; therefore, we give him thanks for the years of usefulness that he gave to this splendid young man, the years in which he builded a character to which we unhesitatingly point as worthy of emulation;

"Be it further resloved, That we commend this departed brother for his useful life, his steadfast faith, his service to God and his fellow-man, and for the worthy example he always set as a Christian and a gentleman;

"Be it further resolved, That we extend to the family of Brother Richey our tenderest sympathy in these their dark hours of sadness and grief. Realizing that mere words cannot remove the anguish which they suffer in their great loss, we trust and pray that they may find comfort at the throne of the eternal Comforter of the universe who said, 'Come unto me all that are heavy laden and I will give you rest.'

"Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be lodged with the proper officers of the church and Sunday school that they may become a part of permanent record, and that another copy be sent the family of Brother Richey.

TO A COMMUNION CUP.

By Christine Harris McNees.

I know a cup of silver,
It's tarnished and bent and old,
Yet shines with a glorious splendor,
With the gleam of jewels and gold.

In its depths are the waters of life,
And the joy of perfect peace;
It's the star of hope, in a dying hour,
When the thorb of our hearts shall cease.

It holds the agony of Gethsemene,
It is blessed with a wondrous love;
For it holds the blood of our Saviour,
Jesus, Heavenly Dove.

And when my summons comes, O Lord,
I ask no greater bliss,
Than to touch this Holy Cup
With my most sacred kiss.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

FOR WHOM ARE YOU WORKING?

We once read this story in connection with the life of Dr. Russell H. Conwell, the distinguished pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, who died about two years ago:

"In the days when he was a captain in the Civil War there was a lad in his company named Johnnie Ring. At that time Dr. Conwell thought himself to be an atheist and would laugh at the boy for reading his Testament every evening before going to sleep. Then one day the opposing forces made a surprise attack, and in the battle Johnnie Ring gave his life for the sake of his captain.

"'When I stood beside the grave of Johnnie King,' said Dr. Conwell, 'and realized that he had died for love of me, I made a vow that has formed my life. I vowed that from that moment I would live not only my own life, but I would also live the life of Johnnie Ring. And from that moment I have worked sixteen hours every day, eight hours for Johnnie Ring's work, and eight hours for my own.'"

Surely if Dr. Conwell could give eight hours every day for the sake of the soldier who died for him, we can give our whole life to the Christ who died for us. And he gave his life for us because he loved us. Whom are we working for—self, or Savior?

A RUDE AWAKENING.

Citizens of New Orleans were amazed and shocked a few days ago when the announcement was made that the financial affairs of the city are in bad shape, a deficit of appalling amount having been discovered by an audit of the books. The statement is made that probably no crookedness is involved, but the condition has arisen through carelessness, neglect, and an extremely poor system of keeping books. It is very evident that affairs must be straightened out and the city put on a sound financial basis.

As we read the account of the discovery of this financial condition, we thought of the rude awakening that is coming some day to people who are careless and negligent of their moral condition and who never take account to see where they stand in the sight of God. They may think that everything is all right and they may drift along without a thought or care. But some day an audit will be made—and it will be a thorough one—and their shortcomings will stare them in the face. Then it is that they will call upon the mountains to fall on them and the hills to cover them; for they will see no way of escape.

Blessed is the man who keeps his house in order and his life right; for in an hour that he thinks not the Son of Man will come.

METHODISM AND THE NATION'S LIFE.

We are indebted to Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., for the facts given below concerning the place of Methodists in the nation's life. The article is taken from the bulletin of the First Methodist Church:

It is a matter of supreme joy to every Christian to find evidences of great outstanding Christian leadership in the affairs of the nation. But to that great body of Christian soldiers known as Methodists, there comes an added thrill when facts are brougth forth to show that the Methodists stand far out in front among the denominational groups that make up this great Christian leadership.

From different sources we have culled facts that have been widely published, showing the overwhelming percentage of Methodists who stand in places of leadership in the nation's life.

Take this fact relating to the intellectual life of the nation as shown by students enrolled in one hundred of the great State universities and colleges:

"A canvass of one hundred State universities and colleges to ascertain the religious affiliation of the students showed that in an enrollment of 180,675 there were 145,388 students who were members of some church.

"Of the denominations the Methodist church led:

Methodist	40,156
Presbyterians	24,131
Baptist	17,888
Roman Catholics	11,650

"Thirty-five thousand two hundred and eleven students failed to express a preference or give information as to their church relationship."

Now following this tremendous showing of Methodism in the student life of the nation, we gather from another source this statement as to Methodists in the faculties of one hundred of these great educational centers. Not to quote figures for all the denominations, we give here the number of faculty members from the eight leading bodies:

"It is a well known and generally accepted fact that there are more Methodist students in State colleges and universities than of any other church. Now figures are presented which show that the Methodists lead in the faculties of one hundred of these institutions. The figures follow: Out of 5,962 faculty members, 4,718, or 72 per cent, are church members. Among these are:

Methodist	1,152
Presbyterians	1,089
Baptist	548
Congregationalist	378
Disciples	319
Episcopalians	176
Lutherans	169

"These figures show as conclusively as figures can that among the churches of this country the Methodist church is the educational leader of America. This fact, however, has not yet got into the heads of a great many people."

Turning now to the religious affiliation of the members of Congress, we find an inspiring record as to Christian leadership in the halls of our nation's capitol. And, as usual, Methodists stand out again, conspicuously predominating in our law-making bodies. Giving figures for only the eight churches again, we have the following to show:

Methodist	119
Episcopal	79
Presbyterian	74
Baptist	53
Congregational	38
Roman Catholics	36
Christian Disciples	22
Lutheran	19

"While much is being said of the decline of the influence of the church, these figures bring out strikingly the fact that the little church on Main Street, the meeting-house in the wildwood and the big city church are still furnishing the intelligence and character which direct the destinies of the nation.

"America was founded by men who were, in the main, devoted believers in the Christian faith, and the nation will not go far astray so long as it is directed according to the principles of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man as laid down by the Christian church."

NEXT TO GIVING IT AWAY.

By the authority of the Publishing Committee, a schedule of club rates has been fixed for the Advocate that ought to put its circulation at least in the neighborhood of what it ought to be, if price has anything to do with circulation. These club rates are as low as can be made with any regard for sound business principles.

The regular price of the Advocate is $2 a year. The club rates are as follows:

Clubs of 20 to 50, $1.50 a year each, money to accompany club.

Clubs of 50 to 100, $1.25 a year each, money to accompany club.

Clubs of 100 or more, $1 a year each, money to accompany club.

Where renewals are included in clubs, all arrearages must be paid.

The club offer expires on May 1, 1928.

The essential features of the club offer are the wholesale handling of the names and the cash-with-order payment. Clubs are not restricted to single churches, but may be made up from the whole pastoral charge. Surely there is not a charge that ought not to have at least twenty subscribers to the official organ of the church; and there are many charges that ought to be in the hundred-or-more class. We think the price is all right; we hope the circulation will be largely increased.

THE SUPREME ISSUE IN RELIGION.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

There is a disposition in our times to make central in religion that which is not thus made in the New Testament.

The social aspects of the gospel are emphasized and the relations of men to one another are esteemed to be of supreme importance. But while these things are worthy of the most serious consideration, they do not involve the supreme issue in religion as the matter is set forth in the New Testament.

The New Testament makes the relation of the soul to God the supreme matter of life. It emphasizes above all else "Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts xx:21).

If God is holy and sin is the contradiction of holiness, repentance must be the first demand made upon all sinners. The holiness of the King requires repentance as the condition of entrance into the Kingdom.

When John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness the burden of his cry to the Jewish nation was, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matthew iii:2). Jesus continued to proclaim the same gospel of repentance; for it is recorded that "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matthew iv:17). At a later date in his ministry the Master was continuing to call people to repentance. To men who reported to him the cruel act of Pilate, who had mingled the blood of certain Galileans with their sacrifices, Jesus said: "Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans because they suffered such things? I tell you, Nay: but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke xiii:2 and 3). Again, referring to the eighteen persons upon whom the tower of Siloam fell he said: "Think ye that they were sinners above all that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you, Nay: but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke xiii:4 and 5).

In the group of pathetic parables of the Lost Sheep, the Lost Coin, and the Prodigal Son, our Lord emphasizes the importance of repentance by declaring that joy is in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

In so far as the Scriptures teach us, there is no movement in the hearts of men that augments the joy of heaven except repentance. This is the teaching of Jesus, and it accords with the essential nature of God.

After his resurrection the Master said to his Apostles: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved the Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke xxiv:46-47). This was the great gospel they were commissioned to preach, and when they went forth to fulfill their high commission this was the gospel that they constantly proclaimed.

On the day of Pentecost when thousands of men were brought under conviction they cried to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" and to this question of intense emotion St. Peter said unto them, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins" (Acts ii:37-38).

The same gospel of repentance St. Paul preached to the philosophers of Athens, declaring that God "Now commandeth all men everywhere to repent: because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained: whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead" (Acts xvii:30-31).

It thus appears that to men of all classes and all races and of all states of culture the same gospel of repentance was preached by the Apostles. And men were mightily moved by the preaching of this gospel. A typical example of the intense emotion and profound interest excited by it is that of the jailer at Philippi who fell down before Paul and Silas and cried out, "What must I do to be saved?" (Acts xvi:29-30).

The penitent sinners who turned to Christ under the preaching of the Apostles manifested a deep sense of sin. Hence the intense emotion with which they asked the way of salvation.

One of the fatal defects in the preaching and hearing of the gospel to-day is the absence of the sense of sin in both preachers and hearers. Sin seems not to be to them the desperate thing it is; nor does salvation seem to be so indispensable as the Apostles and all the great preachers of all the ages have esteemed it to be.

The shallow psychology of the present time makes sin more a misfortune than a thing to be repented of. It prattles about "reactions," but finds no place for repentance.

And the church seems affected by the prevalence of this materialistic philosophy. The church seems to be afraid of emotion, and not a few preachers deprecate anything akin to religious excitement and depreciate the legitimate feeling that is inseparable from genuine repentance. Preaching is accordingly modified to conform to the conception of unemotional religion.

Of course, there may be spurious emotion excited by appeals to shallow sentiments; but it is nevertheless the duty of the church and its ministry to promote religion by appeals which stir the deepest emotions of the soul.

The supreme issue between a human soul and God cannot be raised without awakening the deepest feelings, and there has never been a great revival of religion that was unaccompanied by the most ardent emotions.

Many men are now perceiving the imperative need of a revival of religion; but not so many are seeing that there can be no revival of religion until the impenitent and God-forgetting multitudes are brought to repentance. It is worse than idle to expect a real return to God upon the part of souls who do not feel any need of his forgiveness, nor any necessity for salvation through the atonement of Jesus Christ. When men have a just sense of the nature of sin they will surely turn to Christ as their only hope of deliverance.

To the sinners at Jerusalem St. Peter declared with reference to Jesus, "Neither is their salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts iv:12). In these solemn words the imperative necessity of salvation is declared and the utter hopelessness of salvation apart from Jesus Christ and his atoning mercy is asserted.

To some now as to those who heard Peter then, such a declaration will seem to be an expression of narrowness and intolerance; but it is only the candid proclamation of unalterable truth.

Toleration is in our day magnified above all other virtues. Men are exhorted to believe that anything may be true, and that means that everything may be false. Such a notion is intolerable tolerance. It is born not of kind consideration for men; but it springs from indolent indifference to truth and a sinful selfishness which prefers to leave men in danger rather than to displease them with Christian candor and fidelity.

Again, let it be said the supreme issue in religion is repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. This saving gospel must take precedence over any mere "Social gospel."

Men are not to be insensible of their duties to one another. They are not to exhibit hardness of heart in the presence of human want and distress; but there will be no danger of inhumanity towards one's fellowmen if one has really repented towards God and turned to Christ for salvation. The only enduring humanitarianism takes its rise in love to God. When the sense of God is feeble in any soul, the sense of duty towards other souls will be equally weak.

All the great revivals of religion of which history takes account have brought forth the most tender ministries to human needs and the most abounding philanthropy for the relief of human want. An age of faith is an age of love for men, and a faithless age is a period of heartlessness toward men.

The revival which is needed at this time is first of all a turning to God, which will be inevitably followed by the turning of men in affection toward their fellowmen.

CHILD-LIFE IN THE CHURCH.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

On two distinct occasions Christ set forth his estimate of child life in the church. In Matthew 18:1-6 we read:

"In that hour came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who then is greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And he called to him a little child, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me: but whoso shall cause one of these little ones which believe on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea."

In Mark 10:13-16, it is written: "And they brought unto him little children, that he should touch them: and the disciples rebuked them. But when Jesus saw it, he was moved with indignation, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me; forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall in no wise enter therein. And he took them in his arms, and blessed them, laying his hands upon them."

Similar language occurs in Luke's gospel. The passage in Mark is exceedingly explicit., It says: "Little children"—the Greek indicates "infants;" and the record is: "He took them in his arms"—they very certainly were "babes."

In all of these passages he insists that even little children were members of his spiritual kingdom and must be recognized as such.

He who saw deeper into the hearts of children than many of their mothers do, understood that there is in the heart of even early childhood a Christian tendency, and despite the allurements otherwise, they go to Christ with their hearts and heart-burdens; and he demands that the right to thus go should not be taken from them. "Forbid them not."

When his Father and ours set up the old Jewish church he commanded that the Jewish child should be admitted by the rite of circumcision into full membership when eight days old. The Jews of Christ's time, while observing the letter of this law, had lost the spirit of it;. and borrowing from their heathen neighbors a low pagan concept of child life, refused to consider the circumcised child a full member of the church and had added another rite administered when twelve years old—a sort of confirmation—so called by modern Jews—by which the child was and is supposed to become a full member of the church. Against all of this our Lord entered his vigorous protest when some mothers with a Christly impulse, which they hardly understood, brought "infants"—says Luke, "he took them up in his arms;" and he said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me—forbid them not! of such is the kingdom of God"—the church. (The reckless man who denies that the Christ when he used this phrase did mean the church, undertakes a big program for himself.) It was our Christ's vigorous protest against the current Jewish custom of forbidding to little children the full privileges of church membership.

At another time he protested even more vigorously against the wrongs done to the children of his day: calling to him a little child he said: "Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me." The childless couple who give a home and parental love and care to a homeless orphan, will find by and by that they have received into the home the very Christ. He declares emphatically: "Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me" (Matt. 18:5. He adds: "But whoso shall cause one of these little ones to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he be sunk in the depth of the sea."

Earnestly desiring to impress his church with the supreme importance of this matter, he quickly turns from fearful warning to tenderest, beautiful persuasion: "I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father." Whatever this difficult passage may mean, beyond all question it teaches that God and the Christ and the angels are all profoundly interested in our little children, and are gladly ministering to them.

Maybe your reasoning or theological teaching on this matter does not satisfy fully your heart: then hear the Christ's sure word. Of little children he said: "Of such"—little children—"is the kingdom of God" (Mark 10:14). "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18.3).

Every sinner in the world is a backslider, an apostate: and God and our Christ and the Holy Spirit are now moving heaven and earth and angels and men to keep our babies from becoming apostates. Our church very wisely declares that "all men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer, heirs of life eternal and subjects of the saving grace of the Holy Spirit."

An English poet has sung:

"A babe in glory is a babe forever."

I shall not endorse this— I do not know. But I do know that more babies than grown-ups go to heaven.

"It came upon us by degrees—
We saw it ere its shadow fell—
The knowledge that our God had sent His messenger for Baby Belle.

"We shuddered with unlanguaged pain
And all our hopes were changed to fears,
And all our thoughts ran into tears
Like sunshine into rain.

"But what did dainty Baby Belle?
She only crossed her little hands—
She only looked more meek and fair—
We wove the roses round her brow,

"White buds, the summer's drifted snow—
Wrapped her from head to foot in flowers
And thus went dainty Baby Belle
Out of this world of ours" and into the garden of God. O Christ, stir us all up to help Thee to save our babies! We thank thee for that word of thine: "It is not the will of the Father in heaven that one of these little ones should perish."

WHAT? WHO? HOW?

By Rev. James H. Felts.

What is a fellow to do? What is he to believe? Whom is he to follow? How is he to do it? A bishop shall be my leader! Which bishop? Give me an editor for a leader! Which editor? Suppose we turn to our college professors. They are sane and sound. Which one, please. We little fellows are given presiding elders to look after us, and tell us about it. But please get them to agree among themselves before you make it final. What about our city pastors? In this direction you find turtle pie, ala soft shell, containing any flavor you wish, from the hind leg of a mule to fried chicken.

What shall we read? Here again we have such variety as DeFoe never dreamed of in the wildest flights of his perfervid imagination. Edgar Allan Poe was a baby dreamer when the raven sat above his door compared to this field of folly and fuss. Read only the old books and be called a fossil. Read only the new ones and be called a heretic. Read none of them and know yourself to be a dullard. Read all of them and know nothing whatever. But, you answer, there are plenty of wise men who can tell you what to read. Name one and see what happens.

At Columbus last fall the fine woman who was representing the Publishing House during our Conference was as careful about recommending books as a man with a pet boil. Showing this writer a really splendid and thought-provoking book, she said: "Bishop ——— highly recommends this book as a sermon maker." I smiled. Quickly, she said: "I nearly forgot. Bishop ——— is taboo in this Conference, is he not?" I said to her frankly: "Madam, I believe I would not quote any man as endorsing any of these books. To do so is to court criticism and lose a customer."

In my own charge a member of my church said to me recently: "That paper can't come into my home. It is rotten." And he was speaking of a certain church paper that I considered almost too innocent to live. Who is to tell us about these things with authority? "Why," says a good friend of mine, "read your church papers, the books on sale at your Publishing House, follow the plans given out by your leaders, and live forever." But another equally good friend says: "Not on your life, Sir. Your leaders are blind, your Publishing House saturated with modernism, your church papers edited by mollycoddles. Follow such leadership and you will help destroy your church and damn your soul."

Ahem!

Can any man among us speak with authority? Please introduce me to him and let me die. Advocate going to heaven and be called a sentimentalist, a mystic to be smiled at. Speak of hell and be told, "There ain't no such place." Say, chance reader, I, even I, a man in whose head and heart is not found so much as a question mark with eternal verities, preaching a series of sermons recently on the Apostles Creed, saying with all my heart why I believed the whole of it, gave mortal offense. I am not sure just what the offending words were. I made bold to say what I have said in substance from my youth up, strengthened by reading and prayer, and experience. For instance, I said: "I do not discover the mind of God when I read that Elisha cursed little children who mocked him, and bears tore them like rags; I do discover the mind of God when I read how my Lord took little children in his arms and blessed them, saying, 'of such is the kingdom of heaven.' I do not get much food from the marvelous feat of Sampson who caught a mighty bunch of foxes, tied their tails together in pairs, placed a fire-brand between them and loosed them in the fields of the Philistines. Nor do I shout over the record that same Sampson made with the jaw-bone of an ass. I do get spiritual food from "love thy enemies, do good to them that persecute you, overcome evil with good," and the like. The Old Testament has never meant much to me save in the light of the New Testament.

True, the Genesis account of creation needs no defense. I can't even try to believe anything else. I am unable to follow any process of reasoning that does not lead me ultimately to, "In the beginning God," and "God created."

More, I find that the other fellow lands there if you will give him time. He may start out with bold assumption and bitter personalities, but there he lands if he lands at all. Even so consummate an egotist as Edward Murray East (see October Forum), whose "editorial skill can breathe life into bones whose dryness would have discouraged Ezekiel himself;" whose capacity for the epithets of scientists (?), and free use of that time-honored instrument known chiefly as Sampson's implement of war is positively amazing, confesses that "mistakes have been made in the past and will be made in the future."

There are just two roads—God and Chance. Take your choice. The Chance worshipper may have a tadpole generation in a hot mud setting, but before he gets through he will likely "spill the beans," "kick over the churn," forsake the imaginary promises, and land "kerplunk" where most intelligent mortals land, "In the beginning God."

In the midst of this katy-did generation many thousands of splendid citizens have found the "one pearl of great price," and are happy and hopeful—"Jesus Christ and him crucified." He is the solution of our problems; he satisfies every legitimate demand of our souls. I believe in his incarnation, virgin birth, life of service, death and resurrection. He is more real than the consciousness of my own being. Knowing him, miracles do not disturb me. Knowing him, death is not a closed grave but an open door. He is more than church, or all the petty theories about the church. Yea, trusting in him I am not seriously disturbed by any or all of the dogmatic assertions of men in the church or out of it who cry aloud and spare not—the other fellow.

What? Who? How?

The only satisfactory answer for me is "Jesus Christ and him crucified." I found him in a Methodist home. I have followed him poorly but hopefully in a Methodist church. I am yet hearing the "still small voice." And I "am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor heights, nor depths, nor any other creature shall be able to separate me from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord!"

THE CONQUERER.

By Rev. S. D. Howard.

Thou Lamb of God, that once was slain
And buried, art alive, not to die again;
Thou didst conquer death, the grave, and hell,
That we, thy people, in heaven might dwell.

Lamb of God, once dead but alive to-day,
Art the living truth, the life the way;
We look to thee, Conqueror of death, hell, the grave,
For redemption, and to be forever saved.

We all must die, and be buried in the sod,
But we'll arise, and go to meet our God;
Then we shall see him, face to face,
And sing the story of redeeming grace.

Lamb of God, Conqueror of death and sin,
By faith in thee, we enter in;
Thou Conqueror, thee we love and adore,
We trust thee now, and shall forevermore.

Haughton, La.

REV. LYMAN CARLEY.

The subject of this sketch was born in Perry County, Mississippi, March 29, 1849. The exact location of the birthplace was about twelve miles southeast of what is now Hattiesburg. When a very small child his father moved some twenty or twenty-five miles further to the southeast into a community then known as Enon, where the Presbyterians had established a high school. Here they lived for about fifteen years. Soon after the close of the Civil War the family moved into Marion County near Columbia, Mississippi.

Brother Carley was named for his father, who had been named for Dr. Lyman Beecher, the father of Henry Ward Beecher. His father was born in Dublin, New Hampshire, May 16, 1807. He came south when a young man and settled near the Mississippi Coast. He was happily married to Miss Harriet Fillingim, who had been born and reared in Mississippi. Both parents died near Columbia, Mississippi. The mother preceded the father by about eleven years, passing away on June 4, 1882 at the age of sixty-five, while the father lived to be eighty-six and went on to meet his other loved ones on September 11, 1893.

Brother Carley was licensed to preach at Columbia, Mississippi, on April 10, 1869, Rev. Henry P. Lewis, presiding elder. The young licentiate had just passed his twentieth birthday. The following December he was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Jackson, Mississippi, Bishop Holland N. McTyeire, presiding. The Journal of the next Conference shows that the young preacher had passed his examinations on the first and the second years of the Course of Study and that he was admitted into full connection and ordained deacon by Bishop Seth Doggett at Crystal Springs, Mississippi, in December, 1870. Two years later the records show that Brother Carley was ordained elder by Bishop Kavanaugh at Brandon, Mississippi, in December, 1872. The writer of this sketch would have thought that there might have been some error in the Journals in that Brother Carley was ordained elder just three years from the time he was admitted, but an examination of a brief life history which Brother Carley prepared before his death and left in the hands of his son, Rev. H. T. Carley, confirms the records of the Journals, and the interesting fact is developed that he was really admitted into full connection and ordained deacon just one year from the date of his admission on trial. In December, 1877, Brother Carley located, at his own request, and spent the next year teaching school near Columbia, Mississippi. He leaves for us the following record concerning his location: "Becoming convinced that I had made a mistake in locating, in December of 1878 I was readmitted into the Mississippi Conference."

In December, 1912, Brother Carley asked to be placed on the superannuate list and the request was lovingly granted by his brethren. Forty-two years before he had entered the ranks as an itinerant Methodist preacher. With the exception of three years in the old Enterprise District, most of his life was spent on circuits, though he served several of the important stations of the Conference.

On August 9, 1871, Brother Carley was happily married to Miss George Ann Thompson, of Smith County, Mississippi. The Lord blessed their home with seven children—four boys and three girls. Two of the children—one boy and one girl—died in childhood. The others—George L. Carley, C. R. Carley, H. T. Carley, Mrs. Stephen S. Thomas, and Mrs. J. A. Bradford—are still living to bless the memory of a consecrated father and mother. In a brief sketch of his own life now lying before me is this beautiful tribute to his wife: "On January 8, 1922, my dear wife departed to her heavenly home. No preacher ever had a truer and more self-sacrificing wife than mine. She loved her Lord, his church and his Word. She was a great reader of good literature and was far above the average in intelligence and information. When the time came for her to go on, her lamp was trimmed and burning. She was ready to go and was worthy of her reward." We also find this tribute to the children, which will surely be a great inspiration and joy to them: "Our children have been a source of unspeakable comfort and joy to us."

Brother Carley's last charge was at Ellisville, Miss., where he was dearly loved and where he bought a modest but beautiful little cottage in which he spent ten happy years with his dear wife, her mother, and their youngest daughter, Miss Grace, now Mrs. J. A. Bradford, of Laurel, Miss. Brother Carley continued to live here until a little more than a year before his death. Most of the last two years of his life were spent with his daughter in Ohio, Mrs. Stephen S. Thomas. This was a happy time for him because of the new contacts and the opportunities to see many places and things he had longed to see. It was most interesting to read the letters he wrote concerning his visits to the large cities of the East and also many famous historical spots. His last days were spent in the home of his son in New Orleans, Rev. H. T. Carley, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He attended the session of the Conference at McComb City in November, 1926, and enjoyed its proceedings. He was stricken with a cold just before the close of the Conference from which he never fully recovered. He continued gradually to grow weaker, but with a faith in God which was triumphant, until he passed away on April 20, 1927, in the city of New Orleans, surrounded by members of his immediate family. The next day the remains were carried to Ellisville, Miss., and tenderly laid beside those of his devoted wife, who had preceded him to the Glory Land.

One other important fact in Brother Carley's life story needs to be noted, namely, his spiritual development. His parents were sturdy Presbyterians. His personal testimony here is far better than any comment the writer might make, hence I quote his own words, written not long before his death: "I do not remember any time when prayer was not one of the habits of my life. I was always fond of reading religious books. When I was about sixteen years old I joined the Presbyterian Church. That was the only denomination that made Enon a place of regular worship. I became thoroughly indoctrinated in the teachings of the Shorter Catechism and of the Confession of Faith. Very early in life I felt that it would be my life-work to preach the gospel, and I expected to do this in the Presbyterian Church. In my seventeenth year we moved to Marion County, Miss. It was here during the next two or three years that I passed through the greatest intellectual and moral struggle of my life. My call to preach as I grew towards manhood became a conviction that I could not escape. Do what I might and think as I might, the feeling that 'woe is me if I preach not the gospel,' would not depart from me. Then the thought came to me that if everything had been fixed before the foundation of the world, as I was taught by Calvinism, there was no use to preach. So there were two serious problems before me day and night that I had to solve—the call to preach and the question of theological doctrine. No one, except those who have had similar experiences, knows how terrible were the struggles through which I passed. But at last, by the grace of God, I was led out of the dark entanglements of Calvinism into the light and liberty of Arminianism. My faith in the Arminianism of the Methodist Church has never wavered from that day to this. I shall always love the Presbyterian Church, and if I were not a Methodist I would be a Presbyterian. In fact, I was never formally dismissed from the Presbyterian Church, and I was never formally received into the Methodist Church, so I have a kind of kinship with both denominations."

Thus are summed up some of the outstanding facts of a most beautiful and effective life. To know Rev. Lyman Carley was to love him. Surely a prince in Israel has been called from our midst.

Let us speak now as one who loved him dearly during life and now reveres his memory. In the first place, Brother Carley was an accurate and sound scholar. His educational advantages were limited, and yet by careful reading and constant effort he acquired all the knowledge equivalent to a degree from a standard college. He had the rudiments of an education during his boyhood at old Enon, and on this foundation he erected a worthy intellectual structure. He never ceased to study. His mind never grew old. There was always the freshness of aspiring youth in his mental outlook. This writer will never forget a paper prepared by him on "The Seat of Authority in Religion," and read before the Pastors' Association of Laurel, Miss., during 1915.

Brother Carley's visits into the homes of his people were models in pastoral visitation. It has been this writer's happy privilege to assist him in many protracted meetings and during these times to visit with him in the homes of his people. There was never anything stiff about these visits. He had the faculty of interesting every member of the family visited. His stories while humorous were always dignified and were told with but one thing in mind—the bringing of those who heard closer to the Lord he served. The little children loved him and he had the joy of leading many of them to know the Lord.

Brother Carley was an exceptionally good preacher. His work was more that of a teacher than an exhorter. His themes were well thought out and he never went before his people with unbeaten oil.

Brother Carley's religion found its expression in every one of life's contacts, but it was in his own home where it seemed to shine forth in all its glory. What a joy it was to be in that home! While firm, he never spoke harshly. It was love that ruled in all his relationships and this love found its ripeness in the family circle.

We miss his sturdy frame and his beaming countenance. We will not hear his gentle voice here any more in its godly counsel and its wise admonitions, but we know that he has answered the roll call "up yonder." We are all better because we knew him and we expect to clasp his hand on the other side.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

All truth, no matter whence its source, if received and accepted by consciousness, if one is sincere and honest, has to be approved thereby. Men accept truth through faith in its truthfulness. "He did not many mighty works among them because of unbelief," is a principle of wide and all-inclusive application. Applied to the acceptance of spiritual life, and a knowledge of God, it shuts the gates and holds fast the citadel of sin. If science be truth and only truth in its reaches into the realms of nature and matter and its often attempts to uncover the secrets of these existent phenomena, surely the votaries of science have no right to exclude divine truth, accepted and inborn to the same consciousness, that weighs stars and claims the far sweep of all things as its fields of thought and discovery. Jesus lives objectively to-day in art, in literature, in the New Testament; but he lives more really and consciously in the heart of the sinner forgiven and the saint sanctified by his presence, than in all books ever written, the songs sung, or the pictures painted. Peter, James, and John walked and communed with the incarnate Christ through the years, but really knew him consciously after Pentecost, and that knowledge was the highest truth, the greatest science, ever known to man. It is a wonderfully attractive pursuit to study the works of God in all the wide vista of nature, but far more satisfying to know him through his own appointed way by faith and prayer. For this knowledge and wisdom are one, indeed and in truth.

The theologians are still in the front rank of thinkers. The harsh, fatalistic Calvinism of the eighteenth century, a heritage from the heathen Greek philosophers through Augustine, has been relegated to the scrap heap. The decision that our wills are given us to do God's will is the basal conclusion of the twentieth century theology, and that the God is not an autocrat, overruling man's moral agency, but a wise, loving Father, whose power and grace are co-operative and helpful—not compulsory. But modern science, glorifying nature, almost deifying her works, unblushingly teaches that men are slaves or subject to laws from which there is no escape. The trouble with these writers on behaviorism is they are at the tail end of the procession. They are talking and writing with assurance upon results, and ignoring causes; and they are also failing to take into account the human agency as it acts and reacts in bringing about these results. In other words, so intensely physical or rational is this new psychology that it maintains we are caught in the machine and hurried on to our destiny willy, nilly. Theology has long since discarded this hideous philosophy.

When will the scientists catch up with the theologian, whom they are accustomed to deride or count as effete in their systems of thought? All life and being, pulsing, moving, acting, is an argument and a protest against this slavish system. No, I am not a galley slave chained to the oar of a relentless purpose, but a man, breathing the free air, and neither God nor nature enslaves or fetters me.

"THE SAWDUST TRAIL."

By Bob Shuler.

I have just seen in the Christian Century notice of the deliverance of Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield, speaking before a joint meeting of the two West Virginia Conferences (North and South), in which he is supposed to have declared that the falling away of membership from the Protestant churches was the result of deflections among those who have marched down "sawdust trails" and who "thought they knew Christ but did not." The Christian Century adds: "To find a Methodist bishop addressing a Methodist Conference containing Methodists from both sides of the Mason and Dixon line and pleading for an end of mass evangelism is a sign of the times worth noting."

We also note that some of our Advocates have given prominent notice both to the Bishop's statements and the comment of the Christian Century. If the Bishop is proclaiming against cheap, claptrap, frothy methods in evangelism, we join him. If the Christian Century means by "mass evangelism," that character of evangelism that seeks to advertise numbers, making it appear that thousands have been saved when in fact little actual salvation has been accomplished, then we commend the Christian Century for her comment.

But we do sincerely trust that neither in the mind of Bishop Thirkield nor the editor of the Christian Century was there a desire to minimize the genuineness or the glorious accomplishments of the real, vital, effective revival of religion, out of which Methodism grew and by the results from which have come her ingatherings through the generations.

We do not for a moment believe that sane reasoning or actual statistics will lay at the door of the Methodist revival of religion any responsibility for a deflection of those who have entered our fold as a result of the fires that have burned upon our altars. On the other hand, we do believe that a study of the facts will show that our decrease in the reception of members on profession of faith has kept pace with our failure to emphasize and use the altars of the old-fashioned Methodist revival. And we must remember that the only fair and honest manner of computing our advance is in the actual salvation of the souls of men and the bringing of them into the church as a result of their personal faith in Jesus as their Savior.

Our danger to-day is that we will seek to excuse ourselves for results that are not accruing by laying the blame upon the cheapened processes that have taken the place of the genuine revival rather than upon the fact that we as Methodist preachers are not in large number emphasizing and conducting that type of revival any longer. The danger is not in a "sawdust trail" so much as it is in the tendency to desert the altar of penitence where genuinely convicted men cry for mercy. It matters little what kind of trail is substituted for penitential tears and accepting faith, the loss will be tragic. Sawdust in place of penitential prayer is bad business. So is social service, moral reform, education, "character salvation," or any other substitute that seeks to displace a genuine work of grace in the heart of the individual.

In saying the above we do not mean to discount social service, moral reform, education or the development of character. All are important in the extreme. So is "mass evangelism" often important in awakening large communities and bringing together God's people in mighty crusades. But the one all-important thing is for men to weep and pray themselves through to God and arise with the glow of a new life on their faces, their sins forgiven, born indeed into the kingdom of his grace.

Any man who opposes this character of evangelism stands face to face with the solid and insurmountable wall of Methodist history. By this process were we digged from the pit. Out of the loins of this spiritual exercise were we born. Nor is there anything that either sanity or culture dare bring against that character of revival that produced new creatures in Christ Jesus and sent men forward through the weary miles ahead in the strength of the Lord our God. Moreover, our prosperity in all things has risen and subsided with the ebb and flow of the revival fervor. In the revival has been life. Therein is the vital force that has hurled obstacles from our path. Therein is the power of that Spirit of God that hath accomplished that which the might of man and the power of his charities were helpless to perform. Only as the revival passion has set the stubble fields on fire have we leaped forward as God's mightiest evangel to the generations.

I have little faith in sawdust. I have almost as little in mass formations and bulk enterprises. But I believe wholeheartedly in old-time conviction for sin, genuine repentance, a faith in Jesus as a personal Savior that will take no denial, a glorious experimental work of grace in the heart of man that makes him a new creature and a triumphant strength from God for the battle line ahead. Such was the emphasis placed by the men of yesterday. A cheaper gospel or a shorter route will leave their sons shorn of strength and the church our fathers left us lean prey for the wolves that devour.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

(Adopted by Alligator Sunday School, Alligator, Mississippi.)

Whereas, an all wise Father has removed from our midst our beloved pastor, Brother C. P. Moss; be it resolved:

1. That in his death the churches of Alligator and Duncan and the Methodist Conference will feel the loss,

2. That while we mourn the absence of our pastor, we know he has passed to the Great Beyond to receive the reward for a life spent in good deeds on earth. He was loyal to his church. He has erected a living monument to himself that will outlive the marble that will be fashioned for his grave.

3. That our hearts go out in tender sympathy for his bereaved ones. May they bow reverently to that mysterious power—death—to which all human opposition is vain, which removes the monarch from his throne as ruthlessly as the peasant from his cottage.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and same be spread on the minutes of our Sunday school.

Respectfully submitted,

R. S. MOORE.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Please let us again call your attention to the importance of handing in your reports early in the session of the Conference—not later than the morning of the second day; also the importance of making out reports correcly; adding up all figures; putting your name, district and charge at the top of report, also on back of envelope containing report and checks.

Write separate check for each claim, stating on check what it is for.

Complying with these requests will save time and confusion, not only for the auditing committee, but for the statistical secretaries and those who make up the minutes of the Conference.

Hand reports to W. T. Griffin, W. H. Lane or the writer.

Fraternally,

THE PERAMBULTOR PERAMBULATES.

The World's Sunday School Convention, Los Angeles, July, 1928.

By Van Carter.

In my two previous articles I have tried to point out two of the most outstanding American wonders that the delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention will see on their way to California July next. These two wonders are the world's greatest puzzle: The Petrified Forests of Arizona, and the world's first wonder, the Grand Canyon of Arizona. While travel is to a certain extent an education in itself, still the Louisiana delegates who will make up our special train to this World's meeting will receive a great deal more than travel information and inspiration.

We must not lose sight of the fact that we are going to a convention of Sunday school workers who will come from the four quarters of the earth, and thus we will rub elbows with the Christian people of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, South America, New Zealand, Hawaii, and the Islands of the Sea. Some forty countries will send official delegates who, for seven full days, July 11-18, inclusive, under the general theme, "Thy Kingdom Come," will discuss and plan for the coming of the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in the hearts and lives of the boys and girls in every country throughout the world. As usual in such great gatherings, the morning sessions will listen to the gospel story as it is building its way to-day into the lives of the people in the various countries of the world. The afternoon sessions, however, will be of a conference character under the general theme, "Education for Christian World Fellowship." Six simultaneous conferences will be conducted under the following sub-topics:

1. "Building a Curriculum for Christian World Fellowship."
2. "Training a Leadership for Christian World Fellowship."
3. "Methods Employed for Developing a Christian World Fellowship."

In addition, a world congress of youth will be held, in which the youth of all nations will be invited to participate; and preceding the convention on July 9 and 10 a conference of National and International Religious Education Association officials will be held. In the lobbies of the convention auditorium a world-wide exhibit of Sunday school material, supplies, and equipment will be displayed. The uniqueness of this exhibit will be its arrangement by Continental Areas, with guides in attendance from many lands to explain and interpret the work presented.

A World Convention of this type comes to America about once every thirty years, and it is natural for kingdom leaders of all denominations to desire to attend such a gathering, where they can rub elbows with the ambassadors of the kingdom who are the constructive engineers of the world, and at first hand know, feel, and see the influence that the Gospel of Christ is having upon the nations of the world. That it may be easy for American Christian workers to visit this convention, any adult persons now engaged in Sunday school work or who are interested in the promotion of Christian education throughout the world field, may become delegates to the Los Angeles Convention by applying to their State Council headquarters for appointment. The application should be accompanied by the registration fee of $5, which will secure a delegate credential card that will entitle the delegate to a souvenir program and hymn book, the Convention Badge, which will admit to all sessions of the Convention, and a bound volume of approximately 400 pages of the Convention report.

That Los Angeles wanted the Convention is shown by the fact that its Chamber of Commerce has already given the World's Association Program Committee $12,000 with which to help finance the program building and the Convention promotion. The Program Committe are now at work upon the program, and when their announcement is released for publication there will be upon it men and women of international reputation as Christian leaders.

In planning to enlist the Sunday school workers of Louisiana in this great gathering, the Louisiana Council feels that they are offering them a rare opportunity to learn conditions as they exist throughout the world field to-day, and the important place the religion of Jesus Christ is having in the readjustment of world affairs. Then, too, the trend of world events is being brought to them by men and women trained in Christian conquest, whose viewpoint is that of a person who measures influences not by things but by the personality of Jesus Christ.

That the Convention will be most outstanding is to be expected, and that the delegates will be brought face to face with the opportunities for the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ in the various nations throughout the world is also true; but the outstanding thing that they will bring back with them is the realization that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is as vital to-day in the hearts and lives of the people who seek him and heed him as it was when the Master himself was upon the earth. The going to the Convention will be a new adventure—an adventure for Christ. Let all of us go who can.

NATIONAL CAPITAL PARAGRAPHS.

By H. E. Woolever, Editor of the National Methodist Press.

Federal legislative machinery is being accelerated as the date of the opening of the seventieth Congress approaches—Dec. 5.

Commissioner of Prohibition, Dr. James M. Doran, reports that the enforcement of the dry laws is on a steady increase. In reviewing the records of arrests and convictions of violators of the prohibition laws, he points to figures which show that over seventy per cent of the arrests made for violations are resulting in convictions. Judges and juries evidently are paying more heed to the intent of the law. The Commissioner adds: "While the increase in convictions of less than 3 per cent over last year looks small, I regard it as indicative of a trend that is favorable to enforcement."

Ex-President William Howard Taft, now Chief Justice of the United States, was recently made a member of a committee to visit the White House and present a resolution to President Coolidge requesting him to take steps to hasten the outlawry of war. This distinguished bearer of the message to outlaw war is the son of a Secretary of War (1875-1876), was himself Secretary of War (1904-1908), and, as President, was Commander-in-Chief of all the fighting forces of the United States (1909-1913). Surely, "the sun do move."

President Coolidge is the Commander-in-Chief of all the fighting forces of the United States, which is a responsibility quite apart from the executive duties which naturally rest upon the occupant of the White House. That he is called upon on occasion to exercise his all-important military authority was recently testified to by the Secretary of the Navy. In fact, the Chief Executive of this Nation which desires world peace, commands the most powerful warring machine and resources of any military chief in the world.

More Senators Than Representatives.

The Constitution provides that each State shall have two senators but that the number of its representatives shall be determined by its population. At the very beginning, Massachusetts was given eight; New York, six; Pennsylvania, eight; and a few other States were also given a fixed number, until an enumeration should be taken. It seemed that eventually all States would have more representatives than senators. To-day New York has forty-three representatives. However, there are four States which have only one representative each: Arizona, Delaware, Nevada, and New Mexico; and Idoha and Montana have only two representatives. The total vote in some of these State is far less than that in a single congressional district in New York or Pennsylvania. A peculiarity about Nevada is the fact that not one of its members of Congress is a native of that State. The Democratic senator, Key Pittman, was born in Vicksburg, Miss. The Republican senator, Tasker L. Oddie, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and their lone representative, a Republican, Samuel S. Arentz, was born in Chicago, Ill.

Fourteen States With Opposing Senators.

As strange as it may seem, there are fourteen States which will have a divided representation in the Senate of the seventieth Congress. On all party roll calls, one of the senators will cancel the vote of the other. This gives some evidence of the letting down of partisanship in many States. The balance between the parties is so close that the type of the candidate may determine the winner irrespective of party. This attitude will be a telling factor in the coming presidential elections. The type of candidates will determine whether the next Chief Executive will be a Republican or a Democrat. The States which have one senator of each party in Congress are, Delaware, Iowa, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, and Wyoming. Minnesota has a Republican and a Farmer-Labor senator. There is evident need throughout the country of the recognition of those major issues which have sufficient moral content to arouse moral convictions in political affairs and challenge to leadership men of the highest type and ability.

Woman's Home Missionary Society at White House.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church brought its annual meeting, which was held in Baltimore, to a close by making a pilgrimage to the National Capital. This was a very fitting climax, as this organization of women is, without doubt, doing more to uplift the life of the people and give to the United States a healing and spiritual service than any other group of women in this country. There is scarcely a major national problem with which the Government is concerning itself in an effort to better conditions, in which this Woman's Home Missionary Society is not giving a helpful hand. They minister to the people who make up the Nation, and from the native-born Indian to the newly arrived immigrant, there is no class of people in this land which is not benefited by the Christian and patriotic labors of these women. Their importance and service are recognized in government circles here in Washington.

While here they visited the government buildings, laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and also upon the grave of Mrs. D. B. Street, one of their noble leaders of the past. Following this, Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, national president of the Society, led her host of over six hundred women to the White House, where they were received by President and Mrs. Coolidge. Luncheon was served at Rust Hall and Sibley Hospital, outstanding institutions maintained in Washington by the Woman's Home Missionary Society for the training of Christian workers and the healing of the suffering. The day's program at the capital was most pleasantly closed by a reception by Bishop and Mrs. William Fraser McDowell at the episcopal residence.

THE ZOO.

Mary and Thomas and little Lou
Went one day to visit the zoo.
Lions and tigers, they saw, and bears,
Antelopes, ostriches, Belgian hares,
Camels and foxes and snakes and birds,
Reindeer and chamois and deer in herds,
Walruses, prairie dogs, seals and beagles,
Zebras, elephants, wildcats, eagles.

The lions roared and the gray wolves howled;
The monkeys chattered, the black bears growled;
The nightingale sang, and the parrots talked;
The ducks and herons quacked and squawked;
There was grunting and squealing and laughing and cooing,
Shrieking and barking and puffing and neighing.
"They make as much noise as a crowd of boys!
"I like a canary,"
Said little Mary.

There were hides and skins and furs and feathers,
To wear in different climates and weathers.
There were snouts and tusks and beaks and trunks,
For gathering food in strips and chunks;
Web-feet and claws and hoofs and tails,
Long hair and short hair, stripes and scales,
Horns and antlers and tusks and teeth,
Wings above and fins beneath.
"Whatever each animal needs to do
He is made to fit,"
Cried little Lou.

A HOMELY LITTLE PRINCESS.

By Mary David Ammerman

Did you ever hear of Charlotte Sophia Mecklenburg-Strelitz?

Well, she was the grand-daughter of a Duke of Mecklenburg in South Germany and grew up in a great palace and had to spend much of her time in studying and learning domestic arts.

You know, princesses are always supposed to be tall, stately and beautiful, but Charlotte was not. She had homely features and was small and low of stature.

But she had something better than beauty. She had good, common sense, was lively, well educated, and had a good, kind disposition.

At that time what is now northern Germany was called Prussia and Frederick the Great was overrunning and desolating the southern part which was then a separate country called Germany.

Princess Charlotte was just sixteen, but more intelligent and accomplished than most girls of that age. She was much troubled at the horrors and miseries that the hated Prussians were causing her beloved Germanland, and she wrote a letter to the Prussian conqueror.

This letter was beautifully written, without a blot and reflected a great deal of credit upon both the heart and mind of the little princess. In it she denounced war and praised the charms of peace.

This letter was printed in the papers and happened to be read by a young prince over in England. He said, "That is the lady whom I shall select for my consort. Here are lasting beauties of character. She is fitted to be the queen of any nation."

That prince was Prince George of Wales, who in less than two months afterwards became King of England.

He did not forget his decision in regard to selecting a queen, but wrote across the sea to ask for his princess.

One day some girl friends of Charlotte were talking about whom they would marry. "I shall never marry," said Charlotte. "I am such a homely little person no one would want me."

Just then the postman's horn sounded, and one said, "There is your sweetheart, Princess."

This proved to be a fact. The post brought a letter from King George asking her to marry him and though much surprised Charlotte answered, "Yes."

The wedding was a splendid affair. Charlotte's dress was of white and silver with a long mantle of violet velvet lined with crimson fastened on one shoulder with a bunch of large pearls.

They led a simple, happy married life. George III was a loyal, devoted husband, though he made political blunders.

They did not enjoy the costly entertainments of court life, but did not shirk their duties as king and queen. However, their happiest hours were spent in the country in rural retreats.

At their country home at Kew the royal children had a little farm and raised crops. Often they would invite the king and queen to come and take dinner with them, and they would go and enjoy their holiday as any private person would.

Of Queen Charlotte's children, four mounted thrones, and one was the father of Queen Victoria.

Queen Victoria inherited her strong domestic qualities and best elements of womanhood from her grandmother, the homely little princess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.—Exchange.

STORY OF A LITTLE CLOCK.

This clock was in a jeweler's window in a western town and one day it stopped at fifteen minutes to nine o'clock and rested a whole hour. See the results:

A large number of school children that morning were hurrying to school, but when they saw the clock they stopped and played awhile on the street and were nearly an hour late getting to school.

Quite a number of laboring men and women were also hurrying on to the shop and fields which were waiting for them. But when they saw the clock, they, too, halted in the park and spent precious moments talking up the gossip of the town.

A professional man was walking fast to meet an engagement. His pockets were filled with papers and documents and he must be at a certain corner at a certain minute. But you ought to have seen him when he saw the clock. His set features relaxed into a smile.

A little boy was going to meet his grandmother at the train. But she had to stay a long time in the station, hot and tired.

Business men, lawyers, merchants and others were thrown out of gear that morning by the failure of the little clock; and a preacher going to marry a couple would have been too late if he had not had a watch of his own.

The whole town lost an hour. What a pity! What a pity! What was wrong with the clock? What was the matter with it?

This question the jeweler will have to answer.

There may have been some dust in the clock machinery which ought to have been removed. The jeweler may have failed to wind up the springs. He may have failed to do a dozen things which were necessary to keep the wheels moving. But the precious clock had failed. This was the distressing fact and it was now moved to one side, hidden away in a quiet place in the corner and another clock put in its place.

Does not this story speak in loud and impressive tones? It seems to speak to every one of us.

You, man or woman, are a Christian. You are a little boy or girl and your life is linked up with every one around you. There is something definite for you to do and you must do it. And if you fail to do this work, to point out the right minute or the right hour, then you may derange the life of your neighbor. This is a most serious thing.

It was bad to disorder the business of the little town. But the town won't always be on the map. Your neighbor, though, will probably be a part of your life forever. He is more important to you than indeed the world itself. For the world passeth away and the lust thereof. But you and your neighbor are immortal. You cannot afford to delay him on the march or throw him off the track. He, too, is on business for the King. He, too, bears the seal and the signet ring. You cannot possibly estimate the importance of your smallest duty. The loss of one tick of the clock might stop it entirely. Then what a chasm!

How many lives in your set would be brought to grief! How great the loss!

So the clock in the window warns us to keep going. Don't stop the business of those around you. Don't shorten the day. You have an apple in your basket or a piece of candy in your pocket that the little beggar needs. Give it to him!

You note the quiver in your mother's voice, the tear just starting in your sister's eye, the wistful look in another's face. All these need your attention.

When you look at life this way, you will remember what Paul says, "I am a debtor to the Greek and the barbarian." I owe something to every man I meet.

Does life seem to be too exciting, too big, well nigh impossible?

Remember, though, that uncounted minutes confront the little clock. But it has all the time it needs to strike them every one. Only the clock must keep on going. It must not stop.

In the morning before you rise, ask God to wind you up. At night ask him to take the day just gone and pour into your heart the oil of his joy.

Rest comes by and by.—Mississippi Visitor.

I DON'T.

Most motorists are blooming fools,
They trifle with the traffic rules.
I Don't.

No man should try to get the drop
On any seasoned traffic cop.
Nor fail to heed his sign to stop.
I Don't.

A man should never drive too fast,
Or brag about the cars he's passed.
I Don't.

For Safety-first should be his creed.
There really isn't any need
To drive a car at reckless speed.
I Don't.

A man should never lose his bean
When piloting a gas machine.
I Don't.

On city streets or open road,
A man should never break the code,
Nor fellow farers incommode.
I Don't.

He should not scare equestrians,
Nor chase the poor pedestrians.
I Don't.

In fact, I have no car to run.
I'm shy the coin to purchase one.
You'd think I wouldn't have much fun.
I Don't.

WHAT METHUSELAH ATE.

Methuselah ate what he found on his plate,
And never, as people do now,
Did he note the amount of the caloric count—
He ate it because it was chow.

He wasn't disturbed, as at dinner he sat,
Destroying a roast or a pie,
To think it was lacking in granular fat,
Or a couple of vitamines shy.

He cheerfully chewed every species of food,
Untroubled by worries or fears
Lest his health might be hurt by some fancy dessert—
And he lived over nine hundred years!

Protection Against Old Age

The North Mississippi Conference is in session this week at Clarksdale, Miss. The Conference host, Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, and his people have made every preparation for the comfort and convenience of their guests. The proceedings of the Conference will be reported in full for the Advocate by Rev. H. P. Lewis, who has rendered this service so efficiently at previous sessions of the Conference.

The Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., has recently let the contract for a Sunday school building, which will cost approximately $50,000. It will be the most modern religious education building in the State. This achievement marks a real advance in the life of Methodism in Hattiesburg and South Mississippi. Rev. Joseph A. Smith is the pastor under whose leadership this goal has been reached.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Houston have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Verda, to Rev. Clarence B. White, in the Methodist church at Glenmora, La., on Thursday evening, Nov. 17, at 7:30 o'clock. After the wedding the couple will be at home at Marksville, La. Brother White is pastor of the Evergreen charge. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, formerly of Mississippi, is in her second year as dean of women at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. The Freshman class at Asbury numbers 200, and students are enrolled from thirty-nine States and five foreign countries. In renewing her subscription to the Advocate she speaks kindly of the paper, for which we express our apprecation.

The Times-Picayune, this city, carried the following death notice last Sunday: "At Macelenny, Fla., on Oct. 23, 1927, Rev. Hiram G. Davis, husband of Margaret Beasley. Interment at Gordo, Ala." Beyond this, we have no informatinon, either of the illness or death of Dr. Davis, who was at one time presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and later a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. and Mrs. W. O. Wagoner, Colfax, La., announce the birth of a daughter, Katherine Dale, on Oct. 14. Brother Wagoner was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, now in the local ranks. Mrs. Wagoner was Miss Robina Vaught, of New Orleans, active in Sunday school and League work. The Advocate extends congratulations to the happy parents and expresses all good wishes for the little lady.

The following sad news comes from Rev. L. F. Alford, Raleigh, Miss., under date of Oct. 27: "We buried at Burns yesterday Sister Mary Thompson, one of our oldest and best members. She was the mother of Rev. J. W. Thompson, our pastor at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, and Rev. R. H. Thompson, junior preacher on the Raleigh charge. She died in the triumphs of the Christian faith. A good woman has gone to her eternal reward." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Rev. W. T. Phillips, pastor of the Chalybeate charge, North Mississippi Conference, requests us to state that Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Corinth District, will preach at the Camp Ground church at the morning hour on next Sunday, and at Chalybeate at night, dedicating these churches after the sermons. All former presiding elders and pastors are cordially invited to attend the services. The Chalybeate charge has the fine record of having completed two brick veneer churches this year.

We acknowledge the honor of receiving the following invitation: "Bishop and Mrs. Warren Akin Candler request the pleasure of your company at the Fiftieth Anniversary of their wedding, Monday evening, the twenty-first of November, from eight until half after ten o'clock, Biltmore Hotel, Atlanta, Georgia." We join with their thousands of friends thhroughout the Christian world in extending felicitations upon the approaching event, and we pray that the blessings of God may continue to rest upon them and their beautiful Christian home for many years to come.

Last Sunday was a great day at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city. At the morning hour, Miss Clara Chalmers, principal of the Irene Toland College, Matanzas, Cuba, now at home on vacation, delivered a thrilling address to a congregation that filled the church to capacity, speaking especially of the custom of devil worship that still perists among Africans in Cuba. At the evening hour she spoke at a consecration service, an illuminated cross adding effectiveness to the occasion. Miss Chalmers is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Chalmers, of New Orleans. She is one of the outstanding leaders of our missionary work in Cuba.

The pastor, Rev. Joseph A. Smith, reports that one of the most successful and enjoyable campaigns of evangelism in the history of Main Street Methodist Church, in Hattiesburg, Miss., was conducted under the capable leadership of Rev. B. L. Sutherland, pastor of the First Methodist Church, of Laurel, Miss. The meeting was constructive and wholesome; and thoroughly cultivated the spiritual life of the church. Thirty-eight members were added to the roll, and the entire community felt the uplifting influence of the revival. The pastor declares that Brother Sutherland is one of the great evangelistic preachers of Methodism, and that he is not only an eloquent and forceful speaker, but is a man of spiritual life and power.

FOUND IN THE WILDERNESS.

High on top of the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia stands the little mountain cabin, and on its mantel lies a little book, yellow with age. It is a Methodist Discipline, published by Joshua Soule and T. Mason at the Publishing House in New York in 1816. Above the mantel of this little cabin home hangs an old rifle and a powder horn of Revolutionary days, for the ancestors of the people who live here belonged to those Revolutionary heroes who fought and died for the freedom of our country.

Who knows what itinerant Methodist preacher of pioneer days took this book from his saddlebags some hundred years or so ago and left it there as a light in the wilderness? And who can tell what has been its influence since it has been handed down as a treasured relic from father to son during all these years?

On the very first page, says the Rev. W. S. Lyons, pastor in Carroll County, Va., under the Home Department of the Board of Missions, to whom belongs the honor of finding this little book published one hundred and eleven years ago, is found the Bishops' address, as follows:

"Dearly Beloved Brethren: We think it expedient to give you a brief account of the rise of Methodism in Europe and America.

"In 1728 two young men in England reading the Bible saw that they could not be saved without Holiness. They followed after it and incited others to do so. In 1737 they saw likewise that men are justified before they are sanctified, but still Holiness was their object. God thrust them out to raise a Holy people. In the year 1766 Philip Embury, a local preacher from Ireland, began to preach in the city of New York and formed a society of his own countrymen and the citizens. And the same year Thomas Webb preached in a hired room near the barracks. About the same year Robert Strawbridge, a local preacher from Ireland, settled in Frederic County, in the State of Maryland, and preaching there formed some societies. The first Methodist church was built in New York in 1763 or 1769, and in 1769 Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmoor came to New York, who were the first regular Methodist preachers on the continent. In the latter end of the year 1771, Francis Asbury and Richard Wright, of the same order, came over. We believe that God's design in raising up the preachers called Methodists was to reform the continent and spread Scripture Holiness over the lands. As a proof thereof we have seen since that time a great and glorious work of God from New York through Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia, as also of late to the extremities of the Western and Eastern States.

"We esteem it our duty and privilege most earnestly to recommend to you, as members of our church, our form of Discipline, which has been founded on the experience of a long series of years, as also on the observations and remarks we have made on ancient and modern churches. We wish to see this little publication in the house of every Methodist, and the more so as it contains the articles of religion maintained more or less in part or in whole by every reformed church in the world. Far from wishing you to be ignorant of any of our doctrines or any part of our Discipline, we desire you to read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest the whole. You ought next to the Word of God to procure the articles and canons of the church to which you belong.

"We remain your affectionate brethren and pastors who labor night and day in public and private for your good.

"WILLIAM McKENDREE.
"ENOCH GEORGE.

THE WIDOW'S MITE.

By Rev. J. MacLeod, M.A.

"She of her penury hath cast in——."—Luke 21.4.

"Only a copper, mister!" So the casual observer might be inclined to say of this incident which took place at the Temple treasury. How different the scene becomes, how splendidly altered our thought upon it, when Jesus looks into it and with authority of understanding describes it. In the little there was bigness that day. She of her penury hath cast in. With that clause of witness she and the action became fine. Jesus Christ had the "second sight" and there was no superstition in it.

The Treasure Finder.

This incident shows us Jesus in a characteristic attitude—the attitude of appreciative discovery. A favorite phrase of His was "treasure hid in a field," and in himself there was present wonderfully the digging instinct. If we read the Gospels with an eye for persons, we find Christ presented to us thus, as One who had a quick, intuitive power of discerning fine sterling things in the plain homespun of life. Those pure, patient eyes of Christ were never misled by pretence; all the puff and powder of society became ill at ease in his presence. But there was also this wonder in his attitude to life—that he detected goodness where it was hidden, and saw worth where it was obscure to the world, and lifted to prominence actions and people that were apt to be passed over in the measure of the world's coarse thumb. A new standard of appreciation, a sensitive perception of the "interiors" of action, a salutation of uncanonized worth—that it was which came to teach and serve mankind by Jesus Christ. He was revealer of this and that—which could not be sold for two hundred pence! "Master, we saw one casting out devils, and we forbade him because he followeth not us." "Whoever he follows," said Jesus, "the casting out of devils is a most commendable occupation." To Judas the spilled spikenard was waste, to Christ the eternal and the holy were affirmed in it. "Lord," said the dying thief, "remember me." Only a coward's cry! But no, "A heart beats here" is the verdict of the Master. Jesus had fine eyes, and his story is the story of surprising "finds" in the rough and prose of life. We infer that therein for many is part of the preciousness of Jesus.

Hidden Heroism.

She of her penury hath cast in. The surface valuation was unaware of this deep quality. Christ passes over from the size of an action to the strain of it. His valuation here suggests to us then the thought of the hidden heroisms there are in life. In places where they do not advertise the principle of the Cross is active. In a story of one of the kings of Israel it is told with what consternation the people beheld that "he had sackcloth within upon his flesh." It was a mere accident that disclosed this deep of nature in him. Jesus, who was rich in apprehension, would endorse the great words with which Charles Reade begins "The Cloister and the Hearth." "Not a day passes over the earth but men and women of note do great deeds, speak great words, and suffer noble sorrows. Of these obscure heroes, philosophers and martyrs the greater part will never be known till that hour when many that are great shall be small and the small great." Many a life is going out round us into unnoticed and expensive good. That is the reminder of two little coins in a big collection. She of her penury! It is an appeal to remember the underground of life. And it is part of the work of Jesus to quicken in his people alertness to the fact that just there, where signs may be few, the right stuff nevertheless is. Of Mary Slessor it is reported that her comment on the last book in the New Testament was—"The reserve is greater than the revelation." That is true of many lives—and probably of a great many more lives than we imagine!—Scots Observer.

Missionary work in Brazil would have been a failure if it had not raised the problem of Nationalism, is the idea of mission workers in that country, who believe that the entire problem will be worked out for the strengthening and developing of Methodism in that land.

MR. P. R. LAMKIN was born at the old Lamkin home, about six miles southwest of Ruston, La., September 28, 1856, and died at his home near Ansley, in Jackson Parish, September 18, 1927, making him at the time of his demise seventy years, eleven months, and eighteen days old. Funeral services were held in New Prospect, his home church, by the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. C. H. Mayo, in the presence of one of the largest congregations that ever attended a funeral in that church. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Wesley Chapel in early life. After moving from the old home where he spent his boyhood days, he had his membership transferred to New Prospect, where it remained until he was called from labor to rest. Nine years ago last November, in 1918, I first met Brother Lamkin and formed his acquaintance. For four years I was his pastor and during that time he was one of the true and faithful stewards of New Prospect church.

During the entire four years I don't think that he failed to attend a quarterly conference more than two or three times. He was loyal to his church and a great friend to the preachers. During the four years that I was his pastor I never heard a word spoken that would cast the least reflection on his character. He was a good man and a true Christian. When it was possible for him to attend, he was always present at church to hear his pastor preach. He has left a dear wife and ten children—six daughters and four sons—to mourn their loss, one having died in early life. May the blessings of our great Heavenly Father rest upon the dear broken-hearted loved ones and help them to meet their loved one in the great Eternal Home of many mansions, where there will never be any death nor separation of loved ones.

H. J. BOLTZ.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, on Oct. 9, 1927, God in his infinite wisdom saw fit to call to her heavenly home our dear friend and co-worker, MRS. HATTIE MILLER, and whereas, her life among us has been one of unselfish service, so that it may be truly said of her that in home, church, and community, at all times, "She hath done what she could;"

Be it resolved, That her death, which to her is gain, is a sad loss to us, the members of the Coldwater Auxiliary of the Methodist Missionary Society; that while we grieve, we bow in humble submission to him who doeth all things well; that the sorrowing family have our deepest sympathy in this their hour of great bereavement.

Be it further resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Missionary Society, one copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one copy sent to the devoted family.

(Signed),

MRS. R. R. MOORE,
MRS. C. K. McLEOD,
MRS. M. J. McANNEH,
Committee.

MRS. LOUISE PERRIN CLOUD.

Rarely does the Heavenly Father give to earth so choice a spirit as that of Mrs. Lula Cloud, who early Sunday morning of March 27, 1927, while all the earth enjoyed the blessed surcease from toil, slipped away from earth to her heavenly home. Thoughtful of friends, loved ones and her Sunday school class, to whom she sent a blessed message of affection, she was thinking of others until she fell asleep.

Mrs. Cloud was born in New Orleans seventy-one years ago, into the home of Hon. Franklin Perrin and Mrs. Mary Young Porter Perrin. Her father was a prominent attorney of New Orleans and of Washington City. He was a trusted leader and prominent in governmental circles. Her mother was a lovely crown jewel of the Old South, cultured, refined and charming.

She was married to Dr. J. M. Cloud, prominent physician of Water Valley, Miss. This union was blessed with two charming daughters—Hazel, who died at the early age of twelve, and Velma, now Mrs. W. B. Hoffa of Grenada, Miss. She made her home with this affectionate daughter, spending some time with an only living sister, Mrs. D. L. Martin, of Houston, Texas, of five sisters and one brother.

Mrs. Cloud became a member of the Methodist Church at the early age of ten years. She loved her Lord and her church with a passionate love, giving herself in a great and loyal service, never counting any work or gift a sacrifice, but a genuine labor of love. She endeared herself to every heart she touched. All who knew her could not but recognize in her goodness itself and the noble virtues of a Christly life. Many in that great day will rise up to call her blessed.

Her pastor,
J. H. HOLDER.

Grenada, Miss.

FROM THE PATTERSON CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Patterson charge has not appeared in the Advocate this year, but it is not too late to let you know what we are trying to do, and what we have already accomplished.

Probably the greatest achievement this year is the erection of a Sunday school building in Berwick. We are proud of the fact that we have been able to go ahead with this much needed building in spite of the fact of the high water. The building contains four class rooms which open into each other, and also open on to a wide porch. We are grateful to one of our old and faithful members for donating the building, and we appreciate the fact that most of the lumber was donated. Much of the labor was given, and so, because our people worked when they could not give enough, we were able to complete the building.

Our work has improved this year. The congregations have grown, and if it were not for the fact that this section of the country is now practically bankrupt, we would be able to give a good report financially as well as spiritually.

Yours fraternally,
T. F. KING, P. C.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

(Adopted by the Men's Class of First Baptist Church, Ruston, La.)

Whereas, it has come to our attention that the DeFreece Bros., Feazel Motor Co., and Kidd-Carter Gas and Oil Co. have of their own volition closed their place of daily business on Sunday;

Whereas, this action is one to be recognized as a meritorious move, to be received by all Christian people with hearty commendation,

Whereas, this class heartily commends these good men for their move,

Therefore be it resolved, That this class do rise in session to compliment these gentlemen.

That a special invitation, by committee appointed, be given said owners and operators to become members of this class,

That a copy of this resolution be furnished said gentlemen; that a copy be furnished The Daily Leader for publication; that a copy be sent the Baptist Message and the Christian Advocate for publication.

This adopted in open class on Oct. 16, 1927.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

October gave us a most engaging topic of study—"Friendship."

November brings us the "Week of Prayer."

Let every auxiliary be making careful preparation for the observance of the Week of Prayer, Nov. 6-12. May it be a time of spiritual growth for the members and an advance for the kingdom.

"Open wide the windows of our spirits, and fill us full of light; open wide the door of our hearts, that we may receive and entertain thee with all our powers of adoration and love."

Let us observe the Week of Prayer by setting apart a special time during each day for private and collective prayer. In the program for the first day (which is for adults) special emphasis is given to the presentation of the Week of Prayer Specials, Valley Institute, Pharr, Tex., and Palmore Institute, Kobe, Japan.

The second day is set apart as a definite service for the outgoing missionaries. Great care should be taken in the preparation of this day's program. It means much to our new missionaries.

For the third day a short program for the children is included. The adults should meet for a short session of prayer before the time for the children's program. This should be a special period of preparation on their part.

The fourth day's program has been prepared for the young people. To this service the adults may be invited.

The fifth service is planned as a celebration of Armistice Day. This might well be made a public service to which the entire church membership is invited.

Do not fail to appoint a committee in advance of the period set apart for this special time of prayer and self-denial. As soon as the literature is in hand, the committee should make a careful study of the plans presented, together with their own local needs. After prayer and counsel together, they should decide how best to observe this special occasion. Enlist every member of the auxiliary and as many women of the church as possible. Many who cannot attend the meetings may be enlisted to observe this season in their own homes. Let us promote the meetings by personal solicitation and by every other possible means of publicity. Above all, make the programs so attractive and so vital that the women of the church will wish to attend them. Urge upon the women of the church that they make this a time of special prayer, and a time of self-denial, that two buildings may be erected, one in Japan and one in Pharr, Tex., thus helping to build the kingdom of God in our own nation and in a great nation across the sea. Let the collections for Adults, Young People, and Juniors be taken separately.

Literature will be sent to the president of your adult auxiliary. Additional material will be found in the October Missionary Voice.—Literature Headquarters.

This number of the Missionary Voice referred to is the "Texas Special," and in addition to the valuable helps for Week of Prayer programs it carries articles of special historic interest. It is a very pleasing issue, unique in appearance and filled from cover to cover with attractive reading.

ZONE MEETING AT NATALBANY, LA.

The women of the Methodist Church of zone 6, Baton Rouge District, held the third quarterly meeting at Natalbany Wednesday afternoon, September 28, with the leader, Mrs. C. B. Johnson, presiding. An inspiring and instructive program with "Conservation" as the theme opened with soft music followed by silent prayer, closed with the Lord's prayer. The hymn, "O Jesus, I Have Promised," was sung. The Scripture reading was beautifully given by Mrs. E. W. Vinyard of Ponchatoula. Rev. W. A. Royal, of Natalbany, led in prayer, after which the hymn, "Take My Life and Let it Be," was sung.

The guests for the meeting were: Mrs. D. B. Carre of New Orleans; Mrs. W. K. Rust and Mrs. H. N. Brown of Baton Rouge; Mrs. L. A. Sims of Hammond and the pastors, Rev. W. R. Harvell, Hammond, Rev. A. L. McQueen, Springfield, Rev. W. G. Royal and Rev. Mr. Methvin, Natalbany, and Rev. Mr. Alford of Mississippi.

A splendid talk upon the "Importance of Bible and Mission Study" was given by Mrs. C. I. Crook of Hammond. Mrs. A. J. Coburn of Ponchatoula, in her forceful way, presented "Stewardship of Time and Personality." A fitting close to the two talks was a vocal duet, "Open My Eyes That I May See," by Mrs. R. M. McGehee and Mrs. F. A. Smith of Hammond.

A "quiz" on the Year Book and minutes, led by Mrs. McGehee, was held. It is expected that the "quiz" will encourage a closer study of our "Year Book and minutes.

The hymn, "A Charge to Keep I Have," was sung, after which our Conference secretary, Mrs. D. B. Carre, gave a masterly address, her subject being "Changes In the Work." Her message was one of inspiration, inspiring us on to greater service in his kingdom. Mrs. W. K. Rust, our Conference Superintendent of Supplies, told of her work, especially of the needs of the MacDonell Wesley House. Mrs. H. N. Brown, Conference Superintendent of local work, and Mrs. L. A. Sims, district secretary, followed with short talks about their work.

A short business session was held. Minutes of last zone meeting were read and approved. All five of the auxiliaries in the zone (Natalbany, Hammond, Ponchatoula, Springfield and Wesley Chapel) responded to roll call with splendid attendance and reports, there being eighty-two members and visitors present.

The weak and strong points in our auxiliaries were stressed. An offering was taken, which was sent to the Conference treasurer to apply on the rural work fund. Invitation for the next meeting was extended by the Hammond Auxiliary and accepted.

The leader's message was in the form of a poem, "Pray, Give, Go."

The hymn, "More Like the Master," was sung, and Rev. Mr. Alford gave the closing prayer, after which during the social hour the women of the Natalbany Auxiliary served tea and sandwiches.

MRS. W. R. KEMP, Secretary.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effec upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask you druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" wit directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

MOTHER

A Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious, Constipated

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last week-end found me in New Orleans, where I witnessed the opening of the seventh annual session of the Standard Training School in the New Orleans churches, and the sixteenth training school for Louisiana in 1927.

In the morning of Sunday I visited the Felicity Street Church. A wonderful impression was gained in this, one of the oldest churches in New Orleans Methodism, that is yet so truly a Young People's church. As I watched the class of fine young boys come from the young men's class room, I bethought me of the large number of Louisiana preachers who had their early training in that same young men's class. Such men as Dr. Frank Parker, Rev. H. W. Rickey, Drs, Tom and Briscoe Carter, Dr. J. F. Foster, Dr. Fitzgerald Parker, and Rev. Geo. Parker were members of this young men's Bible class of Felicity Street Church in their youth. Can a finer record be shown than this?

New Orleans District held a meeting on the 16th instant, at which the following district officers were elected to serve the Sunday schools of that district for 1928: Mr. J. H. Carter, District Secretary; Miss Fannie Norman, Recording Secretary; Mrs. R. H. Harper, Elementary Superintendent; Dr. M. F. Wilson, Adult Superintendent; Rev. B. C. Taylor, Adolescent Superintendent; Mrs. L. D. Chaffee, Missionary Superintendent; Rev. W. H. Giles, Training Work Superintendent; Mrs. D. M. Campbell, Daily Vacation Bible School Superintendent.

We are in receipt of a letter from Brother R. G. Tooke, superintendent of the Sunday school at Gibsland, La., in which he sends a check to cover Sunday School Day offering. Because of the fact that what Mr. Tooke says may express the cause of delay in many cases, we quote from his letter as follows: "We had Sunday School Day quite awhile back, but were very busy at the time and lost or misplaced your address, but hope it is not too late."

The office address is P. O. Box 357, Alexandria, La., and the address of our treasurer is Mr. A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, La. Either of these addresses may be used, but quicker action will result by sending your offerings direct to Brother Mayo.

The Conference Board returns to the district one-half of the offerings you send in from your observance of Sunday School Day. This half is usually used by the district in Training School work, so that it is very important that each district make a real effort to send in offerings from every school in the district.

The fall issue of the Sunday School Outlook will go to press within the next few days. This will be the Annual Conference issue and will receive an unusually large circulation. All Sunday School Day reports will be in this issue, and we should very much like to have each district report to us in full at the very earliest moment.

The training school in the New Orleans District being held at Rayne Memorial this week promises to be the largest in the State for 1927. Six courses are offered.

The third Standard Training School of the Shreveport District for 1927 has just closed with splendid results, sixty-two credits having been issued to workers from co-operating schools, as follows: Noel Memorial, 21; Texas Avenue, 14; Mangum, 7; Cedar Grove, 6; First Church, 6; Bossier City, 3; Claiborne, 3, and Mooringsport, 2. This was the third school in which Dr. Holmes has taught this year, and he has achieved the record of issuing credits to every person who enrolleld, not one name having been dropped from any of these classes. Dr. Holmes writes us that the recent school was fine, with a splendid spirit.

A new Sunday school was organized recently at Port Eads, with Mrs. A. H. Ragen superintendent. Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Harper were largely responsible for this school, with the splendid assistance of Rev. Leon Picone, missionary evangelist. The Conference Sunday School Board has co-operated by supplying the literature free of charge.

We are in receipt of a request for Enlarged Children's Week literature from Brother D. B. Boddie, of Opelousas. We are always interested in these requests, for they show the interest taken by the various schools. If you have not made your plans for Children's Week, we will be glad to cooperate any way we can.

* * *

Mr. S. M. Collins, Monroe, La., was recently elected district superintendent. In a letter he says: "Despite great difficulties arising from the great flood of this year, our Sunday schools have been prosperous. I do not believe that our work has ever been in better condition than it is at this time."

* * *

Dr. F. C. Wren, Winnfield, La., district superintendent, was a welcome visitor in our office this week. The Doctor is a member of the Conference Board, District Superintendent, and General Superintendent in his local school.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Maggie May Jones, Conference Elementary Superintendent.

Reports are beginning to come in of the observance of Enlarged Program of Children's Week, and from the tone of the reports the workers are well pleased with the plans and the pageants. Several schools are planning to observe the week beginning Sunday, October 30, and others beginning Sunday, November 6.

If your school has not already had the observance, this office will be glad to furnish you with material on request. In schools where the observance has been held, the report should be sent to the District Elementary Superintendent or to the Conference office right away in order that we may get our report ready for the General Council meeting.

Two schools have been checked this week in which all four Elementary Departments attained rank. In Brookhaven, the Cradle Roll attained Progressive, the Beginner and Primary Departments were Advanced and the Juniors Progressive—all on the B type Programs. Yazoo City, also working on the "B" type Program of Work, had an Advanced Cradle Roll and Beginner Department and Progressive Primary and Junior. Each of these departments had moved forward since they had been checked before. In the observance of Children's Week in Yazoo City each of these departments is taking a forward step.

Other elementary departments should be checked or re-checked at this time. Your District Elementary Superintendent will appreciate your calling on her for this, and if she can not come herself to do this checking, will be glad to help you in arranging for another checker to come.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

(Unanimously Adopted by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Belzoni Charge, North Mississippi Conference.)

Whereas, Brother J. E. Cunningham has loyally and faithfully served the entire Greenwood District of the North Mississippi Conference during the past few years; and,

Whereas, during the four years of Brother Cunningham's administration unprecedented growth and prosperity, both in a temporal and spiritual way, have come into the church life of the said district and a remarkable period of progress has been universally felt and experienced by all of us; and,

Whereas, Brother Cunningham has at all times absolutely devoted the very best of his time, talent and energy in an able and constructive manner, which has been the mainspring and moving cause of so much of what has been accomplished; and yet the methods and manner of our esteemed Brother Cunningham have always been characterized by the utmost patience and kindness which he so skilfully knows how to apply in a tactful and courteous way that naturally makes for accomplishment, and makes the man's influence for good irresistible;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the Belzoni charge deplores the fact that Brother Cunningham is shortly to leave the Grenwood District and deeply feels a distinct loss comes to this church thereby; and,

Be it further resolved, That this conference extend to Brother Cunningham its thanks and appreciation for his work and service for and with us, and that the highest and best wishes of this conference follow him in his work wherever he may go, and that we hereby express an earnest desire that he may experience an ever-extending and ever-increasing success in his work; and,

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the Belzoni Banner and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and recorded upon the minutes of the Belzoni Methodist church.

WALTER JOHNSON.

The retirement of Walter Johnson after twenty years of major league ball and a phenomenal record as a pitcher, brings to mind certain facts that have helped the boys of America who knew them and we think will be helpful if passed on. Walter Johnson is a member of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, of Washington, D. C., a teacher of a Sunday school class, does not use intoxicants or narcotics in any form, and thinks such expressions as are commonly heard even from the lips of young girls profane. He is worthy of being a boy's hero for these manly qualities as well as for his skill as a baseball pitcher.—Southern Christian Advocate.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL AND EVANGELISM.

Certain newspapers published in New York and quoted elsewhere throughout the country have misrepresented the attitude of the Federal Council of the Churches and its Commission on Evangelism toward vocational evangelism and evangelists.

The Federal Council's Commission on Evangelism, as the clearing-house of the various Commissions on Evangelism of the several communions, believes that the church, in order to accomplish the task Christ gave it, needs all fruitful forms of Christian evangelism. The Federal Council, therefore, does not oppose vocational evangelism or any other form of evangelistic movement which is being used by the churches with spiritual success.

Its emphasis upon pastoral and personal evangelism, in which every minister, united with his own membership, earnestly undertakes the business of winning men and women to the acceptance of Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, grows out of the conviction that nothing less than the mobilization of the entire membership of the church for personal work will bring the world to Christ. The Council believes that, unless the church itself is dominated by a deep evangelistic spirit, it will be of small avail to bring additional members to it.

Any representation which indicates a different attitude on the part of the Commission on Evangelism and its officers is not true to the facts in the case.

REV. CHARLES L. GOODELL.

FROM BROOKLYN AND BOND.

Dear Brother Carley: If you can afford a small space, I shall be glad to give an account of the Brooklyn and Bond charge.

In many respects it has been the greatest year of my ministry. Rev. H. A. Gatlin assisted me in a meeting at McLaurin, and as is characteristic of him, he did it well. He brought the gospel messages with great power, and we had a real good meeting, in which 8 fine folk united with the church.

The pastor did the preaching in four meetings within the bounds of this charge, at the bequest of his people. Rev. H. R. McKee, of Wiggins, conducted the singing for me at Bond. Brother McKee is good help in a meeting. We had some old-time altar services in which many people prayed through to victory. There were 7 to unite with the church, six for the Methodist and one for the Baptist. There were 14 family altars pledged.

We have had 18 accessions to the church by profession of faith and 14 by letter; total 32. We have over-paid our Mission Special. We have sent $120 Work Day Offering to our Orphanage. The benevolences for the charge were $110 in arrears last year; they gave us an increase of $40 this year. We will raise $150 more for benevolences than have ever been raised on the charge before in one year. We will report the benevolences in full for Brooklyn and Bond charge the first time in 16 years. To God we give the glory; to the good people of this charge give the credit.

Brethren, pray for us, that these closing weeks of this Conference year may be characterized by a great spiritual fervor and we will go forth to do a much greater work for God.

REVIVAL ON THE AMERICUS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Americus charge is closing out a successful year's work. Much has been done in repairing and furnishing the parsonage. We have had gracious revivals at all of the churches. Rev. Percy Vaughan was with me at Pleasant Hill Church; Rev. J. H. Grice was with us at Rosedale; Rev. Percy Vaughan at Cross Roads; Rev. J. M. Corley at Hurley; Rev. G. H. Broadus at Roberts Chapel. I did my own preaching at Tanners Chapel. In all of the meetings there was evidence that much good was accomplished.

We have just closed out our camp meeting at Salem. We began on Tuesday night, Oct. 4, and closed out the following Sunday night. There was much good accomplished. Brother O. C. Hull, our Mississippi Sunday school man, did the preaching, with the assistance of our presiding elder, Brother J. L. Sells. No compromise was made with sin in high places or low, and their messages were vigorous and aggressive expositions of Scripture truth. The churches and communities will be stronger and better because of their stay and ministry with us.

We had a Cokesbury class taught by Miss Hattie Roe Lewis at Pleasant Hill church in July.

Much remains to be done before the Annual Conference.

The work on the Americus charge is progressive and encouraging.

A WISE PLAN.

In order to meet the exigencies of the missionary situation the General Conference at its last session authorized the General Board of Missions to ask for "a freewill offering in every chuch each year during the months of January and February." This freewill offering is to follow, according to the Discipline, "a period of special missionary cultivation." The Discipline, however, makes this specific provision: "This freewill offering shall not include the income from the Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues." (Paragraph 467, Discipline of 1926.)

The object of this special campaign and freewill offering is to secure an adequate fund from which to maintain the missionary work now in progress. The reason for this exemption is that definite phases of this work in progress are assumed by the League and the Sunday school, the Sunday schools carrying the three mission fields in Europe.

It is perfectly patent, then, that if the Sunday school offering to missions should be counted on the Maintenance Fund which is taken each winter by the General Board of Missions, there would be no real gain in the income of that Board from which it expects to carry on its mission work. In order to render the service the church is expecting of the Sunday school in the missionary enterprise, the fourth Sunday missionary offering should be directed toward the Dual or European Special or to such other special as may have been definitely assigned by the Missionary Education Department of the General Sunday School Board to the Sunday school from the general missionary budget. If this is done, as is the case with the majority of the Sunday schools, we can render a worth-while service in solving the financial problems of the Board of Missions and in rendering a distinct and constructive missionary service in the mission fields at home and abroad.—Board of Missions Bulletin.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

RESOLUTIONS BY RUSTON DISTRICT LEAGUERS.

Be it resolved by the Epworth Leaguers of Ruston District in rally assembled at Arcadia, La., Oct. 23, 1927, That we feel gratefully indebted to the Arcadia chapter, under the leadership of their president, Henry Galloway, and the church pastor, Rev. G. A. Morgan, for their cordial entertainment of the delegates. We feel fortunate in having in our midst for the occasion Rev. Otis Spinks, who closed the Arcadia Young People's revival with a most inspiring sermon and consecration service at the morning session, and his brother, Rev. Thomas Spinks, of Bienville, who spoke more informally but appealingly at the noon session.

Be it further resolved, That the efficient leadership of Elizabeth Langford, Charles White, Rosa Langford, Anna Pharr Turner, Mary Searles, and Gladys Dickinson in their various capacities was largely responsible for the success of the meeting.

We express regret that Mr. Henry Galloway, president of Arcadia chapter, was prevented by illness from being present.

The committee recommends that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, to the Bienville Democrat, and to the local president.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Miss Laura Rankin Appointed Seashore District Secretary.

Miss Laura Rankin, of Gulfport, has been appointed District Secretary to succeed Mr. D. C. Camp, who has resigned to enter school. Mr. Camp will enter Vanderbilt University immediately after Christmas for a special course in "Young People's Leadership." While we are sorry to see Mr. Camp give up his work in the Conference, we are glad to see him begin his special preparation for a larger field of service.

Miss Rankin is one of our very best. She is a natural leader of young people, and we can think of no one better fitted for the place than she; she has a host of friends throughout the Conference who will give her a joyful welcome back into the work of our Conference. Miss Laura was a District Secretary some years ago when our Epworth League Conference work was young and she had a large part in building up our Conference and pulling it through many hard places. Yet Miss Laura will be one of the youngest members of our cabinet—if not in years, certainly in heart.

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN BORN IN SAME YEAR

Queen Victoria and Lydia E. Pinkham

MRS. ANNA McHENRY
1005 E. PLUM STREET, MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far-reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Marshall, Illinois.—"After my second child was born, I never saw a well day for five years. My father was telling his druggist about my condition, and the druggist insisted that father take a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have me try it, as it had helped his wife. I had given up, but to please father and mother, I commenced taking your medicine and in a week I had begun to feel better. When I passed through the Change of Life, I was taking the Vegetable Compound and I had no trouble of any kind."—Mrs. Anna McHenry, 1005 E. Plum St., Marshall, Illinois.

Another Woman Helped

Philadelphia, Penna.—Mrs. Caroline Nagy, of 2717 Sears St., in a recent letter to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., says that after her child was born she was in a very weak condition. She could not seem to regain her health and went to her mother for advice. She told her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it had helped her when in like condition, and it has helped her mother also. So Mrs. Nagy started taking it. She felt better after taking the first bottle,—after taking six bottles her weakness and other troubles disappeared, and she is never done praising the Compound.

In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THE REVIVAL OF 1928 IN BRAZIL.

(Interview with Dr. O. E. Goddard.)

"Everything in Brazil seems favorable for the big revival there in 1928," declares Dr. O. E. Goddard, who returned Sept. 15 from several months spent in that country on missionary business.

As secretary of foreign missions, Dr. Goddard went to Brazil in June at the instance of the Board of Missions to discuss with Brazilian Methodists three important matters, namely, the nation-wide revival of 1928, a program for religious education in the church, and leadership training for the church of the future.

While Dr. Goddard was in Brazil plans were laid for a great revival in 1928 similar to the big Centenary revival campaigns that swept throughout Southern Methodist territory in this country in 1921. Each Conference in Brazil has set a definite goal for the year. The Brazil Conference is planning for a 20 per cent increase in membership; the Central Brazil for a 30 per cent; and the South Brazil, the smallest of the three, for 1,000 new members, almost a 40 per cent increase.

Dr. Goddard found the Latin-Americans more responsive than the North Americans, and as the Brazilian preachers are naturally fluent orators he is looking forward to a nation-wide response when the revival gets well under way. "We can thank God and take courage that in Brazil in 1928 we can look for unusual efforts and unusual results in evangelism," he adds.

Dr. Goddard had a strenuous program during his stay in Brazil. He was traveling or speaking every day of the three months he was there. While not busy holding conferences with leaders, he conducted impromptu revival services, and at each service he gave the invitation to the unconverted, and never a single time did this invitation fail to meet with a response, the number varying anywhere from two to forty. As a result of these impromptu revival services 200 were converted.

In speaking of Brazil, Dr. Goddard says: "Brazil is the largest of all the Latin-American republics. It has nearly half the entire population of Latin-America—about 40,000,000. The ship on which I went to Brazil was loaded with automobiles. The one on which I returned carried three and one-half million pounds of coffee to the United States.

"The soil of Brazil is fertile and rains are frequent; vegetation grows twelve months in the year, and the people can have abundance with little effort.

"I was in Brazil during the winter—June, July and August. It was a mild, dry winter. It was never cold at all except during and immediately after a rain. There are no fireplaces or stoves either in homes or churches. One rarely sees frost except in the extreme southern part of the country.

"Brazil is a republic in name—an oligarchy in fact. Not half the people can read or write. A real democracy is impossible at present. They are doing their best to educate the people. The Southern Methodist Church has ten boarding schools in Brazil, four for boys and six for girls. We are doing much to help educate the next generation."

The first thing that Dr. Goddard did upon entering a Conference was to hold a consecration service, at which time opportunity was given to each national preacher to tell of his religious experience. Dr. Goddard reported that he was much pleased with the results of the conferences, which he held with leaders in thirteen presiding elders' districts. "Not only are all things favorable for the big revival in 1928," he declares, "but I never saw a situation so ripe for a program of religious education. They want to know all we know about religious education in the local church. Some new plans are being laid for better training of our Brazilian preachers."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

LAUDERDALE COUNTY ZONE MEETING.

The Lauderdale County zone meeting convened on Oct. 20 at the Methodist church in Lauderdale. Devotional service was led by Dr. Rolfe Hunt. Owing to unexpected and unavoidable absence of the zone chairman, Mrs. E. K. Key, Mrs. A. F. Watkins was elected temporary chairman.

After the welcome address by Mrs. W. T. Barnes, and response by Mrs. Davis, the roll call of auxiliaries showed a representation of about seventy.

A committee was appointed to extend sympathy to the family of Mrs. Lott, who died from an auto accident on her way to the meeting. All felt subdued and awed by her sudden passing, "her face turned to the house of the Lord," as a friend said of her.

Mrs. Watkins then spoke on "Spiritual Resources." She traced briefly the beginning and growth of the woman's work of our church to this time of our Golden Jubilee, and looking forward to the future. She stated that the old idea of ten cents a month still controls some women.

Among resources of our power she mentioned Prayer, Meditation, Bible Reading, Reading Good Books.

Among the good things she said, she brought out that we heed to take time to ask God the question, "What wilt thou have me to do?" That we need to take time to look to God for the filling to enable us to meet our duties: that we need to come in harmony with God's will: that we do not do as well as we know: that the loveless life of Christians stands in the way of advancement of the kingdom.

At the end of the address she urged the signing of cards pledging to pray for work planned at the Jubilee period.

After benediction by Brother Ware, luncheon was served.

The program was resumed at 1 p. m. Devotional was conducted by Mrs. Nelson. Rev. Charles Assaf, a converted Syrian, now Conference missionary, then addressed the congregation. He urged practical work in missionary activity. He stressed the claim the foreigner has upon us. He alluded to the inconsistency in sending missionaries to China and of denying admission of Chinese children into the white schools of Mississsippi. This was further stressed by Mrs. Watkins.

A movement to combine the Lauderdale and Kemper County zone meetings was discussed. A motion was made that we go on record as favoring the combination, and a committee appointed to carry the message to Kemper County zone meeting, Oct. 26. The election of next year's officers was deferred until after the subject of consolidation is acted upon.

Miss Bunn, of the Wesley House, gave a good talk. She told of the enlargement of the building and the proposed enlargement of activities.

A round table discussion followed on "What the Zone Meetings Have Meant to Me." A number of earnest short talks were made. Several helpful suggestions were brought out under the heads, "Facts, Folks, Funds."

A vote of thanks was extended Lauderdale for hospitality, and it was decided that next meeting be at Central Church, in Meridian.

MRS. ROLFE HUNT, Secretary.

GOT RID OF POISON

Kentuckian Finds Black-Draught a Great Aid In Relieving Constipation, and Soon Feels O. K.

Catlettsburg, Ky.—Mr. Miles Hopkins, of 1218 Center Street, this city, says:

"There was a time when my health was not so good. I suffered a great deal from gas pains. My system was saturated with poison which was not properly eliminated. From time to time I had severe headaches, and I felt sluggish and dull.

"I knew of Black-Draught as a medicine for constipation, so I thought I would try it. For a while I took a small dose every night until my system was rid of the accumulated poison.

"I gained in weight and my general health was good. That experience made me realize the merits of Black-Draught. I kept it in my home and when I begin to feel lifeless and dull, I take a dose, after which I feel O. K. again.

"People generally do not realize the risk they take in allowing constipation to run on. I try to keep my system cleansed, and I find Black-Draught a great aid in doing this."

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

At this, the fourth quarterly conference for the year 1927, after the Rev. H. N. Brown had surrendered the chair to Rev. R. W. Tucker, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, it appears that the Rev. H. N. Brown, our efficient presiding elder, has served four years on the Baton Rouge District, and, in all probability, will be calleld into other fields of labor at Conference this year; and,

Whereas, it further appears that the board of stewards of the Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church, of Bogalusa, La., desire to voice their approval and regard for the very efficient services rendered by Rev. H. N. Brown as presiding elder during his term of office on the Baton Rouge District, and especially his services in connection with the Bogalusa church;

Therefore, be it resolved by the board of stewards of the Elizabeth Sullivan Methodist Church, of Bogalusa, La., regularly assembled as the fourth quarterly conference, That it does hereby publicly commend the Rev. H. N. Brown for his prompt and always efficient administration of the affairs of our church, his untiring energy, and his particular attention to the Sunday school and youth of our church.

Be it further resolved, That we hereby express for our faithful Brother H. N. Brown our love and respect, and wish for him continued success in the field of labor he has chosen. That we trust that as he grows older he will become more useful, that the good Lord will grant unto him a long, useful and happy life in his service.

CORNER STONE OF EPWORTH MISSION CHURCH, BILOXI, MISS., LAID.

The corner stone of the Epworth Mission Church in Biloxi, Miss., was laid on October 6, by Rev. J. L. Sells, presiding elder of the Seashore District. He was assisted by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Yazoo City, Rev. W. M. Sullivan, pastor of Main St. Church of Biloxi, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of Gulfport, Rev. Will Gordon, of Pass Christian, Rev. W. W. Nelson, of Vancleave, Rev. Murray Cox, of Kreole, and the pastor of Epworth Church, Rev. H. L. Daniels.

The ceremony was a very impressive one. A telegram was read from Rev. W. W. Moore, builder of the church, and this telegram was deposited in the corner stone.

The zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society Society held its regular meeting at Epworth on the same day, and they rendered a very interesting program. The ladies all brought baskets laden with good things to eat, and served a real old-fashioned dinner on the ground that recalled to many of us our childhood days.

A free-will offering was taken for the purpose of building an altar in the church. There are several other things to be done before the church will be completed. This work is being held back for lack of funds. Any one wishing to make a contribution to a worthy cause could not place a gift in a more needy field than this.

Rev. J. L. Neill said, while on the coast for a two weeks' revival at Main St. Church, that he had traveled in quite a number of our mission fields, and had studied conditions in others, but he knew of no greater mission field, either at home or abroad, than the Mississippi Coast.

I ask the Christian people to pray for me and this work. I need your prayers.

H. L. DANIELS, Pastor.

FROM KOSCIUSKO, MISS.

A genuine revival of life, interest, spiritual quickening and Holy Ghost religion has visited our people, under the leadership of Dr. Alonzo Monk, Jr., one of our general evangelists, and Rev. A. J. Notestine, of the North Alabama Conference, in charge of the singing and work among the young people.

Two weeks of earnest preaching, quiet, intensive study of God's Word, and the memorizing of hymns, which brought out their deeper religious significance, characterized the services of the morning hours. The evening messages were soulful messages of warning and encouragement.

Brother Monk has brought the church life up to a higher level, and leaves us in a better condition to carry out the plans and programs of the church and the bringing in of the kingdom than any other man I have ever worked with. No pastor, or church, who wants a real revival of church life, will make a mistake by using Brother Monk.

Thirty-seven names were given for membership on profession of faith, and five by letter. The earnest prayers and best wishes of all our people go with him.

Proceedings of the North Mississippi Annual Conference

FIRST DAY—WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1927

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis.

The fifty-eighth session of the North Mississippi Conference convened at Clarksdale, Miss., on Wednesday, Nov. 2, at 9 o'clock a. m. In accord with a standing order the Conference was opened with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Bishop Warren A. Candler, presiding, led in singing, "Alas, and Did My Saviour Bleed." Revs. D. W. Babb, R. O. Brown, J. W. Dorman, and J. W. Bell assisted the Bishop in serving the Communion.

"How Firm a Foundation," was sung. Dr. J. R. Countiss, secretary of the last Conference, called the roll of preachers and lay delegates.

Dr. Countiss was elected secretary, and on his nomination, H. P. Lewis was chosen assistant secretary, and C. L. Oakes, J. M. Guinn, J. E. Lawhon, W. L. Storment, F. F. Goggins, W. C. Newman, and W. L. Robinson were elected statistical secretaries.

Hon. Gerald Fitzgerald, representing the local congregation, gave an address of welcome to the Conference, which was responded to very aptly by Bishou Candler.

A stanza of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was sung. The hours for the Conference sessions were fixed at from 8:30 a.m. to noon. The bar of the Conference was fixed to include the main auditorium.

Dr. Arthur Moore, of the North Alabama Conference, representing the Board of Finance, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

Rev. R. E. Nollner, of the Central Texas Conference, representing the interest of the Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska, was introduced and addressed the Conference. In response to Dr. Nollner's suggestion, a committee composed of D. H. Hall, J. A. Randolph, and Mrs. E. S. Lewis was named to look after the interest of the Assembly in our Conference.

Rev. J. H. Shumaker, representing the Church Mutual Insurance Company, and the Methodist Benevolent Association, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

The names of the presiding elders were called, their characters passed, and each elder made a brief report of his district as follows: L. P. Wasson, of the Aberdeen District; J. B. Randolph, of the Columbus District; E. H. Cunningham, of the Corinth District; L. M. Lipscomb, of the Greenville District; J. E. Cunningham, of the Greenwood District; E. S. Lewis, of the Grenada District, and T. M. Bradley, of the Sardis District.

It was announced that Rev. Carroll Varner would preach at 3 p. m., and that the Wisdom Sisters would sing. The Sunday School Board announced its anniversary for 7:30 p. m.

Announcements of committee meetings were made; a stanza of "Come, Ye That Love the Lord" was sung, and the benediction for the first day's session was pronounced by Dr. T. W. Dye.

Second Day, Nov. 3.

The Conference was called to order by Bishop Candler at 8:30 a. m., who led the Conference in singing, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord." Rev. W. M. Young led the Conference in prayer.

The Bishop read a lesson from Acts 20, adding suitable remarks bearing on the lesson. Following the Bishop's remarks, the Wisdom Sisters brought a message in song, singing "Amazing Grace." The preachers were greatly moved by it.

Dr. Countiss read the minutes of the first day's session, which were approved. The roll of absentees from the first day's session was called.

The names of superannuates were called, their characters passed, and their names referred to the Committee on Conference Relations. This list as we have had it for the past year is as follows: N. G. The minutes of Thursday's session were read and adopted.

In response to question 17, "What traveling preachers and local preachers have been elected deacons?" the following made their reports, were declared eligible by the committee, elected to receive the ordination of deacons and advanced to the Class of the Third Year: G. Baird, an elder, also finished the course of study.

J. T. Lewis, chairman of the Board of Education, read report No. 1, concerning plans for endowing Grenada College. Pending its adoption, Miss Laney, Latin teacher at Grenada for twenty-five years; Dr. Countiss, Judge J. G. McGowen, and E. M. Shaw spoke to the report. SECULARISM IS WITHOUT SAVING POWER.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Honorable James J. Davis, the Secretary of Labor in the Cabinet of President Coolidge, has published recently an article in a popular magazine in which he brings in view some highly important truths with reference to education.

Among other things he speaks as follows:

"No peoople has ever found a purely intellectual education enough in itself. One of the greatest scholars of his day, Lord Bacon, took bribes as a judge on the bench, and eventually found himself a prisoner in the Tower of London. Are we not tending to be strangely neglectful of the heart in our education? Our children are taught everything that may enter the head, but little or nothing to warm the heart, to provide any satisfaction for the deeper feelings and emotions. It was said of one of our earlier poets that he allowed his mind to squeeze his heart. Is that not becoming the condition of us all! We are deluged with economics, science, business, and we tend to keep religious feeling and the love of beauty in the background. We have reduced to a science the making of bread, in the Biblical sense; but it is still true that man lives not by bread alone."

This utterance of the Honorable Secretary contains nothing new, but the truth it contains needs to be repeated again and again because people seem so slow to understand it.

The American people are indulging a sort of superstitious estimation of mere education. They seem to feel that anything bearing the name of education is bound to be good and to work the most blessed results. Dean Butler, of the School of Education of the Chicago University, emphasized this idea not long ago in an article which he published in the Christian Student. He said:

"We live no longer in the expectation that the millenium will come through education. We once thought that if we were in condition to found good schools and to bring the boys and girls under the influence of a good education, we could finally put a stop to all unrighteousness and sin. But the fact of it is that education with reference to this point is a total failure. Men do not act according to their best knowledge, but they do the things they love to do. It matters not how high we may educate the understanding, the man can, in spite of it, be a slave to his passions. Mankind do not act according to their best knowledge and wisdom, but do the things they love to do. While education of the intellect may cause its possessor to beware of the grosser sins, it may at the same time be only a means of making the man more cunning."

The assumption that education can be separated from religion without damage to the characters of students and without injury to public morality is a great mistake. Increasing intellectual power without strengthening the forces which direct it to safe ends, is a dangerous experiment of modern times.

Strictly secular education is of recent origin. The ancients, whether pagan or Christian, knew nothing of irreligious education. Among the Greeks and Romans intellectual culture was identified with religious philosophy and ethical teaching.

They would have been shocked by any proposal to exclude from their educational processes religious principles.

Of course, from the beginning the Christian religion emphasized and elevated education, and during the centuries of Christian history education has risen and fallen according as the Christian religion has been vigorous or feeble. Christianity founded the greatest and best institutions of learning in the world. This was especially true in the United States. The oldest colleges in America, such as Harvard and William and Mary, were established with the primary purpose of promoting religion. Dartmouth, bearing the name of Lord Dartmouth by whose generosity the college was founded, was established to prepare missionaries for work among the Indians. Amherst and Williams sprang from the same religious motives; and without exception all the greatest institutions of learning in our country owe their origin to Christian founders.

In so far as education in the United States has departed from this original type, it has fallen under hurtful influences and has promoted dangerous tendencies. Secularism in education leads to paganism in civilization.

At the present time more money and effort are being expended upon education than have been devoted to that interest at any previous time. But at the same time there seems to be a decline in moral standards and an increase of crime.

The Protective Committee of the American Bankers' Association, after careful investigation, has reported that the cost of crime in the United States exceeds the annual appropriations of the Government, approaching the huge sum of four billions of dollars annually. If mere intellectual culture were the cure for crime, no such alarming result would be possible. But in high schools and colleges there are marked tendencies away from a Scriptural faith and a pure Christianity. There is grave reason to fear that the influence of many colleges and universities in the United States at this time is distinctly anti-Christian, although constantly invoking a Christian name for themselves and seeking the patronage of Christian people.

It is quite possible, not to say probable, that the majority of the American people do not suspect the source of our costly crime, nor apprehend the evil influence that is operating in the field of education. They hear some talk of materialism and they hear deprecation of German rationalism; but they do not appreciate how this evil leaven is working in our own country to the impairment of morality and the undoing of social order. Christian ideals are being prostrated before the conception of materialistic philosophy; and unless the tendency is arrested American education will cease to be Christian and will become altogether pagan with the result of moral weakness and social disorder. Perhaps any effort to awaken the people to the peril arising from this quarter will appear to them as unlovely fanaticism; but, if they do not arouse themselves soon, they will discover when it is too late that the education in which they have invested many millions of dollars by taxation and otherwise has wrought the undoing of the nation.

Many educators perceive this peril, and are trying to avert it by all sorts of reformatory devices. The greatest emphasis is being put on moral training in the schools, but those who thus emphasize moral training fail to see that there can be no controlling and purifying morality which does not spring from religion. At this point the attention of the public needs to be most observant.

We should not need so many schemes of reform if the training of youth were permeated with a pronounced Christian influence. Our pagan culture deforms more rapidly than our reforms can progress. The final outcome cannot be doubtful or uncertain. The stock of the world's experience shows that the only safe education is that which leads to the regeneration of the soul, and which does not stop with mere intellectual training.

Guizot said long ago: "In order to make education truly good and socially useful, it must be fundamentally religious. It is necessary that it should be given and received in the midst of religious atmosphere, and that religious impressions and religious observances should penetrate into all its parts."

Thos. H. Huxley, who was certainly the furtherest removed from fanaticism, said: "There must be a moral substratum to a child's education to make it valuable, and there is no other source from which this can be obtained at all comparable with the Bible."

Victor Cousin spoke more emphatically still, declaring that, "Any system of school training which sharpens and strengthens the intellectual powers without at the same time affording a source of restraint and counter-check to their tendency to evil is a curse rather than a blessing."

These great men saw clearly and stated cogently this whole matter of Christian education. They did not blink the truth, nor seek to explain it away; and we would do well to lay to heart what they have said touching irreligious education.

Secular education and Christian education proced on fundamentally antagonistic assumptions. Secular education rests on the theory that human nature is essentially good, and that it only needs intellectual training to eradicate all its evil tendencies and correct all its moral irregularities. On the other hand, Christian education assumes that human nature is not fundamentally good, but that it is fallen and needs a Saviour to renew it in righteousness and true holiness. In so far as secularism in education recognizes Jesus at all, it assumes that he came into the world simply to improve human nature that was already good; but this is to misconceive utterly the mission of our Lord. He came to bring the power of the New Birth and to create a new human race; and Christian education in common with its Lord goes forth to save that which is lost.

There is a type of education that calls itself Christian, but which has nothing in common with the spirit and purpose of Christ. Indeed, it seems to be conscious of this fact and prefers the name of "Religious Education" to "Christian Education." But the schools of the Buddhists and the Mohammedans are religious schools. We need to have schools genuinely Christian. This matter is too great and too grave to be trifled with. There is no room in the field of education for pretenses and shams. The churches must not permit institutions of learning that are not genuinely Christian to fatten upon their funds and profit by their patronage. For a school to wear the garb of a Christian church in order to secure the gifts of consecrated people when it does not propose to do Christian work, is to practice a species of educational simony which is far worse than all the sins of secularism. For any church to permit such a sin to be committed in its name is really to approve the crime of getting money under false pretenses, and to wink at an offense as coarse and profane as the gluttony and covetousness of Hophni and Phinehas.

Every school, college or university which bears the name and carries the commission of a Christian church must be able to give a Christian account of itself when men demand of it, "What do you more than others?"

O LOVE THAT WILL NOT LET ME GO.

We are told that when George Matheson realized that he was going blind, he wrote a letter to his fiance offering to release her from her covenant of love because of his certain blindness. To his surprise and deep regret she accepted the proffered release. The young poet-preacher was plunged into a veritable Gethsemane of sorrow. In time, however, his feet found the Rock of Ages, and he became aware of another who was "acquainted with grief." He went to his desk and, in the travail of his soul, a great hymn was born. Sore and sick at heart for the love that had let him go, he wrote:

"O love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee;
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in Thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

Then, as victory over his impending affliction found utterance, he wrote that wonderful stanza, a prayer of resignation without which few of us could face the defeat and disappointment of blindness:

"O Light that followest all my way,
I yield my flickering torch to Thee;
My heart restores its borrowed ray,
That in Thy sunshine's blaze its day
May brighter, fairer be."

Mounting yet higher, with the same note of noble victory, he wrote:

"O Joy that seeketh me through pain,
I cannot close my heart to Thee;
I trace the rainbow through the rain,
And feel the promise is not vain,
That morn shall tearless be."

And finally conscious of the spirit of victory in Him who transformed the cross from a symbol of defeat to an emblem of supreme victory, he penned the closing lines:

"O Cross that lifteth up my head.
I dare not ask to fly from Thee;
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms red—
Life that shall endless be."

—The King's Business.

RED SUNSETS.

By Rev. R. H. Bennett, D.D.

Readers of Dan Crawford's "Thinking Black" will recall the chapter "Red Sunsets." Crawford says: "King Chona lay dying in Africa. Being a king he must not pass out alone. It would be unkingly. So from the moment he breathed his last breath, human blood began to flow. Every footstep of those who bore the corpse was over ground sodden with blood. The body was lowered into a grave aglow with the same crimson flood. And when all was over and the king was buried, the grave was moulded over with plaster made of earth and not water, but human blood."

We are burying King Alcohol in America. And it looks like his misguided followers are determined that he shall have a similar interment. Well nigh every morning's paper tells of men slain for enforcing the Constitution of the United States. A faithful police officer is murdered in Atlanta because he holds his oath sacred to obey the law and keep his trust. An Ohio editor is assassinated in his own yard because he tries to purify polluted politics and divorce the city government from a foul crime ring. A Kentucky preacher is shot dead in his pulpit while leading a hymn (strangely enough entitled, "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder, I'll Be There") because he preached against the vile crime of making and selling intoxicating liquor in violation of the law. Men are being slain by pistol, dynamite and bludgeon.

These martyred victims are called to die for the cause of righteousness. Your part and mine, my reader, is much easier. We are called to give our words in moulding public opinion against the flood of wet propaganda now being poured upon the public, which would deceive if possible even the elect. We are called to give our vote always and everywhere for law and against lawlessness, at every ballot box. We are called to give our means to sustain the forces of righteousness in this best of wars.

The liquor forces of this land are combined in a desperate death struggle to overthrow the best, wisest and most productive reform in the history of humanity. Let all patriotic Americans unite to resist every effort to ridicule, weaken, modify or repeal any of our temperance laws. How easy out part compared to the martyrs' mentioned above!

Even if the thought of any retreat for our nation in this matter were possible, there is a rugged old verse of Scripture standing in the way. We will never set up the saloon again even under the disguise of "light wines and beers," because the overwhelming majority of the people of America do not propose to have that verse written over the door of our beloved country, "The dog is returned to his vomit and the sow to her wallowing in the mire."

Gallant Wolfe, on the heights of Abraham, smitten with his death wound as he led his hosts to victory, heard the cry, "They fly! They fly!" "Who fly?" said he, opening his fast closing eyes. "The enemy." "Then I die happy." The Christian people of the United States do not need to die to see the enemy fly. They have already seen it. They have already overwhelmingly routed him by the greatest majority in the history of the Republic. But it is the history of many reforms that the defeated enemy sometimes rallies for a temporary but futile return. The mighty majority of American citizens sent that vile and filthy tyrant, the liquor traffic, to Elba. He is trying to stage a comeback of a hundred days. We are now en route to meet him at Waterloo and send him to St. Helena for life. There will be no return after this. All we need to do is to keep up the firm, sane, resolute and irresistible work of the Anti-Saloon League to drive forever the comparatively small, illegal and criminal liquor traffic where the far larger liquor traffic (liquor drinking in our country has been reduced ninety per cent by prohobition) has already gone; into the gutter and into the sewer, where it belongs.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

There are some movements chronicled by the current press that are as absurd as Mother Goose's laughing dog or lunar leaping cow. One of these flairs is Mayor Thompson's, of Chicago, edict or order to exclude from the city schools and libraries books with an English bias or leaning. I have this to say: He has a job on hand—an Herculean task. Literature for the past eight hundred years—as we know literature—is replete with praises of England and English ways. The noblest creations of genius are written in the virile language of the sea-girt isle, and no true, red-blooded Anglo-Saxon, whether he dwells beneath the heavens over which broods the Southern Cross, or where the Polar lights flash their glory to dim the gleam of the stars, can fail to catch a thrill and feel a kindred bond of fellowship, rejoicing in the fact of brotherhood, as he may read the magic lines of Dickens or the stately measures of Macaulay, not to mention him who is first and princeliest of all, Shakespeare, bard of Avon, bard of the wide, green earth. The next thing you know, some demagogue with an ax to grind—their axes are proverbially dull—will be objecting to our Bible because it was translated in England, and our laws because Blackstone enunciated so many of the principles of jurisprudence upon which ours is founded. Bias toward England indeed! Why, I am straight-lined toward the old mother country, and have no more fears of English domination and English invasion of our country or English control of anything a smart Yankee can beat him to, than I have of an incursion from Mars. If one-half the things we hear of Chicago be true, an administration of good, straight-laced English law would be wholesome. If Englishmen can write better histories of these United States than Americans can, I want to read some of them. Most naturalized Englishmen I have known were rather eager to proclaim their love and affection for their adopted country, and most of them make good, respectable citizens of our commonwealth. Some of the best laws and traditions and customs we have are of English origin. The spirit of those doughty barons who wrung the Magna Charta from the unwilling John, and of those Ironsides who prayed and warred on Marston Moor is crystallized in our Declaration of Independence and Federal Constitution. The time is past for any of the Anglo-Saxon breed to play the tyrant. Rest easy, Mayor Thompson, England does not want Chicago. She has troubles enough at home.

No, beloved, it is not the place, whether city or country, that counts in this call to the ministry. Many are called from the rural districts, some are chosen from the city churches. Among the prophets, Isaiah was urban, Amos rural. Peter was from the country, Paul from the city. The old Carondelet Street Church of New Orleans at one time was fruitful in sending forth ministers, and these men are now leaders in the church. In the church at Jackson, La., many young men from the farms and from the city heard and heeded this divine voice. It is where the ministry is honored and respected, as it should be, and the men who bear the marks of Jesus Christ are counted among the choicest and the best. A call like this to service, to self-denial, to consecration of the life to its single purpose, is only begotten when and where the tide of spiritual power flows full and free. Like the swell of a great tidal wave from ocean depths, it comes from the deep of men's souls, where the voice of God is heard and heeded. It is wrong to confuse this call with other activities of God's kingdom in the earth. It is true that all honest, earnest labor for the promotion of this cause is acceptable, but the New Testament undoubtedly teaches that a call to the ministry of preaching is separate and apart from other ministries. As ambassador for Christ and messenger of his grace, the true preacher has the credentials of heaven's court. When the church is fully awakened, flaming with zeal, lighted by the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, and not substituting other activities for this one gift of prophecy, then prophets and sons of prophets are begotten. And this call will sound clear and full above the tumult of earth's countless voices.

THE MOST POPULAR WORDS IN THE LANGUAGE.

By M. S. Rice.

I was interested in the report recently made by a committee that had been selected to discover, if possible, what are to-day the most popular words in the English language. That committee, after much thought and planning, decided to count and classify the words in a cross-section of present-day popular literature. They took representative parts of all the literature our day is constantly interested in, from the Bible to the sporting page of the newspapers. They counted and listed somewhat more than four million words.

Out of the not very extensive vocabulary of popular use, the first six words came in the following order: Time—Day—Man—Place—Year, and Work.

Look carefully at that list. It is thought-producing. It is not frivolous. It is not wicked. It is a stubborn testimony of our day. It reflects our eager, hurrying, ambitious day. Its omissions are as impressive as are its conclusions.

May we not choose a list of words that will breathe a bit more religious meaning into life? There is a heaviness in that list that needs the encouragement of a great living hope.—Methodist Episcopal Press.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Missions. Pending its adoption, Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans, was heard. The report was adopted.

S. V. Wall read report of Committee on Lay Activities, and G. L. Morelock, of the General Board of Lay Activities, was heard. This report was adopted, which carried with its adoption the election of J. G. Huston as Conference Lay Leader.

J. H. Felts, A. T. McIlwain, R. A. Tucker, D. H. Hall, J. H. Johnson, were appointed as a committee on Group Insurance for the Conference.

Announcements were made, the Conference sang the doxology and adjourned with the benediction by Dr. J. W. Perry.

Fourth Day, Saturday—Morning Session.

The Conference was called to order by the Bishop, who announced hymn 146, "Alas, and Did My Savior Bleed," after the singing of which L. A. McKeown led in prayer. The Bishop read for a lesson 2 Cor. 5th chapter, commenting thereon at length. The Wisdom sisters sang, "A Charge to Keep I Have."

The minutes of Friday's session were read and adopted.

In answer to the question, "Who are the deacons of one year?" W. R. Crouch, J. O. Dowdle, W. C. Galceran, Jr., W. C. Newman, W. L. Pearson, S. B. Potts, A. M. West, M. H. Weed and L. B. Wimberly, having passed in examination of character and finished the required course of study for the third year, made their reports and were advanced to the class of the fourth year. A. C. Johnson was retained in the third year class.

In answer to question 21, "Are the preachers blameless in their life and administration?" the names of the preachers of the Aberdeen, Columbus and some of the Corinth district were called, who made their reports and were passed in character.

Dr. F. S. Parker, of the General Epworth League Board, and Dr. Weber, principal of the M. E. Academy at Mathiston, were introduced to the Conference.

For a little change in the proceedings of the day, W. R. Lott as spokesman for the preachers of the Aberdeen District presented to L. P. Wasson, who for four years has been the presiding elder of this district, a beautiful silver service as a token of their love and esteem for him and his wife. In feeling, appropriate words, Brother Wasson made a response to the speech of presentation.

The class for admission into full connection was called to the front, to whom the Bishop gave a solemn and earnest charge. After having met all requirements, and answering all disciplinary questions, they were unanimously received. The class is composed of G. O. Clark, F. F. Coggins, J. W. Gibson, W. C. McCay, J. C. Wasson and J. N. Humphrey.

On motion, the Conference voted to convene at 3 p. m. for an afternoon session.

Announcements were made, the doxology sung, and the Bishop pronounced the benediction.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference was called to order at 3 p.m. by the Bishop. "I Need Thee Every Hour," was sung and W. M. McIntosh led in prayer. Secretary Countiss read the minutes of the morning session, which were approved.

Resuming question 21, the names of all the preachers were called, their characters passed and reports made. When all of the Greenwood District had been called, Brother Felts, for the brethren of the district, spoke words of appreciation and esteem for J. E. Cunningham, who has served for four years as presiding elder of this district, telling of plans to present to Brother Cunningham and his wife in their home a gift in token of the love and esteem of the brethren of the district.

M. H. Weed made his report, and having finished the four years' course of study, was elected to elder's orders.

W. A. Langley, an applicant in the second year, who failed to make a report to the Conference, and who is living outside the bounds of the Conference, was discontinued.

Reports were read and adopted from the Board of Evangelism, the Sunday School Board and the Board of Missions.

The Conference took action during the day to co-operate with the other patronizing Conferences in the Seashore Divinity School, and in the development of the Seashore Camp Grounds for future usefulness to the church. Carroll Varner, T. H. Lipscomb and W. W. Mitchell were appointed as a commission for Seashore Camp Grounds from this Conference.

During the last few minutes of the afternoon session, B. F. Lewis, manager of the Methodist Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss., was given a hearing. Following Brother Lewis' talk, the Conference adjourned to meet in memorial session at 8 p.m. Sunday.

Sunday's program is as follows:

Fifth Day—Sunday, November 6, 1927.

The Conference met in its annual Love Feast at 9 a.m. Brother W. D. Babb was in charge and read I John 4th chapter for a scripture lesson. W. M. Young led the prayer. After partaking of the elements of the feast, bread and water, more than an hour was spent by the brethren telling of their experiences in Christ and His service. It was a gracious time. More than 30 spoke, while as many more were anxious to add their testimony.

At the 11 o'clock hour, Bishop Candler preached to a great congregation that thronged the church, gathered from almost every point in the Delta and many towns in the hills for this particular occasion. Following the Bishop's sermon, the ordination service for deacons was held, when G. O. Clark, F. F. Coggins, J. W. Gibson, W. C. McCay, and J. C. Wasson were ordained deacons.

Memorial Service.

At 3 p.m., the Conference met in Memorial Session. Hymn 583, "Asleep in Jesus," was sung, and J. T. Lockhart led in prayer. The Bishop read a lesson from I Cor. 15th chapter. The Wisdom Sisters sang beautifully, "We shall sleep, but not forever." V. C. Curtis read the memoir of Brother C. P. Moss, and S. E. Ashmore read the memoir of Brother J. H. Bass. Quite a number of the brethren paid loving tribute to these men, their lives and labors, after which the report of the Committee on Memoirs was adopted.

At the close of the Memorial session, Bishop Candler called for the class to be ordained elders, and a class of fifteen fine young preachers were presented. They are: S. E. Ashmore, A. W. Bailey, W. P. Bailey, G. H. Boyles, A. Y. Brown, W. H. Heath, W. M. Hester, J. E. Lawhon, W. C. Mattox, W. W. Milligan, W. L. Robinson, H. D. Suydam, B. G. Whitehurst, A. F. Moore and M. H. Weed. These all were ordained elders, following which the Conference adjourned to meet at 8:30 a.m., Monday.

Sixth Day—Monday, November 7, 1927.

Conference convened at 8:30 a.m. Hymn 183 was sung, and J. V. Bennett led in prayer. The Bishop read a lesson from Acts 28, commenting thereon. The Wisdom Sisters sang, "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing," with the chorus, "I will arise and go to Jesus."

Secretary Countiss read the journal of Saturday afternoon session and the Memorial session of Sunday afternoon. The minutes were approved.

The Committee on Conference Relation made its report. Pending its adoption, L. P. Wasson made a plea for a free-will offering for the four brethren added to the Superannuate list this year. The brethren laid on the table $267.46.

W. W. Woollard was called to the chair to preside during the temporary absence of the Bishop.

W. M. McIntosh read report of Committee on Spiritual Interests, which was adopted.

The Committee on Group Insurance made its report, which, after discussion, was adopted. Ninety-three preachers within the insurance age stood and agreed to take out such insurance.

The report on Hospitals was read, spoken to by J. H. Sherard, and adopted.

The Conference Treasurer, M. Johnson, made his report to the Conference.

The Committee on Budget reported and report was adopted.

The Board of Finance made its report. General F. A. Howell, the veteran lay delegate of the Conference, made a plea for better collections, in order that the claimants on the Board of Finance may receive in full the apportionments made them.

G. C. Schwartz read the report of the Committee on Christian Literature. In the absence of Dr. H. T. Carley, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, who could not be here on account of illness, J. H. Felts represented the interests of our Conference organ. The report was adopted.

J. H. Holder read the report of the Board of Benevolences, which was adopted. (The Bishop resumed the chair)

Question 42, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" was called. J. J. Baird, presented the invitation of Pontotoc; A. T. McIlwain presented the invitation of Corinth Methodism; V. C. Curtis presented Starkville's invitation. Pontotoc was selected.

J. A. George read the report of the Committee on Orphanages, which carried the nomination of J. H. Sherard and T. H. Dorsey as members of the Board of Trustees. J. H. Sherard spoke to the report, followed by V. C. Curtis. The report was adopted.

Reports from the Epworth League Board, and the Mission Board, were read and adopted. The Mission Board report called for a Committee to be appointed to confer with a like committee from the Mississippi Conference to provide some adequate plan to care for the spiritual interests of Methodist students in the State University.

Reports on Bible Work, Temperance and Social Service, District Conference Records, Sabbath Observance, Board of Church Extension, were made and adopted.

J. B. Reynolds was placed on the Sunday School Board in place of J. M. Foreman, who is moving from the bounds of the Conference.

The Bishop made a call for an offering to restore to its original condition the room at Oxford University in England occupied by John Wesley. The members of the Conference gave $70.71.

The statistical secretaries made their report.

R. P. Neblett read a resolution of thanks for the delightful entertainment given the Conference by Clarksdale, which was adopted by a unanimous standing vote.

H. R. McKee, an elder from the Mississippi Conference was transferred to us.

Del Longgrear was transferred to the Mississippi Conference.

The minutes of the sixth day's session were read by the Secretary and approved.

Hymn 227 was sung, and Bishop Candler led the Conference in prayer.

The Bishop gave a short, earnest exhortation for each to accept the appointment assigned him in the right spirit and go do his best for God and the church, following which the appointments were read, the doxology sung, and the benediction pronounced by Bishop Candler, which closed the Conference sine die.

THE SPEAKING STARS.

Professor Michael Pupin read a paper before the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its meeting in Philadelphia recently on the radio activity of the sun and stars. What he is reported to have said then leads the New York Times to recall that Professor Pupin learned the language of the stars when he was a herdsman's boy in Serbiat. In an address in Columbia chapel some years ago, he declared that to him and his fellow shepherds and herdsmen the language of the heavenly bodies was as real as human speech. In another address at Vassar College a few months ago, he ventured to put in our language what he conceived might be the message of a young star near the boundary of our stellar system speaking to that system and saying:

"I am an astral baby now, and will be a baby still when, a million years hence, you receive this message. Many billions of years will pass before the ardor of my youth has cooled down to the moderation of your central star, the sun. Heaven only knows when I shall be as old as your old Mother Earth. But when I reach that age I shall be a beautiful cosmic bell just like your earth and, responding to the clappers of the luminous stars, I shall add my voice to the celestial choir which is declaring the glory of God."

It may turn out, after all, that the Common Version had warrant for the rendering of the familiar lines of the Nineteenth Psalm: "There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard." The Revised Version omits "where." The singing stars are heard by those whose ears are attuned.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

THE SHRINE OF COBRE.

By Garfield Evans.

The town of Cobre is situated on the eastern end of the island of Cuba, near Santiago de Cuba, and about 600 miles east of Habana. This week two special trains of pilgrims left Habana for Cobre to do homage to the famous image of the Virgin there. In addition, thousands of other people are flocking to this shrine. The Catholic Church teaches the people that this image represents the patron saint of the Republic of Cuba, and the Archbishop himself organized and presided over this pilgrimage.

There are many stories told of the origin of this shrine. One of the best known I have read in the newspaper which has the largest circulation of any paper in the Republic, a periodical of thirty-two pages. This article was written as a fact and there was no suggestion that it might be legendary.

On account of the scarcity of salt, so the story was written, three brothers from the town of Cobre set out in the year 1627 to go some hundred miles by boat to the Bay of Nipe, where they could secure the desired commodity. Having made the trip successfully, they prepared to return home, but encountered bad weather and were detained two days. On the third day they started early at dawn, although a heavy fog covered the bay. As they pushed their way cautiously through the fog, one of the brothers saw a strange object floating on the waters. Approaching it, they perceived it was the image of the Virgin Mary, and in one hand she was grasping a golden cross, while in the other she held a most beautiful infant. Lifting the image into the boat, they found these words engraved thereon: "I am the Virgin of Caridad" (Charity).

This image, which is now enshrined at Cobre, is gorgeously dressed in a gown of gold that cost $5,000. Every one who makes the pilgrimage and kisses the image, so they believe, will be cured of any disease, receive pardon for any crime, or the answer to any petition.

We live 300 miles from Cobre. Yesterday we saw a procession of poor people carrying candles and hand-made stars and going to a central place where they were to celebrate all night a special mass in honor of the image. Returning last night from another town, we saw a crowd assembled, and were told that they were keeping watch all night in honor of the image. The following day those who claim a promise will have to beg alms from door to door in evidence of their humility.

THE TESTIMONY OF A GREAT PHYSICIAN.

The moment before a human being dies he weighs so much, his height is so much, and his structure is of a certain character, both macroscopic and microscopic. A moment after he dies he is the same in appearance, in height and in structure, in every respect, really, except one, namely, that life has gone out of him—a thing that you cannot feel, you cannot discover by any of the human senses, but the greatest reality in the world. It is the great imponderable. Science cannot deal with it, but faith can and does. "The things that are seen are temporal; the things that are not seen are eternal."

My friend Osler in his Ingersoll Lecture on Immortality at Harvard concluded by saying: "I am of the opinion of Cicero who had rather be mistaken with Plato than be in the right with those who deny altogether the life after death." This, Osler declared, was his own confessio fidei.

Fifteen years later, on Dec. 23, 1919, six days before his death, note the triumphant certainty which he felt when, at close quarters with death, he wrote this last message, "Dear Friends: The harbor is nearly reached, after a splendid voyage with such companions all the way; and my boy is waiting for me."

For centuries science has been making the experiment of death in countless human beings and has asked the tomb for news of the other world, but the tomb has been silent. Science stops when life ceases, but faith o'erleaps science and declares that our mortal body "is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

Our Lord himself has told us in no uncertain terms that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish but have everlasting life."

If I believe Michelson when he tells me that light travels at the rate of 186,284 miles a second, and George Ellery Halt when he tells me that the nebula in Andromeda is so far away that it takes light at this wonderful speed one million years to reach my eyes, I accept their statements because they know about these things and I do not. When Jesus Christ made his statement that I have just quoted, I believe him, because he knew of the other world as well as this and I do not. Dare we disbelieve the positive declaration of Jesus Christ himself?

I am fully convinced that when I pass from this world I shall meet my dear wife who was taken from me forty years ago last July, and I thank God for that belief.

I thank God for faith as well as science.—Dr. W. W. Keen, of Philadelphia.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

It was my privilege to visit the one hundred and fourth session of the Holston Conference, which convened Sept. 28, in Knoxville, Tenn. I was delighted with the people and the country. There is a singular fascination about the rugged mountains and the wooded hills, and the peaceful valleys clothed with verdant robes of unrepeated variety, forming a combination of idyllic beauty and grandeur. The inhabitants for the most part have descended from the sturdy Anglo-Saxon pioneers, who settled there and subdued the wilderness, and helped to lay the foundation of our great Republic. The men and women of to-day have preserved the traditions of their fathers, so that the Holston is one of the leading Conferences of Southern Methodism. It has furnished many of the great men of the church and nation.

My friend and brother, Bishop H. M. DuBose, had invited me to be present and to preach. So I addressed the Conference Thursday morning and Sunday night; at 10 a. m. I spoke to a large class of men in Dr. P. R. Knickerbocker's great church, and the Lord was present to bless.

It would be difficult to speak too highly of the personnel of the Holston preachers, presiding elders and pastors; bound together by ties of Christian love, they form a solid phalanx whose object is to conquer and regenerate a resisting world. Bishop DuBose is an ideal presiding officer. Thoroughly familiar with parliamentary law, he holds the reins with a steady hand and conducts business with ease and alacrity. He has captured the Conference by his masterful leadership and brotherly kindness. He is a great preacher and a great scholar. While editor of the Epworth Era and our Quarterly Review, he evinced a profound knowledge of men, and a knowledge of the times to know what Israel ought to do. His life of Bishop Asbury, to say nothing of his other writings, is a golden link in the chain of Christian biography.

In a recent number of the Nashville Christian Advocate, the Rev. J. L. Decell gives a glowing sketch of the Bishop's life, telling us that he was admitted into the Methodist itinerancy at the early age of 19 years. The writer continues: "Now, after fifty years of enlarged vision, deepening conviction and fruitful toil, as circuit rider, editor, author and bishop, he returns home to be present when the Mississippi Conference celebrates the Golden Jubilee of his admission on trial. Mississippi Methodism is justly proud of her own, who has been in character unblemished, travels far, labors abundant, and for the truth valiant and unswerving. He will deliver his semi-centennial sermon Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, and will preach the sermon for the ordination of elders on Sunday night."

Leaving Knoxville I went to Memphis over the Southern Railway, thence by St. Louis, Kansas City and Denver, and came up through Wyoming and Idaho, and am now in the midst of a great revival at LaGrande, Oregon. I have no words to describe the beauty and grandeur of the mountains of Oregon. They stand like sentinels guarding the western sea; they are lasting memorials of the handiwork of God.

As the seasons swiftly pass, I feel it more and more incumbent on me to adopt the language of St. Paul to the Corinthians when he said, "I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." It is my duty to preach him as the Son of God, who bore our griefs and carried our sorrow; as the Son of man whose eyes were filled with tears for a Lazarus, and moist with mercy for a wandering world. I shall speak of him as the only hope for a sinful and apostate generation. I will point to his redeeming blood, and cry: "There stands the Messenger of Truth, there stands the Legate of the sky; his theme divine, his office sacred, his credentials clear. By him the violated law speaks out; it thunders; and in strains as sweet as the angels use, his gospel whispers peace. He establishes the strong, restores the weak, reclaims the wanderer, binds the broken heart."

SOMEBODY HAS MONEY.

A distinguished visitor to the United States collected data for a report to Great Britain on his return. He has this to say about our prosperity:

"A group of financiers recently bought the Dodge automobile property with a single check for $146,000,000. The General Motors Company has recently paid a dividend of fifty per cent, and its net profits for the first half of last year were $83,000,000. The Woolworth sales were nearly $253,000,000 in 1926. The United States Steel Corporation has a share capital of $1,071,000,000. Childs' restaurants served fifty million meals in 1925, with a gross income of $27,000,000. American employees now own billions of dollars' worth of stock in the concerns where they work—indeed, the figures are so incredible that I hesitate to mention them.

"The new securities offered in the United States in the first half of 1926 aggregated more than $4,000,000,000, while Great Britain issued less than two-thirds of a billion. In 1924 there were only seventy-five taxpayers with an income of more than a million dollars—in 1925 there were 207. When a new coal mine is opened there is no need to build homes for the miners—they can come in their automobiles."

Some one has money. It looks now, with the bumper crops through large sections of the West, that the wave of prosperity has rolled over the Mississippi and Missouri Valleys. There is a lot of money in banks, and in the old clock, and elsewhere.

Cannot the cause of our Lord and Saviour reap a certain fraction of that golden harvest, the harvest from oil, wheat, corn? Cannot our colleges be the beneficiaries of this abundance? Why not consider God? Why not consider our fellowmen? Why not consider our own life as one of stewardship?

Those who give to God invest in eternal dividends, in the imperishable lives of others, in the living temples, that for better or worse make up the world.

Write to some college president, to some superintendent of a hospital, to some home for the aged, some children's refuge—some one whom your surplus can bless.—Central Christian Advocate.

COMMON THINGS.

The things I prize of greatest worth
Are just the common things of earth;
The rain, the sun, the grass, the trees;
The flowers, the birds, the glorious breeze;
Clouds that pass, and stars that shine,
Mountains, valleys, all are mine;
Rivers broad, and open sea
Are riches none can take from me,
O God is here on ev'ry hand,
Upon the sea, upon the land!
And day by day my thanks I give
That with these common things I live.

GRANDFATHER SPIDER'S STORY.

"I shall never forget it, my first balloon trip," boasted Grandfather Spider to his twenty little spider grandchildren as they sat on the old fence-post in the silver moonlight; "but it is a long, strange story, my dears, and it is past your bed-time."

"Tell it, tell it," begged the twenty little spiders; "tell it, grandfather, then we will go to bed."

Grandfather Spider stretched his eight thin legs and scratched his head.

"You will soon be old enough to go a sailing over the green fields yourselves," said he, "but don't wait too long before making a landing; don't wait too long, my dears, or you may find yourselves over the great blue sea, where the waves are as high as trees; then where will you land, I ask you?"

The twenty little spiders nestled close to Grandfather Spider's knees. "I shall never take a balloon trip," said one of the little spiders, shivering; "this pleasant meadow is good enough for me."

"Nonsense!" said Grandfather Spider. "You will want to sail over the trees when you see the others going. It is quite wonderful, I assure you. Spiders have gone up in balloons for hundreds of years, and men have just learned how to do it, and think themselves very smart at that." And Grandfather Spider laughed and nodded his wise little head.

"Tell us more," whispered the tiniest spider.

"Well, to start with, I was venturesome, and my mother warned me not to travel too far on my first trip; but I hardly knew what she was saying, I was so eager to start. After I had spun my first long band of silk, which a little breeze caught and floated toward the sky, I waited no longer, but let go of the fence-rail, where I was standing, and I grabbed the swinging band of silk with my front feet.

"My, but it was exciting to feel oneself floating higher and higher into the blue sky! Soon I spun a wee basket for my other feet, and then, that I might travel faster, I spun another long band like the first, and there I was all set for my journey.

"The west wind was blowing merrily, and soon I was above the tree-tops. I could no longer see the meadow that had been my home.

"I watched the sun paint the sky red at evening, and was so taken up with the sight that I forgot to look beneath me until the colors began to fade. When I looked below for a place to land, I thought the sun had blinded me, for I saw the same colors, deep blue and fading crimson; but as I looked closer I saw the colors were reflected from the sky, and that I was above a huge body of water, no doubt the ocean itself.

"I had begun to roll up my silken bands to descend before I realized my danger, but now I let them out again very quickly, I assure you, and thanked the stars which were beginning to twinkle that the west wind showed no sign of resting. I could now see the great waves rise and fall, and it grew darker and darker."

The tiniest spider grandchild was crying softly. "Did you get drowned, grandfather?" she wailed.

"Silly one, silly one indeed," said grandfather, "am I not alive to tell the story?" and he laughed his jolly little laugh.

"But it was a terrible night, I'll admit. I was hungry, and growing weaker every minute, but sail I must, with nothing but the sky above and the sea beneath. I wondered how many miles it was to the nearest star, and then I must have fallen asleep, which was a dangerous thing to do; but the west wind was kind, and kept me far above the sea.

"When I awoke the sun was blazing in my eyes, and dancing on the waves below. In the distance I could see the shore and houses and trees; but alas, alack! the wind was blowing me in the wrong direction, and I was going out to sea.

"Suddenly there appeared a black object ahead of me, where the sky and sea seemed to meet. I decided that it was a ship, for I had heard my mother talk of how they carried men back and forth across the waters. It was my only hope. I knew I must land on that ship, where I would be safe and sound until I would once more feel the blessed earth under my feet.

"Nearer and nearer she came. How I worked, furling and unfurling my silken bands, steering myself, what little I could, until she was beneath me! Then, boys, I dropped; it took courage, my dears, but I wouldn't be here now if I had held back another minute.

"The ship was a strange place, no other spiders like myself aboard, but there were a few flies that kept me from starving, and some vulgar fellows called cockroaches, with whom I talked just to find if possible where we were bound.

"We landed that very day on the shore I had seen, and that landing-place is, in fact, not far from this very meadow; for you see, my dears, I was so thankful to find myself again on dry land that I was quite ready to settle down. I met your grandmother in this same meadow, and here we have lived ever since."

"You were very, very brave, grandfather," sighed the tiniest spider, " and thank you for telling us all about it."

"Yes, thank you," called the twenty little spiders, as they scampered to bed.—Selected.

THE LITTLE GIRL WITH THE WHITE COAT.

This Little Girl lived quite near a big city park. It was a beautiful park, with flower beds of tulips and daffodils in the spring and evergreen trees that looked like fluffy snowballs in winter.

In the park there were some squirrels, and the Little Girl used to watch them. At first they would scamper away and run up the trees, and she could only look up at them and call, "Come down, little squirrels, I won't hurt you." Always she talked to them with a soft voice, and gradually the little squirrels began to watch for the Little Girl in the White Coat. She nearly always wore white. The squirrels noticed that none of her clothes were trimmed in the skins of their fathers or mothers that they had loved, so she never reminded them of guns or nets when they looked at her. One day her father suggested that she take nuts along for the squirrels, so she began to fill her pockets with them. When she went to the store she would think about the little squirrels that liked nuts as well as she did, and would buy nuts for them. Each sunny day when she and her father walked in the park, she counted as the best part of the walk the calling the squirrels and feeding them.

"Why do the squirrels come to me, father? They never used to come," querried the Little Girl in the White Coat.

"Because they have learned to know that you love them. Even with people, if you want them to come to you, you must love them."

"But don't you think they come for the nuts I give them?"

"Yes," was the wise answer of her father, "but you gave them nuts because you love them, don't you? Now, when you grow up, if people get from you gentleness and kindness and graciousness, you will find them coming to you."—Lorene Bowman, in Our Dumb Animals.

DOG FINDS BOY LOST THREE DAYS.

The newspapers of Washington, both in news columns and in editorials, had much to say a few weeks ago about the rescue of a Seattle Boy Scout, lost in the Cascade wilderness, by a German police dog. It seems the seventeen-year-old lad started out alone on a fishing trip, with only a couple of sandwiches and his tackle. He did not return at night, and late the next day a searching party was sent out. Early on the third day a deputy sheriff took "Arnold von Winkelried," a Doberman Pinscher, and told him to take up the trail. For three hours the dog coursed through the undergrowth, usually out of sight of his masters, but finally appeared with a gray cloth cap in his mouth. Following the lead of the dog, the sheriff came upon the form of the boy, too exhausted to rise. The officer gave first aid treatment and succeeded in reaching his automobile with the boy.

"It wasn't until the second day that I realized I was lost," said Kelsey. "I cooked a few trout I had caught, killed a grouse with a rock and cooked it, and ate berries. The last day seems like a dream. I was lying beside the stump in the morning. I forget what time it was—I was past caring, I guess—when I heard a noise in the bushes and saw something black moving toward me. I was frightened.

"'It's a bear,' I thought. 'How am I going to meet it?' Next thing I knew old Arnold was licking my face and grabbing for my cap. I petted the dog a moment, but he was anxious to be away, and I allowed him to go with my cap. I knew that help wasn't very far off."—Our Dumb Animals.

ROBERT EDWARD LEE.

Ben Hill's Eloquent Eulogy of the Soldier.

In an address before the Southern Historical Society, delivered at Atlanta, Feb. 17, 1874, Senator Ben Hill made the following eulogy of General R. E. Lee:

"When the future historian shall come to survey the character of Lee he will find it rising like a huge mountain above the undulating plain of humanity and he must lift his eyes high toward heaven to catch its summit. He possessed every virtue of other great commanders without their vices. He was a foe without hate; a friend without treachery; a victor without oppression, and a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vices; a private citizen without reproach; a Christian without hypocrisy, and a man without guile. He was a Caesar without his ambition; Frederick without his tyranny; Napoleon without his selfishness, and Washington without his reward. He was obedient to authority as a servant, and royal in authority as a true king. He was gentle as a woman in life; modest and pure as a virgin in thought; watchful as a Roman vestal in duty; submissive to law as Socrates and grand in battle as Achilles!"—Selected.

"TIME OUT."

"I don't care if you hire a thousand men; you can't hold a candle to what I make."

"No—what is it?"

"Gunpowder!"—Exchange.

Old Man—"Son, can you direct me to the bank?"

Kid—"Yes, sir, for a quarter."

Old Man—"Isn't that mighty high pay?"

Kid—"Not for a bank director, mister!"—Iowa Frivol.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The church at Bogalusa, La., Rev. R. W. Tucker, pastor, expects to have its church debt paid about Jan. 2.

The church at Ethel, La., is building a Sunday school annnex, and hopes to have it completed by Conference.

The Jackson charge of the Baton Rouge District has broken its record, reporting all claims in full at the fourth quarterly conference, Oct. 9. Rev. J. H. Bowdon is the pastor who has thus brought things to pass.

The editor regrets not being in the office when Rev. R. L. Clayton, of Denham Springs, La., called on last Friday. Brother Clayton is in his first year in the itinerancy, in which he has proved to be remarkably efficient.

Rev. A. A. McKnight, who was appointed to the Washington charge, Louisiana Conference, to take the place of Rev. R. A. Cross, Jr., who was released that he might complete his course at Emory University, has taken hold vigorously of the work.

"No reason should keep you from your church services that would not keep you from your office, store, farm, school, or football game"—so we read on an attendance record card used by the Methodist church at Winnfield, La., where Rev. P. M. Caraway is pastor. That statement is sound doctrine.

Dr. Cleanth Brooks, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, in sending a subscription to the Advocate—for which we thank him—states that rapid progress is being made on the religious education building and that work will soon begin on the interior. When completed, this will be a very handsome building.

Dr. M. T. Plyler was recently elected business manager of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. The interesting thing in connection with this statement is the fact that his twin brother, Dr. A. W. Plyler, is editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Both of them are distinguished ministers of the church. It is a good team.

According to the presiding elder, Rev. H. N. Brown, the Denham Springs charge is one of the best circuits in the Baton Rouge Ditsrict from the standpoint of organization. Four of the six churches have Woman's Missionary Societies, and all of them made written reports to the fourth quarterly conference. A new parsonage and a new church have been built this year, both free of debt. The church will be dedicated on Nov. 27. Rev. R. L. Clayton is the energetic young pastor.

The corner stone of the Methodist church at Gibsland, La., was laid on Friday afternoon, Nov. 4, with an appropriate program. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. G. A. Morgan; "Greetings from Friends and Neighbors" were given by Rev. J. C. Cox; the address of the occasion was delivered by Dr. W. Winans Drake, and the corner stone was laid by Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, presiding elder of the Ruston District. Rev. C. E. McLean is the pastor at Gibsland, now closing his fourth year on that charge.

The death last week of Mr. J. R. Westerfield removed from Rayne Memorial Church, this city, one of its most devoted and useful members. Until illness forced him to give up active work several months ago, he was closely identified with all the interests of the church. For a number of years he was the faithful and efficient superintendent of the Sunday school. He was indeed a choice spirit—a man in whom was no guile. The editor of the Advocate feels keenly the loss of a personal friend, and he joins with a host of others in extending sympathy to the sorrowing family. The funeral services were held last Sunday afternoon, conducted by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of Rayne Memorial, interment being in Metairie cemetery.

The editor of the Advocate greatly regrets his inability to attend at least some of the sessions of the North Mississippi Conference. Although suffering from a threatened attack of "flu," he went to Clarksdale, reaching there a little after noon on Wednesday, hoping that his condition would improve sufficiently for him to remain a day or two. He steadily grew worse, however, and, after securing competent medical advice, decided to return home on the next train. Since reaching home he has been confined to his bed most of the time with a well-developed case of "flu," which renders uncertain his attendance upon the Mississippi Conference. He very greatly missed the fellowship of the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, which he has enjoyed so much in the past.

Protection Against Old Age

Dr. Charles D. Bulla has been elected asssociate Sunday school editor. Dr. Bulla is so widely and favorably known throughout our church that he needs no introduction to Southern Methodists. He was connected with our central Sunday school staff from 1910 to 1921. He was the organizer and the first superintendent of what was formerly known as our Wesley Bible Class Department. Later he added to his duties as superintendent those of Corresponding Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, and throughout much of his term of service he assisted in the editing of the Adult Student and of the Workers' Council. During the last six years he has served with distinction as presiding elder in the Pacific Conference, first on the San Francisco District and later on the Los Angeles District, and during this period he has had general supervision of our Sunday school work on the Pacific coast. He, therefore, brings to his task as an associate in the office of the Sunday school Editor a wide and varied experience, and we are sure that he will be cordially and affectionately welcomed by the Sunday school workers throughout our church. Doctor Bulla entered upon his new task Oct. 15.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

By R. P. Neblett.

General F. A. Howell, of Durant, commanding the Mississippi forces United Confederate Veterans, is a delegate to the Conference. He has been a regular attendant on the Annual Conferences since 1870.

Rev. J. A. Randolph, who has been for more than twenty-five years a chaplain in the United States Army, and is now retired with the rank of Major, now making his home in Nashville, Tenn., is attending the Conference. He is a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. Luke A. McKowen, who has spent most of his thirty years of itinerant service as a member of the North Mississippi Conference in the Delta territory, is still active, and his many friends are pleased to greet him as he mingles with the membership of the Conference and the citizenship of Clarksdale.

D. M. Hall, of New Albany, formerly Conference Lay Leader for North Mississippi, now chairman of the Commission on Budget, is attending the Conference.

Rev. J. H. Shumaker, of Nashville, Tenn., who began his ministry in the North Mississippi Conference, and is a native of Winston County, Miss., is a visitor. He is now a local preacher and secretary of the Methodist Benevolent Association. Several of the preachers took insurance with his company.

Rev. R. O. Brown, former pastor of the Clarksdale church, who is one of the honored superannuated preachers of the Conference, is present for the Conference.

Dr. L. D. Worsham, one of the lay delegates from Corinth, has been attending Annual Conferences in North Mississippi for the past thirty years.

Rev. T. W. Dye, of Clarksdale, is welcomed again as a member of the Conference.

Albert R. Wygul, of Nettleton, one of the staunch members of the Methodist church in Ittawamba County, at Carolina, is a lay delegate from the Aberdeen District. His many friends are glad to greet him.

R. E. Wilborn, of Lexington, who is almost as regular in his attendance on the Annual Conferences as a preacher, is here as a delegate from the Grenada District.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Columbus, who was for many years an evangelist as a local preacher, and who was readmitted several years ago, being appointed as one of the general evangelists of the Southern Methodist Church, is attending the Conference. His wife is with him, as one of the delegates from the Columbus District.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. E. Pyle, of Iuka, are present as representatives from the Corinth District. These good people have been staunch Methodists for many years, and are not only welcomed among the membership of the Conference and fellowship of the preachers, but none are more warmly greeted by their host of friends.

Rev. J. J. Brooks, the senior preacher of the Conference, his name standing at the top of the list in the chronological roll, who has been for several years a superannuate, is attending and taking a deep interest in all the proceedings of the Conference.

The Wisdom Sisters, of Macon, Mo., are delighting the Conference with their gospel singing. They are specialists in the "Old Songs" of the church. Hearty "Amens" are heard when, with rapt attention, the body of the Conference listens to the charm of their wonderful voices. They have been used in many of the churches and charges of the North Mississippi Conference in the last few years as helpers in revivals.

By H. P. Lewis.

Among those visiting our Conference for a day or so were L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District, Mississippi Conference, and J. C. Chambers, field secretary of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board.

G. L. Morelock, secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, was one of the connectional visitors, and gave a great address Thursday afternoon.

L. F. Sensabaugh, Assistant Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, was with us on Wednesday, and gave the principal address at the evening hour.

Among the local people introduced to the Conference were Revs. C. B. Crabb, pastor of the Presbyterian Church; M. C. Vick, pastor of the Baptist Church, and Walter Dakin, rector of the Episcopal Church.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Coleman and E. L. Coleman, of Doddsville, were interested visitors on Friday.

W. F. Wilson, a veteran Methodist of Ruleville, enjoyed three days of the Conference.

Quite a number of the preachers and laymen attended the early morning prayer services, which proved to be a helpful feature of the Conference.

Clarksdale entertained the Conference with a hospitality that will be long remembered. Among the pleasant features was the announcement by the chairman of the entertainment committee that provision would be made for the companions of delegates who may wish to take in the Conference on Sunday.

Dr. H. F. Brooks, pastor-host of the Conference, though having been with us only a year, being a transfer from the Mississippi Conference, has identified himself with the interests of our Conference as if he were a veteran in our ranks.

The background of flowers in the Conference room showed the loving, skilled hands of the good women of the church, who believe in keeping something pretty and attractive to the eye before all.

Fathers and sons of the Conference were seen often together. We especially have in mind S. A. Brown and A. Y. Brown; W. C. Galceran, Sr., and W. C. Galceran, Jr.; T. L. Oakes and C. L. Oakes; J. W. Raper and A. S. Raper.

The Manager of the Advocate, Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, was delightfully entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hopson, Sr., on 140 W. Second Street. He had as fellow-guests Rev. W. W. Woollard and Rev. W. L. Robinson.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Board of Temperance and Social Service.

Pursuant to the program that has been made for the Annual Conference, the Board of Temperance and Social Service will hold its anniversary, Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 30, at 3 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge.

Rev. D. B. Raulins, president of Mansfield Female College, will discuss the Social Service aspect of the Board, and Mr. O. D. Jackson, Prohibition Administrator of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas, with our own Rev. A. W. Turner, will represent the question of Temperance and Prohibition. These are vital matters before the church and State to-day, and we feel confident that the discussion of these important questions by these outstanding speakers, each of whom is expert in his line, will not only be interesting but helpful to all who may have the privilege of attending.

W. C. CHILDRESS, Chairman,
Board of Temperance and Social Service.

Class of the First Year.

Members of the Class of the First Year will please meet the committee at the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 29, at 4 o'clock.

P. M. CARAWAY, Chairman.

ATTENTION, LOUISIANA PREACHERS.

Due to the fact that there are a few slight but important changes in the Statistical reports to the Annual Conference, it will be necessary that each preacher make his report on the new report forms. These can be ordered direct from the Publishing House, or secured from the Agent on arrival at Conference.

Considerable confusion was caused last Conference on the report of membership. This was caused, in most instances, by taking the figures from Column 1, "Members Reported Last Year," instead of from Column 6, "Present Total Membership," to begin with. On table No. 1 of your Statistical Report, the first question is, "Members Reported Last Year." To answer this question you must secure the figures printed in the Minutes of last Conference from column No. 6, "Present Total Membership." Starting with this figure, you add your gains, and deduct your losses, arriving at your present total membership for this year. Where new works were formed, there was no membership reported last year and that item will be blank, and the present membership will be a net gain. Where changes have occurred in the circuit by the removal, or addition, of one or more churches, the loss or addition will appear in columns 4, or 5, as the case may be. It is sincerely hoped that the membership reports this year may be absolutely correct, and if the preachers will take pains in making out their reports, this can be done.

It is imperative that all reports be in the hands of the secretaries by the close of the first day's session of the Conference, and we urge that the preachers have due regard for the hard-worked Statistical Secretaries by observing this regulation.

Cordially,
ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

UP THROUGH THE MIRE.

By Edgar L. Vincent.

Very suggestive are many of the expressions we find in the book of Job. Think for a moment of the question Bildad, the Shuhite, asked at one point in the discussion he had with the man of Uz: Can the rush grow up without mire? Can the flag grow without water?

We catch the drift of the question. We know how the rush and the flag grow. Deep in the soft earth at the bottom of the lake, these plants have their root. Up through the clear water they make their way until they reach the sunlight, where we find them waving their scimitars of green in the breeze. Away down out of sight, mire and ooze; up here, beauty. No mire, no beautiful rush; no water, with the slime at the bottom, no flag.

Have you not often wondered why it is that men are led through such troubled ways before they come out into the sunshine of peace and joy of Christian life? So many quagmires of doubt! Such battles with passion! Swamps of testing, sloughs of despond! Fears and falls, snares and pitfalls, besetting the soul on every hand. And why? The heart asks why life might not always run along in quiet fields, with grasses, birds, and flowers all about. Read again the words of the man of old: Can the rush grow without mire? Can the flag grow without water? And he goes on to tell what happens when the water and the mire are withheld.

While it is yet in its greenness, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb.

Strange that the rush should find its very life down there in the slime! Wonderful that the moment its roots are loosened from the slippery bottom of the lake it withers! And yet, not so surprising as it might be when we think of the deeper meaning of the words. In the black soil down there the plant finds that which makes its life strong and beautiful.

Oh, these battles of ours! How they wound us and hurt us! Yes, but what did any man ever win without a battle? He who knows us better than we know ourselves knows that death comes sure and fast to him whose roots are not sunk deep in the mire of testing. Like the rush separated from its native earth, or the flag which is not sustained by the life-giving water, the soul which has been parted from its sources of power, its trials, it struggles with doubt and fear, and its whirlwinds of passion, is soon cut down and dies.

It is not wise for us to grieve when things come to us that try every thread of faith there is in us. These are our very life. Strip us of them and we are bereft of power. We have only a weak, fruitless life, and at last fail absolutely.

Mire for the rush! Water for the flag! Testings for the one God loves! We cannot do better than to read a little farther in this strange story of Job.

So, declares the Shuhite, are the paths of all that forget God; and the hypocrite's hope shall perish. . . . He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand: He shall hold it fast, but it shall not endure.—Exchange.

INFORMATION WANTED.

In the October Epworth Era's last Sunday program one of the questions asked was:

"Who first brought Christianity to the New World—Puritans, Christopher Columbus, or Cortez?" The answer given was, "Christopher Columbus."

I am not ashamed of my ignorance. I am not critical. I am not out to make a bonfire of any religious or political books; but I want to know what sort of Christianity Columbus brought to the New World. Nor do I believe he was the first to do so.

LIFT THE AVERAGE.

There are hardly any more damaging charges that could be made against the pastors of our day than these two: 1. That they are not really in earnest; 2. That they are failing to win and hold the children. There may be a modicum of excuse with regard to the latter, because of the lack of co-operation on the part of parents, the changing conditions of home life and the breaking down of former social controls, but what excuse could possibly be given for the failure to be in earnest, for the lack of genuine enthusiasm, for a cold, indifferent heart which knows no master passion for the greatest cause under heaven! Of course, the charge is not made that there are no ministers of the churches who are faithful to their high trust. The indictment is against "the average pastor." Josh Billings once wrote that "the average man is a lunk-head." On the basis of such a pessimistic appraisal, perhaps we should not expect too much of the "average" minister. No pastor should be willing, however, to be merely average; surely none has the right to be satisfied to be below the average. Every man below the average is pulling the average down. May God help us rather to raise the average, and to prove by our lives that, whatever our shortcomings may be, it cannot truthfully be said of us that we are not in earnest. May men see in us a mighty enthusiasm that they cannot deny we have a master-passion for Christ and His Church.—Editorial in The Reformed Church Messenger.

JOHN C. ANDERSON died at his home in Mendenhall, Miss., Feb. 2, 1927, and was buried at the cemetery at Johns the following day. He was born in Rankin County, Aug. 21, 1851, the son of William and Catherine Anderson. William Anderson was treasurer of Rankin County during the Civil War, and died soon after the war, leaving a wife and three children, of whom John was the eldest and the last to die. On Feb. 1, 1891, John C. Anderson was married to Miss Alice Gates, daughter of T. J. Gates, of Johns, Miss. Brother Anderson was in business at Johns for a number of years, and the town was named for him. He also united with the Methodist church in 1894 while living there. From Johns he moved with his wife to Mendenhall, and was in business at Mendenhall and D'Lo the last thirteen years of his life. Brother Anderson was always a friend to the poor. His charities were many and not always known even by those closest to him. Of a cheerful and optimistic nature, he always looked on the bright side of life. He was a lovable, Christian gentleman, and the church and community lost a valuable and useful member when he passed away. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Gates Anderson, a loyal member of the Methodist church at Mendenhall.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Father in Heaven has seen fit to call from our ranks, to the church above, our faithful and saintly brother and co-worker, HENRY ALLEN SORRELS, SR.; and,

Whereas, he has been a steward, trustees, and Sunday school teacher in this church for many, many years; and,

Whereas, he has been known to travel through rain, cold, and mud to attend the meetings of his church; and,

Whereas, he was a liberal supporter and a faithful, optimistic steward and member;

Therefore, be it resolved, First, That we miss his safe counsel and encouraging words.

Second, That his death was a great loss to our Methodist church, as a faithful attendant on all services, and a liberal supporter of all her institutions.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, and a copy spread on the minutes of this quarterly conference, and a copy sent for publication to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Belzoni Banner.

In the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. McSwain, of Laurel, Miss., at 7:07 p. m., July 7, 1927, the saintly spirit of MRS. B. F. WALKER, lovingly called by her friends "Mother" Walker, departed this life for the better world. Before her marriage she was a Miss Rhodes, of Rankin County. At an early age, she was converted and united with the Methodist church in childhood, and remained a faithful member till the day of her death. Until the weakness of ripening age debarred her from the privilege of attending upon the services of her church, she was always in her place at the house of worship, and as long as she was able she was an active member, consistently doing her part in the work of her church. When she reached young womanhood, and while still a resident of Rankin County, she was united in marriage to B. F. Walker, Feb. 5, 1874, with whom she lived happily till his death, June 8, 1925, preceding her just two years and one month into the mysteries of the Great Beyond. After some years of married life, she and her husband moved to Laurel, Miss., where they resided for twenty-five years, and where they became charter members of the West Laurel Methodist church, from which she was buried, her pastor, Rev. G. E. Allen, officiating, with interment in the beautiful Hickory Grove cemetery, in the presence of a host of sorrowing friends and relatives. All who knew her, loved her, recognizing her saintly life. She lingered several days while loving hands ministered to her needs, and then passed quietly away. She is survived by three sons, W. C. and Ben J., of Laurel, and Seymour, of Iuka, and three daughters, Mrs. Jack Lawrence, and Mrs. J. A. McSwain, of Laurel, and Mrs. Ella Meyers, of Crystal Springs, all of whom were by her bedside when the end came. She also leaves to mourn her death eighteen grandchildren.

Crystalized Memories

"Man is of few days. He cometh forth as a flower, and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not."

SUCH quotations constantly remind us of the short duration of life. But the memories of our loved ones who have passed on will continue to live in our hearts.

The monuments we select to maintain these memories, should be cut from a stone which will properly carry to many generations to come the messages entrusted to them. This means stone of durability, beauty, contrast and strength. Granite is the only stone which meets such requirements and many granites fail.

Winnsboro Blue Granite

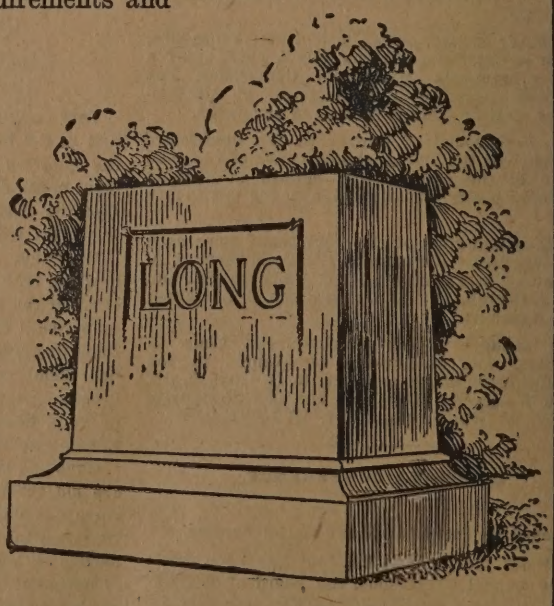
stands preeminently the most lasting, the most beautiful, and inscriptions on it the most legible.



Be sure that you get the genuine Winnsboro Blue Granite. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes that resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Write for Free descriptive literature, also for facsimile reproduction of a polished sample of Winnsboro Blue Granite that you may see its beauty. When you have purchased a monument specifying Winnsboro Blue Granite write us giving name of your Memorial Merchant, and we will send you a polished Winnsboro Blue Granite paper weight.

Weaving Friendship.

Threads of justice for the warp,
Of kindness for the fill,
Flecks of love to brighten it,
And in and out goodwill.

Spin golden threads of friendship,
And weave a fabric rare,
So all the nations may be clad
In robes of peace so fair.
—L. W. P., in Missionary Review of the World.

By friendship you mean the greatest love, the greatest usefulness, the most open communication, the noblest sufferings, the severest truth, the heartiest counsel, and the greatest union of minds of which brave men and women are capable.—Jeremy Taylor.

Prayer.

"Help us to find thee, O God, in the hearts and lives of the men, women and children that are all about us. May we break down every barrier that hinders us from really knowing one another. Bring us together, we pray thee, in friendly intimacies, in mutual enjoyments and in common aspirations. Though we come from the ends of society and are separated by injustice, prejudice, and untoward circumstances, help us, O God, to seek out one another in love and patience and to rest not until, through fellowship and friendliness, we have realized a large measure of the relationship of brothers and sisters of a common Father."

Friends are formed by weathering the same gales of fate together, by kinship of mind and heart, by common interest in a common ideal, by basic understanding, mutual dependence, thorough respect, and loyalty that grows stronger as need grows greater.

Friendship implies mutual helpfulness—not necessarily the same in kind or in degree, but that helpfulness in which each gives freely his best to the other as naturally as the flower exhales perfume.—W. G. Jordon, in the Crown of Individuality.

A PLEDGE OF CONSECRATION.

(Arranged by Mrs. W. T. Hegman, Superintendent of Supplies, Mississippi Conference, Holly Bluff, Miss.)

That the fellowship and the association of getting together as God's workers in this zone meeting may give us a greater determination to be better women and better workers;

(Unison) We pray thee, dear Lord,

That we may overcome timidity, and be willing to do our best;

We pray thee, dear Lord,

That we will do all in our power to equip ourselves for leadership in the Society and in the church;

We promise thee, dear Lord,

That as a result of the Week of Prayer a family altar may be established in every home;

We beseech thee, dear Lord,

That through the observance of Harvest Day early in December, all of our obligations may be met in full;

We pray thee, dear Lord,

That through the Bible study of Stewardship, we may acknowledge that all that we are, and all that we have—

Is thine, dear Lord.

That by increasing the subscriptions to the Missionary Voice, we may develop a greater zeal for missionary information;

We pray thee, dear Lord,

For a deeper consecration and a genuine spiritual awakening.

We beg, in the name of him who taught us to pray—"Our Father——"

Weak and Run-Down Missouri Woman Got Strong and Well. Says Cardui Started Her On Road To Health.

Clarksburg, Mo.—Mrs. T. G. Harris, of this place, says:

"For two years I was in very poor health. Some of the time I was almost past going. I was very weak and run-down.

"I tried to make the most of what little strength I had by taking frequent rests, but I could find nothing which would start me on the road to health again, until one day I decided to try Cardui.

"I had heard about other women who had been benefited after taking it, so I made up my mind to see what it would do for me. I took Cardui for several months and was very much gratified with the results.

"I began to do my own work again, which I had not been able to do for a long time past. My color, which had been pale and sallow, became natural, and my complexion cleared up. I gained in weight and was pleased to have an improved appetite.

"When I finished my last bottle of Cardui I was feeling better than I had in years. Now I am strong and well."

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The last Standard Training School for the year has just closed. This was held at Rayne Memorial in New Orleans, and proved to be the largest school of the year both in attendance and credits. A unique feature of this school was that all six courses offered were specialization courses. A complete report of Standard Training work for 1927 will be given in the Conference issue of the Sunday School Outlook, which goes to press shortly.

We have received a most interesting letter from Brother Claude Mayo, pastor of the Clay circuit, in which he says: "Wesley Chapel Sunday schoo organized with thirty-three persons. Sunday school is on the uplift on our circuit." We are glad Brother Mayo sent us this encouraging news.

We have received a very fine report of Sunday school work accomplished and being carried on in the Mission field where Brother Leon Picone is spending his time in the service. A fine work is being accomplished in our Italian Mission field.

In a recent issue of the "Monthly Bulletin," published by Brother P. O. Lowrey, there is a good article on training work, showing twenty-six credits for the Campti circuit for 1927, which is a fine showing. Brother McLellan has just recently closed a Cokesbury school there.

The last Sunday School Day offering to reach the office came from the Clay circuit. A detailed report of Sunday School Day offerings will be given in the Outlook. The best way to check up on this work is not to check against some other district or church, but against our own last year's record. Ruston District has come closest to its last year's goal, so far, and hopes by the time Conference rolls around to have made up the deficit.

Invitation is at hand to attend the laying of the corner stone of the Gibsland Methodist Church, Nov. 4. Several of our North Louisiana leaders will take part in the ceremonies, including the presiding elder, and the pastors from Arcadia and Ruston. This will be another great day in Louisiana Methodism.

We regret not being in the office last week when the President of the Conference Epworth League Board, Rev. J. B. Grambling, called. The Conference Secretary, Miss Elizabeth Langford, was a welcome visitor this week, also. There seems to be a renewed Conference-wide interest in Epworth League. We congratulate them.

Sunday, Oct. 30, found me at home in Alexandria. At 9:30 I visited the Sunday school across the river, at the Pineville Methodist church. It was the three Wesley Bible classes that impressed me. The women's class is taught by Mrs. Harper; the men's class by the pastor, Rev. Claude K. Smith, and the Young People's class by Mr. Younger.

At the 11 o'clock hour I worshiped with the folks at First Church, and heard a great temperance message by the pastor, Dr. Cleanth Brooks.

In the afternoon I visited the Pleasant Grove church, on the Rapides circuit, which is served by Rev. C. B. McCann. This little church is eight miles from Alexandria, and the members hold in great reverence the name of Brother J. F. Wynn, who founded the church. The writer helped to organize the Sunday school there some years ago. The workers deserve much credit for their faithful efforts under the many difficulties of poor equipment, bad roads, etc.

REPORT OF SUB-AGENCY AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY FOR OCTOBER.

My report from the Sub-Agency of the American Bible Society at 900 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La., for the month of October, 1927, is as follows:

The distribution has been 259 Bibles, 366 Testaments, 4,500 Portions; total, 5,125.

I have been with the American Bible Society fourteen and one-half years. The distribution has been 33,789 Bibles, 60,468 Testaments, and 394,088 Portions, making a grand total of 488,349 volumes distributed in thirteen States.

This is the most interesting field in which I have ever worked. Brother Morgan, Secretary of the Southwestern Agency, has been good to me. He has done the best he could with the available funds at his command, but I have been greatly handicapped in my work by the lack of funds to pay expenses, such as a helper, rent for the building in which our books are housed, traveling expenses, etc. The most of the time I have been alone (humanly speaking). Think of one Bible man working among two million people and covering more territory than five of the New England States!

In 1925 during the World Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which was held at Jerusalem Temple, New Orleans, the evening of Oct. 16 was given over to the American Bible Society. The speakers were from China, Cuba, Philippines, Japan, and Mexico. I spoke of my work in the United States, and in my talk that evening I told them that the southern portions of the States of Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas were the greatest mission field in the United States. I still think so.

Thousands are dying in foreign fields that have never heard of the story of Jesus. In one of my former reports I made the statement that there are 200,000 people in New Orleans who never go to church. I estimate that there are 100,000 who have directly never heard the story of Jesus. These include people from every nation of the earth. When we remember that the State of Louisiana has had five different flags floating over its soil, we will gain some idea of the different nationalities that have assembled together. One can readily see that it is one of the greatest foreign mission fields that we have.

I have asked that the State of Mississippi be annexed to this agency; and also have been hoping that some one who is seeking a mansion in heaven would first build us a Bible house in New Orleans. This should become one of the greatest Bible distributing points, second only to New York.

"The harvest truly is great;" pray that the good Lord will show us the way to meet the needs.

Yours in his name,
G. A. PERKINS.

THE APPARITION OF WASHINGTON.

"Oh, that the apparition of Washogn might appear at every feast and revel where the Eighteenth Amendment is set at naught, and with uplifted hand repeated these sentences from his parting message to America: "'The Constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory on all. The very idea of the power and right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the etablished government.'"—From address of Senator Morris Sheppard at Annual Meeting of Citizens' Committe of One Thousand at Washington.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE RICHTON METHODIST CHURCH WITH REFERENCE TO THE PASTOR, REV. M. M. BLACK.

Whereas, four years being the maximum tenure of office in one place for Methodist pastors, it appears certain that we are to lose the services of our beloved pastor, Rev. M. M. Black;

Whereas, he has endeared himself to our people by his zeal and faithful performance of his duties, his constant demonstration of brotherly love and his kind deeds;

Whereas, the church as a whole would deem itself derelict in its duty if it did not in some way show recognition to this good and noble man on the eve of his departure;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the members of the Richton Methodist church go on record as expressing their gratitude to their leader, who has placed his duty to his God and his people above all things, for his wise counsel and his kind consideration shown us all.

Be it further resolved, That we express our sincere regret at losing the services and personal contact with him, our pastor, teacher, friend and brother, consoling ourselves that those of us that will be judged worthy of eternal life in the kingdom of our Lord and Master will again see the shepherd that has faithfully watched over our little flock for the past four years.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the Christian Advocate, Richton Dispatch, and be spread on the permanent records of this church.

Respectfully submitted,

JAS. H. O'REILLY, Chairman;
D. THOMS,
J. R. SPEED,
Committeemen.

WOMAN COULD NOT SLEEP

Her Mother-in-Law Knew A Remedy

Mrs. Belle Thompson was in a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night and even then did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor. "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I was not the same woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me." —Mrs. Belle Thompson, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.

Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health? If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped others, why shouldn't it help you?

CHURCHES THAT RUN AND CHURCHES THAT STAY.

Some churches, like people, frankly run away from unwelcome changes of environment and population in the modern city; others stay and fight it out in the old position, though often making themselves entirely over in the process, while others again arrive at all manner of compromises between these two extremes—these are some of the facts brought out through an investigation by H. Paul Douglass, well-known authority on the city church, the results of which are just made public by the Institute of Social and Religious Research, of New York.

To find out how big city churches react to environmental pressure, intensive studies were made of twenty-six churches in various large cities in different parts of the country, and sixteen of the resulting case studies were selected for publication in volume form under the title, "The Church in the Changing City."

Every church studied was chosen because it was known to have faced and solved in its own way the ever-recurring problem of the church in the city—how to keep pace with changes in population and environment. Thus the church that forms the subject of the first case in the book and which, unlike the other fifteen, remains anonymous, is exceptionally large and prosperous, with a wealthy congregation. Some years ago, finding itself in a rapidly deteriorating neighborhood, it frankly elected to pull up stakes and follow its members to a desirable residential district to which many of them had already migrated. Essentially a church of the economically fortunate, it desired only to remain so, and hence "when the environment became uncongenial, it moved to one that it liked better." This church, according to Dr. Douglass, "reflects with considerable accuracy of detail an actual urban situation which is also typical."

At the other extreme there is the kind of church into which St. John's Protestant Episcopal, of Detroit, has made itself. As a downtown church in a city whose rapid growth has left it surrounded by a greatly deteriorated neighborhood, this church continues to reach out for its constituency into all parts of the city, while at the same time it has inaugurated special work for the foreign population that immediately surrounds it and has established "such intimate relations with other agencies of constructive effort that at many points it is hard to tell where the one begins and the other ends."

The cities represented by the twenty-six churches studied are: Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Newark, New York, Oakland, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Washington. It is stated that the volume was prepared in response to the repeated request of city pastors and church executives: "Show us what the other man is doing in cases analogous to ours and let us draw our own conclusions." In acknowledging the co-operation of the pastors of the various churches represented Dr. Douglass says: "It is recognized as evidence of exceedingly good sportsmanship, as well as of Christian fair-mindedness, that they should have been willing to have the intimate issues of church life and administration so thoroughly overhauled and exposed, even by objective processes and in the mood of friendly scientific detachment."

PELLAGRA AND THE BALANCED DIET.

A recent health publication of national repute declares that pellagra is on the increase within the areas that were inundated during the great flood. Coming events occasionally cast shadows before, and this increase in the incidence seems to be reflected by the relatively large number of cases in one of the public hospitals of Louisiana. These cases emanate principally from the rural districts, though among them there were one or two cases at least that had not been out of New Orleans for any appreciable length of time.

While there have been many theories evolved to account for pellagra, the general consensus of opinions is that it is a deficiency disease, which means in plain words that it is caused by the lack of some element in the diet important to nutrition.

Investigations by members of the United States Public Health Service have shown that one-sided diets, especially those in which cornmeal, salt pork and molasses predominate to the exclusion of fresh meat and vegetables, are productive of the greatest number of cases. At the same time many people appear to have a so-called balanced diet and yet develop pellagra. The reason is therefore not entirely clear, and considerable research is still being carried on to determine, if possible, the influence of a bacterial invasion secondary to the nutritional disturbance.

Goldberger assumes that the proper food contains a pellagra protecting substance which appears to be in the nature of a vitamin. He calls it P. P. and claims that it is very plentiful in yeast. Therefore the consumption of yeast is advocated as a preventive measure when the tendency to pellagra is evident or where the diet seems to be of such a nature as to foster the disease. It is also believed that this P. P. substance is present in milk, lean beef, mutton, vegetables and fruits as well as in the yolks of eggs; at any rate, these are ingredients which are necessary to a diet which effects a cure.

The symptoms are very likely to recur after they disappear, when the diet is not properly balanced. For this reason it is necessary for the victims to conform to an anti-pellagra nutritional regime, and it would seem that the addition of yeast to the diet occasionally is a desirable adjunct.

"POWER"—THE POWER OF CONCENTRATION AND CONTROL.

Power is the topic discussed in the October World to-morrow. "Two hundred and thirty-two per cent within thirteen years! This is the rate of increase in the number of millionaires in this country. A single private fortune approaches two billion dollars. We have ten corporations with assets of a billion dollars each. Two concerns produce two-thirds of all the automobiles made. A single company operates a chain of 17,000 stores and does a total business of seven hundred million dollars annually. One individual is a member of the board of directors of 148 different corporations. The resources of our national banks exceed twenty-six billion dollars. One bank has more than 100 branches. A group of 20,000 directors control corporations which produce more than half the manufactured goods of the United States."

Only the blindest of the blind can fail to see the social peril inherent in vast aggregations of irresponsible wealth. All except the most reactionary recognize the need of safeguarding the public from the excesses of powerful financiers and industrialists. Numerous laws on the statute books bear testimony to this need. How far shall society go in limiting the economic power of its members? An intelligent answer can only be determined in the light of the relevant facts. Just how far have we already gone in the direction of consolidation? What is the nature and extent of the power wielded by great financiers and industrialists? Should we encourage or discourage concentration of economic power? How can we secure a more democratic control of the resources and privileges of life?

WEEKLY LETTER FROM YOUR FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Leaguers: I think when I tell you that I have completed my itinerary of four districts already that I am saying lots! Of course, you would have to go with me from day to day to realize how much mileage that is and just how many different stops. As I have said before, there are a number of churches that I did not reach and may not get to for some time. I receive calls every day, and it is impossible for me to reach them all. I've just heard that Jonesville and Hall Summit both want to organize Leagues, but since I have finished my time in Minden District, I am reporting their needs to the District Secretary.

Leaguers, I would like for you to have gone with me through the flood-stricken areas of Monroe District. Although a large part of that district was under water and eleven out of sixteen Leagues almost forced to disband, things are getting back to normalcy. It is wonderful the way in which humanity adjusts itself, and this fact has been greatly exemplified at this particular time. Leagues had to be abandoned for the time, but they are all reorganizing. Tallulah has always had a splendid League, and it promises to be better than ever. St. Joseph and Ferriday have both reorganized and are planning great things.

We had a great time at Gilbert. The Wisner and Winnsboro Leaguers met with us in a joint program, and after a devotional and business meeting we played some very interesting games, followed by delightful refreshments. We want to thank Mrs. Bob Lee and Mr. W. S. McDuff for their part in making the meeting a success. Brother A. D. George, Brother and Mrs. H. W. Rickey, and Brother and Mrs. Stodghill met with us.

On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 16, we had a splendid district meeting in Monroe. This was the first meeting since the overflow. Leaguers were present from Bastrop, Gilbert, Rayville, St. Joseph, West Monroe, and Monroe. Rev. John Norris, the new assistant pastor of First Church, Monroe, was introduced to the Leaguers, and led the devotional. First Church is very proud of this enthusiastic young minister.

Following the district meeting, I went to Bastrop, and then on to Bonita, Oak Ridge, and Rayville. Interesting meetings were held in each place. Monroe District as a whole is doing some good work. In this district, as in all others, the pastors were most cordial to your field worker, and I appreciate their interest and friendship.

On Sunday, Oct. 23, we held an all-day rally at Arcadia for all of Ruston District. I believe I can truthfully say that every one present had a great day. We were fortunate in having with us some splendid, efficient leaders in Epworth League organization, and they helped to make the day very profitable. They were Charles White, State President; Mary Searles, Minden District Secretary; Jennie Searles, her assistant; Anna Pharr Turner, Shreveport; Rosa Langford, Monroe District Secretary; Glâdys Dickerson, Ruston District Secretary; Rev. Otis Spinks, Young People's evangelistic leader, and several others who made the trip with these leaders in their cars.

A resolution of thanks was drawn up. We want again to thank Brother G. A. Morgan and the Arcadia young people for this splendid fellowship together.

After spending a very short time at home with my family in Jonesboro, I started out to complete the remaining four districts by Conference. On Oct. 26, I stopped in Winnfield for a meeting with the Leaguers there; and my, but those are some young folks! They changed their League to an Epworth Hi League, and under the splendid leadership of Rev. P. M. Caraway they are planning to do great things.

I am now in Alexandria District, and am proud to say that the District Secretary, Mr. W. R. Younger, of Alexandria, is a live wire Epworth Leaguer. He is doing a wonderful work with his district, and I'm looking for Alexandria District to have some say as to who wins the district loving cup at Assembly. The other districts had better watch out!

Say, Leaguers, this isn't fair! I'm doing all the writing, and I'm expecting to hear from you, too. Send in your League news to me at Box 260, Alexandria, La. Yes, that's your State President's P. O. Box. He's my official boss now, but he doesn't read all my mail!

Just,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

NEWS ITEMS.

News is still coming in that the Young People's Revivals being held over the State are bringing about wonderful results. If you can't attend these revivals, you might join them in your prayers for their success.

We have heard, in a round about way, that Miss Katherine Varnado, Mrs. James T. Harris' sister, has just become the bride of Mr. John Richardson, of Franklinton, La. Congratulations to Mr. Richardson for winning such a winsome bride!

We are proud of the progress that the Epworth Hi Leagues are making in Louisiana. The Hi League at Jonesboro, under the superintendency of Miss Mabel Langford, now has a membership of forty, and is doing some fine work.

Rev. James B. Grambling is preaching to a large crowd of young people at Alexandria this week in a Young People's revival.

Some one reported that the revival held at Pineville, with Rev. Guy Hicks preaching, was the finest thing that ever came to the young people of that church.

BOOST STATE TEACHERS' COLLEGE LEAGUE.

The Epworth League at State Teachers' College this year has started off with a boom, and there is every evidence that the good work will be kept up. We intend for this to be a banner year for the Methodist students and Epworth Leaguers at State Teachers' College. We feel that this is due largely to the wonderful work and spirit of our Methodist student secretary, Mr. E. B. Ellington, who came to us the first of the year, combined with the interest, effort, and prayers of 147 League members. There are only 157 Methodist students in school, and all of those are not on the campus, so we have nearly 100 per cent membership in the League.

We have begun a wonderful work, that of building an Epworth League hut on the campus. We feel that every Methodist, and especially Leaguer, will be proud and happy to have a part in the building of this home. Pray that the League may prosper and that we may accomplish much for the Master. MRS. R. E. CROCKER.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

HOME PLANNED FOR EPWORTH LEAGUE AT STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE.

An Epworth League home, which will house all activities of the Methodist church on the campus of the State Teachers College, is being planned by the Methodist church students at the college. The structure will cost $7,500 and the Epworth League has asked the school trustees for permission to erect the building on the campus. Architectural plans call for a one-story building which would harmonize with the present college buildings.

The League plans to raise the money in a novel manner. There are members of the League from all parts of the State, and each will appeal to his own home community for funds.

The home will be used exclusively for religious meetings, and will have a large assembly room for this purpose. There will also be an office for the Epworth League secretary, a religious reading room, where boooks of that type will be kept, and a dining room and kitchen.

Officers of the Epworth League hope to have the building ready for use by the time the State Assembly of the League convenes at the Teachers College next August.

Officers of the College Epworth League are: President, R. A. Anderson; vice president, Miss Ruby Ratliff; treasurer, Miss Elzie Penn; secretary, Miss Jimmie Caldwell.

All those wishing to learn more of the plans for this great work may do so by corresponding with any of the following: E. B. Ellington, Methodist secretary for the college, Station A, Hattiesburg; Miss Grace Lewis, Conference secretary, Station A, Hattiesburg; or B. F. Harrell, Hattiesburg District Secretary, 450 West Fourth Street, Hattiesburg.

to register. Cut flowers and pot plants were tastefully arranged, and everything had been done to add to our pleasure and comfort.

The program began by singing that grand old hymn, "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing."

Brother T. B. Cottrell, of Magnolia, led the devotional exercises, reading the first chapter of Romans. He spoke of this chapter as our "Standard of Christian Living," and dwelt especially on what our attitude should be one toward another.

Mrs. C. L. Lampton, who has been taking Mrs. Reed's place for the last two meetings, gave the opening address, which was full of encouragement and inspiration.

A splendid paper on "Stewardship of Life" was read by Mrs. Jerome Ford, of Magnolia. One of the outstanding thoughts was that as God has given our children to us, we, in return, should give them back to him, to carry on his work.

Mrs. Edgar Goodwill, our Social Service Superintendent, after being introduced, most fittingly gave us a profitable talk on "Social Problems."

We were supposed to know the names of all our Conference officers at this meeting. There followed reports from auxiliaries present, and we were happy to enroll a new one, Knoxo. We hope to have some representation from them at our next meeting, which will be in Magnolia.

Aunt Tena Sandell gave us a very instructive talk on the good derived from reading the Missionary Voice, and she also entertained us by singing in her clear, sweet voice, "I Will Sing You a Song of That Beautiful Land."

After the benediction by Brother Cottrell, we were greatly honored in being served delicious sandwiches and iced tea, which shows that the "good old Southern hospitality" still exists.

God has greatly blessed our work for this year, and may each of us strive to catch a broader vision of our great responsibility in spreading the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Mrs. V. M. Roby was selected as zone leader for the coming year, and Mrs. T. W. Andrews, secretary.

10 Hens Lay 10 Eggs a Day

Winter doesn't stop Mr. Henry's hens

Readers whose hens are not laying well during these days of high egg prices will find much of interest in the following letter from C. D. Henry, Alverton, Pa. He says:

"I placed 10 pullets by themselves, and fed them Don Sung. The third day my eggs increased from 3 to 9 a day. They have had Don Sung ever since and have laid continuously. Yesterday I got 10 eggs from them and am willing to make affidavit to it. Don Sung certainly gets the eggs. It has paid for itself many times over."

Don Sung, the Chinese egg laying tablets which Mr. Henry used, are opening the eyes of chicken raisers all over America. The tablets can be obtained from the Burrell-Dugger Co., 382 Allen St., Indianapolis, Ind. Poultry raisers whose hens are not laying well should send 50 cents for a trial package (or $1 for the extra large size, holding three times as much). Don Sung is positively guaranteed to do the work or money promptly refunded, so it costs nothing to try. Right now is the time to start giving Don Sung to your hens, so you will have a good supply of fresh eggs all winter.

Mother!

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache diarrhœa, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

A PLEA FOR CLEANER AND BETTER PARSONAGES.

Notwithstanding there have been some fine articles written this year in both the New Orleans and the Nashville Advocates in regard to the responsibility we each have of keeping better and cleaner parsonages, I think that this fine autumn weather, as well as the approaching Annual Conferences, should be a real incentive to each of us to be very diligent in this important part of our work. For, Sisters, it should be a religious duty for each of us to do our best in the care of the homes that the people are kind enough to furnish us with.

Could we but realize that the neglect of proper care of house, furniture and premises reflects on us, as not being just the right kind of pastors' wives that we should be!

In this day of enlightenment and varied oppportunities for learning ways and means of sanitation and the varied order of beautifying the interior of the whole house, as well as premises, and as every one looks at the parsonage as being the proper place for proving to others how these things might be carried into effect, how important that we do our best to carry out into detail the many nice suggestions we find in magazines and daily papers.

Too often do we find, as our friend who wrote to the Nashville Advocate said, "Dirty parsonages." We may have a poor parsonage, but we could have a clean parsonage. Do not spare soap, lye, gold dust and elbow grease. The neglect of window lights, door locks, fences, and lots of odds and ends, will tell the character of folks.

Wonderful results can be had from brush and paint on both floors and beautifier and try the results.
shrubs, and instead of destroying some tree or shrub that some one else has labored to have, be a builder and a beautifyer and try the results.

BIBLE STUDY CLASS MEETS AT PARSONAGE, LAKE, MISS.

Our loyal Bible study class
Met here with us to-night;
You should have been here to enjoy
The way they do things right;
Or right or wrong, as that may be,
They made it very nice for me.

They said I must not fix a thing;
If I did, they wouldn't come—
They'd go and have it at the church;
(That would have hurt me some)
I thought they'd have the class and go
With "no refreshments," don't you know!

But in they marched, armed to the teeth,
With baskets, pots and pans,
And took possession of the house
According to their plans—
And served a luncheon fit for kings—
Sandwiches, cake and other things.

But first the Bible study came—
A pleasant hour was spent
Reading the words that Jesus said,
Discussing what they meant;
All seemed intent on learning more
Of wisdom from that wondrous store.

But all things here must have an end,
So they at last dispersed,
And left us quiet and alone;
But often we rehearsed
Each happening, and laid them by—
New pearls for life's bright rosary.

A GLIMPSE OF THE CLAY CHARGE

It will be of interest to many to know what has been accomplished on the Clay charge during Conference year of 1926-27. It has been pleasing to see the interest and development throughout the charge.

The first step forward was the pledge of the Clay Sunday school to give the fourth Sunday collections to missions. May 13 our Woman's Missionary Society was organized at Clay with 9 charter members. On June 26, the Vienna Sunday school was organized with twenty pupils and a full number of officers and teachers. On July 12 the Cokesbury Training School started and continued through the 15th. This was the best two-teacher school held in the Conference. Fifteen persons received certificates of credit. On July 17 the Clay Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized with forty-three charter members. And then on Oct. 30 the Wesley Chapel Sunday school was organized with thirty-three students, together with officers and teachers.

The finances of the charge are better and have come easier than ever before. The pastor has received his salary with quite a regularity, and other general expenses have been kept up with. More New Orleans Christian Advocates are taken on the charge than in any previous year, the number being twenty-four to date.

Altogether the charge has made a splendid advance in many lines, for which the humble pastor gives God all the praise.

Proceedings of the Mississippi Annual Conference

FIRST DAY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1927.

By Rev. W. B. Jones.

The one hundred and fourteenth session of the Mississippi Conference convened in the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., at 9 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, Nov. 9, 1927, the Senior Bishop Warren A. Candler presiding. This is the fourth time Bishop Candler has presided over the Conference, and he always receives a very hearty welcome. He announced hymn 137, "How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds," which was sung by the Conference, after which he administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, assisted by H. W. Featherstun, J. H. Foreman, J. G. Galloway, and C. H. Ellis, all honored superannuates of the Conference. The Bishop made very appropriate remarks on the significance of the Sacrament, after which the Conference joined in singing hymn 463, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

A. F. Watkins, the Secretary of the last Conference, called the roll of the Conference, and the following clerical members answered to their names: B. F. Jones, A. F. Watkins, B. F. Lewis, H. W. GOD'S GARDEN.

The Lord God planted a garden
In the first white days of the world,
And he set there an angel warden
In a garment of light enfurled.

So near to the peace of heaven
The hawk might nest with the wren,
For there in the cool of the even'
God walked with the first of men.

And I dream that these garden closes
With their glades and their sun-flecked sod
And their lilies and bowers of roses
Were laid by the hand of God.

The kiss of the sun for pardon,
The song of the birds for mirth,
One is nearer God's heart in a garden
Than anywhere else on earth.

DECEMBER STEWARDSHIP MONTH.

By Dr. J. E. Crawford, Stewardship Secretary.

At the last General Conference the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, inaugurated definite plans for a constructive program of education in the principles of Christian stewardship. The development and enrichment of the spiritual life of our people as well as the successful financing of all the great enterprises of our church are involved in this fundamental movement.

Responsibility for Stewardship Promotion.

"The General Board of Lay Activities shall be charged with the cultivation and promotion of Christian stewardship. It shall initiate plans, develop literature, and perfect organizations to utilize effectively in the work of the church and in the development of Christian character this fundamental doctrine of Christian faith and practice, and for this purpose it should correlate the various educational and administrative agencies of the church."—Discipline, Paragraph 561.

Plan of Correlation.

At its annual meeting in 1926, the General Board of Lay Activities authorized the stewardship secretary to work out with the other secretaries involved a plan of correlation for stewardship promotion. This instruction was carried out, and the plan agreed upon was that of an Inter-Board Stewardship Committee. This plan was approved by the General Board at its annual meeting in 1927.

December Designated.

Paragraph 561 of the Discipline also says: "A definite period during the year, preferably at a time when no immediate financial objective is in view, shall be designated, in which major emphasis shall be given to the study and promotion of stewardship principles."

After careful consideration, the Inter-Board Committee voted to make December the period for special stewardship emphasis for the Conference year 1927-28. There are three good reasons for this: (1) No church-wide campaign for funds is on at that time; (2) It comes at the close of the round of all Conferences and near the beginning of the new Conference year for most of them, so that the cultural program put on during this period should bear fruit the rest of the year; (3) It embraces the yuletide season, which is a most appropriate period for new aspirations and resolutions.

Suggestions for the Local Church.

1. Meeting of the Christian Stewardship Committee.

The committee should meet soon after the session of the Annual Conference and make plans for the work of the new Conference year. These plans should include the observance of December as a period for special stewardship emphasis in accordance with the church-wide program.

If the committee has not already been organized, let the pastor select the best available person for the chairman at once and call a meeting of the Church Board of Lay Activities to confirm his selection and elect the other members of the committee. See that the various organizations—Missionary Society, Epworth League, Sunday school, Board of Stewards, and Wesley Brotherhood—are represented on this committee, in so far as your church has these organizations.—Discipline, Paragraph 562.

This initial meeting of the committee to consider and outline its program of work for the year is very important. It should be held in November, if possible, but not later than Dec. 3.

2. Stewardship Preaching.

When the church at large is thinking about stewardship is an opportune time for the pastor to preach on the subject. From two to four sermons on different aspects of this great Christian doctrine will make atmosphere and arouse interest and enthusiasm.

A special service under the auspices of the Stewardship Committee will encourage the committee and magnify its work before the congregation.

A lay sermon or address will give variety and add to the effectiveness of the cultivation program.

3. Stewardship Reading and Study.

Stewardship books are more plentiful and the reading of such books is becoming to be more popular. The circulation of stewardship books is a most valuable means of disseminating information and stimulating vital and abiding interest.

The organization of stewardship study classes is being more and more recognized as a permanent and indispensable feature in the educational program of the local church.

Encourage the reading of at least one book on stewardship during the month of December. It is recommended that "The Call to Christian Stewardship" be read, and that chapters two, four, five, and six be made the basis of discussion at the mid-week prayer service for four successive weeks in December.

4. Leaflet Literature.

Four four-page leaflets are available for use during Stewardship Month at a nominal cost. These leaflets are as follows:

"Life to the Uttermost."
"The Grace of Stewardship."
"As a Layman Sees It."
"The Test of Experience."

The first leaflet, prepared by the writer, is introductory and deals with stewardship in its broader and more fundamental aspects. The second is a very excellent and condensed statement from an article by the late Rev. J. H. Jowett, D.D., one of the world's greatest preachers. The third is perhaps the most practical short discussion of the church's financial problem that has ever been written by a layman, and it is from the pen of a man of high character, one of the great laymen in public life in America, Senator George Wharton Pepper. The fourth is a leaflet of testimonials from our own folk, being quotations from letters and statements received by the stewardship secretary.

These four leaflets are wrapped in sets, one hundred each—four hundred leaflets in all—constituting a set, and with each set goes one hundred referendum ballot cards for use in securing an every member "vote" on stewardship. The entire set, including the four hundred leaflets and the one hundred ballot cards, may be obtained post paid by sending one dollar and twenty-five cents to the Stewardship Department of the General Board of Lay Activities, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

5. Stewardship Referendum.

The work of cultivation should be followed by, indeed should culminate in, an opportunity for personal commitments. The sentiment made and conviction created through organization, public presentation, printed page, and personal effort should crystallize into definite decisions to enroll in the Fellowship of Stewardship.

A plan has been worked out which will make it comparatively easy to ascertain the attitude of all the members of the local church on stewardship. It is the referendum ballot plan. By the use of the special ballot card mentioned above, the individual member can register his vote, indicating whether he is a tither already, will begin to tithe, increase the percentage of his giving beyond a tenth, try the tithing plan for a year, give a definite proportion even though less than ten per cent, or agree to earnestly consider his stewardship responsibility.

It is suggested that Dec. 25 to Jan. 1 be observed as Fellowship of Stewardship Week, and that the referendum be conducted at this time. Sunday, Dec. 25, or Jan. 1, may be designated as "Voting Day." Let the ballot be taken in the Sunday school, the Epworth League and the conrgegation. Let it be taken in the Missionary Society at the regular meeting nearest to "Voting Day." Let the Stewardship Committee endeavor to secure, by personal interview or by mail, the vote of all those not otherwise reached.

GROWING THANKFUL HEARTS.

Once more the day set apart for the expression of our thankful appreciation for the mercies and blessings of the year is drawing near. And once more those mercies and blessings have been so many and so wonderful that words wherewith to express our appreciation of them are quite beyond our command. God has crowned the year with his goodness and crowned our lives with his presence and blessing, and the story of all his grace and favor no man can tell.

Thankfulness seems to be a grace rather difficult of expression with some of us. Perhaps it is that we have not practiced it enough. If we were a little more given to it, we might not be so awkward at it. And it is such a seemly grace that it were a great pity not to cultivate it.

It certainly ought not to be hard for any of us to feel thankfulness, even if it is not always easy for us to express it. All that any of us would need to do to stir up within himself great waves of gratitude and thankfulness would be to think intelligently and with some little touch of imagination of the blessing and good with which his life has been filled. Ingratitude is such a dull-witted, stupid sort of thing that it does look altogether unpardonable in men and women of any vision and intelligence. If we could look with any real understanding at all into the life we have been permitted to live this day, we would find in it a thousand things to fill our hearts with gladness and gratitude. If we do not see these things it is because our eyes are shut and our souls utterly unresponsive.

It is a good thing, indeed it is an absolutely necessary thing with most of us, to stimulate ourselves to see the good that is in our lives. The old hymn calls it counting our blessings, but whatever name we give it, it is an altogether wholesome exercise. And to try to measure the sum of the good that is in our lives, to cultivate a habit of responding to it in a spirit of appreciation, is to open up a way to happiness and joy in living that too few of us travel upon.—The New Outlook.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The report of the editors of the Conference Journal was read by A. F. Watkins, and the request for an appropriation of $1,000 for printing the Journal of the present Conference was referred to the Commmission on Budget.

Question 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called, and the following were passed in examination of character and made their reports: W. H. Lewis, J. R. Jones, J. L. Decell, Robert Selby, L. E. Alford, J. L. Sells, and J. T. Leggett. These reports of the presiding elders indicated the reception of about 2,800 members on profession of faith during the past year.

Robert Selby, on behalf of the Mississippi Conference, in well chosen words, presented Bishop and Mrs. Candler with a four-piece gold water set in honor of their golden wedding. The Bishop responded in apt words, accepting the gift and tendering thanks to the Conference.

The Conference sang, "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," and after announcements, adjourned with the benediction pronounced by J. H. Shumaker, of Nashville, Tenn.

Second Day—Thursday, Nov. 10.

The Conference was called to order at 9 o'clock a. m. by Bishop Candler, who announced hymn 183, "Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove," which was sung by the Conference, and George D. Anders, of the Louisiana Conference, led in prayer. It is further stipulated that the Seashore Camp Ground School as heretofore operated be permanently closed, and a larger program for the development of this property be undertaken. Regarding the Port Gibson College the following was adopted: "That no further appropriation be made to this school, and that Hon. M. M. Satterfield, of Port Gibson, be appointed by the Board of Education with full authority to close this school after the present session and dispose of the property in such a way as to secure the equity of the church in it." The following resolution concerning Whitworth College was adopted, as set forth in the report: "Therefore, we recommend that Whitworth College be ceded to Millsaps College and become a part of the Millsaps system, putting it under the administration and control of Millsaps College; provided, however, that the school remain at Brookhaven and no sale or other disposition of the property be made that would cause it to pass out of the hands of the Mississippi Conference; and that this does not jeopardize Whitworth's aspirations to become an A-Grade College." In reference to Millsaps College the report embodies this resolution: "Therefore, we recommend that the Conference endorse the plans of the trustees for raising $250,000 in the Mississippi Conference outside the city of Jackson; and that all pastors and members of the church be urged to give hearty co-operation in carrying out this plan." SAINT NICHOLAS—AN OLD SAINT IN A NEW WORLD.

By Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D.D., President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Many of life's finest souls are hidden from our eyes or lost in the recesses of the past. Some individuals sheltered themselves behind their benevolent deeds. Others existed so remotely or obscurely that we only know them by the continuous beneficence flowing from their careers. Saints who taught the great to mingle with the lowly, the wise with the simple, the rich with the poor, seldom received the homage their fellow-men offered to poets, statesmen, princes and kings. But their reign is an invisible dominion; they distribute God's gifts throughout the earth. To them we owe the defeat of tyranny and cruelty, the freshness and fragrance of peace and good will. Their hearts leaped like flames to greet the Christ. They shared the riches of his grace with the needy and the desolate.

Such a saint was Nicholas, bishop of Myra, whose day of celebration dates from Dec. 6, 326 A. D. His various names indicate the spaciousness of his influence. In Latin, Sanctus Nicholaus; in Italian, San Niccolo, or Nicola di Bari; in German, Der Heilige Nicolaus, or Niklas; in Dutch, St. Nicholaas, or Niclaes; in English, plain St. Nicholas; and here in America we have come to call him good old Santa Claus. He is the patron saint of children, especially schoolboys, or portionless maidens, of sailors, of travelers and merchants. He is also the protector against thieves and losses by robbery or violence, the chief national hero of Russia, the patron of Bari, of Venice, of Freiburg and of numerous other towns and cities, particularly those located on the coast, seaports and places engaged in commerce. If knighthood had its St. George and chivalry its St. James, serfhood had its St. Nicholas. He is emphatically the leader of democracy, the joyous saint of the people, the bourgeois "holy one" invoked by the peaceable citizen, by the laborer who toils for his daily bread, by the merchant trading from shore to shore, by the mariner venturing on the stormy ocean. The captive, the prisoner, and the slave in many lands beyond our own, unite with the orphan and the widow in his praise.

Effigies of St. Nicholas, that benign ecclesiastic, with his embroidered robes glittering with gold and jewels, his mitre, crozier and three attendant youths, meet one at every turn in some of the countries mentioned. No saint in the calendar has so many churches, chapels and altars dedicated to him. He is honored as the representative of humanism rather than nationalism and as the directing personality of the Yuletide Feast.

It is useless to attempt the historical verification of his career. His cult is as famous as his origin is unrevealed. Many of the accounts given of him are mainly legendary. Yet beneath them is the usual core of truth. A bishop bearing his name and venerable for his piety and generosity was loved and esteemed in the Eastern Church during the sixth century. It is claimed that this bishop held the see of Myra during the reign of the Roman emperor Diocletian; that seek the political or social preferments to which his eminence entitled him were disillusioned. Marriageable maidens who cast coy glances at Patara's young patrician received no encouragement from him. After much reflection he entered the ministry, was ordained a priest. He gave his substance to the poor, his service to the people, his life to his God. In furtherance of his piety he made a voyage to the Holy Land during which a violent storm arose. The ship's master implored his help, whereupon he prayed so effectively that the raging waves were stayed.

On returning from Palestine, St. Nicholas transferred his residence to Myra, where he pursued a retired life of humility and service. But the eyes of the devout were on him, and when the bishop of the city died they insisted that he should be elected to succeed him. Time would fail to tell of the wonders of his episcopate; how he fed the hungry, saved Myra from famine and rescued its innocent citizens from unjust penalties. Yet none of these contributions could defend him against the anger of reviving Paganism. The politicians plotted; the populace gave vent to its passions, and beasts fought like men while men fought like beasts. Meanwhile the bishop tended his flock and communed with the Good Shepherd. When a drunken reveller asked him in what he found contentment during such troubled days, he answered, "I have the supreme happiness." "What is that?" inquired a cynical bystander. "The happiness that comes of joyous giving," replied St. Nicholas; whereupon his critics protested he was mad.

One does not have to reconstruct at length the details of his career. It should be clearly understood that no one of his high rank could be a holy bishop under Diocletian without exposing himself to the tyrant's vengeance. The besotted Romans supported the emperor's reprisals. Hence arose the cry in every town and city: "The Christians to the lions!" The jails were crowded with them; the public concourses were lit up at night with their burning bodies. We who sit in quiet and safety awaiting Christmas as the Birthday of the King of Kings cannot easily apprehend the terrible persecutions which Nero, Domitian, and Diocletian inflicted on our spiritual ancestors. They died to make us free in a larger liberty than our political charters have bestowed. St. Nicholas is numbered among them. He became, as we have seen, Bishop of Myra because his brethren recognized his superior merits. His fortune was placed at their disposal for the spread of the Faith and the relief of the poor. Henceforth he trod a path beset by countless menaces. The majority of his countrymen would have been glad to hear of death. When it overtook him he was remote from all earthly cares. Ripened in soul by his privations and sufferings, he calmly awaited the call of his Master.

Probably not all the youngsters who hang up their stockings on Christmas Eve and reluctantly march off to bed to dream of fairylands filled with prancing reindeers and the jingle of the sleighbells know that the well-fed Santa Claus whose scarlet and befurred coat and baggy pants are in evidence during December is the modern representative of an ancient bishop of the Christian Church. His outlines are well nigh lost in the mists of antiquity, but Santa is very much alive and the spirit of that beloved bishop could have no finer embodiment.

Before the last change in his name, travelers invoked his protection and then started on their journey. When he hitches up for his annual trip he is encompassed by more invocations than the recording Angel can set down. If readers of McCall's could gather up into one great supplication all the faith, prayer and affection lavished on Santa's yearly trip, they might transform the world's hard and selfish living.

The mere mention of his name thrills one's heart. December is as pleasant as May when Santa is near. In his presence everlasting Spring abides with never withering flowers. Let us have done with the useless chatter about forbidding him to visit us. Before we imitate those Roman rascals and turn our guns on venerable Santa, what about ignorance, prejudice, cant, hate, lies? Why not give them a short shrift? Why not have a thorough house cleaning inside as well as outside? Then he will be doubly welcome and the Christ he subserves shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied.—From December Issue of McCall's Magazine.

"COLLEGE TEACHING."

When Dr. Ernest Hatch Wilkins, the new president of Oberlin College, was inaugurated on Monday, Oct. 24, he chose a very timely and significant subject for his inaugural address, namely, "College Teaching." He stressed the fact that the main business of the college teacher is to teach. It is for this that he is to be fit and for which he is to prepare himself—not for scholarship, important as that is, nor for research, helpful to his teaching as that may prove if subordinated to teaching.

President Wilkins put it this way: "The central concern of all those interested in the vitality of the college—the faculty itself, the administrative officers, the trustees, the alumni, the students, and the whole community, immediate or remote, wherein the light of the college shines—should be that the faculty be composed of good teachers; that the conditions of their work should be such as to facilitate good teaching, and that they should actually teach to the best of their ability."

Raising the question, What constitutes a good teacher? he said some things worth pondering by all who are concerned for the work which is being done in our colleges to-day. The teacher who combines the elements of efficiency in good teaching is described in this fashion:

He knows his subject—this composite teacher—and he believes profoundly in its significance, immediate or ultimate, for the enrichment of human life. He cares about his students, as thinking, feeling, and growing individuals, and is glad to listen to them and to talk to them, in the classroom or outside the classroom. For their sakes, and because of the nature of his own mind, he selects his material rigorously and orders it effectively. His presentation has always some measure of informality, of give and take. He is courteous and helpful to all; but his chief concern is for the stimulation and the guidance of his ablest students. He is a born teacher; but he is a made teacher as well—made through friendly contacts with colleagues in his own college and elsewhere, through deliberate study of the art of teaching within his own field, through the resolute development of his own powers.

If President Wilkins knows the elements of power and efficiency in a college president as well as he does those in a college teacher, he may well prove a worthy successor of the men who have gone before him in the presidency of Oberlin College.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

QUALIFIED OPTIMISM.

Usually it is quite easy to believe all sorts of good—and all sorts of evil—concerning those in whom one is not profoundly interested. One can walk through a hospital ward with the happy persuasion that doubtless all the patients will get well. It is pleasanter thus to believe than to admit the opposite. Indeed, here is the secret of a vast deal of so-called optimism. Someone defines an optimist as "a man who doesn't care what happens so long as it doesn't happen to him." Years ago, when I was trying desperately hard to get well, an acquaintance said to me, with utmost briskness: "You will come around all right; I am sure you will." But, somehow, the glib assurance hurt more than it comforted. I knew that the man did not particularly care whether I got well or not. But he probably enjoyed his dinner better for believing that I, and everybody else he met that day, would "come around all right," as he said. It is very easy and inexpensive to be assured of favorable issues when one's heart is not involved. Optimism is not a matter of easy certitude. It is a steady, level-eyed spirit which, seeing the evil and hurt, believes in the ultimate good. Such an optimist was Jesus.—George Clarke Peck.

Street-preaching conducted recently in Campinas, Brazil, brought crowds of people who could never be induced to enter a Protestant church, but who listened attentively to the message and joined in singing the hymns.

LITTLE PAUL'S THANKSGIVING.

By Emma C. Dowd.

They tossed him and they squeezed him,
And they kissed him, one and all.
They said: "You blessed, blessed boy!"
And "Darling little Paul!"

But they didn't give him turkey
Nor any pumpkin pie;
And when the nuts and grapes went round
They slyly passed him by.

He didn't seem to mind it,
For in the sweetest way
He sat and sucked his little thumb
His first Thanksgiving Day.

THE THANKSGIVING PIES.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrol and their children had come to spend Thanksgiving with Mr. Harrol's brother and his family. Grandmother and Grandfather Harrol lived in the same town, so they were all to have a merry time together.

It was soon after breakfast on the morning of Thanksgiving Day, and the four cousins, Grace and Alice Harrol, Clara and Virginia Harrol, were already playing house. Grace had Virginia for her child, while Clara took Alice, for they had said: "We can play with our own sisters every day, so we must change off now."

They were having "lots of fun" when the telephone rang. "Who wants to go help grandmother with her pies?" asked Clara's and Virginia's mamma as she hung up the receiver. "She has cut her hand and can't roll out the dough."

"I don't," said Clara quickly. "I want to play."

Alice bent lower over the doll she was dressing and pretended not to hear.

"I don't like that kind of work," Grace replied.

"I'll go, and I can play when I come back," Virginia said as she ran for her work apron.

She found that grandmother had cut her hand badly, and certainly needed help with the pies. She rolled out the dough and put it in the pan just as grandmother directed; then she put in the mince meat: grandmother had to help with the upper crust, but Virginia cut the "eyes," as she called the airholes. After the pies were in the oven she helped "tidy up" the living room and wiped the dishes, then she swept the kitchen. She stayed to help grandmother dress and carry up the basket that held the pies, and when she reached home it was time to dress for dinner, and she didn't get to play a single bit.

When the nice brown pies came on the table, Virginia felt very proud because she had helped to make them. She could hardly help saying: "Don't our pies look fine, grandmother?" But she knew it wouldn't be polite to brag on something they had made.

Her father looked up when his piece was half eaten. "I never tasted better Thanksgiving pie," he remarked, "and it is because a little girl was unselfish enough to give up her play and help grandmother make them," and he smiled at Virginia.

Then Virginia looked and felt, O so happy! but the other three children looked at their plates and felt very uncomfortable.—Herald and Presbyter.

THE LITTLE RED HOUSE.

Once upon a time there was a little boy who was tired of all his toys and tired of all his picture books and tired of all his play. "What shall I do?" he asked his dear mother.

And his dear mother, who always knew beautiful things for little boys to do, said: "You shall go on a journey and find a little red house with no doors and with a beautiful star inside."

Then the little boy's eyes grew big with wonder. "Which way shall I go," he asked, "to find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?"

"Down the lane and past the farmer's house and over the hill," said his dear mother. "Come back as soon as you can and tell me about your journey."

So the little boy started out. He had not walked very far down the lane when he came to a very little girl dancing along in the sunshine. "Do you know where I shall find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?" the little boy asked her.

The little girl laughed. "Ask my father, the farmer," she said.

So the little boy went on until he came to the great brown barn, where the farmer himself stood in the doorway looking over the pastures and grain fields.

"Do you know where I shall find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?" asked the little boy.

The farmer laughed, too. "I've lived a great many years, and I never saw one," he chuckled. "But ask the granny who lives at the foot of the hill. She knows how to make arrowroot taffy, popcorn balls and red mittens. Perhaps she can direct you to it."

So the little boy went on farther still until he came to the granny sitting in her pretty garden of herbs and marigolds. "Please, dear granny," asked the little boy, "where shall I find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?"

The granny was knitting a red mitten, but when she heard the little boy's question she laughed cheerily, "I should like to find that little house myself," she chuckled. "It would be warm when the frosty nights come, and the starlight would be prettier than a candle. But ask the wind, who blows about so much and listens at all the chimneys. Perhaps the wind can direct you to the little house."

So the little boy took off his cap politely to granny and went up the hill. The wind was coming down the hill as the little boy climbed up. As they met, the wind turned about and went singing along beside him. It whistled in his ear.

"O wind," asked the little boy, after they had gone along together quite a way, "can you help me to find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?"

The wind cannot speak in our words, but it went singing on ahead of the little boy until it came to an orchard. There it climbed up an apple tree and shook the branches. When the little boy caught up, there, at his feet, lay a rosy apple. The little boy picked up the apple. It was as much as his two hands could hold. It was as red as the sun had been able to plant it, and the thick brown stem stood up as straight as a chimney. It was a little red house in which the apple blossomed lately and had gone to sleep. It had no windows.

"I wonder," thought the little boy. He took his jackknife from his pocket and cut the apple straight through the center. Oh, how wonderful! There, inside the apple, lay a star holding brown seeds.

So the little boy called "Thank you" to the wind, and the wind whistled back "You're welcome." Then the little boy ran home to his mother and gave her the apple.

"It is too wonderful to eat without looking at the star, isn't it?" he said.

"Yes, indeed," answered his dear mother.—Carolyn Sherwin Bailey, in Mother's Magazine.

THREE LITTLE BUGS IN A BASKET.

Mrs. Conrad was one of the dear old-fashioned mothers—fast going out of style—who took time to enjoy her children. She read Bible stories to them and told them nice long bed-time stories until they got so sleepy they couldn't listen any longer; then she knelt down with each one and heard the little fellows say their prayers.

She made the good Father in heaven so real to them that Bobbie—the one with the vivid imagination—always closed his prayer with "Good night, dear God." Then, with that dear God watching over him, he would fall asleep.

These boys knew all the nursery rhymes, too, and often gave their mother surprises trying to act them out.

One of Bobbie's favorites, which he knew by heart, was—

"Three little bugs in a basket and hardly room for two.
One was black, one was yellow and one like me and you."

It was wash day at Mr. Conrad's, and the three boys always played around in the yard in nice weather, while mother washed and hung up the clothes.

She had left her clothes basket by the steps while she went into the kitchen to start dinner. It was all nice and clean, ready for the next hanging.

When Mrs. Conrad returned, behold! Bobbie, Billie, and Edward were all piled into her clothes basket and having the very biggest time ever.

She started to scold, but they were laughing so that she decided to get in on the fun; so she said, "And what does this mean, boys?"

Bobbie was always the spokesman as well as the leader in all the mischief, so, with his dimples making his face laugh all over, he said, "We're playing 'three little bugs in a basket,' mother. That is it."

"Three little bugs in the clothes basket, hardly room for two.
Billie's black, Edward's yellow, and I'm like you."

Mother didn't scold at all. She laughed all the way down into the basement.—Ida Lee Johnston, in the Christian Evangelist.

SWEETENING MARY.

"I want a drink," said baby.

"Go to the kitchen; Mary will give you a drink," said mother.

"I don't want to," said baby. "Mary is cross."

"Why, what made her cross?"

"I dess I did sumpin' to her."

"Then if you have done something to make her cross, you would better go and do something to sweeten her."

Baby thought over it a minute and then trudged to the kitchen. "You are a sweet Mary," he prattled, "and I want to hug you." Mary stopped her work and stooped, and he threw his arm around her neck and kissed her and called her his "dear, sweet Mary." "I love you two hundred bushels," he said.

When he came back smiling, mother asked: "What did you do?"

"O, I sweetened her, I dess," was the reply.—Exchange.

TOM'S GOLD DUST.

"That boy knows how to take care of his gold dust," said Tom's uncle to himself and sometimes aloud.

Tom went to college, and every account they heard of him he was going ahead, laying a solid foundation for the future.

"Certainly," said his uncle, "certainly. That boy, I tell you, knows how to take care of his gold dust."

"Gold dust?" Where did Tom get gold dust? Ah! He had seconds, minutes; and these are the gold dust of time—which boys, girls and grown-up people are apt to waste and throw away. Tom knew their value. His father had taught him that every particle of time was worth its weight in gold, and his son took care of it as if it were. Take care of your gold dust, boys and girls, and you will be rich.—Florida Christian Advocate.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

League Board; the report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance; the report of the Bible Board; the report of the Committee on District Conference Records; report of the Auditing Committee; report of the Board of Finance; report of the Commission on Budget; report of the Treasurer of the Conference Endowment Fund. All these reports were adopted.

The following resolution, offered by W. H. Saunders, was read and adopted: "Resolved, That the commission appointed at the morning session to consider the matter of a Methodist Headquarters and the establishing of a Methodist paper therewith be instructed to confer with a like commission from the North Mississippi Conference, and also one from the Louisiana Conference to consider the whole matter and report their findings to their respective Conferences at the earliest possible time."

The Committee on Nominations submitted the name of H. H. Hinton on the Sunday School Board, a layman from the Seashore District.

Question 13, "Who are transferred to other Conferences?" was called, and Bishop Candler announced the following: H. R. McKee to the North Mississippi Conference; W. N. Ware to the Missouri Conference; and Frederick Sartin to the Kentucky Conference.

The preachers in the flooded district offered the following as an expression of their gratitude: "We, the undersigned members of the Mississippi Conference, wish to express in behalf of ourselves and the Delta people our thanks to Bishop Warren A. Candler, the presiding elders, preachers of the Mississippi Conference, and to any others who may have contributed to our support during the year. We thank God for a brotherhood such as our Conference and people."

A resolution of thanks was offered by T. J. O'Neil and others for our entertainment and for courtesies from various ones and adopted by a standing vote.

The minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved, and the Bishop called Question 45, "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" made some brief observations, and announced the appointments as follows:

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

Dr. Hal Spragins, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church, in which the Conference met, is an ideal host. He was ably assisted by the other Methodist pastors of Jackson and by the good people of all the churches.

The editor of the Advocate was most delightfully entertained in the beautiful home of Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Shands, both of whom are devoted Methodists, as is also Mrs. Shands' mother, Mrs. W. L. Nugent, the widow of the late distinguished Col. W. L. Nugent, who served as superintendent of the Sunday school for a quarter of a century. The three young sons at home, Nugent, Harley, and Coupree, are a joy to the home. The daughter, Aimee, is away at college. Fellow-guests were Dr. Alfred F. Smith and Mr. Pugh, one of the many fine lay delegates in attendance upon the Conference. Those who have enjoyed the beautiful Christian hospitality of this home know how fortunate these guests were.

Bishop H. M. DuBose delighted the Conference by his presence and his wonderful centennial address, delivered at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. Bishop DuBose was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Conference fifty years ago. He has served the church in many capacities and has distinguished himself in all; but he has not forgot the brethren and friends of his "home" Conference—nor have they forgot him.

An added privilege of the Conference was the presence of Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, who delivered several great addresses and sermons. He came almost a stranger—but he went away with the love of the many who heard him.

An unusually large number of visitors from neighboring Conferences was present, many of the brethren from the Louisiana and the North Mississippi Conferences dropping in during the week.

Especially delightful were the luncheons served the members of the Conference by Millsaps College and the Methodist Orphanage. These two great institutions are the pride of Mississippi Methodism.

The announcement of the death of Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix during the session of the Conference was received with profound sorrow. Bishop Candler, Bishop DuBose, and Bishop Darlington paid beautiful tributes to their fallen colleague.

Mrs. W. B. Murrah, widow of the late Bishop W. B. Murrah, was a welcome visitor to the Conference. Bishop and Mrs. Murrah have a large place in the hearts of Mississippi Methodists.

The home in which Bishop and Mrs. Charles B. Galloway lived, just across the street from the church, was an ever-present reminder of the lives and work of these two great Mississippians and great Methodists. Their son, Dr. E. H. Galloway, now occupies the home, he and his family preserving the beloved name in the work of the church.

Bishop Candler was suffering from a cold during the Conference, but he did not let it interfere with his faithful and patient attention to all the details of the work.

The Manager of the Advocate, Mr. C. O. Chalmers, was delightfully entertained in the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Banks in North State Extension. He had as fellow-guest Rev. W. B. Alsworth of Meridian.

The pulpits of the Protestant churches of Jackson were filled by members of the Conference on Sunday. The editor of the Advocate had the pleasure of preaching to a large and appreciative congregation at the First Christian Church on Sunday morning, the pastor of which, the Rev. Mr. Falconer, is president of the Protestant Ministers' Association of Jackson.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Admission on Trial.

The candidates for admission on trial in the Louisiana Conference will please meet the committee at the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday, Nov. 29. We desire to complete our work on that afternoon and evening; so the presiding elders will please notify all the candidates who are to come before us.

W. H. JORDAN, Chairman.

NATCHITOCHES METHODISM.

That Methodism in Natchitoches is ending its first century, has just recently been discovered. In December, 1827, William Stephenson was appointed by the bishop of the Mississippi Conference "to start the work in Natchitoches." In December, 1827, just a hundred years ago, he reported 150 members, and was made the presiding elder of the Louisiana District.

This information has been sent by Henry Rickey, now a student at Emory University, to Rev. H. L. Johns, of Natchitoches. Interest in Natchitoches Methodist history has been increasing this year. It was thought that the church would be fifty years old there next year, as in 1878 it was organized by Rev. Mr. Huff, according to all the older residents of Natchitoches. But the Journal of the Louisiana Conference for 1847-61 was consulted, and revealed regular reports from and appointments to Natchitoches. The appeal was then made to Mr. Rickey to consult the valuable old books in the Wesleyan section of the Emory library, with the above result.

A sketch of the Natchitoches church will be prepared and published in the yearbook next year. The church there now has a membership of about 425, ministering to large numbers of Methodist students from year to year at the State Normal College, and has been making steady progress in Sunday school and missionary work for a number of years.

THOSE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION PLEDGES.

The Christian Education Movement is nearing its close. We regret to report that many pledges made by our best people have not been paid. They have been appealed to repeatedly, in every known way, to make payment. These are sacred obligations and cannot be defaulted without serious damage to the moral character of the subscriber and the morale of the church, to say nothing of the financial loss to our schools. Nor can we reasonably expect the much-needed and talked-of revival while so many of our people neglect or refuse to pay their vows to the Lord. Malachi's ringing message should be remembered: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, and prove me, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

While a few subscribers, for providential reasons, cannot pay their pledges, the most of them could do so within thirty or sixty days. Southern Methodism cannot neglect these sacred obligations and retain the favor of God. Common pagan honesty demands their payment, to say nothing of Christian standards. This is a very serious matter. The Annual Conferences are making a last call and final effort to collect the unpaid pledges. The pastors and presiding elders are giving this cause right of way for at least one month, at a favorable time following the Annual Conference, and are making an earnest effort to close out the Movement.

H. H. SHERMAN, Secretary,
Christian Education Movement.

GROUP INSURANCE FOR LOUISIANA PREACHERS.

Dear Dr. Carley: About eighteen months ago I realized the great importance of life insurance to the preacher who might leave his family and loved ones without support and without provision. I realized that I did not have sufficient protection of my own. Investigating the matter in the light of my long illness, I found that I was not an insurable risk and could not procure life insurance.

The agent, Mr. John H. Cockerham, one of our fine Methodist laymen, however, thought of the only way in the world that I could be insured: group insurance. If the preachers of the Louisiana Conference would be banded together, and all of them insured in his company, utilizing the insurance laws and regulations concerning term insurance, it could be done.

To get 175 or more preachers to agree on such a proposal seems an impossible, surely a strenuous, task. Methodist preachers are accustomed to tackling the impossible—and so are life insurance agents. But in thinking over the matter this year I am of the opinion that perhaps there are scores of preachers who also are not insurable risks by themselves who would welcome any plan that would aid their loved ones when they are gone.

So Mr. Cockerham is going to Conference with me this year, just to talk to those interested. Perhaps in a few years enough of us could see through his plan to work it. It is already done, as group insurance, in about six other sister Conferences.

Sincerely,

H. L. JOHNS.

TO DO THY WILL.

By Rebecca Lauck Turner.

"He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."
—I John 2:17.

O Lord, our Keeper all along the way
From cradling arms to late declining day,
Of all the joys life's brimming cup that fill,
'Tis deepest happiness "to do thy will."

When cares perplex or varied toils deplete,
When drops of bitterness would spoil the sweet,
'Tis little odds because there floweth still
That deepest happiness "to do thy will."

When sorrows flood the heart with rising tide,
We tread the roughest wave with thee beside;
And look aloft, where Love controlleth still,
Rescued in happiness " to do thy will."

'Twill not be long till ends life's constant quest.
Death must subdue mortality to rest;
How blest, with risen powers and faultless skill,
For other, broader fields "to do thy will."

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom and at his appointed time plucked from the field of usefulness one of his most valuable children. And according to his divine plan has transplanted him from an earthly career into the heavenly atmosphere around his throne, to receive his crown and reward for earthly labor, our beloved brother, friend and co-worker of the Fernwood charge, P. H. ENOCHS.

Whereas, the Fernwood charge originated in the mind and heart of P. H. Enochs, and at his suggestion was formed. Its welfare was always his uppermost thought. He loved it as his own child and gave it his parental care and attention. He was never too busy with his affairs to turn aside from his business life and give his best to his church. He was a faithful member and an earnest and wise counselor and co-worker in its bounds.

Whereas, he was ready and willing at all times to take his stand for right and righteousness and against all wrongs in every form; and,

Whereas, his death is a great loss to the church and the entire community of the charge; therefore,

Be it resolved by the quarterly conference and its members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, That in the death of P. H. Enochs Methodism has lost one of its most beloved and useful members, one whose name, life, and example shall always live in the precious memories of all who have known him.

Be it further resolved, That to have known P. H. Enochs, who through the chances and mischances of a useful life has carried his heart in his hand, like a palm branch, waving all discords into peace, helps our faith in God, in ourselves, and in each other more than many sermons.

Be it further resolved, That we extend to his family and other loved ones our sincere sympathy, and pray that his God, in whom he placed his trust, may guide them safely through this life to the home beyond, where they will be reunited around the throne of God.

Be it further resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the quarterly conference record, and a copy be furnished the family of Brother P. H. Enochs. Also a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by his Sunday school class when presented by a committee appointed for that purpose, to-wit:

We bear the news of the sad passing of our brother, Hon. G. L. Jones, from this veil of tears, and in the passing away of our beloved brother and teacher, the world has lost a good and grand man, who will be missed by many whose lives he has brightened and blessed in his quiet, unostentatious, Christian way.

In modesty and gentleness, his life was like a sweet violet, sending out its beauty and fragrance to all who passed his way. His chosen profession was law, and in usefulness his life was like unto a great, calm, flowing river which fertilized its banks, giving life to the wayside flowers as it flows along in its silent majesty. So, like a grand, broad stream, he was in charity helping those who needed help with no thought of reward.

He did not wait to do the things that would get his name in the paper for being charitable, but he did the things which are the sum total of a great white life, and a Christian-like soul—the deeds that make the stars in his crown; and if such deeds do make stars, his must be of dazzling brightness in that beautiful land of the blest. He was a good husband and father and thus added another star to shed beauty and lustre about the sanctity of the home.

We shall ever cherish the many virtues and the beauty and serenity which marked the closing years of his life, his faith in God and love for his fellow man. Grand man, he has gone with gray hairs in honor to his grave, mourned by all who knew him, especially the class with whom he had been associated, and taught for many years with a willing heart.

They will rise up in the last day and call him blessed. In the flesh he has gone, but his memory, like a glorious evening star, will shine o'er the paths of the many whom he blessed in this life. In solemn awe, pronounce his name, G. L. Jones, and in its naked, deathless splendor, leave it shining on.

The family have our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

MRS. KATIE LEE MORRIS.

The death angel has seen fit to take away from Greenwood, Miss., one of its loveliest characters, Mrs. Katie Lee Morris, wife of S. P. Morris. The spirit of this Christian woman passed to its eternal resting place at the home on Grenada Boulevard, Sunday night at 10 o'clock, October 16, 1927. Mrs. Morris had been ill for several months. During the time, not once did she murmur. Though her body was racked with pain, she bore it with courage and patience. She realized her condition and on different occasions said to those at her bedside that she was ready and willing to go.

Mrs. Katie Lee Morris was the youngest child of Joe Lee and Medora Bullen. She was born on Leeland Plantation, Yazoo County, Mississippi, January 24, 1886, among surroundings of all well-to-do people of plantation life. Her father died eight months later. When dying, he put her little hand into the hand of her mother and asked God to make her a comfort to that mother. That prayer was answered, for, just before Mrs. Lee's death five years ago, she wrote to Katie what a joy and comfort she always had been to her. Not only was she a comfort to her mother, but to every one with whom she came in contact.

Mrs. Morris was educated at Lexington, Mississippi, and East Mississippi Female College, Meridian. She joined Mount Olivet Methodist Church when she was about sixteen years of age. Her mother was a charter member of this church when it was organized. Katie Lee married Samuel P. Morris, of Laurel, Miss., May 5, 1910. In 1912 they moved to Greenwood. She transferred her letter from the Laurel church to the Greenwood church, where she continued her religious activities. She was a member of the adult Bible class and the Woman's Missionary Society. Many exquisite floral offerings covered her grave.

She gave of her time and means to every good cause. No one could be thrown with her without being touched by her uplifting influence. Words are not needed to describe this good woman, because her beautiful life spoke them first.

Mrs. Morris is survived in her immediate family by her husband. Other members are her sister, Mrs. W. G. Dorroh, of Jackson; two brothers, Mr. Lytton Lee of Bentonia and Mr. Joe Lee of Valley; and an aunt, Mrs. Kate Watson, of Memphis, Tenn.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Brooksville, Miss., passed the following resolutions of sorrow over the death of Mrs. Mollie Smythe:

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in His tender mercy has taken our beloved and honored member, Mrs. Mollie Dismukes Smythe, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Annette Breeden, in Selma, Ala., October 21, 1927.

Mrs. Smythe was a woman possessing all the noblest traits of character, ever patient and cheerful during her long illness, bearing her suffering as a true Christian. We have heard her say that she was ready to go.

Oh, may we live from day to day,
So at the last we, too, can say—
When the night comes on, and the lights are low:
All, all is well; we are ready to go.

Be it resolved, That the members of this society endeavor to follow the example set by her in loyalty and faithfulness.

Resolved, further, That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved daughter and granddaughter, commending them to the merciful care of our Heavenly Father.

Lastly, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society, a copy be sent to the family, The Macon Beacon and The New Orleans Christian Advocate, for publication. Signed:

SOME HOME MISSIONS GOALS.

Every Family in America Cared for by Some Church.

Every Boy and Girl in America Enrolled in and Attending Some Sunday School.

Every Church in America with an Adequate and Well Trained Staff and a Well Considered Program of Worship, Religious Nurture and Community Service.

To reach all the unreached in America seems an overwhelming impossibility. To reach the unreached in one single community, however, is a perfectly feasible undertaking.

Human nature being what it is, our most immediate task is with the rising generation and the fundamental missionary challenge in the United States to-day is the nearly twenty million boys and girls who are not enrolled in any Sunday school of similar organization, either Catholic, Hebrew, or Protestant, and who are growing up uninformed concerning matters of religion and untrained in religious living. And these young people are everywhere. Professor Felton has told us that in Tompkins County, New York, they found 77 per cent of the children in the rural communities studied outside of any church or Sunday school. In fact, in one public school district only one child was connected with any Sunday school. Recently in one of the richest agricultural sections of Iowa a Methodist district superintendent said, "One-half of the farmers in my territory never go to church, no Christian minister ever goes into their homes, and their children are enrolled in no Sunday school."

It matters little whether the skin of these young people is red, brown, black or white; whether they are children of foreign-born or native-born parents, or whether they live in log cabins, in apartment houses, or on landed estates. It is a matter of national concern that the education received in our public schools shall be supplemented by very definite religious training and that that training shall be made available for our entire juvenile population.

If we could provide for all the boys and girls of America as good opportunity for religious nurture as some boys and girls are now enjoying, we would not have much reason to worry about the America of the future.—(Excerpts from Jay S. Stonewall's "Adequate Program for Home Missions.")

ZONE MEETING AT BASTROP, LA.

The third zone meeting of 1927 was held in Bastrop on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 29. Mrs. Sisson, the leader, called the meeting to order by singing hymn 551.

Mrs. Hadly, of Bastrop, gave the devotional, using the eighty-sixth Psalm, and giving a splendid inspirational talk on "Prayer."

Roll call showed 101 members present, also several visitors.

Prayer was offered by Brother Early for both Brother Barr and Brother Lutz, who were seriously ill in Riverside Sanitarium.

Four Monroe ladies rendered a very beautiful quartet entitled, "He Is Mine," with Mrs. Sholars at the piano.

This was followed by a reading, "The Potters," by Mrs. Bunion, of Oak Ridge.

A chapter from the Mission Study Book entitled, "The Christian Home," was given in the form of conference between Mrs. Gallagher, Mrs. Higgenbotham, Mrs. Worley and Mrs. Davenport, of Mer Rouge, showing the great importance of Christian training in the home. This was preceded by the song, "Home, Sweet Home," sung by Mrs. Holloway, of Monroe.

Mrs. Holloway very ably answered the question, "Why Should I Carry a New Religion to the Orient?"

Mrs. Metcalf, of West Monroe, presented, "Things We Do."

Short accounts of the work of some of our foreign missionaries were given by Mrs. Perritt, of Oak Ridge; Mrs. Rawlinson, of Bastrop; Mrs. Sutcliff, of West Monroe, and Mrs. Davidson, of Mer Rouge.

Mrs. Schadel, of Monroe, who, with her husband and family, is soon to return to their work in Africa, spoke of the work there, and appealed for deeper sympathy for the colored race here in our midst.

The Prayer League was outlined and explained by Mrs. Pollard, of Monroe.

Mrs. Leavell, vice president of the Bastrop auxiliary, very graciously extended words of welcome, and a closing poem was read by Mrs. Early, after which a pleasant social hour was spent in the social hall of the church, and refreshments were served to the guests.

The next zone meeting is to be held in Monroe during the month of December.

MRS. W. D. CARROLL,
Secretary.

MINDEN DISTRICT MEETING.

Minden District Missionary meeting convened in Columbia, La., on Thursday, Oct, 27, at 10 a. m., Mrs. Dan Kelley, District Secretary, presiding.

Mrs. I. A. Hearn, of Columbia, was elected secretary for the meeting.

Mrs. Lee Goodson delivered a very cordial welcome in behalf of the Columbia Missionary Society; Mrs. B. T. Gallagher, of Trout, in a most gracious manner responded.

Mrs. H. C. Blanks, of Columbia, gave the devotional, using Malichi 3:2-18, a very urgent plea for tithing.

Reports showing work done and increase in interest in the following auxiliaries were given: Alden Bridge, Columbia, Coushatta, Jena, Minden, Sibley, Trout, Winnfield, Rochelle, Grayson. Two of the Jubilee societies had representatives, Olla and Grayson who gave glowing reports of their work.

A round table was held at this time on "Children's Work."

Brother L. I. McCain, of Minden, made an interesting talk on his appreciation of the work of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The Columbia ladies served a very bountiful and enjoyable lunch during the noon hour.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. Hilburn, of Rochelle, spoke very interestingly on Bible and Mission Study.

A collection for general expenses was taken amounting to $13.25.

We had with us Mrs. B. F. Key, of Shreveport, who told us of the Jubilee.

Mrs. H. C. Blanks, of Columbia, who has just returned from abroad, gave an illustrated talk on the midnight sun. The boat stayed four days in the pass to the Arctic Ocean to allow passengers to see the glories at different angles.

A round table talk on problems of the auxiliaries was held.

Miss Onita Taylor, of Columbia, sang a much appreciated solo.

This was a most spiritual session and I think every society that was represented will be benefited.

Eleven auxiliaries were represented, with twenty-seven persons attending from out of town and thirty-two from Columbia.

Mrs. Key dismissed the meeting with prayer.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On Sunday, the 6th instant, I visited Montgomery, La., arriving in time for the Sunday school hour, and found there a well attended school, with Mr. W. P. Williams as the superintendent. Montgomery is the home of one of the outstanding citizens of the community, and father of our Rev. Leon I. McCain. We enjoyed a conference with Brother McCain. Brother W. C. Lahey is the pastor on this charge, and we were glad that it was his day at Montgomery.

Shortly after the lunch hour we reached Natchitoches, and had a fine conference with Brother Johns, the pastor there. We found oureselves partakers of a very happy occasion at the parsonage, the third birthday celebration of young "Roy Junior."

Mr. J. H. Carter, Secretary of the New Orleans District, has sent us a very fine report of the work of the New Orleans District, which will appear in the forthcoming issue of the Outlook.

• • •

We are in receipt of an interesting report from Brother R. S. Walton, of Logansport, in which he tells of a fine training class recently held in his church on the text, "What Every Methodist Should Know." Brother Walton reports twenty-eight Cokesbury credits in his school for 1927, which is a fine record.

• • •

Reports of Wesley Bible classes from Natchitoches and other places are being received in the office. Columbia sends in a renewal for seal for the "Swift Sunday School Class." Baton Rouge sends requisition of a new class from First Church "Interested Workers Wesley Bible Class." There is a fine interest shown in Wesley classes throughout the Conference.

The staff meeting of the Conference Sunday School Board held in Shreveport on Tuesday, Nov. 8, was a decided success. Of the ten members of the staff only two were absent, these being Mr. T. W. Holloman, who was out of the State, and Rev. B. C. Taylor, of New Orleans, who found it impossible to attend. Rev. H. L. Johns, of Natchitoches, substituted for Mr. Taylor in discussing the adolescent work, and especially stressed the increased interest in adolescent specialization courses in our Standard Training Schools.

Mrs. R. E. Smith reported growing interest in the Parent-Teacher work; a most excellent report came from Mrs. W. W. Holmes, showing that there is an Elementary Superintendent in every district, except the Lake Charles, and that splendid results are being accomplished. Rev. W. W. Drake spoke about Missions in our Sunday schools, and in Mr. McLellan's report on this work it was found that a much greater number of schools are co-operating in the observance of Missionary Day. Mr. McLellan reported 225 Cokesbury credits given this year. Rev. A. S. Lutz called attention to the fact that 1,452 Standard Training credits have been issued to date—a larger record than last year.

Rev. Guy Hicks gave a most thoroughly interesting report of the Week Day Bible school work, and detailed the experiment at Belcher, the success of which goes to show that Mr. Hicks is exerting most intelligent and painstaking effort in this connection.

Mr. A. M Mayo, Conference treasurer, told of his Lake Charles school in a delightful manner.

During the lunch hour at the Y. M. C. A., Dr. R. E. Smith reported briefly on the adult work for the year, after which the meeting was open for discussion of various matters, such as a site for the Young People's camp, both Lake Arthur and Camp Lassa having been offered; the date and place of meeting of the Conference Council, which will be held the last Thursday in December in Alexandria; and the State-wide Sunday School Conference to be held in Alexandria in the spring.

In compny with Dr. Cleanth Brooks on Wednesday we left Alexandria by auto for Jackson, Miss., to visit the Mississippi Annual Conference. We reached there in time for the Sunday School Board's anniversary service. Reports of the Conference staff were fine. The message from the General Board's representative, Prof. C. A. Bowen, was very fine. Brother Hull, the Extension Secretary of the Conference, reported there had been fifty-one Cokesbury Schools held during the year. The treasurer reported a budget of over $11,000.

• • •

The great occasion of the Mississippi Conference was the address of Bishop DuBose, who joined this Conference fifty years ago. It was his "golden day," which proved a glorious day to all present.

C. D. ATKINSON,

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference at the session of our Conference at Clarksdale made an important change in the management of the business of the Board in that we are to have an office at Grenada, Miss., with the office secretary. All mail and all money raised for Sunday school purposes is to be sent to this office. The offering for missions and the offering taken on Sunday School Day should be sent to R. H. B. Gladney, Box 815, Grenada, Miss. The money will be deposited in bank and a deposit slip will be sent to Rev. H. P. Lewis, treasurer, for him to pay out on order of the president of the Board. The reasons for this are obvious: No pastor has the time to handle all this business and attend to his own work, besides it is impossible for the Conference Superintendent to keep up with what is being done and what is not being done when he is at one place and the treasurer at another place. This change will relieve the treasurer of a large amount of clerical work, and will enable the Conference Superintendent and the Extension Secretary to know what is being done in the field.

The extension of the work depends upon the number of schools that give missionary instruction and send in the monthly missionary offering; upon the number of schools that observe Sunday School Day, and the number of men and women who will volunteer to teach one or more courses. The last mentioned project is designed to accomplish more lasting results than the other two methods of extending the kingdom. Already twenty-five men have agreed to teach one or more classes The volunteer teacher may choose the course he wishes to teach. If we could have one hundred classes taught, "What Every Methodist Should Know," it is not possible to estimate the good such instruction would accomplish There are other courses. Evangelism, Training the Devotional Life, and a number of Bible courses to choose from. Those who desire to make this contribution to the work write me for questions and instructions, and let us begin early that we may reap the benefits of the instruction in the beginning of the year. It is true that we go forward on our knees, and it is also true that we are sustained in our praying through the right kind of instruction. The command is, "Go teach," teach the things he said teach, teach in every way possible, teach from the pulpit, around the family altar, teach small groups who are in turn to teach those we cannot reach in person. We never live above the plane upon which we are taught. Let us teach upon a higher plane and teach all the people.

The pastors who desire the Standard Schools and those who prefer Cokesbury Schools should begin to plan right away and let us know how we can co-operate with you in this work. It takes time and much careful preparation to make a training school a complete success. Let us know your wishes and we will do our best to help in every way possible.

COKESBURY SCHOOL AT SPRINGFIELD.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a very successful training class in the Cokesbury course in "The Small Sunday School" at Springfield.

The school opened Sunday evening, Oct. 30, and closed Thursday night following.

The class was small on account of sickness and other hindrance. There will be only five credits given. There were a number of visitors attending the class sessions that have since expressed themselves as being greatly benefited by the school.

Brother McLellan is a splendid teacher, and the people appreciate his work and feel that we were fortunate in having him with us.

Plans are forming for a school at some one of the churches on the charge soon after Conference.

A. L. McQUEEN, Pastor.

FROM THE HARRISONBURG CHARGE.

We closed a very good meeting at Vidalia, La., on Oct. 30. Brother L. E. Crooks, of Standard, did the preaching, and there were nineteen members received into the church, ten on profession of faith and nine by certificate. This was a great meeting for the spirit that prevailed throughout the community.

On the 6th of November our beloved presiding elder, Dr. N. E. Joyner, came to us at Harrisonburg, and held our fourth quarterly conference, which was a profitable occasion. He continued with us, preaching twice a day until after Wednesday. His splendid sermons were heard with pleasure and profit. Here there were five added to the church on profession of faith. Dr. Joyner is truly in the apostolic succession, and the bar fish were striking fine.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, Rev. C. C. Wier, our presiding elder, has served us as presiding elder of the Alexandria District for the full allotment of four years, and at the approaching Annual Conference will of necessity have another appointment; and,

Whereas, Rev. C. C. Wier has been, during this term of office, of great value to the church, a blessing to the brethren, and a consecrated worker for the cause of our Lord and of the church; and,

Whereas, in this time we have come to know him and love him, and appreciate him for his sterling worth; and feel that we not only appreciate him, but that we will bid him farewell in this official capacity with sincere regret;

Therefore, be it resolved by the fourth quarterly conference, That we take this means of expressing to Brother Wier our love and appreciation, our deep gratitude for all that he has meant to us, and our prayer that his life may continue to have upon it God's blessing, and that his usefulness to the church may be long continued.

Furthermore, That a copy of this resolution be given Brother Wier, and copies sent to Bishop W. A. Candler and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

T. F. PORTER, for Committee.

TOBACCO TRACTS.

The No-Tobacco League has printed a large edition of one-page leaflets on "Why Smoke, Anyway?" "A Stupid Slavery," "Tobacco vs. Thrift," and "Smokeless Breathing Air." They are brief, terse, pungent. They do not pretend to be exhaustive but only suggestive and provocative of thought and discussion.

These leaflets should be put in the hands of every child and young person. Public schools, Sunday schools, Boy Scout troops, members of boys' organizations, and those who belong to young people's religious organizations should secure a sufficient supply to provide every member with a copy of each leaflet. The cost is trifling. To those unable to pay even the minimum cost, leaflets will be furnished in quantities to organizations and to responsible individuals who will promise to distribute them widely and wisely. Send a two-cent stamp for samples.

The League will appreciate the co-operation of all who believe in their motto:

Let us keep the young folks clean from the blight of nicotine.

Let us teach the youth the truth about tobacco.

AN AMERICAN IN JAPAN.

(Interview with the Rev. W. R. Weakley.)

"I am glad to be an American in Japan and to serve as an ambassador of goodwill between that country and my native land," declared the Rev. W. R. Weakley, who recently spent a few days at Mission Board headquarters at Nashville, making preparations for his return to Japan after a year's furlough in the States. Mr. and Mrs. Weakley have spent their furlough year largely in Missouri, Mr. Weakley's State and the home of his relatives. Prior to coming to Nashville they visited in Lynchburg, Va., where they are carried as a missionary special by the Court Street Methodist Church, of which Dr. E. K. Means is pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Weakley spoke at several services in Lynchburg.

The life of a missionary in Japan is varied and happy, according to Mr. Weakley, and an American missionary especially has entree into the good graces of the Japanese, who have always regarded America as Japan's best friend among the nations.

"I especially appreciate being an American in Japan," said Mr. Weakley, "for in that country I have never had an unkind or unpleasant experience, as only the kindest and most cordial relations exist between the Americans and the Japanese. For fifty years the Japanese have regarded America as their best friend among the nations, and nearly all Japanese who have gone abroad have come to America, where, in spite of conditions in certain restricted sections, they report kind treatment generally. The commonest expression of regret when the immigration law went into effect was that a friend had for the first time refused them the treatment they had always had from her."

Mr. and Mrs. Weakley are stationed at Tokuyama, and their work is evangelistic. Mr. Weakley's district extends over an area of 150 miles from Hiroshima to the straits of Shimonoseka. Assisting him are seven native pastors and several Japanese Bible women. His work as an evangelistic preacher carries him not only into big cities, towns, and villages, but even into out-of-the-way places, where no one has ever preached before. He distributes Bibles, hymn books, and tracts, conducts the singing of hymns and preaches to the people something about the gospel of Christ. Many of his convert have become preachers or Bible women.

Mrs. Weakley carries on special work among the Japanese women and girls, for whom she has organized various clubs and classes in Bible and English. The little loan library of about 500 volumes, which she maintains in her own home, is widely patronized by the student class in Tokuyama, including the high school boys and girls as well as the children in the large grammar school in the city. It is estimated that more than 1,100 children have borrowed books from this library, and that every one of them has read the little book called "The Childhood of Jesus." Many of the older girls who have read these books have become Christians. In addition to the young people and children, this little library numbers many older people among its patrons.

Mr. and Mrs. Weakley expect to sail from San Francisco for Japan at an early date.

LOSING THE APPETITE.

The opportunity to get a drink in the old saloon days accounted for much of the drinking. We have known drunkards who, in local option days, always voted against the saloon, because they wanted to get the temptation out of the way. The "wets" make fun of the man who drinks and votes "dry," but such a man is often entitled to the warmest commendation. He knows his weakness, and wants to overcome it, but cannot in the presence of the open saloon.

The Fostoria (Ohio) Daily Review gives the following case in point: "There came into this office yesterday a man from a city on the Ohio River, a city of about 400,000 population. He is a prosperous tobacco manufacturer. We talked about the tobacco business, about politics, and finally the conversation drifted around to Prohibition. Said he: 'In ten or fifteen years this country will have forgotten about liquor. I used to want a few drinks every day. When the Eighteenth Amendment was enacted I stocked up well. For a while I kept up the old habits, but now I don't take a drink oftener than once in six months. I just don't think about it any more, and that is true of my friends. It has made a great difference with my workers in my factory. Fellows who couldn't own a white collar now have their homes paid for. They are buying gasoline with the money they used to spend on booze, and a family that didn't have shoes to walk in when saloons were busy now goes driving in the car every Sunday.'"—Arkansas Methodist.

SMALL ECONOMIES NOT DESPISED.

It is said that a great railroad's paper requirements are so great that the waste of a single letterhead on an average of once weekly by each of the Southern Pacific's 94,000 employees would cost the company over $9,000 a year. Last year their bill for stationery amounted to $508,000, sufficient paper being purchased to fill thirty-five freight cars to capacity. In the same period 364,425 pencils, 152,496 pens, and 44,748 erasers were bought and used. Altogether, the company carries in stock 5,700 items under the head of stationery supplies. Old typewriter ribbon containers are used as desk pin containers in place of glass bowls, which were easily broken. Typewriter oil is purchased in bulk and bottled in a storeroom. Scrap paper is sold and produces a revenue of over $1,000 yearly; bottles for mucilage and oil are salvaged from the commissary department. Efforts are made to find practical money-saving uses for every article which otherwise would be thrown away.

Here is an instance of real economy, just exactly as it ought to be practiced. Real economy consists in gathering up the fragments that nothing be lost, with the accent on the word lost. That is where extravagance comes in when that which was intended for a certain use does not fulfill its mission, but is lost.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

SUPPOSING.

Supposin' fish don't bite at first,
What are you going to do?
Throw down your pole, chuck out your bait,
And say your fishin' through?

Oh, no, you ain't; you're goin' to fish,
An' fish, an' fish, an' wait,
Until you've ketched a bucketful
Or used up all your bait.

Suppose success don't come at first,
What are you goin' to do?
Throw up the sponge and kick yourself,
And growl, and fret, and stew?

Oh, no, you ain't; you're goin' to fish,
An' bait, an' bait ag'in,
Until success will bite your hook
For grit is sure to win.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have best cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Starts Hens Laying

Here's a New Way to Get Eggs in Winter. Costs Nothing to Try

A letter from Miss Dama Wright, Vernonia, Ore., has a real idea for chicken raisers who are not getting plenty of eggs. She says:

"Late in October, our fifteen hens were not laying at all. I started giving them Don Sung, and for ten days they still didn't lay. But on the eleventh day they laid thirteen eggs, and it is wonderful what Don Sung has done for our egg basket."

Don Sung, the Chinese egg laying tablets which Miss Wright used, are opening the eyes of chicken raisers all over America. The tablets can be obtained from the Burrell-Dugger Co., 382 Allen St., Indianapolis, Ind. Poultry raisers whose hens are not laying well should send 50 cents for a trial package (or $1 for the extra large size, holding three times as much). Don Sung is positively guaranteed to do the work or money promptly refunded, so it costs nothing to try. Right now is the time to start giving Don Sung to your hens, so you will have a good supply of fresh eggs all winter.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA LEAGUE PRESIDENT.

Dear Louisiana Leaguers: No, this isn't another letter from the Field Worker, but just a few words from another Epworthian who is deeply interested in our great State work.

Our work through the first quarter has gone over in a great way. I have visited in six of the eight districts since our Assembly in June in union and district groups, and I have never seen our young people more enthusiastic or more determined to do big things for the Master than they are this year. I have had a number of reports on Young People's revivals throughout the State, and my opinion is that this great evangelistic campaign among our young people has been a real spiritual awakening and that it is one of the finest things we have ever undertaken.

Our Field Worker, Miss Langford, has been steadily on the job since Sept. 1, and we are making wonderful progress under her leadership. We have found the district secretaries ready and willing to co-operate in every possible way, and all of them thus far have had Miss Langford's itinerary well worked out for their districts.

I give below a list of pledges paid in during October, as sent in by our State treasurer, Mr. Riggs. I trust all the local chapters will get in the habit of sending in their pledges monthly in order that we might meet the State obligations promptly.

Chapters paying on pledges during October for Field Secretary and Conference promotion:

Plain Dealing, $3; Brushwood, $2.50; Winnsboro, $6; Rayville, $1; Lecompte, $10; Noel Memorial, Shreveport, $6; Leesville, $4; Lafayette, $2; Lake Charles, $4.50; Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, Grand Cane, $6; Dr. R. D. Webb, Minden, La., $12; Miss Elizabeth Langford, Monroe, $1. Total, $58.

For Missionary Special:

Gilbert, $5; Sibley, $3; Mooringsport, $15; First Church, Shreveport, $25. Total, $48.

Yours for better Epworth Leagues,
CHAS. N. WHITE,
State President.

FROM PINEVILLE LEAGUE.

The Young People's revival which was conducted in our church Oct. 9 to 14 was a splendid success. Rev. Guy Hicks, of Belcher, La., conducted the services, and was assisted by Rev. Don Dulaney, of Bossier City, La., who led the services on Wednesday evening, Oct. 12.

The services were especially prepared for the Young People, although many of the older people of our church lent an inspiration with their presence.

The Epworth Leagues of Pineville feel that they are greatly indebted to Revs. Hicks and Dulaney for their services.

W. R. YOUNGER,
Alexandria District Secretary.

FROM ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

Miss Elizabeth Langford, our State Field Secretary, has just completed a tour of our district. It was my pleasure to accompany her which gave me the pleasure of visiting each chapter in the district.

I feel that Miss Langford's visit was a profitable one for our district, and I take this opportunity to thank the Leaguers and pastors for their co-operation in making the meetings successful and for the splendid welcome and entertainment afforded us.

Miss Langford is doing a great work for the advancement of the cause of Christ through the Young People of Louisiana. My association with her while in our district revealed the earnest and enthusiastic zeal she has for her work, and I feel that the Leaguers of Louisiana will make her work more profitable by lending every assistance to her while she is in your district, and also by putting her plans into practice help her to realize her aim this League year.

W. R. YOUNGER,
Alexandria District Secretary.

BOY WAS SICK

Texan Tells How He Got Acquainted With the Good Work of Black-Draught as a Laxative.

Glenflora, Texas.—"I had a sick spell when just fifteen years old," says Mr. George W. Maness, R.F.D. 2, this place. "Anyone who has had chills, like I had, is apt to remember them. I was a sick boy—just lay around the home, weak. My skin was yellow and I could hardly stand up. I had hard chills.

"My father gave me quinine. Someone told him to give me Black-Draught with it. He brought some home, and they fixed it up like a tea. It wasn't very good, but I was so sick I would take anything.

"After a few days, I began to feel better. I was hungry and could eat. I kept on taking the tea for awhile, and I got well. I haven't had chills since then, but I have taken a lot of Black-Draught since that time. It is a family medicine with me."

Where assistance is needed in the way of a laxative or cathartic, Thedford's Black-Draught should be taken, as often as necessary, to open the bowels and put them in a healthly and normal state of activity.

Try it; 1c a dose. NC-185

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

Scripture (Isa. 9:6, 7). "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Matthew 1: 21b: "And thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Luke 24:46: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Story, "Christmas in Poland."

Poland with its blanket of snow and tinkle of sleigh bells is the land of ideal Christmas. On Christmas Eve an expectant stillness hovers over everything. Street cars do not run, servants leave their work and go home, and many trains stop. All everyday work is put aside for it is "Vigilia" (Christmas Eve). The Poles spend the evening feasting with their families.

The next evening Christmas celebrations are given in the peasant villages, and farmer boys and girls singing their quaint carols tramp six or eight miles through the snow to watch the pageant telling the story of the birth of Christ. In Poland even the poorest family has its Christmas tree, which is destroyed after the holiday season is over.

Mr. Witt tells of the White Russian Christmas celebration in Wilno. On Jan. 6, which is Christmas Eve according to the old style or Julian calendar, at 7 o'clock in the evening, we opened our service in our church hall, the Christmas tree lighted in the front near the pulpit. The attendants had been specially invited, being twenty young men and three young ladies, whose homes are outside Wilno and who had nowhere to celebrate their "cootssia" (special White Russian Christmas Eve suppper). First we had a short, but real Methodistic service with singing of several Russian Christmas hymns. They all heartily joined in the singing, especially when I asked them to sing their own old, old White Russian Christmas hymns. All Slavs are good singers, the Greek Orthodox Church choirs being famous in the whole world. And it was very interesting to hear these old tunes telling of the birth in the manger, the shepherds, the angels, and the Wise Men.

After service we went over to our private rooms where Mrs. Witt had prepared a real White Russian "cootssia." It is the last day of their fasting, which if rightly observed should extend over six weeks, and so the food has to be very simple. But the principal thing is that, in remembrance of the manger, it has to be served on a table covered by two or three inches of hay under the table cloth. The food is salt herring, potatoes, porridge of pearl barley, cucumber, some sweet dish, and tea. A real White Russian can consume a lot, and they did enjoy the food that night! And how delighted they looked when they noticed the hay and pulled forth some haulms from under the tablecloth, happy as little children at home.

We sat several hours together and it was late when I had to send them home, so that they should be able to attend our service next morning, their Christmas Day. Before we went to bed, however, we knelt down and prayed that the Lord may awaken some of them to become real converted Christians, co-workers with us in this important work.

Prayer. "Our Heavenly Father, we give to thee our praise and thanksgiving for the gift of thy Son, our Saviour. We thank thee for the joy that is in our hearts this Christmas Day, and for the joy that is in the hearts of the people all over the world. Grant that it may spread to all lands, to every home, to every soul, until thy kingdom shall come, and thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Amen."

Closing Hymn. "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." (No. 51, Cokesbury Hymnal; one stanza.)

PROHIBITION LEAGUE IN JAPAN COLLEGES.

The "Nihon Gakusei Haishu Remmei"—the Japan Intercollegiate Prohibition League—is only four years of age. But it alredy has forty-one branches in as many colleges and universities, including the Imperial Universities of Tokyo, Kyoto, Sendai, and Sapporo, and the large private universities of Waseda, Keio, Meiji, and Nihon, as well as in many commercial, technical and Christian colleges.

In 1923 it was organized by representatives of nine college prohibition clubs in Tokyo. From the beginning of its organization, the League has had as special advisor the Rev. Mark R. Shaw, missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Japan. Dr. Masataro Sawayanagi, president of the Imperial Education Association, is president of the Japan Intercollegiate Prohibition League. Prior to Mr. Shaw's departure for America on furlough this fall, the League presented him a beautiful Japanese tea set, and in resolutions expressed its appreciation of his services. Mr. Shaw has given the League more than sixty volumes on the alcoholic problem, the basis of a prohibition reference library for the colleges.

Sixty official delegates attended the fourth annual convention of the League, held this year in the Young Men's Buddhist Association auditorium of the Imperial University of Tokyo. Plans were made for renewing the League's work in aid of the Juvenile Temperance Law which proposes to raise from 21 to 25 years the age at which young people can drink or be sold liquor. A large group in the government favor the measure.

Among the speakers at the convention and their topics should be mentioned: G. Guster Ramstedt, Finnis minister to Japan, "Athletic Sports in Prohibition," Finland; Rev. Mark R. Shaw, "American Prohibition and Its Significance for Japan;" R. Ikeda, "Optimism and Pessimism in Our Cultural Life;" Dr. M. Miyajima, member of Parliament, "The 25 Years Law and the To-Morrow of the Empire;" Dr. Beiho Takashima, Buddhist leader, "Youth and the Next Generation."

GOOD LAYMAN HOLDS SERVICES AT ELIZABETH, LA.

Elizabeth enjoyed a special religious treat to-day in church services which were conducted by one of God's consecrated, efficient lay workers, one who is also a big business man, a very active man in business affairs; yet he finds time to take God into his life, and to render a very earnest service to God and the church—Mr. O. B. Webb, of New Orleans, assistant to the president of the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company.

The different congregations of the town came together at the high school auditorium for these services. Mr. Webb conducted services in the school auditorium at both the morning and evening hours, before large congregations. In the afternoon, he held a special service for men and boys. There was a large attendance at this service. There was a large number of men and boys present from Oakdale, Glenmora, Kinder, and De Ridder. The speaker brought a wonderful message at each of these services.

At the afternoon service special music was furnished by the male quartet from the First Baptist Church of Oakdale, led by their music director, Dr. Hargrove. A number of the orchestra players from the First Baptist Church at Glenmora were present, and gave us a real musical feast.

Mr. Webb is one of God's great and faithful laymen. He finds time to visit churches all over the country, and he always brings spiritual blessings, and leaves the world better wherever he goes.

THROUGH ADVICE OF NEIGHBOR

Woman Tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A neighbor advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which she said had helped her so much. So I bought a few bottles and tried it out. It sure helped me wonderfully. I felt much better. My work was no longer a dread to me. If I hear of any one who is troubled the way I was, I will gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to them and I will answer any letters in regard to the same."—Mrs. Bertha Meachan, 910 Center St., Lansing, Mich.

From Michigan to Alaska, from Maine to Oregon and from Connecticut to California letters are continually being written by grateful women recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated! Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

ZONE MEETING AT NEW HEBRON.

Oct. 31, at 2 o'clock, there met in the Methodist church of New Hebron, which was very pretty with cut flowers and ferns, a happy crowd of women for the fourth zone meeting for 1927, of zone 4, Hattiesburg District. Our hearts were made sad, however, when we learned that in the town a lad 17 years old was near death's door of blood poison.

After the opening hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," Mrs. Smith read for the saddened crowd the twenty-third Psalm, Mrs. King, of Silver Creek, leading in prayer.

The address of welcome, cordially expressed and beautifully said, was made by Mrs. Jim Turnage, of New Hebron, and Mrs. Chas. Laird, of Carson, responded. The minutes were read and the roll called, which showed about thirty-five members and several visitors present.

"Give of Your Best to the Master" was sung. Mrs. Dale, of Silver Creek, read a paper on "Giving Our Best to the Work"—giving Jesus first place in our lives and work, doing our best everywhere, though it be little, should be the aim of every woman in the Missionary Society.

Mrs. Hudson, of Sumrall, showed that the needs of our work among the young people are many. The young people are the citizens of to-morrow, and are being sadly neglected by our church. The Methodist Episcopal Church, North, has ninety-two societies for young people, while the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has only twenty-five. The leisure time that they do not know what to do with could be a time for them to learn of the great task ahead of them—that of saving the world for Jesus.

Many mothers are very careful about the physical training of their children, and oh why should not the spiritual training begin right along with the physical training?

Mrs. W. W. Rush, of Prentiss, told us that if we must go about doing good among those who are in need of help, this can be done through the hospitals, Golden Cross Societies, and other social service work which we may find in our own towns to do.

"A Charge to Keep I Have" was sung. Then a round table discussion, "What Do We Get from the Zone Meetings," was led by the chairman. Almost every one took part in this discussion, each telling what she got from the zone meetings, or what we should get as we meet from time to time.

An offering of $3.75 was taken.

The first meeting for 1928 will be held with the Prentiss Society in January.

After the closing prayer by Mrs. A. J. Davis, of Prentiss, delicious refreshments were served by the New Hebron Society.

MRS. W. C. DALE.

ZONE MEETING, PETAL.

Officers were elected at the zone meeting of the Missionary Societes of the Methodist churches, which was held Monday afternoon at the Petal-Harvey Methodist church. These officers are: Mrs. D. E. Edwards, re-elected president; Mrs. A. S. Scott, vice president; Mrs. W. A. Bilbo, re-elected treasurer; Mrs. Jeff Brown, re-elected secretary; Mrs. D. M. McLemore, reporter.

There was a good attendance from the different societies, including Main Street, Court Street, Broad Street, Petal, Purvis, Bonhomie, and the Priscillian Circle of Court Street. Mrs. D. E. Edwards, president, presided, and Rev. W. M. Porter, of the Petal church, conducted the devotional services, using the twenty-third Psalm.

A rising vote of thanks was given the Priscillian Circle for its co-operation and attendance, there being eighteen present from the organization.

Reports from the Missionary Voice agent were heard. Mrs. D. O. Segrest spoke on "Jubilee Year," and was followed by Fay Clark, who gave the reading, "Jonah and the Whale."

Mrs. J. T. Wallace told of the new Scarritt Bible and Training School, and then Mary Ann Norsworthy gave the reading, "The Ladies' Aid."

The free-will offering amounted to $16.74.

For the next meeting Purvis and Broad Street will be hostesses, with Petal, Court Street and Priscillians giving the program.

The meeting was closed with prayer, after which all were invited on the lawn, where Main Street, Priscillians and Petal served refreshing drinks and sandwiches.

ZONE MEETING, NEW AUGUSTA.

A zone meeting was held in New Augusta, Miss., on Nov. 1. Quite a large representation from other auxiliaries was present, and the following interesting and helpful program was rendered:

Opening song, "Publish Glad Tidings;" devotional exercises, led by Rev. J. W. Thompson, of Broad Street, Hattiesburg; "Negro Spirituals" beautifully sung by Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Smith, of Main Street, Hattiesburg; address of welcome, Mrs. B. K. Gray, president of New Augusta auxiliary; response, Mrs. Van Miller, of Avera; address, "The Part of Women of the Woman's Missionary Society Play in the Work of the Church," Rev. J. A. Smith; solo, Mrs. J. A. Smith; talk by Mrs. J. W. Thompson on "The Duties and Responsibilities of an Officer of the Woman's Missionary Society;" discussion by Mrs. R. S. Walters, District Secretary, of the Standard of Excellence and other phases of the work.

Dinner was served at the Masonic Temple, and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

THANKSGIVING.

The designation of a National Thanksgiving Day is more than a formal recognition of the gratitude we owe to Almighty God; it is a set time when all the people have the opportunity to make acknowledgment to the Giver of all good gifts for the blessings they have received during the year.

And all the people have reason to thank God for his blessings. Not a life so poor but that it can show evidences of divine favor. If we are inclined to dwell upon our hardships, disappointments, and misfortunes, we can forget these blessings; but to-day it is our duty and privilege to forget our troubles and remember our blessings. In forgetting our sorrows we lift a great burden from our hearts, and in remembering our blessings we add to our joys. May this be a good day for all the people everywhere!

THE DEATH OF BISHOP HENDRIX.

Bishop Eugene Russell Hendrix died in Kansas City, Mo., on Friday evening, Nov. 11, after a long illness. He was eighty years old. His age and his long-continued physical infirmities had prepared the church for the news of his going away at any time; but they did not lessen the sorrow with which the news was received when the end came.

Bishop Hendrix entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1869. Possessed of many personal graces, well educated, and displaying elements of strength from the beginning of his career, he soon came to prominence in the work of the church. After a term of eight years as president of Central College, he was elected to the episcopacy in 1886, and served the church efficiently in that office until his superannuation in 1922.

He was best known as a preacher, traveler, and author. He was in demand as a lecturer on some of the great lecture foundations of our educational institutions, and some of his best known volumes were the result of these engagements. He was the first president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and occupied a position of prominence and influence in the religious work of the nation. He visited several of the mission fields of the church and officially opened the mission in Korea.

He bore his long illness with Christian patience, and when the end came he was ready to make his report to the great Head of the Church as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. Honored by his brethren, he will long be remembered as a great Methodist bishop.

FOR LOUISIANA ESPECIALLY.

We hope every friend of Christian education in Louisiana will read the appeal of the executive committee of the Louisiana Conference Bord of Education, which appears on page three of this issue of the Advocate. Especially do we hope that every subscriber to the Christian Education Movement who has not yet paid his pledge in full will read and heed that appeal. That appeal is a recital of an acute situation in the educational work of the Conference; it was formulated after a day of earnest and prayerful consideration of the facts by the executive committee; it has the approval and endorsement of all the presiding elders of the Conference, and the approval and endorsement of Bishop Warren A. Candler, the presiding bishop of the Conference. Back of it is all the emphasis those charged with the educational interests of the church in Louisiana can command. It is second in importance to no statement that has been made in the Advocate within recent years.

The appeal is addressed to those who have not paid in full the pledges they made to the Christian Education Movement. On January 1, 1928, a payment must be made on the Conference Educational Bonds, issued by the action of the Conference two years ago. The collateral back of these bonds is the good faith of the Methodists of Louisiana. It is unthinkable that the church should default in its obligations. It will not do so.

But it needs urgently and needs now the help of those who have promised to pay but have not yet paid specified amounts to the cause of Christian education. The names of all these subscribers, with the amounts promised by them, are on file. Practically every one of these pledges is past due. The total of these past due pledges would easily enable the Conference to meet its obligation on January 1, and, in addition, would go a long way toward providing for other bond obligations as they mature.

We are hoping and working and praying for the payment of these pledges. The crisis in our educational work will be safely passed if those who have not yet paid their pledges will immediately send the amount due to: Board of Education, Room 513, City Bank Building, Shreveport, La.

It may be that subscribers in the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences who have not yet paid their pledges to the Christian Education Movement those Conferences would likewise render a very great service by paying their pledges at this time.

BETTER THAN FULL COLLECTIONS.

We are in the season when great stress is put upon the collection in full of all the assessments laid upon the church. It is right to make these assessments and it is right to emphasize the importance of their collection. It is a pity that we annually fall so far short of what we are asked to do and what we are able to do. The benevolences ought to be raised in full.

But there is something better than full collections. That something is the creation, development, and maintenance of a spirit of personal religious devotion that will cause all the people constantly to grow in grace and as constantly to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit. The church is not a financial corporation, but a spiritual brotherhood, and it is infinitely more important to have its heart full of love than it is to have its coffers full of cash.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Under the guidance and watchful care of a divine and beneficent Providence, this country has been carried safely through another year. Almighty God has continued to bestow upon us the light of His countenance and we have prospered. Not only have we enjoyed material success, but we have advanced in wisdom and in spiritual understanding. The products of our fields and factories and of our manifold activities have been maintanied on a high level. We have gained in knowledge of the higher values of life. There has been advancement in our physical well-being. We have increased our desire for the things that minister to the mind and to the soul. We have raised the mental and moral standards of life.

We have had the blessings of peace and of honorable and friendly relations with our sister nations throughout the world. Disasters visiting certain of our States have touched the heart of a sympathetic nation, which has responded generously out of its abundance. In continuing to remember those in affliction we should rejoice in our ability to give them relief.

Now that these twelve months are drawing to a close, it is fitting that, as a nation and as individuals, in accordance with time-honored sacred custom, we should consider the manifold blessings granted to us. While in gratitude we rejoice, we should humbly pray that we may be worthy of a continuation of Divine favor.

Therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart and designate Thursday, the 24th day of November, next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and recommend and urge that on that day our people lay aside their usual tasks, and at the family fireside and in their accustomed places of public worship give thanks to Him who holds all in the hollow of His hand.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the City of Washington this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-second.

AFTER HENLEY'S INVICTUS.

By Mrs. Levi Doty.

Out of the light that encircles me,
Bright as the day from pole to pole,
I thank the dear Father of you and me
For the immensity of my soul.

Beyond this place of hopes and tears
Loom but the joys of eternal day;
And so the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll;
For the utmost claim by Christ has been paid,
His boundless love has freed my soul.

JESUS AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

"And when He had closed the Book He sat down."—Luke 4.

The Master paid two visits to Nazareth, "the place where he was brought up"—one in the early part of his ministry, and the other toward the end.

It is with the first visit our interest centers in this study. And it is a very lovely and suggestive story of St. Luke, in which he tells how Jesus entered, "as his custom was," into the synagogue on the Sabbath day and stood up to read.

It was of course his own synagogue; and it had been his mother's and his father's synagogue before that. The first time Jesus had entered it, it had been with his father and his mother and his two brothers and sisters.

I think the occasion came back to him as he stood up and read. He remembered how, when they had reached the door, he and the men had been obliged to sit on one side, and his mother and the girls on the other. He had wanted to sit with her. But when he got used to it, he felt rather big sitting with the men. They had always been compelled to sit right at the back, because in the synagogue the important people sat in the front seats. The "back pews" were not the "seats of the mighty" there. They were "free and unappropriated."

It had sometimes been difficult to see over people's heads, for he was very little, and as you stood up to pray, there were no convenient hassocks for little boys who could not see. And yet he had seen quite a lot.

For instance, he had seen the important people of Nazareth scrambling and pushing for the chief seats. If he sat near the door, he probably heard some of the things they told the attendant. It struck him at the time how funny good people sometimes were; but that was years ago, and many things had happened since then.

Jesus did not sit in the back seats this memorable morning. Mary, to be sure, being poor, sat at the back seat still, and so were his sisters, and James and Judas, Joseph and Simon—if they still went. But Jesus was on the platform.

Six months ago Mary's Son had left Nazareth—long enough for many things to happen to Jesus. John the Baptist, for instance, had received him at the Jordan and dedicated him to a great career. Then he had gone to Capernaum and wonderful things had happened. When Jesus had left Nazareth, no one outside Nazareth had known his name. Now, he was Jesus of Nazareth—that was the difference six months had made.

There was certainly a crowd in the Nazareth synagogue on this memorable morning, for it had become known that Jesus had returned to his own village, and his mother's home, and that the ruler of the synagogue had arranged for him to read the second lesson and give an address.

There were a few in Nazareth who had not been surprised when the news of Jesus' fame had reached their little inland town. They had always said he would go far and do great things. For weeks now they had been saying, "I told you so," and this Sabbath morning they were very eager and excited folk. His teacher, who had taught him in the synagogue school, one or two classmates, and an old man here and there to whom he had opened his heart, were all in the synagogue, very anxious that he should do well, very impatient, as it seemed as if the first part of the service, the creed, and the prayers and that long reading from the Law, would never end in time to give Jesus the chance.

Then at last the moment came. The ruler beckoned the attendant. The attendant walked to the chest where the sacred writings were kept, dragged out the parchment roll, the roll of the Prophet Isaiah, for which Jesus had asked, and carried it to him. Jesus took it from his hands, got up, walked to the desk, unrolled the two ends, spread the parchment out until he found the place he wanted.

Then he read—just a few verses, words they had heard often enough before, but that somehow no one had ever read quite like that. "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me," came the Voice, clear, silvery and flowing, like the sound of many waters, crystal and beautiful, "to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." Then it stopped. The strong, capable hands, hands that were to give men strength when they touched them, and multiply the bread when they broke it; smite men with shame as they washed their soiled feet, and at last be smashed by nails; those hands of which the Prophet spoke when he said, "He had rays coming out of his hands," rolled up the parchment again.

It was so still and tense, that silence when the Voice ceased, you could hear the crackling of the parchment all over the synagogue, and count the footsteps of the attendant as he carried the roll back. Then the Voice began again. The speaker was sitting now. You spoke sitting in the synagogue, and somehow it was very intimate and prevented perorations. He was telling them that the Scripture just read spoke of him and that he himself was that Anointed Servant of God. What was the result as he had closed the Book and sat down, we all know. Jesus read the lesson, preached the sermon, and was excommunicated.

"He closed the Book"—a very simple and obvious thing to do. It was done by other Rabbis every Sabbath day. But look again—and perhaps we shall see beneath the obvious, the wonderful, and beneath the customary, the unique. Something happened that day in the synagogue at Nazareth that had never happened before. The Book had been closed on other Sabbath days, but never like that, never with such divine reasons, such wealth of suggestion, such assumption of authority. Why did he close the Book? Because he is greater than the Book. The Book was the shadow, he was the reality; the Book was the echo, he was the Voice; the Book was the forecast, he was the fulfillment; the Book was the teaching, he was the Teacher. "And when he had closed the Book and sat down, the eyes of all in the synagogue were fastened upon him." For he added, "This day is the Scripture fulfilled in your ears."

You can in some measure realize the tremendous significance of that simple act of closing the Book when you understand that the sad, strange story of the Jewish people, from that day unto this present time, turns on their inability to interpret it, and failure to accept it. How changed this world would have been, if that day they had accepted the truth of his words, I cannot with the wildest stretch of imagination say.

Let us see what really happened. First, "All present spoke well of him." So many do to-day; second, "All eyes were fastened on him"—good listeners; third, "All were astonished at the beautiful words that fell from his lips;" fourth, Then some try to account for him: "Is he not the son of Joseph? There is his shop just down the street—why, we have watched him often as he worked at the carpenters bench." They cannot account for him as a Teacher, because they did not account for him as a toiler. Then he said some plain truths. "Doubtless," said Jesus, "you will remind me of the saying, Doctor, cure yourself, and you will say, Do here in your own country all that we have heard has been done at Capernaum." Then, as they listened to this, they became enraged. Starting up they drove him out of the town. Those who have been to Nazareth know it is built upon the side of a mountain, and there is a limestone cliff about forty feet high overlooking the Maronite Convent, and another cliff at a little further distance. One such cliff about two miles from Nazareth is shown by guides as "The Mount of Precipitation;" there, they say, is where they meant to throw Jesus over.

Ah, but the times have changed! Have they? Has the devil changed? Has truth changed? No, No! He closed the Book, because it was only a Book, do not forget that.

If you do, you make all sorts of mistakes. You do right in calling it The Book—Best of Books—Holy Bible, Book divine. But you must not forget that it is a Book. It has the limitations of a Book, the obscurities of a Book. And while it is the best of Books, remember there is something more than a Book. There is a Life, a living passion, a moulding faith, a living Hope, and they are greater than the Book. Some timid souls are saying, "They are mutilating my Book—robbing it—they are taking away my Lord and I know not where they have laid him.

They could not if they tried.

He read it, then closed it, and made them all look at him. And the object of the Book is to reveal him. When the eyes of all that are in the synagogue are fastened upon him, then have the Scriptures served their purpose, and not until then. "This day is the Scripture fulfilled in your ears." Do you think they willfully closed their ears? Why was he misunderstood? We know even his disciples misunderstood him often. You remember, after feeding the multitude and crossing the Lake, he said unto them, "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees." Loaves, Bread, they reasoned. He noticed it. "Why," said he, "do you not remember that only yesterday I fed so many? O ye of little faith." Pre-occupation with loaves was due to lack of faith. I am afraid many at Conference time will be thinking of loaves. Right, so far; but if too much it will cause lack of faith and spiritual blindness. Oh wonderful Jesus, Master Teacher! He will say it again if we do not understand him the first time. If you are a Pharisee or Sadduce, with your animosity and your criticism, and your unkind speech, your cleverness, he will laugh at you in high heaven and turn his back upon you. But if you are a weak, foolish, trembling, ignorant, penitent child, thinking about loaves when you ought to be thinking about spiritual things, he will say it again. Oh it is these second things that reveal his love and patience!

"He closed the Book." He closed it that he might open it. Nobody has ever been able to understand the open Book until he has closed it.

He cried one day, "It is finished." We to-day have both the Messiah and the Book. It is now an open Book with so much light and comfort because of him. They hounded him out of the synagogue because they did not like to be told the truth, and resented an accent they could not understand. The Truth came knocking at the synagogue door and they loved the darkness rather than the light. The Messenger came from an unlikely quarter. It was so disturbing to be talked to by a Carpenter. The One Man who would have saved Judaism, and the synagogue along with it, that day, they drove Him away.

In a few weeks the Book we have written for 1928 will close. How soon or how long before our Life's Book will be closed? Some day the Books will be opened. I leave these thoughts with you.

AN APPEAL TO LOUISIANA SUBSCRIBERS TO CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Dear Friend: We know that you are a staunch friend of the cause of Christian Education, because you have given us your pledge in support of it. We come to you now, in our hour of emergency, to speak frankly with you as to our condition in the Louisiana Conference. We must have at once $50,000 to meet payments on our bonded indebtedness, and there is absolutely no source to which we can turn, save to our friends of Christian Education. We do not take the fact that you have not yet paid your subscription in full to mean that you have lost interest in the cause; it has probably been due to unsettled business conditions. At this time, however, we are making the most serious appeal that we have ever made to save our educational interest in Louisiana.

After a day of careful deliberation, the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Education authorized this appeal, asking all subscribers to come to our rescue in the payment of their pledges, in whole if possible. If it is not possible for you to pay the pledge in full, we earnestly ask you to pay as large part of it as possible. We assure you that this is a real emergency, and we urgently need every dollar that can be secured at this time. In this appeal all of the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference join, and attached hereto is the personal endorsement of the Bishop.

Please make your remittance to: Board of Education, Room 513, City Bank Building, Shreveport, La.

Trusting it will be possible for you to give us the needed help in this hour of stringent need, we are

Faithfully your brethren,

H. T. CARLEY, Chairman;
ROBERT E. GOODRICH,
Vice Chairman;
R. H. WYNN, Secretary;
BRISCOE CARTER,
Treasurer;
A. S. LUTZ,
Executive Committee.

We approve and concur the above appeal.

C. C. WIER, Alexandria District.
H. N. BROWN, Baton Rouge District.
W. L. DOSS, Jr., Lake Charles District.
K. W. DODSON, Minden District.
N. E. JOYNER, Monroe District.
R. H. HARPER, New Orleans District.
W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT, Ruston District.
W. W. HOLMES, Shreveport District.

I approve and concur in the above appeal,

(Signed) WARREN A. CANDLER,
Bishop in Charge of Louisana Conference.

Your attention is called to the above appeal. As you read it and resolve to pay your promised amount, let not the sun go down on your resolution, but heed that impulse and remit.

Yours for success,

BRISCOE CARTER,
Conference Secretary of Education.

REV. J. H. BASS.

Rev. John Henry Bass was born in Hardeman County, Tenn., on April 25, 1868. He was brought up on a farm near Corinth, Miss. He was converted and joined the church in 1889. On Oct. 14, 1893, he was given license to preach by the quarterly conference of Salisaw circuit, Canadian District, Indian Mission Conference, and the same year he was admitted on trial in the above Conference. Two years later he was ordained deacon by Bishop Hargrove and ordained elder in 1897 by Bishop Granbery, at Dallas, Tex.

Brother Bass served four years in the Indian Mission and North Texas Conferences. He was transferred to the North Mississippi Conference, where he served for seventeen years. He then gave ten years of his ministry to the Memphis Conference. In 1925 he was returned to the North Mississippi Conference and was appointed to the Mount Pleasant charge, where he served until he was called to his heavenly home, Oct. 21, 1927.

Brother Bass was a strong preacher and a man of great faith and vision. He backed the whole program of the church loyally and faithfully. There were two things that he constantly endeavored to do—to win souls and to raise all the finances in full from the charges that he served. He was a great financier, and for that reason he was sent to charges to build a church, a parsonage, or to liquidate old debts on church property.

Though Brother Bass had been in failing health for more than a year, the end was unexpected, for he left this life very suddenly while in the yard of the parsonage at Mount Pleasant. After the funeral service, conducted by his last presiding elder, Rev. T. M. Bradley, assisted by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, at Mount Pleasant, his remains were carried to Jackson, Tenn., for interment. Many were the floral offerings bearing testimony of the love and esteem held in the hearts of those who knew him.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

(Extract from Report to Mississippi Conference.)

Physical Plant—We have a noble group of ten buildings, making an admirable plant. Keeping ten buildings in good state of repair is no small undertaking; and our expenditure for improvements and repairs since July, 1926, has amounted to $7,453. Still other work is needed, especially on the Institute building.

The streets around the college are being paved; and as a property owner Whitworth must bear its portion of the expense.

Also we have increased our fire insurance until our annual bill is almost $2,000.

Endowment—In the audit of the college covering the two years, ending Aug. 31, 1927, by W. Q. Sharp, public accountant, the corpus of the Whitworth endowment is given as $49,659, not including $17,500 donations made in the form of notes, with the understanding that the proceeds of same could be used for operating expenses, if necessary. Though there have not been any large acquisitions since then, every month adds something to the total of our endowment fund; and we wish it to be clearly understood that no part of the principal of the endowment has been drawn upon for any expense whatever, except expense connected with securing and collecting the endowment.

Sixteen thousand seven hundred and forty-three dollars has been collected in the endowment since Dec. 1, 1927.

In addition to what has been paid upon the endowment, there are unpaid subscriptions amounting to about $120,000.

Debt to Whitworth—The history of the south half of Mississippi and to some extent of the whole Southwest has been bound up with the work of Whitworth College. Our country, with its development, has been largely what its men have made it, and its men are largely what its women, the mothers and wives, have made them. Whitworth College, for sixty-eight years, has been putting its stamp, Christian and noble, upon a choice proportion of our women.

RAMBLING THOUGHTS.

By J. B. Tullis.

"On the other side of Jordan,
In the sweet fields of Eden,
Where the tree of life is blooming
There is rest for you."

This is a world where men get tired. Sometimes their souls are tired, sometimes truth and right become obscured by doubt; sometimes justice weeps; but withal, if men work, they get tired.

If they look straight ahead of them, they walk straight, but then they get blind by and by; if they look around them and get open-eyed, their feet stumble and they fall.

It is a world of contradictions. If he asks questions, he gets into trouble, and if he doesn't ask them, he gets old before his time.

We want those sweet fields of Eden, and the blooming tree of life, and to rest under the tree.

Where is the other side of Jordan? Do you go up to it, or down to it? And how do you go? And those sweet fields of Eden, what do they look like, and how many will they hold?

Do you realize that no man knows where that Jordan and those fields are, and what the flower of the tree of life looks like? What's the good of asking?

You can't see them, you can't tell where the fields of Eden are, but you can believe they're somewhere, and that you'll go to them some day.

Don't ask questions and don't try to answer them; remember, and sing:

"I'll away, I'll away to the promised land,
There is rest for the weary,
There is rest for you!
The hymnist has truly written,
Fearless of hell and ghastly death,
I'll break through every foe;
The wings of love and arms of faith
Would bear me conqueror through.
Then ask the monster, 'where's thy sting?'
And 'where's thy victory boasting grave?'"

Life is full of beauty. Happy the man whose eye is so adjusted that it sees and appreciates the radiant glory with which we are enveloped. The good God has hung the tents of life with glowing tapestries of entrancing splendor. The pillars of the morning are translucent with the lights of heaven. The star-spangled curtains of the night are woven of bright dreams and unspoken yearnings.

Blessed are the discerning eyes and receiving mind.

SUNSHINE AND MUSIC.

A laugh is just like sunshine;
It freshens all the day,
It tips the peak of life with light,
And drives the clouds away.
The soul grows glad that hears it,
And feeds its courage strong;
A laugh is just like sunshine
For cheering folks along.

A laugh is just like music;
It lingers in the heart.
And where its melody is heard,
The ills of life depart:
And happy thoughts come crowding
Its joyful notes to greet;
A laugh is just like music,
For making living sweet.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Some words are like golden coins, minted and stamped with an authority of weight and value; some are noisy and explosive, like a worn Ford; others have the carrying power of a majestic limousine.

What a wonderful range of meaning, what a depth of suggestion, what a close touch and mystic vision, are borne to one's conscious soul by the word "fellowship!" It is one of the words from the rugged Saxon that have come down to us from a race of men who were the first to live and move on a plan of brotherhood, and to organize guilds for its maintenance and perpetuation.

"The glory of Greece and the grandeur of Rome" no doubt shed lustre on the succeeding ages, but they knew nothing of fellowship as we know and understand the term. It was only when Christianity taught men they were children of a common Father and equal heirs of the heritage given them—that divine democracy that belongs to the kingdom of heaven—that this ideal was born and lived. Nothing, to my mind, is more beautiful, more soul-satisfying, more uplifting, and results in more lasting good, than to meet and greet a group of men in the bonds of real fellowship. It binds the world together, it lightens the burdens of life, it adds courage to endeavor, it gives one a new, fresh vision, perchance after weeks or months of unrewarded toil. Seek for it, friend; it is in the heart of men, deeply hidden it may be; but like a woodland spring whose gleam is lost in covering leafage, it will more than repay the thirsty stranger who chances upon it, for its waters are pure and sweet, and its flow perennial. No wonder Methodist preachers and lay delegates hasten with willing feet to the meeting of the Annual Conference, for there is good fellowship there, in the homes of the people, in the hearty hand clasp on the street, in the common interests as these are noted on the Conference floor; and last and greatest, the spiritual communion that flows betimes like the waves of the sea.

"The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

Dr. Smith, editor of our General Organ, closes a most excellent leader in the Advocate with these words: "Belief in evolution is not a factor in either the experience of religion or the propagation of the gospel. The defense of the doctrine would seem to be out of place in the pulpit of St. Paul's Cathedral, or any pulpit. The souls of the people perish while the intellectuals war over subjects not primary to faith and practice." Our English friends, whom I admire for many things, quite recently hinted rather broadly that we were rather behind the times—quite belated—in that sensational affair at Dalton, Tenn. And now, behold, they have fastened that old doctrine of transubstantiation on to that of evolution, and are making a stir in the ecclesisastical fields. Medeaval theology and modern theoretical science! I can't think they will plough much ground with that team. So far as I am concerned, I could always find more gospel in the New Testament than I could possibly preach, without fooling with these extraneous subjects. I love that part of science that is truth, experienced and proved, but regard these strange, nebulous hypothesess, about which they fret and fume, as rank heresies against the great sum and substance of truth, as it clearly comes within the purview of human consciousness.

Evolution may be wonderful stuff for these intellectuals, furnishing pabulum upon which this crowd may feed, besides furnishing subject matter for such as we are to write about; but is mighty sorry fodder for the sheep of the fold. Especially is this true when these sheep have richer and sweeter food in God's great storehouse of grain and grace. "Feed my sheep," says the Master—don't confuse them.

"GOLDEN RULE" NASH.

Men rise in most unexpected ways into national prominence. One of the most recent to pass through such an experience was the late Arthur Nash, of Cincinnati. He became known throughout the country as "Golden Rule" Nash. He was a clothing manufacturer. Apart from what he did should be considered what he was, and what he believed, for this is what made him and gave him fame.

The greatest thing about Mr. Nash was not what he did, but what he believed. He was a religious mystic in business—a man of large subjective life. When conviction seized him he could not be turned from his course; neither could he be induced to relinquish his hold upon what he believed to be the truth and the right.

While we are speaking of the forces behind him, we also must not forget the influence of Mrs. Nash. A few years ago, after he had taken over a clothing sweat shop, and transformed it in a few of its principles of operation, he faced bankruptcy. In conferring with her on the course he was contemplating, namely, that of selling out the wreckage, buying a farm, and going to live in the country, she said: "Well, is that all you are going to do? Why not stay with those poor people who need you? Why not take a chance, resolve to ask God to help you, adopt as your principle the Golden Rule, and see what will happen to your business under the operation of that Christ-given principle?"

Thinking of the poor souls working in that sweat shop—for they were mostly defectives—he resolved to stay with the business and turn it into another course with a new policy and with a new slogan. It did not take long for the situation to change. The first year the business doubled. His slogan, the "Golden Rule," became a charm and fascinated the public attention. It took hold of his own life until it perfectly saturated his thinking and all his conduct.

Ere he knew it the income of his business was mounting into the millions. Then came the great hour of his life, when clothing manufacturers became interested in his enterprise. The church everywhere wanted to know his story. Journals and daily papers and monthly magazines sought him out. He had built a business from a low volume of about $80,000 a year to $12,000,000. Slowly he was rising to the peak of a great career.

There came an hour when, in his devotion to his faith in the Golden Rule, he resolved that after his discovery of the power of the Golden Rule to solve his own problems, he was under necessity of carrying that same discovery into the great world of clothing manufacturing and give it a chance to solve the age-long and grievous problems that had rooted themselves in the life of that trade.

He called his employees together and proposed the unionization of the shop. It was our privilege to be a witness of that movement, which was the most spectacular that has appeared in the history of union labor in this country. At the moment of crisis, when opposition was rising like a tide and the leaders among his employees were speaking against him, in the presence of Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, we heard him say: "I promise to carry the Golden Rule into the world of union labor. If it is repudiated, if it does not work, I will spend the last drop of my blood in taking you out of the union."

Enthusiasm broke forth like a storm, swept the opposition into the depths, and the unionization was voted on the faith his operatives had in him. That was only a little over a year ago. It carried him through a period that demanded of him nervous strain that doubtless brought him to the termination of his life.

The story of his career is romantic and fascinating in the extreme. Some day it will be written. However, over the closed life of "Golden Rule" Nash we would like to write in letters of gold, "Sincerity."—Editorial Western Christian Advocate.

RADIO AND RELIGION.

By Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, Chairman of the National Religious Radio Committee.

Whatever may be the perpetuity or the outcome of the alleged warfare between science and religion, it is certain that science has had and will have a deep and permanent effect upon religion. This is especially true of scientific invention. Whether this influence be for good or ill depends on the extent to which religion avails itself of the opportunities laid at its door by science.

No invention of modern times has been more significant in this direction than the radio. It has already enabled multitudes of the disabled and shut-in to share in religious services with their fellowmen. To multitudes of others, remaining within their homes for a less valid reason, it has brought the message of religion anew. So far as can be judged, it has not seriously injured church attendance, and it may be believed that it will increase it. As people become interested in religion, they will be more likely to seek it in association with their fellowmen in the house of worship. In any event the wide spreading of the message to the multitudes more than compensates for any minor or incidental losses.

It is interesting to learn from broadcasting authorities that religion and music are the two popular subjects on the radio.

Until the National Broadcasting Company was organized, there were many diversified local forms of religious services, but no attempt at a great unified program. The National Broadcasting Compny has shown remarkable vision and breadth of spirit and sympathy in its effort to give religion its rightful place in this great college of the people. The company has organized a national advisory council of men and women representing all aspects of our national life, which includes three representatives of religious interests, one Protestant, one Catholic, and one Hebrew.

The Protestant bodies have already organized the National Religious Radio Committee, consisting of officials of the major denominations, strategically located church federations and other general religious bodies, touching every phase of the common life of the Protestant churches.

This committee has already approved two national services, one conducted by the Bedford branch of the Y. M. C. A., in Brooklyn (the station used by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America), where Dr. Cadman is the speaker, and the other operated by the New York Federation of Churches on Sunday evenings, the speaker being the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

The committee has also recommended that from time to time, as occasion offers, the great messages of the church be voiced by thoughtfully selected leaders interpreting religion not only in relation to personal life, but also to what it has to say upon the great questions of human society, on religion in industry, on international friendship, justice and good will, on race relations between white and black, white and yellow, Jew and Christian, setting forth the part and place of religion in all educational aspects of human life. Many such messages would be of common interest not only to all the Protestant bodies, but also to Roman Catholic, Protestant and Hebrew faiths.

The committtee is providing, in co-operation with the Department of Music of the National Broadcasting Company, for special religious services Christmas week, Holy Week and Easter, including the rendering of the great religious oratorios, whose beauty appeals to all mankind.

The procedure of the committee is based on its belief that religion, rightly conceived and interpreted, is a unifying and not a humanly divisive influence. The radio has already gone far to prove this. It is a matter of common knowledge that the great speakers on the radio are not heard simply by sectarian congregation.

The religious message from the radio, so far as regulated by the national agencies, must have certain clearly defined policies.

First of all the message should be constructive. The radio should not be given over to the iconoclast for vituperative and defamatory tearing down, but to those whose message builds up personal and social life.

It should not be sectarian, for the purpose of mere denominational or organizational propaganda, but for the purpose of presenting those broad claims of religion which touch all human hearts.

Search should be made throughout the nation for those prophets who can interpret religion at its highest and its best, that their message might be available for all the people.

The National Religious Radio Committee has discouraged the broadcasting of national religious services during the time of the Sunday forenoon services of the churches, and has recommended that national agencies do not broadcast individual church services.

Ministers and religious leaders are already asking—What is going to be the effect of the radio on religion? One cannot forecast in detail, but two things are certain. It is going to have far-reaching effect and its nature will largely depend on whether or not religion, through its organized forms, will be big enough to avail itself of this great opportunity which science is placing at its disposal.

PLAYING WITH GOD.

By Stanley H. Mullen.

In his very helpful book, "The Wicket Gate," Mr. G. A. Studdert-Kennedy says: "Religion applies either to everything or to nothing, and no department of life can be left outside of God. . . . To talk of a secular side of life and a religious side of life is, to a person who has found God, to talk literal nonsense . . . for the very essence of religion is that it is the relation of the living part to the living whole."

In our kingdom efforts we recognize the fact that man must co-operate with God if kingdom objectives are to be realized. We are sure that unless we are workers together with God we shall fail. But we have been very slow in understanding that a man in the ditch with pick and shovel, a man on the scaffold with brick and mortar, or a man in the office over the accounts is likewise working with God.

We have met with the same spiritual stupidity as regards the play life of our modern world. We have drawn the line and declared that a man is religious when he wor hips, but we haven't been quite sure just what he is when he plays. Is it any wonder that our play life, like our industrial life, has sometimes been carried on in an ungodly manner? If men are workers with God in kingdom objectives, what is wrong in saying that they are players together with God in recreational objectives? Is it not true that we have weakened our kingdom possibilities by failing to recognize this important fact?

Can one play without God playing with him? We are quite sure that one cannot preach or teach religion effectively without God's help. We are beginning to see that a recognition of man's dependence upon God is essential to the interests of both capital and labor. Then what about the boy or girl at play? Real play necessitates active thinking and active physical participation. Can this be possible unless God energizes the mind and body during every second of the game?

The conception of a God who is immanent in his universe leads one to the very evident conclusion that man is dependent upon God in play as he is in worship and in labor. One cannot think without God. Can you? I challenge you to try it. Neither can you move a muscle without him. In him we live, and move, and have our being.

Since it is true that God plays with us, what will a recognition of this great fact do for our play life? If a man becomes conscious of this, can he play in an unfair manner and feel that he is giving his elder Partner a square deal? If the boy at play is made to understand that God is furnishing the strength that enables him to swing the bat against the ball, and that unfair play means to mistreat his great Partner, isn't it likely that his attitude toward the game will be more ideal? When an athlete remembers that he is taking God into the game with him, and could not play without him, don't you suppose that some of the problems in college athletics will find solution? When the coach realizes that God is his Partner in teaching the men of the team to play the game, don't you suppose that the spirit on the athletic field will be different?

All of this is simply another way of saying that we need to Christianize our play. God is on hand in every movement whether we recognize him or not, but to recognize him and to govern ourselves accordingly is to have real religion and real play. —Exchange.

OUR PRESIDENTS AND THE SABBATH.

By David G. Wylie, D.D., LL.D., President of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States.

1. Washington: "That the troops may have an opportunity of attending public worship, as well as to take some rest after the great fatigue they have gone through, the General, in future, excuses them from fatigue duty on Sundays, except at the shipyards, or on special occasions, until further orders."

2. Lincoln: "The President, Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath by the officers and men in the military and naval service. The importance for man and beast of the prescribed weekly rest, the sacred rights of Christian soldiers and sailors, a becoming deference to the best sentiment of a Christian people and a due regard for the Divine Will, demand that Sunday labor in the army and navy be reduced to the measure of strict necessity. The discipline and character of the national forces should not suffer, nor the cause they defend be imperiled, by the profanation of the day or name of the Most High."

3. Roosevelt: "There are enough holidays for most of us. Sunday differs from other holidays in the fact that there are fifty-two of them every year. Therefore, on Sundays go to church.

"Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook, or in a man's own house just as well as in a church. But I also know as a matter of cold fact the average man does not thus worship or thus dedicate himself! If he stays away from the church he does not spend his time in good works or in lofty meditation."

4. Harrison: After referring to the orders of Washington and Lincoln in terms of praise, President Harrison said: "The truth so concisely stated cannot be too faithfully regarded, and the pressure to ignore it is far less now than in the midst of war. To recall the kindly and considerate spirit of the orders issued by these great men in the most trying times of our history, and to promote contenment and efficiency, the President directs that Sunday morning inspection will be merely of the dress and general appearance, without arms; and the more complete inspection under arms, with all men present, will take place on Saturday."

5. Woodrow Wilson: "The President, Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, following the reverent example of his predecessors, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath by the officers and men in the military and naval service of the United States."

6. Coolidge: "I profoundly believe in the Sabbath and have always recognized its sacred importance. I, therefore, appreciate the work your organization is doing for the preservation of the Christian Sabbath and the weekly rest day, and, with you, I feel that we should give attention not only to the physical aspects, but also to the moral and spiritual phases of the Holy Day."

THAT TWELVE-MONTH TRUCE.

Two weeks ago I suggested that we all initiate at once a twelve-month truce to all complaining, and determine that, save under the most stern necessity, we will not be guilty of indulging in it until one year from to-day. Several people have told me that they thought the idea a very excellent one, and that they had determined to see what they could do toward living up to it.

Of course there will be numbers of people who will judge such a vow altogether foolish, and will claim that the privilege of complaining is heaven-sent and not to be bartered away for any reason. If people and things are wrong have we not a duty resting upon us to say so, and how can we ever hope to make them better except we are ready to complain against them and stress and even magnify their wrongness?

But I have made this discovery as I have watched myself in my complaining moods, that when I am in them I am not very likely to be constructively interested in reforms or improvements of any one or any thing; rather I complain because of some petulance or failure or bad mood in myself than because I see with new vision something beyond me that I wish to make better. The complainers —and I learn this lesson quite as much from watching myself as from watching other people— are nearly as likely to be those with some special zeal for goodness as they are to be those with a jaundiced vision or a thrawn spirit.

And I am quite as thoroughly convinced of the ineffectiveness of complaining as I am of its immorality. Complaining is such a negative thing that at its best it can only render a very limited service, and it is one of the things that does not stand a very good chance of ever being at its best. The work of making things better is a great constructive enterprise and it will never be done by those whose great business is the pointing out of flaws. When a man has complained he may have done something, but he has not done very much, though he quite frequently thinks he has.

And one great difficulty about the complaining that we might think of as legitimate is that it so easily slips down to the illegitimate and doubtful level. If there is anything more hurtful in all the world than a thoroughly established habit of complaining then I do not know what it is, and the one great hinderer of all good causes, no matter what he may think himself to be, is the man whose constant note is one of complaint. I have very thoroughly made up my mind that I am going to try my best to carry out that truce to all complaining.—The New Outlook.

SUFFERING RUSSIAN CHILDREN.

There is no doubt that the dreadful consequences of the world war and great Russian revolution that burnt Russia to ashes are still alive. In every respect the life of the world has been disturbed by these two world catastrophes. There is also no doubt that all we have suffered and are still suffering from, as a consequence of the war and revolution, has its influence on the coming generation.

I am going to say a few words about the Russian children of to-day. The world war has taken away more than three million Russian fathers. During the Russian civil war more than twenty-five million Russian lives perished. As a result of the revolution over three millions of Russians have left their mother country, which has become hostile to them, and they are scattered all over the world.

1920-1924 were dreadful years for Russian children. According to official statements issued by the Soviet government, one and a half million homeless children were wandering all over the country at that time. Terrible conditions under which these poor creatures lived were beyond description. The bloody hand of the revolution and war threw them into the very jaws of the hell. Now these children are getting older and become an unbearable evil of the Soviet life. The Soviet government is being in constant struggle against this evil, but this struggle has nothing to do with usual steps which are taken in order to suppress crimes among the children; such children are usually taken out of the community, isolated like wild beasts and severely punished, while their actions are but a demonstration of the abnormal state of their mind.

The latest Soviet statements give us accounts about numbers of children that are kept now in so-called "Children's Homes" (Dyetdom). There are about 700,000 children who came to life having unbearable environments for human beings. They represent only few instances to reflect colossal harm caused by the great storm that has swept over Russia. Hundreds of thousands if not millions of children are doomed to untimely death and degeneration.

Even the ancient people believed that home is the foundation of a nation. Christianity strengthened and consecrated this firm and steady law in the life of humanity. The Russian home has been cruelly destroyed. I am not going to discuss the laws established by the Soviet government concerning marriage and home. It is necessary to take a deep look at the Russian home of to-day. Lack of conscience of sin, of the punishment that the gospel has promised to sinners, the long absence of a husband or wife during the war time, poverty that came as a result of the revolution, drunkenness, corruption, poor education of children—all this has brought down the morale of the Russian home not only in Soviet Russia, but here abroad as well. And the children have to suffer from the consequences of their father's sins.

Our church cannot be an indifferent spectator of the children's Golgotha. The Methodist church tries not only to cure the human soul, but the body as well. The Methodist church in Manchuria, this distant corner of Asia, is true to the principles of Methodism. During these five years we have been trying to do our best to help the poor and to diminish the ruinous influences of the revolutionary storm with the beneficial influence of the gospel. Our church has been taking care of the spiritual improvement and education of children. Hence the establishment of the high school and the Institute in this city.

Harbin, the principal city of Northern Manchuria, with a great number of Russian citizens, has some suburbs crowded with the poor. The striking poverty of these people made the Methodist church organize a League for the Protection of Children in 1925. The leaders of the League were Mr. Jenkins, Rev. Pastor Erwin and Miss Rumbough, the American missionaries. After having left Manchuria they have handed all over to the Russian missionaries. During these two years the League has distributed 8,000 pieces of clothing, more than 12,000 free dinners, opened the asylum for orphans and babies whose mothers had to work out of home the whole day, has paid tuition fee for more than fifty children, etc. Besides, we have never forgotten to brighten homes with the pure light of the Bible. We had some public lectures on the problems of childhood and home, on great Christian holidays, Christmas and Easter, and we organized some entertainments for needy children.

This year the great work has not been stopped. It is going on, as it was when our American brethren were with us.

If you are willing to take part in this great work, if you are not able to pass indifferently by a cold little hand of a poor child stretched out for help, we beg you and your friends to help us. You must know that we make no difference among the children of any religion or race.

All inquiries about the children, conditions here, as well as in Soviet Russia, and all your gifts (money, things, food, etc.) please kindly address to the President of the League for the Protection of Children, Rev. B. N. Bradovitch, 13 Telinskaya Street, Newtown, Harbin, China.

PASTOR A. C. GOUROFF.

EAST AND WEST TO MEET AT JERUSALEM.

In the spring of 1928, beginning March 24, and continuing through Easter day, April 8, two hundred men and women, representing Christians of every nation and race, will assemble on the Mount of Olives, outside Jerusalem, for an enlarged meeting of the International Missionary Council. This Council is the direct successor of the Continuation Committee of the World Missionary Conference held in Edinbeurgh in 1910. Its membership has been enlarged for this third meeting by increasing the representatives from so-called mission fields, two-thirds of whom are to be nationals of the countries from which they come.

No mere Western program to evangelize the world brings these leaders together. Synchronously, Christian leaders around the world have sensed a peculiar need at this time for international counsel. The declared purpose of this meeting is "to gain help in regard to those needs which are felt to be deepest and most pressing in the hearts, lives and work" of articulate Christian groups around the world. In other words, the Jerusalem meeting promises to define afresh in terms acceptable to this generation and consistent with conditions and demands in every great mission area the aim, character and scope of our foreign missionary enterprise.

Five subjects have been listed for the study and discussion of Jerusalem delegates. They are: (1) The Christian Life and Message in Relation to non-Christian Systems; (2) Religious Education; (3) The Relation between the Younger and Older Churches; (4) The Christian Mission in the Light of Race Conflict, Industrial Developments and Rural Needs, and (5) International Co-operation.

Already groups of people have been formed in different countries to assemble data and record their findings on each of the subjects just enumerated. The group in Great Britain on the Christian Message has as its chairman the Bishop of Manchester, while the group studying this subject on this side of the Atlantic in preparation for Jerusalem is under the leadership of Robert E. Speer. A similar group has been organized in Germany. Meanwhile, recognized scholars of non-Christian religion who have had experience in presenting Christianity to followers of other faiths are preparing papers on this subject for distribution in advance of the Jerusalem meeting.

The first group on Religious Education and Missions, organized in the United States, is under the chairmanship of Professor Luther A. Weigle, of Yale. Two other groups for North America are meeting with Toronto and Chicago as their geographical centers.

As a beginning in the study of relationship between younger and older churches, letters have been sent to the National Christian Councils and other conferences in all mission fields, asking them to prepare statements expressing, so far as possible, the mind of the younger churches on this increasingly important and perplexing question. The utmost freedom is being given to all national groups in the preparation of their statements.

Group studies on the Relation of Christian Missions to Race Conflict, Industrial Developments, and Rural Needs are also being organized.

One group in this country has already begun the study of experiences gained in efforts to promote a better understanding between the white and black races in the United States. It is planned to have another group study experiences gained in improving relations between the white and yellow races. Careful study of race conflict is also being undertaken in East and South Africa.

A commission on Missions and Rural Needs is being organized in the United States and Canada, under the chairmanship of Dr. Kenyon Butterfield. A special investigator, Dr. Edmund de S. Brunner, is on his way to mission fields in Asia with a view to assisting forces there in making a special study of this very important problem.—Bulletin, Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

"GIVE A THOUGHT TO AFRICA."

By Hosea K. Nyabonga.

(The author of the following verses is a native of Uganda, East Africa, who is now a student at Clark University, Atlanta, Ga. He is the eldest son of a native king, and consequently is heir apparent to the throne. He is a devout Christian, has a fine mental endowment, and is fitting himself for the largest possible service to his people on his return to Africa.):

Give a thought to Africa!
Neath the burning sun,
Hosts of weary hearts are there,
Waiting to be won.
Many idols have they,
But from swamp and clod
Many a voice is crying out
For the living God.

Breathe a prayer for Africa:
"O thou God of love,
Send thy blessings on the tribes,
From thy home above."
Swarthy lips when moved by grace
Can most sweetly sing;
Pray that Africa's heart may be Loyal to our King.

Give your love to Africa!
There our brothers call.
Bring release from slavery,
Break sin's bitter thrall.
White shall love the black man,
Each forget the past;
In the Father's house above,
All will meet at last.

Many of the hospital patients at Wembo Nyama, in the Belgian Congo, have learned to read in the first reader since they have been in the hospital.

"Desire is an essential part of our existence. If you could find a person who had no wish or desire for food or knowledge, for any better condition of life for himself or others—no desire to be wiser or better, or for the world to be made a purer and happier place, you would not say that he was living. The cessation of desire is a sign of dying and not of life. Desire, therefore, is not to be eliminated, as Buddhism teaches; but rather to be illuminated, cleaned, regenerated, and consecrated."—Charles Brown.

The Home Circle

THE LITTLE DO'S AND DON'TS.

Two companies of soldiers go
A-marching through the world;
The one with gay flags streaming out,
The other, banners furled.
Each child must travel with them,
In spite of wills and won'ts;
And march among his comrades,
With the little Do's and Don'ts.

The pleasant things, the helpful things,
The worth-while things, and true,
Are what their pledge requires of Each loyal little Do.
They tread to merry music, and
They're busy as the bees;
And they freshen tired people,
Like a jolly ocean breeze.

The Don'ts do nothing, lazy drones!
They never try to fill
The empty minutes, hours and days;
They've neither strength nor will.
The world must turn without their aid,
For help it spin they won't!
Oh, I hope that you will never be
A useless, idle Don't.

THE PAIN IN THE KING'S MIND.

By Frank Strickland.

One day the king was out riding. As he passed along the road he saw a pig sinking in a mudhole. Poor piggie would climb part way up the slippery bank, and then he would fall down again.

"I suppose I should get down and help that pig," thought the king, "but I have on my new suit, and it will be quite spoiled if I do so. I think I will let him get out the best way he can."

He rode on. When nearly two miles away, he turned and came back. Without minding the new clothes, he stooped, and taking piggie in his arms, he dragged him out of the mud. The new suit was quite spoiled, but the king said he had taken a pain out of his mind.

Whether there was ever such a king or such a piggie or such a mudhole, doesn't matter so much. The principle is there, and don't we love it? Isn't it splendid to think that the king, who was ruler over many people, who had his country to protect, and perhaps battles to fight, should have such a clean, healthy, kindly heart? His heart was, as we nowadays put it, "In the right place." That heart was so warm and gentle and generous and tender that it kept persuading him to return and get the pig out of the mud. That heart kept on insisting, "Put yourself in that pig's place. Suppose you were that much in need of assistance." And the whole affair caused the king so much pain that he had to go back and get the pig out of the mud in order to get the pain out of his mind.

I can't help imagining that this king had that treasure of treasures, a good mother. I think that while he was a boy, a prince, his mother would say to him tenderly: "Some day you'll be king. To rule a nation sounds powerful, but love and gentleness are the greatest powers." And I think the king's mother, by her kind and loving words, and by her sweet example, moulded that boyish heart into a thing so tender that it couldn't stand the thought of even a helpless pig striving to get out of a mudhole.—Boys' Weekly.

JAMIE'S COLLECTOR.

It was very warm and Jamie was tired. He had been riding on his bicycle all the afternoon and now he was sitting in the vine-covered arbor on the lawn, waiting for bedtime.

But presently, as he leaned back with his eyes half shut, he heard steps and saw a queer little man standing before him.

The little old man had a large knapsack. He said, "Good evening." Then he sat down, as if he felt quite at home.

"Are you a peddler?" asked Jamie.

"No, I'm a collector."

"What do you collect?" inquired Jamie, "postage stamps, or coins, or autographs?"

"No, I'm a collector of waste."

"A collector of waste! Where do you find it and what is it like?"

"That is just what I am going to tell you. The world is full of waste—time, opportunities, money, happiness. All these things we gather up from day to day, and sometimes our loads are frightfully heavy, I can tell you. Look at this knapsack and this parcel, all collected to-day!"

"Dear me!" said Jamie, "I wish you would show me some of the things you have here. Couldn't you do it?"

"If I show you anything, I'll show you your own waste, for you've given me a lot of work to-day collecting it," replied the old man.

"I'd like to know what I've wasted to-day? That's nonsense!"

"It is, hey? Well, then I'll prove that it's true and I'll make you own it, too, before I go. I have not time to open my knapsack now, but I will read from my memorandum books the list of all you've wasted to-day." And he took out a small book and turned the leaves.

"Jamie—here is your account; now listen: In the first place, you wasted thirteen minutes this morning lying in bed after you were called and told to get up.

"Then when you were only half dressed you wasted eight minutes more looking out of the window at two dogs that were fighting.

"In school you lost ten minutes of the study hour drawing pictures in your copy book, and you wasted eleven minutes more over that newspaper you carried to school.

"When you came home, instead of going directly to your room to wash your face and hands and brush your hair as your mother requested you, you spent nine minutes grumbling on the stairs before you obeyed her.

"You stopped in the street to talk to Tommy Rose and wasted twelve minutes of your music lesson time besides—"

"Oh, stop," cried Jamie, "don't tell me any more about the time I've wasted, please."

"Well, I'll tell you about the other things, then; you wasted opportunities. You saw a bird's nest robbed to-day and never said a word, when you might have saved it.

"Then you saw that little boy drop his marbles and only laughed at him, when you might have helped to pick them up.

"You let your sister take that long, hot walk to the postoffice this afternoon when you could have gone there so easily on your bicycle.

"There was another wasted opportunity when you were so inattentive to your history lesson in school.

"You flew into a passion, too, because your shoe string was in a knot—wasted opportunity of self-control.

"You forgot to rise and offer your mother a chair when she entered the room—wasted opportunity to be polite.

"You bought chewing gum after resolving never to buy it again—wasted money and wasted good resolution.

"But I have read enough to prove what I have said. Take pains, my dear boy. It is in your power to lighten my burden each day."—Selected.

ALL REVERSIBLE.

Words for many centuries have been the occasional playthings of literate people, not infrequently of distinguished scholars and men of letters. The Companion has recently given some good examples of anagrams, a form dependent upon the transposition of letters. Attention has recently been called by several correspondents of the Boston Herald to another form, the palindrome, based upon their reversibility. The name of our first mother suggested one of the earliest specimens of this kind of word-play. It was composed in a moment of sportive relaxation by an ancient and eminent divine and is descriptive of the moment of Adam's waking in the garden of Eden; it is brief and quaint: "Sees Eve: 'Aha, Eve!'"

But this imaginary greeting, of which the old bishop is reported to have been extremely proud, is not a true palindrome—it is a sentence composed wholly of reversible words, but not a reversible sentence. His achievement was surpassed later in the neat and complete salutation, "Madam, I'm Adam." True palindromes are rare. A few others, recently recalled, are: "Red root up to order," "Draw pupil's lips upward," "No! It is opposition," and "Ma had a ham." Yet another, "Snug, raw was I ere I saw war guns," seems to be a modern variation, clever, yet not equal to the original, of the most famous and probably the best of all palindromes, which is a sentence supposed to be uttered reminiscently by Napoleon at St. Helena: "Able was I ere I saw Elba."

A curious practical use of the reversibility of words is that recorded by an English family of Dod, Dod with one d, who much resented being confused with a more plebian branch of Dodds with two d's. Dod is reversible, Dodd is not, and the head of the one-d family several generations ago determined to emphasize this point of difference in surnames by choosing for all the Dod babies reversible Christian names as well. He had five sons and six daughters. The boys were christened Odo, Otto, Asa, Nun, and Bob; the girls, Anna, Ada, Ava, Alla, Hannah, and Eve.—Youth's Companion.

WHALE IS A MOST VALUABLE FISH.

The whale is worth more money to its captor than any other living creature. For this reason, it is hunted unceasingly, and if the present rate of destruction continues our grandchildren may regard it as an extinct monster.

A single Greenland whale will have in its mouth about a ton of whale bone, which alone is worth from $6,000 to $8,000. From its blubber twenty-five tons of oil may be obtained, which at $100 a ton represents $2,000. The sperm whale may also contain a certain amount of ambergris, which is worth considerably more than its weight in gold. —Exchange.

And through the ebon walls of night
Hew down a passage unto day.

Press on! If once and twice thy feet
Slip back and stumble, harder try;
From him who never dreads to meet
Danger and death, they're sure to fly.
To coward ranks the bullet speeds,
While on their breasts who never quail,
Gleams, guardian of chivalric deeds,
Bright courage like a coat of mail.

Press on! If Fortune play thee false
To-day, to-morrow she'll be true;
Whom now she sinks she now exalts,
Taking old gifts and granting new.
The wisdom of the present hour
Makes up the follies past and gone;
To weakness strength succeeds, and power
From frailty springs! Press on, press on!

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Central College, Fayette, Mo., dedicated a new dormitory for men on Nov. 15.

The nineteenth annual session of the General Sunday School Council will be held at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 12-16.

Rev. W. M. Young has had a fine beginning at Shannon, Miss. On a recent Sunday, additional chairs had to be brought in to seat the congregation.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, was in New Orleans last Saturday and honored the Advocate office with a call.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, the new presiding elder of the Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "We are here on the job and everything looks like a good year."

Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Shearer, of Harrisville, Miss., announce the birth of a daughter, Helen Irene, on Armistice Day. Blessings upon the little lady!

Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Merryville, La., reports that the contribution of the Merryville church to the Mission Special amounted to $67, and to the Golden Cross, $12.50.

Rev. S. L. Riggs recently assisted Rev. R. S. Walton in a good meeting at Logansport, La. Large congregations attended the services, the church was revived, and three young people were added to the membership.

The editor of the Advocate regrets not being in the office one day last week when Mr. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, called. Mr. Holmes is one of the best known and most useful Methodist laymen in the State.

Rev. L. F. Alford requests us to announce, for the benefit of Epworth Leaguers and other correspondents, that his address for the present is Jackson, Miss., in care of the Methodist Orphanage.

One of the interesting events during the session of the Mississippi Conference was the laying of the corner stone of the Glendale church, in the northwest section of Jackson. The building is of brick, and will serve the needs of the congregation for some time to come. Rev. C. E. Downer is the pastor of the church.

A recent issue of the Webster Signal, published at Minden, La., pays high tribute to the Methodist pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain. Brother McCain has recently brought from the press the second edition of his sermon, "Christian Stewardship and Tithing," which has been instrumental in enrolling several thousand tithers in Louisiana.

Rev. H. W. Jordan has had a successful year at Covington, La. He has received forty-four adult members into the church. For all purposes the church has raised about $800 more than in any previous year of its history. The laymen's banquet on Wednesday evening of last week was a delightful occasion, with thirty-eight men present.

Mr. R. H. McCoy, of Lake Charles, La., has our thanks for a list of five subscriptions recently sent in, each one paid two years in advance. We are of the opinion—though we are not sure—that these subscriptions are presents from Mr. McCoy to his children. If so, he is a wise and thoughtful father.

The quarterly conference announcements of the Sardis District reached the office too late for insertion in this issue of the Advocate. The following are the first few appointments: Batesville, preaching, Nov. 27, 11 a.m.; Q. C., Dec. 7, night; Crenshaw and Sledge, at Crenshaw, preaching, Nov. 27, night; Q. C., Dec. 14, 2 p.m.; Cockrum, at Cockrum, Dec. 3, 4; Horn Lake, at Horn Lake, Dec. 11, 11 a.m. The full list will appear next week.

A city efficiency institute for Epworth Leaguers of Meridian, Miss., and vicinity will be held at Central Church, Meridian, Nov. 28-Dec. 2. Six courses will be given, and credits will count on the Christian Culture Diploma. Dr. D. L. Mumpower, of the Central Office, and Miss Lillian Knobles, missionary to China, will be on the program, in addition to local speakers. We thank Mr. W. D. Hawkins, "the Epworth League man," for a cordial invitation to attend the institute.

Mr. E. L. Cargill, Jr., son of Rev. E. L. Cargill, of the Louisiana Conference, and Miss Mary Brown, of Alexandria, La., were married at the home of the bride on Nov. 16, the father of the groom officiating. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple. They will make their home at 414 Olive Street, Shreveport, La.

We regret to learn that Rev. G. S. Saunders, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, and a brother of Rev. W. H. Saunders, of that Conference, was seriously hurt in a stove explosion the latter part of August and that it is probable that he will lose the sight of both eyes as a result. He is a member of the Pacific Conference, taking the superannuate relation at the recent session. A nice home has been given him at Hollister, Calif., and if he recovers sufficiently, he will serve the church at that place.

We are sure the readers of the Missionary Voice have noticed the marked improvements in form and arrangement. The church has a great missionary periodical, and it deserves the hearty support of all our people. An effort is being made to increase the subscription list to 100,000 during the next five years, and 10,000 has been set as a goal for new subscriptions this year. The maintenance of the missionary spirit is dependent largely upon the spread of knowledge concerning our missionary work—and the Voice gives the information. The goal ought to be reached.

Dr. Mark Terrell, general evangelist, has an open date beginning Dec. 2 that he would be glad to give some pastor in Louisiana or Mississippi. He has recently been with Rev. D. B. Boddie in a good meeting at Opelousas, La., and is now in a meeting at Hall Summit, La., with Rev. R. T. Pickett. A letter addressed to him at Hall Summit will reach him.

Rev. A. M. Serex, pastor of the Second Methodist Church, this city, recently assisted Rev. M. Hebert in a meeting at Morgan City, La. There were thirty-five additions to the membership of the church. Brother Serex has had an unusually successful year in his pastorate, the congregation being largely increased, the membership considerably enlarged, and the Conference collections provided for in full.

The corner stone of the new Methodist church at Reserve, La., was laid last Sunday afternoon, the Masonic Grand Lodge conducting the ceremony. The principal address was delivered by Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge. The church was enterprised by Dr. Harper, who was ably assisted by Rev. E. C. Gunn, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, Rev. Leon Picone, missionary evangelist, and quite a number of New Orleans Methodists. Brother Gunn has carried on services at Reserve regularly for several months. Mr. John P. Greven, superintendent of the sugar refinery at Reserve; Mrs. Greven, and others were active in securing the building. A large number of Methodists from New Orleans, specially from the Carrollton Avenue Church, attended the ceremonies.

A SUPERLATIVELY GOOD REPORT FROM MINDEN, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We are about to close another fine year at Minden. God has greatly blessed us and our record has been one of superlatives.

We had the largest School of Missions, in the early part of the year, in our Conference. Our contribution to the Missionary Maintenance cause was the largest per capita in Louisiana and in amount second only to First Church, Shreveport.

We have the largest attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer service in Louisiana and one of the largest in Southern Methodism. Our Woman's Missionary Society has grown more than any other auxiliary of the leading appointments of the Conference.

We sent in the largest list of annual subscriptions to the Conference organ in our Conference.

Our church is the only one of the large churches of the Conference that I have heard of whose attendance at the public service has increased 300 per cent in the past two years. Our church has had the largest percentage of growth or numerical increase of the leading charges of the Conference—about 50 per cent in two years. We have grown one-half as much in two years as we grew in all in the 80 years of the church's history.

Our church is the only one I know of in the Conference that has to provide extra seats every Sunday for its congregations, and frequently turn people away from the regular services.

We had this year the best revival in the history of our church.

We have some fine things this year—not in the superlative class that I know of, but still fine. We had an unusually good Teacher-Training School, under the leadership of one of the strongest faculties in the connection.. We had the most helpful pre-Easter services ever held on the charge. We had a fine school of doctrine, under the leadership of Dr. R. E. Goodrich, of First Church, Shreveport. We held, perhaps, the first Epworth League Institute ever conducted in the Minden church.

The pastor has helped the presiding elder and his fellow-pastors of the Minden District by making inspirational addresses, by helping raise the Conference benevolences, and in extending the circulation of the Conference organ, and in other ways in which he could. I have also helped in meetings and revivals out of the district.

Our people not only take the Conference Organ in greater numbers than any other charge in the Conference, but we have quite a number of subscriptions to the General Organ, Methodist Layman, and Missionary Voice.

I was about to forget that we have organized one of the largest Wesley Brotherhoods in the Conference.

How much have we raised for the Orphanage? About $3,000 up to date; and the Superannuate Endowment has by no means been forgotten.

If we are transcending the limits of modesty in making this report, we are not mad, most noble Editor, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.

LEON I. McCAIN.

THE DAY OF THE GOLDEN RULE.

By John H. Finley, Editor of the New York Times.

Once more Golden Rule Sunday brings to mind the needs of the thousands of orphaned children in the Near East who have been supported by American friends of little children. The day falls on December 4 this year. The observance is always the same—the eating of a simple meal, one that brings to mind the life of these young wards of America in Greece and Armenia and the Holy Land; then, with hearts filled with sympathy for these parentless boys and girls who must all too soon go out into the world to care for themselves, the making of a contribution that they may have food throughout the year.

There are still hundreds of small children being made healthy and happy and many more hundreds of older boys and girls learning trades and crafts by which they will be able to support themselves when they have to earn their living. More than half of the youngsters in the orphanages are still under fourteen and they must be sheltered and taught until their turn comes to face life independently. Near East Relief has done a splendid piece of work in arousing initiative and independence in its charges, a thing hard to do in institutions, but it realizes that after all they are only little boys and girls, entering upon their career at an age when our American sons and daughters are still given parental care. It is therefore trying to keep a friendly eye on them for some time after they leave the orphanages, to make sure that they are not exploited, and that they may feel that for everyone of them there is some one to whom they may bring their problems and difficulties, some one who cares as a father or mother would.

It is for all these activities, some so definite, some so undefined but richly important, that the donations of Golden Rule Sunday go. Any donation may be sent to the Near East Relief, 151 Fifth Avenue, New York, whence it will go forth on its mission of maintaining life and building life for the future.

APPLYING LOVE AS WELL AS PREACHING IT.

The passion for humanity which comes from an understanding of Jesus Christ and his way of life is powerfully influencing the churches to-day to seek vital expression for their religious life in practical service to the masses of human folks who together make up "the community." The awakened church in city or country is no longer satisfied merely to preach abstract messages of love unrelated to definite problems.

The modern church is no longer content, for instance, merely to conduct the funeral services of little children, but insists upon inquiring into the causes of infant mortality and addresses itself with no less love but with more intelligence to the removal of these causes and the avoidance of needless heartaches.

It is concerned not only to visit the prisoner, but to reform prison methods, so that the effect of prison experience shall be to reconstruct the life of the wrong doer, rather than to make him more criminal than before he fell into the hands of the penal system.

The socialized church now includes on its staff a trained social worker using modern case-work methods in family welfare and clearing its cases through the central family welfare society of its community. A scientific survey is often made of the parish and of certain aspects of the entire community, revealing the social, civic and industrial conditions which affect the life and happiness of the people. Many methods are adopted for the further education of church members, including discussion groups on the social application of the teaching of Jesus, conferences with special speakers bringing constructive suggestions for industrial progress and peace, open forums on Sunday afternoon or evening for the consideration of the great problems of industry, race and international relations from a Christian point of view.—Federal Council Bulletin.

Protection Against Old Age

A FEW LINES OF THOUGHT.

By Roy Smith.

I know a man who goes out every morning looking for a job and afraid he will find work.

Too many preachers commit the crime of overwork—when they move they take the whole working organization with them.

The church is not made up of people who are better than the rest, but of people who are trying to become better than they are.

One reason why some people do not believe in shouting about religion is because they do not have enough to begin shouting about.

I believe in the church, not because she has attained perfection, but because she refuses to lose confidence in the possibility of perfection.

The church is guilty of many imperfections, but that is partly because she has preached such standards of perfection that her own failures are painfully apparent.—Exchnage.

HIS NEARNESS.

A Prayer and its Answer.

By Laura M. White.

Out of self and into Thee,
There for refuge let me flee;
Take away this sense of fear,
Let me feel Thy presence near.

Savior, hold me close to Thee,
Till Thy loving face I see;
Keeping, cheering, making strong,
When alone or in the throng.

Fear and dread encompass me,
All is darkness without Thee;
Show me, Lord, Thy gracious face,
Fill me with Thy plenteous grace.

"Yes, my child, I hear thy cry,
I am with thee, very nigh;
Just believe and do not fear,
Nought can harm thee—I am near.

"Though I chasten, 'tis in love,
Lest thy heart from me might rove;
I know thy frame, I know thy need,
And thy heart-cry I will heed.

"Lift thy face and look above,
Then thou'lt sense my boundless love;
Oh, my child, 'twill not be long
'Ere I'll take thee from the throng.

"In my presence then to be
From all sin and sorrow free;
Wait awhile, in patience wait,
Soon thou'lt reach the heavenly gate,

"Never more to feel a fear
With thy loved ones ever near;
Surely thou canst wait awhile,
Till I call thee home, my child."

MRS. NELLIE CUDE ROUSSEAUX

Nellie Cude was born in Devonshire, England, Feb. 14, 1853, and after more than three-quarters of a century in the flesh, departed this life and returned unto God who gave it, Nov. 1, 1926. Her parents came to this country when she was an infant. Her mother died when Nellie was but 3 years old, and left her to other tender hands for care and nurture. The family made their home and found a livelihood in the country east of Lake Pontchartrain. Here the subject of this sketch grew to womanhood and received her training. Her parents being members of the Episcopal communion, she embraced this creed, and from it got her conception of the dignity of the kingdom of God. She held the church in great reverence. She later came under the influence of the people called "Methodists," and asked for a place among them, where she sought the power of godliness. On Feb. 4, 1875, she was united in holy wedlock with Mr. N. J. Rousseaux. Dr. Linus Parker, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, later bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, officiated. To this union were born three sons and two daughters. She and her husband adopted an infant nephew, Harvey Rousseaux, and she became mother unto him. Harvey and Willie Rousseaux, with whom the mother made her home, are honored citizens of Slidell, La. Mrs. J. A. Bousquet, a daughter, also resides in Slidell, and is president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church. Mrs. Missouri Givens, another daughter, lives at Westonia, Miss. Rev. J. C. Rousseaux is pastor of the Methodist church in Algiers, La. Ralph, the youngest son, made the supreme sacrifice in 1918 while serving with the A. E. F. in France in the recent world war. Mrs. Rousseaux modestly gave her life to society as a servant to the cause of righteousness, and asked in return only the resultant joys of service. But the rewarder of the faithful blessed her beyond measure, and her children took the mantle of service, and are now engaged in the work which was a joy and delight to her heart. The earnest inquirer says, "I would see Jesus," and the skeptic says, "Give me proof of the power of God and the saving grace of Jesus Christ." We point them to the lives of such saints as Mother Rousseaux and reply, "Behold the power of God, the spirit and grace of Jesus." She was patient, tender, kind, sympathetic, charitable, loving and true.

HER PASTOR.

MARY LOU LAY was born April 22, 1868, near Agency, Mo., and was married to Charley E. Conrad, Dec. 13, 1885. To this union were born eight children: Reuben, of Hamlin, Kans.; Henry and Mrs. Veta Tucker, of Rushville, Mo.; Mrs. Ray Redman, Mrs. Lucy Atkinson, Oakley, Emeral and J. P. Conrad, of Kansas City, Mo. She departed this life early Thursday morning, June 30, 1927, at her home, 1606 Kenginston Avenne, Kansas City. She surrendered her life to the Master at the age of 13, uniting with the Christian church at Rushville, and was faithful to the end. At the time of her death she was a member of the Jackson Avenue Christian Church, Kansas City. She was a good Christian and a precious mother. Her beautiful life spoke for itself, which was one of unselfishness, always quiet and unassuming. She was a woman possessing all the noblest traits of character. As a friend she was always true, and will be sorely missed. All who knew her loved her. Funeral services were conducted at the Christian church at Rushville, by Rev. Wm. Allison, who lived as a neighbor to her for several years, and who bore eloquent testimony to her worth. Burial was in Armstrong cemetery. She is survived by thirteen grandchildren, and two sisters, Charity Smith, of Kansas City, and Sarah Reynolds, of Faucett, Mo.

SEEKING TO PROTECT HUMAN LIFE.

The campaign which is being carried out this fall by the American Road Builders' Association in behalf of safety on the streets and highways, is eliciting much interest and support from the churches of the country.

The following resolution, emphasizing the moral aspects of the question, was adopted by the Federal Council of Churches at a recent meeting:

"The Adminitsrative Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America would call the earnest attention of the churches, pastors, and Christian people to the appalling results of the disregard of human safety in the constantly increasing loss of human life caused by recklessness and selfishness in travel on the highways of the country and in the streets of our cities.

"Especially does a constant toll of the lives of little children bring daily unhappiness in multitudes of homes.

"We urge that the laws be of commensurate severity and that their enforcement be strict. We would suggest as more important, however, that pastors take appropriate opportunity to urge upon the people of their communities a unified effort to secure voluntary restraint and considerations, both upon the part of pedestrians and drivers, and we wish to commend heartily all such efforts."

This action gains vivid meaning when one reads the figures recently compiled by the United States Department of Commerce showing the number of people killed by automobiles. During the year ending Aug. 13, 1927, no fewer than 6,993 men, women, and children lost their lives in motor casualties.

Because of the interest of the churches in the problem, Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches, has been invited to give an address on the subject at the meeting of the American Road Builders' Association in Cleveland on Jan. 10.

For tender grass so fresh, so sweet,
For song of bird and hum of bee,
For all things fair we hear or see.
For blue of stream and blue of sky,
For pleasant shade of branches high,
For fragrant air and cooling breeze,
For beauty of the blooming trees;
For mother-love and father-care,

For guidance lest we go astray,

For rest and shelter for the night,
For health and food, for love and friends,
For everything thy goodness sends—

ZONE MEETING, EDGERLY, LA.

The regular quarterly meeting of Zone No. 1, of the Lake Charles District, Woman's Missionary Society, was held in the church at Edgerly, La., Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 9.

The meeting opened with hymn, "Jesus Calls Us," zone leader, Mrs. S. C. Carroll, of Sulphur, presiding. Mrs. Campbell, of Edgerly, conducted the devotional exercises, followed with prayer by Rev. W. W. Perry.

Mrs. J. B. Mouton, of Sulphur, effectively sang, "Full Surrender." The playlet, "First Church Missionary Society," put on by the Vinton ladies, was thoroughly enjoyed, and reminded us as well of the ordinary little shortcomings in our own societies.

An open discussion on "Young People's Work" was entered into, and a letter read from Mrs. Cain, superintendent of this department of work.

The Candle Lighting service was most impressive. Miss Ola Mae Smith, of Vinton, softly played and sang, "Lead Kindly Light," after which each lady in turn, representing one of our missionaries, lighted her candle from the central candle.

The next zone meeting will be held in Vinton.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. W. Perry.

The hostess society served delicious refreshments to the visiting members from Vinton and Sulphur. Lake Arthur and Lake Charles Societies were absent on account of ferry conditions existing at present in Lake Charles.

MRS. L. JOHNSON,
Zone Secretary.

WAYNE COUNTY ZONE MEETING.

Zone No. 1, of the Meridian District, met in regular session, Nov. 2, at Waynesboro, with Mrs. W. A. Hays, zone leader, presiding.

The morning devotions were conducted by Rev. O. B. Matheny. After the welcome address by Mrs. W. R. Huggins, and response by Mrs. A. K. Randale, Mrs. Sadie Britton gave a splendid paper on, "Why We Need Mission Study Classes."

Mrs. Huggins read a paper paying tribute to the late Miss M. L. Gibson. Miss Thelma Odom sang very sweetly, "Carry Your Burdens to Jesus," and Mrs. Barnes read an interesting paper on, "Our Great Task in Home Missions." "The Purpose of All Missionary Activity" was given by Mrs. C. A. Massey; then a beautiful solo, "All the Way," was sung by Mrs. H. W. Webb.

After prayer by Rev. T. E. Nicholson, luncheon was served.

While we were enjoying the delicious lunch, a trio of young ladies gave delightful music, songs, and readings.

Mrs. Sigler conducted the afternoon devotions, and Miss Lillian Knobles, our missionary to China, told of her association with Miss M. L. Gibson and the inspiration of the personal touch of such a character, followed by Mrs. Massey's beautiful selection, "I Need Thee Eevry Hour." A paper on "Stewardship of Time and Personality" was read by Mrs. L. N. Knobles; Rev. W. A. Hays gave an inspiring address on "Loyalty," and a round table discussion on "The Purpose of Zone Meetings" was led by Miss Ada Grey.

Mrs. W. A. Hays was elected zone leader; Mrs. H. B. Graves, assistant leader; Mrs. A. K. Randale, zone secretary; and Mrs. Harry Batchelor, assistant secretary.

Resolutions expressing appreciation to the Waynesboro Society for their generous hospitality were adopted by a rising vote.

The next meeting will be held at State Line some time in March.

MRS. L. N. KNOBLES,
Zone Secretary.

ZONE MEETING AT CLINTON, LA.

On Oct. 27, 1927, at the Methodist church in Clinton, La., was held the third zone meeting of Zone No. 5, with a good representation from each auxiliary, St. Francisville, Jackson, Ethel, and Clinton. We also had with us members from other auxiliaries that are not in our zone. Mrs. E. W. Chaney, our zone leader, presided, and the following program was rendered:

Soft music; prayer by Rev. B. D. Watson; the devotional was led by Mrs. Brown; song, "Blessed Jesus;" prayer, Rev. J. H. Bowdon; welcome talk by Mrs. E. W. Chaney, in which she introduced to the congregation three State officers and some special guests—Mrs. H. N. Brown of Baton Rouge, our State rural worker; Mrs. L. A. Sims, of Hammond, our district secretary; Mrs. Johnson, zone leader of Hammond; Miss Ora Hooper, rural worker; Mrs. Peters, zone leader from Zachary; Mrs. Lipscomb, a Silliman graduate and worker in auxiliary at Hammond; Rev. A. K. McClellan, our State Dual Sunday school worker.

Minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved. Talk by Mrs. H. N. Brown, "Needs of Houma." Recognition service: Jackson, Mrs. J. G. Gayden, Jr.; Clinton, Mrs. E. W. Chaney; Ethel, Mrs. Hawsey; St. Francisville, Mrs. Riddle. Mrs. L. A. Sims gave a talk on the Missionary Societies of the small churches, in which she brought out the fact that it would be nice for the small churches from the country to come together and form circles with the Society of the largest church in that charge.

Mrs. I. G. Gayden, Jr., introduced Mrs. Niebergall, of St. Francisville, a sister-in-law of our State president.

I am pleased to report we are invited to hold our fourth zone meeting with Ethel some time in December, our "Baby Society," which is growing very rapidly.

Mrs. Chaney gave a very interesting talk on "The Co-operation and Prayers of Each Auxiliary;" violin solo by Mrs. I. G. Gayden, Jr., accompaniment, Mrs. V. T. Broach. Mrs. H. N. Brown

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Wanted: Some one to make an investment in the country churches of the Corinth District. Mr. E. M. Sharp, assistant extension secretary, needs a car that he may be able to reach the churches far from the railroad. It may be some one is able to furnish this young man with a car, or is willing to make a contribution toward buying one. Write me saying you will give a car or help buy one.

Mr. J. B. Reynolds, of Booneville, was placed on the Sunday School Board at the recent session of our Conference, and was made a member of the executive committee of the Board.

Remember, the fourth Sunday offerings should be sent to Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Grenada, Miss. We are to have an office at Grenada, with a secretary to handle the business of the Board. Every one knows this money should be sent the day after it is contributed. If every man should hold it to the last of the year, we would be forced out of business. The chairman of the missionary committee at Ackerman hands the treasurer of the Sunday school a blank check and has him to fill it out the day the money is contributed; the next day it goes to the Sunday School Board. That is sound business.

Rev. J. H. Holder, chairman of the Sunday School Board, has called a meeting of the Conference Sunday School Council, composed of the presiding elders, the executive committee of the Board, the employed workers of the Board, and the district superintendents, to meet at Grenada, Tuesday, Nov. 29. At this meeting we will make definite plans for the year, determine and accept our goals for institutes, training schools, missionary education, etc. The work planned at this meeting will affect every church in our territory.

Miss Agnes Hood, of Clarksdale, is the first to enroll as an individual student. She is taking the "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School." May we have 500 individual students during the year.

Rev. F. F. Coggins, of Cedar Bluff, is the first of the volunteer teachers to organize a Cokesbury class. He is using the text, "What Every Methodist Should Know." Let us have 100 such classes. May we begin early that we may reap the benefit of the study throughout the year.

Rev. H. R. McKee, a recent transfer from the Mississippi Conference, is at Hernando with his wife and five lovely girls. Brother McKee was a member of the Sunday School Board of our neighboring Conference, an accredited checker, and approved teacher of the "Small Sunday School." We are glad to have Brother McKee in the Sardis District, and we hope to have the benefit of his services.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, pastor at Belzoni, completed a modern building last year, and is beginning the new year by ordering six copies of the "Workers' Council;" two copies of "Training the Devotional Life;" eight copies of "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School;" two copies of "Melodies" for his Beginner and Primary departments, and has made a survey of his town, thus laying the foundation of a revival meeting. Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Tchula, is to do the preaching. Let us unite in prayer for a widespread, sweeping revival in Belzoni. Write Brother Bennett that you will pray for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon his people, and pray that the revival may spread over the Greenville District.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

At the request of several, I am submitting a combined report of all the work done during the Conference year by the Sunday School Board workers:

Two hundred and forty-one Sunday schools were visited personally by the workers; 710 Sunday schools were reached by Institutes, Training Schools, and other types of meetings. This means there were very few Sunday schools in the Conference unreached this last year.

The Conference Sunday School Board used, besides its own employed staff, at different times forty persons to aid in the work.

Sixty-eight Workers' Councils were organized during the year.

Two hundred and eighty-six Sunday schools promised to observe Missionary Day and send in the offerings.

Nine Sunday schools have been organized this year and nineteen have been reorganized.

Seventy-seven Programs of Work were placed this year, which is most gratifying.

Sixty Cokesbury Training Classes and Schools were organized and fifty-one of them held during the past year.

Eighty-five Programs of Work were checked this Conference year by your workers and a goodly number by others.

Ten Leadership classes organized and nine Standard Training Schools held this Conference year.

There were sixty-five different Sunday schools represented in these nine Standard Training Schools.

Three thousand five hundred and fifty-one Standard Leadership units of credit issued and 500 Cokesbury units, making a total of 4,051 units of credit issued this Conference year, which is by far the largest number of credits ever issued in our Conference.

The Cokesbury Training work is the next great advance. This work is actually reaching and making over the small Sunday schools. We have been able to furnish teachers for nearly every place asking for them. We are planning this coming year to furnish teachers for at least 100 schools.

We have six Standard "C" Type Sunday schools, and two Standard "B" Type Sunday schools. We also have nineteen Ranking Sunday schools.

Two hundred and forty-two Sunday schools contributed to missions through the Dual Extension work last year. We ought to have every Sunday school contributing.

Many of the Elementary Departments have obtained rank. Children's Week observance reports have come in better up to now than ever before, and we have received more definite reports than we have ever had.

The Calendar for next year has been adopted by the Board as follows:

Sunday School Calendar.

1. Evangelistic Campaign: January, February and March, closing by receiving members into the church Easter Sunday. Have the campaign two months preceding the revival.
2. Membership Campaign with an adequate survey, April, May and June.
3. Decision Day, to be held at the close of the Evangelistic campaign.
4. Sunday School Day the third Sunday in April, or as near thereto as possible.
5. Daily Vacation Church Schools to be promoted in June and July.
6. Conference-Wide Sunday School Conference, April 11 and 12, Hattiesburg, Miss.

9. Children's Week, any week in October.
10. Annual Check-Up Campaign the entire month of October.
11. Missionary Day, each fourth Sunday.
12. Clean-Up-Fix-Up-Day observed the latter part of September, or the first of October, getting ready for the winter months, and again in March or April, getting ready for the summer. In other words, two entire house cleanings a year.
13. Cokesbury Training Schools, June, July and August.
14. Workers' Council meeting each month, with 100 per cent attendance.

Sunday School Goals for 1927-1928.

1. 10 per cent increase in Sunday school enrollment.
2. Sunday School Day offering of $3,500.
3. 75 Children's Week observances.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On Sunday, the 13th instant, I visited the beautiful little city of Elizabeth, in response to an invitation from the pastor, Rev. H. B. Hines.

In the morning I visited the Sunday school, which is superintended by Brother W. W. Williams, and preached at the morning hour. Elizabeth has the morning church service at 10:30, and this gave us an opportunity to tune in on Dr. Goodrich's excellent sermon on "The Home," which was delivered at the 11 o'clock service in First Church at Shreveport.

In the afternoon I met with the Sunday school workers and checked the program of work. Elizabeth made a fine score on the program of worship, and is a splendid school. I had the pleasure of speaking to the congregation again at the evening service, and enjoyed the hospitality of the good people of the parsonage, also in the home of the Sunday school superintendent.

The Young People's Department of First Church in Alexandria recently enjoyed an unusually entertaining evening in the nature of a travelogue, visiting many countries, represented in various homes, where they were served native refreshments, listened to interesting programs, and received souvenirs of the countries visited. A large number of young people and their friends entered into the spirit of the evening to make it a huge success.

Miss Mary Brown, an active member and worker in the First Church Sunday school at Alexandria, was recently married to Mr. Eugene Lee Cargill, Jr., son of Rev. E. L. Cargill, of Cotton Valley, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Nettie Brown, of Alexandria. As this happy young couple will establish their home in Shreveport, we congratulate Shreveport Methodism upon the addition of Mrs. Cargill to church circles there.

* * *

The many friends of Miss Hazel Smith, daughter of Dean R. E. Smith, who was recently seriously injured in a fall, will be glad to learn that she is improving, although her condition is still regarded as serious.

* * *

Hon. T. W. Holloman, superintendent of the Sunday school at First Church, Alexandria, is in Washington City attending the flood control conference. The new educational building of First Church, where our State-wide conference will be held next spring, is progressing nicely, and as all of the outside walls are in place it begins to look like a real building.

* * *

We are glad to note that there is a possibility of having with us at our State-wide conference in the spring, Miss Mary Skinner, Elementary Superintendent, who is located at Nashville in the general office of our Sunday School Board. This is indeed gratifying news.

* * *

We call attention to the reports of Sunday school work that appear in the Conference issue of the Outlook, which is just off the press. Among these reports is a very fine one from the Elementary Department, of which Mrs. W. W. Holmes is superintendent, giving objectives of the departmental work and a summary for the year.

There is also a very fine report of the Enlarged Children's Week program conducted at Ruston, showing fine work along this line.

There are reports from various departments, and a good report from Brother A. K. McLellan, Dual Extension Secretary, showing splendid progress in his work for the year.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

FROM BOSSIER CITY, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: As we come nearer to the close of the Conference year, we are happy in having a good report to make. The Lord has led us in the accomplishment of worth while tasks.

The spiritual state of the church is good. We have had good attendance at preaching services through the year. Under God's gracious leadership, with the pastor as preacher and minister, we had a real revival with great crowds attending, resulting in many reconsecrations and twenty-six accessions to our church. To date, we have taken in fifty-eight new members, most of these on profession of faith. The church has been lifted to higher spiritual ground.

The Sunday school is also improving. We have several new teachers, some of these public school teachers, and four have earned credits in Standard Training School.

Our W. M. S. has grown from twenty to thirty-two in membership. Attendance and interest have been fine. Among other good things done by these good women this year is the payment of $400 balance of parsonage debt.

Our Senior Epworth League now has twenty-five members. They have splendid attendance and have done a fine work. We sent two delegates to the Mansfield Assembly, and the pastor, who was one of the instructors. Our Young People's revival was a success.

At the beginning of the year we raised the Missionary Freewill Offering, and made a liberal offering to our Orphanage. The pastor has secured Conference Claim pledges in full and all of the money is now on deposit in bank. We hope to pay out everything in full.

A very impressive recent event was the formal dedication of our parsonage home by Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder. We are now clear of debt on church building and parsonage and hope to become a self-sustaining church.

Our hearts are filled with praise and thanksgiving to the Lord, who leads us forward.

Fraternally,
DON E. DULANEY.

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD WORKER.

Dear Leaguers: I think I have just lots to tell you about in my letter to you this week for several reasons. I have just completed my itinerary in Alexandria District, which makes the fifth district that I have been over. I feel that I accomplished a great deal in this district, and I hope that the Leagues we visited gained help through our coming. I suppose you are wondering just whom I speak of when I say "we," so I'll tell you. I was very fortunate to have the District Secretary of this district, Mr. Winston Younger, make these trips to the different Leagues with me. In doing so we were able to make a survey of the district together, ascertaining just what the needs of the Leagues were and at the same time giving the Secretary an idea of how to follow up the work after I leave him. I appreciate the fact that all of our District Secretaries do not have the opportunity to do this, and I only wish that it could be made possible. I more than appreciate Mr. Younger's splendid and conscientious efforts to carry on the Epworth League work in this district. He is doing a wonderful work, and I pray that the Lord will bless him continually as he seeks to do his will.

We visited the following Leagues, some in joint programs, and almost all of them proved very successful: Opelousas, Bunkie, White's Chapel, Evergreen, Glenmora, Lecompte, Pleasant Hill, Robeline, Marthaville Pelican, Zion's Rest, Melder, Hineston, Oakdale, Boyce, Alexandria, and Pineville. I am sorry that I was not able to keep my appointment with the Leagues at Natchitoches and Montrose, but sickness prevented my making the trip. As Mr. Younger desires to make a report on the work done in the district, I will not discuss further what we accomplished. I do want to thank the pastors for their splendid co-operation, and urge the Leaguers to assist the pastors in their great program of church work.

I leave Alexandria tomorrow for Lake Charles District. While in this district I have spent most of my time in the home of our State President, Mr. Charles N. White. It has been a real treat for me to be in such a splendid Christian home and with such wonderful "folks." I wish that all of our Leaguers might have the opportunity of knowing "Charles" and his family better.

We are glad to report that our Social Service program of securing bed-tickings for the flood sufferers is coming just fine. We have already received bed-tickings from Natalbany, Minden, Sibley, Gilbert, Stonewall, Franklinton, Monroe and St. Mark's (New Orleans). If there are other Leagues with ticking ready to be sent in, let's not delay, because winter is here and we are anxious to make these families as comfortable as possible. Send your ticking, already sewed up and ready to be stuffed with moss, to your State president.

I want to take this opportunity of reminding the different Leagues of the nation-wide communion Sunday, to be held the 27th of November. We succeeded wonderfully with our Young People's Revivals, and I am sure that this beautiful celebration of the Lord's Supper will but be another way in which we may have a closer and more beautiful fellowship with him through our splendid young people. Look in your November Era for suggested program. Let us know in what manner you observed it.

I must make mention of an interesting letter received from Rev. P. O. Lowrey, in which he stated that his League had completed two interesting Mission Study books and were ready to begin a third one. I wish I could receive news like that every day. Brother Lowrey also sent one of his church bulletins, which I always enjoy reading.

In the meantime I hope to have more interesting news for you next week.

Remember your Field Worker.

HINDUISM, CHRISTIANITY, OR ATHEISM?

By Charles B. Hill, D.D., Educational Specialist, Ajmer, Rajputana, India.

I called on a Hindu gentleman professionally a few days ago. After transacting our business, this man who holds a high position under the Government said to me: "Padre! What do you think will have happened to Hinduism fifty years from now?"

Not having met him previously, I felt I had to be cautious in my reply, and said: "I presume Hinduism will reform herself from within as she has done before and thus adapt herself to the new conditions."

To this he replied: "I beg to differ with you. Fifty years hence, Hinduism will be practically extinct."

"Why are you so pessimistic?" I asked.

His answer was that Hinduism could never survive the light which science was giving to the world. "Moreover," he said, "every succeeding year finds Hinduism more powerless and impotent. My father was a liberal Hindu, for his day; but he dared not defy Hinduism, as I can do in my day." Then said he, with a significant look, "I am stronger than Hinduism."

That phrase, "I am stronger than Hnduism," expresses the attitude of the Intelligentsia of India at the present time. It does not at all mean that they are abandoning Hinduism for Christianity. Rather, does it mean they will become a people without religion, unless the Christian West sees to it, at this time of crisis, that we do not relax our ability to present Jesus Christ as the only hope of satisfying their hearts and their intellects.

I cannot take as optimistic view of the attitude of the Intelligentsia as some. I fear that discarding Hinduism, they are more likely to become atheists and materialists than Christians, hence, the need for more emphasis in presenting evangelical Christianity to them and for maintaining Christian schools.

IN DAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Women Prepared Their Own Medicines

The wise pioneer women learned to gather, in woods and fields, the remedies the Indian used. From the rafters of colonial houses, hung great bunches of dried roots and herbs. From these, in times of sickness, the busy mother brewed simple and powerful remedies.

From roots and herbs, Lydia E. Pinkham, a descendant of these sturdy pioneers, made her Vegetable Compound. The beneficial effects of this dependable medicine are vouched for by hundreds of women.

Mrs. Wm. Kraft of 2838 Vinewood Ave., Detroit, Mich., saw a Pinkham advertisement in the "News" one day and made up her mind that she would give the Compound a trial. At that time she was very weak. "After the first bottle," she writes, "I began to feel better and like a new woman after taking six bottles. I recommend it to others and always keep a bottle in the house."

Mrs. Gust Green of 401 Lincoln Park Boulevard, Rockford, Illinois, found herself in a condition similar to that of Mrs. Kraft. "I was weak and rundown," she writes, "but the Vegetable Compound has helped me and I feel better now. I recommend it to all women who need more strength."

AN ADVENTURE IN FELLOWSHIP BY YOUNG METHODISTS.

By Ina Corinne Brown.

Young Methodists are entering upon one of the most significant and challenging adventures that youth anywhere has ever undertaken. This is no "youth movement" seeking to throw off the restraint of older people, in a day of defiance of age and authority. Nor is it a crusade of "self-expression" in a day of license and unrestraint. Instead it is an adventure in comradeship with Christ and with their fellows, based on the experience of the Emmaus Way. Throughout the coming year Epworth Leaguers, North and South, will seek a growing acquaintance with Jesus Christ and a new comradeship with him. In the early spring there will begin a definite experiment in Christian living. This experiment will have a fivefold aim: To explore the possibilities of comradeship; to open the Bible as a book of life; to recognize Christ in every-day activities; to live a radiant life in comradeship with Jesus Christ, and to tell others the difference Christ makes.

During this experiment the Sunday evening devotional meetings will be given to a study of the teachings of Jesus and a discussion of their application to daily living. But it will not stop with study, for the Leaguers will go out week by week with the definite purpose of putting into practice, at home, at school, at work or play, these principles of Jesus, and living them in radiant comradeship with him. This adventure is far more than seeking the presence of Jesus in the hours of worship. It is the adventure of daily and hourly comradeship with him.

What a difference real comradeship with Christ will make in the lives of young Methodists! And what a difference this radiant living on the part of thousands of youths will make in our churches and communities! For when one is really living in comradeship with Christ, one needs must share life with others.

There is much inspiration in the fact that this experiment is shared with the youth of our sister Methodism. As a part of the adventure in comradeship with Christ and with each other, the youth of both churches will join in a corporate communion service on the Sunday of Nov. 27. There will be a period of study preceding the service in order that the full meaning of the sacrament may be understood. It is expected that in each church all the Epworth Leaguers—Seniors, Hi's and Juniors—will take communion together at a special service on that day. When has there been a youth movement so significant as this? Pastors and church leaders everywhere will wish to lend their encouragement and prayers to this adventure of Young Methodists.

UNEASY SLEEP

"Nerves Were All to Pieces," Says Lady Who Tells How Cardui Helped Her When She Was Run-Down.

Hopkins, S. C.—Mrs. G. W. Arrants, of this place, says:

"I was suffering from spells of weakness. These would come on me suddenly and I would have to give up and go to bed. For several months I did not sleep well at night and got no rest from sleep. I was very nervous. I could not bear the least noise. The children worried me. My nerves were all to pieces.

"I had taken Cardui several times before, so I sent at once for some and began to take it again. At the end of a short time I felt much better, so I kept right on taking Cardui. When I would feel a nervous spell coming on, I took it more frequently for a few days.

"I can certainly say Cardui helped me wonderfully, for after a time the nervousness disappeared entirely. I could sleep at night and my general health was better. My appetite picked up and I enjoyed my meals, too."

Thousands of other women have told of the benefit they have received from the use of Cardui. Keep it on hand, to take when needed.

A medicine of long-established merit; mild, harmless.

Her Hens Lay All Winter

Mrs. Smith tells how it's done

"My neighbors couldn't understand why I got eggs all winter and they didn't," writes Mrs. Nannie Smith, Perryville, Mo. Her explanation will interest all poultry raisers. She says:

"I was only getting 2 or 3 eggs a day from 36 hens. After using Don Sung, I got as high as 26 a day. Several of my neighbors have started using Don Sung since I showed them my eggs. In addition to laying well, my hens have been in good health ever since. My pullets had Don Sung and laid good all fall—better at their age than any pullets I ever had."

Don Sung, the Chinese egg laying tablets which Mrs. Smith used, are opening the eyes of chicken raisers all over America. The tablets can be obtained from the Burrell-Dugger Co., 232 Allen St., Indianapolis, Ind. Poultry raisers whose hens are not laying well should send 50 cents for a trial package (or $1 for the extra large size, holding three times as much). Don Sung is positively guaranteed to do the work or money promptly refunded, so it costs nothing to try. Right now is the time to start giving Don Sung to your hens, so you will have a good supply of fresh eggs all winter.

MOTHER!

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

UNSELFISHNESS.

Unselfishness may be one of the rarest of virtues, but it certainly is one of the most beautiful. The life that is adorned by it shines in the earth like a star of the first magnitude in the sky at night. It is one virtue the claiming of which is always and inevitably subjected to the test of daily action; and it is such a virtue that its profession almost surely suggests its lack.

It is essentially a Christian virtue, and it is most becoming in those who bear the name of Christ. The manifestation of a spirit of self-seeking is an open contradiction of the spirit of unselfishness. There are those who seek for themselves positions of honor and places of emolument; they do well if it is the passion of their lives to serve others; they do ill if they seek honor for themselves and a larger portion of this world's goods that they may minister more fully to their own pleasures. Why does a man want office, a more important position, a larger salary? He will answer, "Because I deserve the place and because I need the money." Both may be true—and yet both may be utterly selfish.

Christ came not to be ministered unto—either by himself or by others—but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. He "emptied himself"—and thereby proved himself the Son of God. A selfish Christ could not have saved a sinful world.

A selfish man may serve himself—others he cannot according to the pattern of the Master.

SCHOOL DISCIPLINE.

We have an idea that the fathers and mothers of students are becoming somewhat weary of a system of school discipline that throws no restrictions whatever about the conduct of their immature sons and daughters and that leaves the administration of such discipline as is administered largely in the hands of the students themselves. We believe a great many parents are looking for schools where they can send their children with some assurance that the school authorities will impose and enforce certain reasonable restrictions with regard to such things, for example, as absence from the campus at night, especially for the younger students, and that will require such a standard of conduct on and off the campus as will not bring reproach upon the school itself or the homes from which the students come. They are looking, too, for schools that will not permit any form of hazing that is painful, embarrassing, or humiliating, and that will not tolerate forms of disorder that, unfortunately, have come to be associated with modern college life. Parents do not want their children to be deprived of any of their "rights;" but they do not want the school authorities to forget that they themselves, as parents, have rights that are just as sacred as any their children possess, and they want those rights respected also.

After some years of experience and careful observation, we are of the opinion that what is called "student government" has reached a point far beyond what was in mind when it was instituted, and that it has assumed proportions that are not helpful either to the schools or to the students themselves. We are further of the opinion that many of the serious-minded students of our institutions of learning are themselves calling in question the wisdom of the present system of disciplinary administration, and they are ready to give full co-operation to any earnest effort to bring about readjustments that will insure the observance of wholesome regulations.

The recent action of the authorities of one of our State institutions in dismissing several students for violation of the rule against hazing has, we believe, done more than anything else in recent years to command the respect and gain the approval of patrons and citizens of the State generally; and not less encouraging is the failure to materilize of the "student strike" that sensational reports indicated might result from the action of the authorities.

What we have just said applies to all schools, church and State; but it has special significance as applied to church schools. It cannot be too emphatically said that there can be no justification for the existence of the church school if it does not furnish something that the State school does not furnish. The church school cannot surpass the State school in resources, equipment, faculty, curriculum, or anything else of the purely educational apparatus; the only thing it can furnish in addition is a religious atmosphere and a definitely religious spirit that will tend to make Christians as well as scholars. If it does not furnish that, it has no right to exist.

To be a little more definite: If the educational institutions owned and administered by the Methodist Church are not carrying on the educational process from a distinctly religious motive, in a distinctly religious atmosphere, with a definite religious aim, the millions of dollars invested in them have been little better than wasted. A definite regard for the religious life of its students is the only thing that can differentiate an a-grade church school from an a-grade State school; if it has not that, it has no reason for being.

We believe our church schools are largely fulfilling their mission. If they are not fulfilling it, they can be made to do so. The church, therefore, has no greater duty to perform than the adequate support of its educational institutions.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

The present educational requirement for admission on trial in the traveling connection of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is that the candidate shall have completed at least a high school course, or its equivalent. By action of the Memphis General Conference, that requirement has been raised to at least two years of a standard college course, this requirement to become effective in 1928. Provision is made, however, that in extraordinary cases the Conference, by a two-thirds vote, may admit a candidate who does not meet the educational requirement. There are cases that are extraordinary, and it is a wise proviso that enables the Conference to take cognizance of such cases; but such cases are rare, and the Conference is wise that takes advantage of the proviso only when not to do so would be manifestly to act against the best interests of the church. Mighty few men ought to be admitted under the two-thirds rule.

THE RED CROSS ROLL CALL.

Every year the American Red Cross undertakes to provide funds for its normal activities by a "roll call"—the enlistment of those who are willing to contribute the sum of one dollar to its work. This roll call is now in progress. At all times there should be cheerful willingness to contribute to this great organization; but especially should the people of this section of the South be glad this year to enroll in view of the magnificent service rendered by the Red Cross during the overflow. At a time when sufficient relief funds could not have been quickly obtained elsewhere, the Red Cross supplied millions of dollars for immediate needs; and then it supplied other millions for the longer period of maintenance and rehabilitation without which the disaster would have been immeasurably greater. One dollar is a small sum to pay to insure immediate relief in times of great calamity.

AUTUMN MEDITATIONS.

By Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb.

All alone with my thoughts to-day,
While outside is the drip, drip of the rain,
And the autumn wind sighs mournfully
Like a human soul in pain.

The yellow leaves come fluttering down
Like millions of butterflies,
Leaving the old limbs bare and brown
Beneath the gloomy skies.

All alone—and yet not alone,
For memories of the long ago
Come stealing into my lonely heart,
Bringing friends I used to know.

Many of these have flown away,
And their places are hard to fill;
But like the fragrance of roses,
Their influence lingers still.

All alone—and yet not lonely,
For my book friends are with me yet;
They take me o'er the wide, wide world,
And my heartaches I forget.

Alone—and yet there is a Friend,
And unseen friend who lingers near;
When clouds are dark and lowering
He whispers softly words of cheer.

THE WORK OF "REAL GOOD SAMARITANS."

By Dr. Charles C. Selecman, President, Southern Methodist University.

The youngest of the nations that have arisen since Christ spoke his new commandment of love is ministering through the Near East Relief in Greece, Syria, Palestine, and Egypt to thousands of children rendered homeless by the recent war and the repeated atrocities of the Turks. The work of feeding them, clothing them, fighting epidemics that attack them and, above all, helping them to re-establish themselves in society as self-supporting individuals, as I saw it, is proceeding upon a basis of Christian charity and good sense that commends itself to the observer. My journeys to Lausanne and following the conference brought me into touch with several of the leaders of the Near East—Gordon Berry, of Paris; Davidson, of Cairo and Alexandria; Blatchford, of Jerusalem, and Brown and Muntzler, of Beirut.

At Lausanne a Near East Relief luncheon held in connection with the World Conference on Faith and Order brought together many prominent individuals, such as Bishop Charles H. Brent, Dr. W. W. Peet, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and Dr. Hamilcar Alivosatos. General Secretary Charles V. Vickrey and Rev. John R. Voris, Associate Secretary, were also present at this luncheon. The expressions from the representatives of the ancient Eastern churches were especially interesting to those of us who have been working in America to send relief to those stricken people. Dr. Alivosatos, of Greece, characterized the work as that of "real good Samaritans from the other side of the Atlantic, who have run as quickly as possible to help during the unique catastrophe of our days." He declared that thousands and thousands of people have been saved out of the terrible catastrophe in Asia Minor, especially young boys and girls rescued not only from danger that menaced their lives, but from dangers that menaced their souls.

Bishop Brent, President of the World Conference on Faith and Order, characterized the Near East Relief as "co-operation by the Western churches with the Eastern churches." Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who has frequently visited the Near East, declared that there is special reason for believing that the work can be materially aided through the observance of Golden Rule Sunday, which carries imbedded in its very name the basal thought of Near East Relief. He suggested that the world's need justifies the great effort to develop a permanent Golden Rule organization which will furnish the machinery to investigate the facts as to needy children throughout the world, in order that aid may be properly and wisely distributed.

Our first visit to a Near East Relief center was in Cairo, where, in company with Mr. Davidson, of Ashland, Ky., who supervises the older boys who have recently "graduated" from the orphanages, I went to the Working Boys' Home. "Do not refer to the fact that they are orphans," said Mr. Davidson just before introducing me; "we are trying to help them forget." On our arrival the boys' band of some thirty pieces welcomed us by playing a number of selections, closing with "America," and then we were invited to speak to them. One of the boys then asked the privilege of making a response. "We love the American flag," he said, "because it means life and liberty and food and a chance to work." We caught a glimpse of their clean sleeping quarters, their kitchen and dining rooms, and felt a sense of gratification that some of our vast American wealth is being used to salvage these brown-eyed, black-haired boys and girls of the Near East.

Traveling on to Palestine, we visited the Home in Nazareth, situated on a hill overlooking the city in which Jesus was brought up. From this hill one can also see Mount Taber, Gilboa, and the valley of Esdraelon.

At Antilyas, near Beirut, 500 splendid boys are being housed, taught, and trained for usefulness in society. They are learning trades, such as blacksmithing, tinsmithing, shoemaking, tailoring, cabinet making, sign painting, etc. They also have a bakery, very clean and modern in appearance.

A short distance from Beirut, up in the foothills, is Ghazir. Here 350 girls are making beautiful Oriental rugs. One hundred of these are blind girls, one without hands, but all are industrious, and seem to be healthy and happy. Dr. Kunzler, formerly a Swiss missionary at Urfa, who supervises this work, rather surprised us by saying that he needed to find husbands for his girls.

Returning from Ghazir, Dr. Voris, who was with us in Beirut, pointed out the refugee camps in which many thousands of Armenians are huddled together in impoverished dwelling places under conditions of extreme poverty and wretchedness. From these refugee camps numerous undernourished children have to be taken from month to month to such places as the Birds' Nest Orphanage at ancient Sidon, where we saw 500 smaller children, from mere infants up to six or seven years of age. Some of them that were recently taken from refugee camps are pitiable little objects of famine, but we are told that they respond quickly to careful nursing and scientific diet and become healthy and strong again.

The constructive program of the Near East Relief should certainly be contined until these little children are ready for self-support.

THE TRUTH ABOUT HYMNS.

By Allan F. Godat.

Dear Brother Carley: In the Advocate for Nov. 10, you copy from "The Kings' Business" an article on the hymn, "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," that would be more interesting if true. In the "Hymns and Hymn Writers of the Church," commonly known as the "Annotated Hymnal," by Dr. Nutter and Dr Tillett, the story is quoted substantially as in "The King's Business," but they say:

"This cannot be true. The author became blind at the age of fifteen; he was forty years old when he wrote the hymn. Dr. Matheson's own account of the composition of this hymn is very interesting, and is as follows: 'My hymn was composed in the manse of Inellan on the evening of June 6, 1882. It was the day of my sister's marriage, and the rest of the family were staying overnight in Glasgow. Something had happened to me which was known only to myself, and which caused me the most severe mental suffering. It was the quickest bit of work I ever did in my life. I had the impression rather of having it dictated to me by some inward voice than of working it out myself.' Life of George Matheson, by D. McMillan."

No one should have known better than Dr. Matheson himself, why, and when, and where he wrote the hymn. Apocryphal stories of popular hymns are always current. Some time since, I read in one of our church papers a really helpful article on Cardinal Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light." It referred to him as a young man in his early twenties when he wrote it, and made much of such a young man's seeking guidance through the uncertainties of life. Newman said that he wrote the hymn in 1833, when he was thirty-two years of age.

I once heard a Methodist preacher, who added "D.D." to his name, give the origin of "Rock of Ages," about as follows: "Two little children were walking through a railroad tunnel. Suddenly, to their dismay, they saw an approaching train. There seemed to be no way of escape. Glancing around, however, one of them saw a cleft in the rock at the side of the tunnel, and they both crawled into it and hid until the train passed by. So impressed was the poet who heard of the incident that he seized his pen and wrote,

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee.'"

This hymn was first published in 1776, and Toplady died nearly fifty years before Stephenson ran his first locomotive in England. Moral: Every Methodist should have a copy of the Annotated Hymnal, and read it.

But the hymn's the thing. However interesting these hymn myths or hymn histories may be, they are less important than the hymns themselves. "The King's Business," therefore performed a real service in publishing this article, and the Advocate did no less in reproducing it. We do not use our hymn books as we should, and therefore miss very much that we can get from them. They contain the quintessence of religion. Our hymns, even those that are not of the first order, voice the highest spiritual experiences and aspirations of their writers, and the only price we have to pay for them is the labor of hearing them, reading, marking, learning and inwardly digesting them. This and other great hymns should be committed to memory, not merely that we may join in the singing of them when a hymn book is not at hand, but that we may think upon them in our quiet moments, and make them the expression of our own thoughts and prayers and aspirations. We can make the hymns our own, and feel that they are just what we, ourselves, would have written, if we possessed the necessary talents.

"O Love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee;

* * * * * * * *

"Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom, Lead thou me on;

"So long thy power hath blest me, sure it still
Will lead me on
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone."

* * * * * * * *

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

* * * * * * * *

"Jesus, Lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

* * * * * * * *

Next to the Bible, the Hymnal is the book for spiritual culture.

REV. CHARLES PRESTON MOSS.

The subject of this sketch was born at Byhalia, Miss., Sept. 12, 1867, and was translated from the Methodist Hospital, in Memphis, Tenn., at 1:30 o'clock, Friday morning, Oct. 14, 1927. He was the son of Rev. John W. Moss and Jane Brooks Moss. His father was a member of the Memphis Annual Conference and was presiding elder of the Memphis District at the time of his death in 1877. Charles P. attended the school in Byhalia, and after finishing there he graduated from the Agricultural and Mechanical College in Starkville, Miss.

In May, 1894, he was happily married to Miss Lula Weaver, of Byhalia. To this union three sons were born, A. A. Moss, William Worsham Moss and Thomas W. Moss. On Oct. 30, 1913, William Worsham was called home.

Brother Moss, having been reared in a Methodist parsonage and being the son of a prominent Methodist preacher, had his attention directed to the ministry in his early life. He was converted in September, 1894, and was licensed to preach on May 3, 1895. At the session of the North Mississippi Conference the same year, Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald presiding, he was admitted on trial. After serving two years in this relation, he was admitted into full connection and ordained by Bishop A. W. Wilson, at Oxford, Miss., in 1897. He finished his prescribed course in two years, and was ordained elder by Bishop W. A. Candler in Greenwood, Miss., in 1899.

He served the following charges, the numbers indicating calendar years: Eureka circuit, 1896-7; Ashland, circuit, 1898; Nesbitt circuit, 1899; Arkabutla circuit, 1900-1-2-3; Shannon circuit, 1904-5; Carrollton, 1906-7; Batesville, 1908-9; Durant, 1910-11-12-13; Iuka, 1914; he was transferred to the Florida Conference after the adjournment of the North Mississippi Conference, where he served the year of 1915, but was transferred back to the North Mississippi Conference at the meeting of its session that fall. He was then stationed at Tchula, where he served 1916-17; Shaw, 1918-19; Friars Point, 1920-21-22; Tutwiler, 1923-24-25; Duncan and Alligator, 1926-27. From there he was appointed to his home in the skies.

This is an outline of the life work of our departed friend and brother. But no brief historical sketch can give an account of the good he did while here on earth, and the influence of his life after he has gone. In order to get a full etimate of his ministry, we would have to summon multitudes of both living and dead whose lives have been touched by this faithful servant of the Master. He was indeed a true shepherd of the flocks that he was appointed to serve. He went through heat and storm, sleet and snow, night and day, to cheer the distressed, visit the sick, bury the dead and comfort the bereaved. All this was done without the hope of any earthly reward, save the satisfaction of knowing he had the approval of the Father in heaven. For the sake of the kingdom and those committed to his care, he and his faithful wife bore the hardships of the itineracy without murmur or complaint. For the first ten years of his ministry, he received on an average less than $400 salary per year. With this, he had to support himself, feed and clothe a growing family, besides the additional expense of keeping up a buggy and horse with which to travel his circuits. All this he did without going in debt. This was poor pay in this world's goods, but he was laying up treasures in the glory world.

Brother Moss was a preacher of the old type. He had made a careful study of the doctrines of our church, and his very soul was saturated with the spirit of Methodism. Some of his favorite themes were repentance, justification by faith, regeneration and the witness of the Spirit. He accepted the Bible as the Word of God, and proclaimed its truth with the certainty and authority of a prophet. He believed that the Gospel of Jesus Christ was the power unto salvation to every one that believeth. Feeling that he had been commissioned from heaven, for thirty-two years he preached this gospel to dying men and women, convicting sinners, converting mourners and strengthening the faith of the children of God.

Brother Moss was a man of pronounced opinions and had the courage of his convictions. It seems that he had not learned the meaning of the word "duplicity," as no one ever had occasion to doubt where he stood on any question or issue. He knew what he believed, and knew why he believed it, and was ready to defend these principles at any time or place. While he was very positive in his assertions, he did not let the differences of opinion affect his personal relation to others. Beneath the rugged exterior there was a sympathetic heart, which was charitable towards the weaknesses of his fellow-creatures. No one was ever too low or too vile for him to lend a helping hand. He saw in the fallen the image of the Master which had been blurred by sin, and as an ambassador of God, he felt that it was his duty to rescue him.

The relation of this writer to Brother Moss was intimate and sacred. As brother pastor, and presiding elder, it was my privilege frequently to visit the home. Greater devotion between husband and wife and parents and children I have never seen. It was a great privilege to accept his hospitality. He never failed to perform any service that duty called upon him to discharge out of the bounds of his own charge. During the days of the Centenary campaign in the Greenville District, he traveled from one end to the other of that territory, making speeches in the interest of the cause.

Several times in the past, Brother Moss experienced bad health. While he was stationed at Tutwiler, he had a slight stroke of apoplexy which warned him that the end might be near. While these symptoms disappeared for the time, he discussed his physical and spiritual condition with this writer. He expressed no fears at the thought of an early departure, since he had committed his all to Christ, and could say with the Apostle Paul, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."

At the close of one of the most pleasant years of his ministerial life, and after his fourth quarterly conference had passed resolutions unanimously asking for his return, he became suddenly ill on Oct. 13, and was rushed to the Methodist Hospital by his physician. He was advised there that an operation would be necessary the next day. The physicians left him in a jolly mood when they retired. But he aroused his wife at 1:30 and asked that the windows be raised to give him air, but he told the nurse that was the end, and then breathed his last.

The funeral services were conducted by his friend and presiding elder, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, and his brother pastor, Rev. J. W. Robertson, in Memphis, and the remains were laid to rest at Byhalia,, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 16.

Besides his faithful wife, Mrs. Lula B. Moss, and two sons, Mr. A. A. Moss, of Brasfield, Ark., and Thomas W. Moss, of Shaw, Miss., he is survived by the following named brothers and sisters: Mr. John Moss, who is practicing law in Stevensville, Tex.; the Rev. Will Moss, who is pastor of the Methodist church in Hamilton, Tex.; Mr. Earnest Moss, of Whitehaven, Tenn.; Miss Minnie E. Moss and Miss Lula A. Moss, of Memphis, Tenn.

We commend the bereaved to our loving Heavenly Father, and pray that God may sustain them with his grace and bring them together in an unbroken family in the home above.

"What is death? Oh! what is death?
'Tis slumber to the weary;
'Tis rest to the forlorn;
'Tis shelter to the dreary;
'Tis peace amid the storm;
'Tis the entrance to our home;
'Tis the passage to that God
Who bids his children come
When their weary course is trod."

DEAN BROWN'S NEW BOOK.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have just finished reading for the third time Dean Charles R. Brown's great new book, "The Making of a Minister." How I wish I could have had this book during the first year of my ministry! I feel sure that many of the mistakes and blunders that I have made would have been cautiously avoided, and my costly tuition in the fool's school of experience would have been greatly reduced. I am forced to shed tears of joy when the great problems of my ministry are so quietly, yet so actually, solved as I peruse the counselling pages of this valuable book.

In "The Making of a Minister," Dean Brown has made a contribution beyond estimate to the young ministers of America. It is not a far-fetched, hypothetical discussion of the theoretics of preachings; it is "straight-forward advice based on personal experience." It contains the words of a veteran addressed to recruits. In reading it, one is made to think of Paul writing to Timothy. That same sympathetic understanding and tender counsel that characterized the great Apostle's letters to his "son in the gospel" permeate every paragraph of this book. Its frequent mention of persons of to-day and current events gives it the tone of a personal epistle. The great Dean discusses from a practical standpoint every phase of a minister's life and work. Some of the chapter headings are as follows: "The Making of a Minister;" "His Source of Power;" "The Minister and His Church;" "The Minister Among Men;" "The Minister with the Children;" "Pastoral Calling;" "Weddings;" "Funerals;" "The Minister's Wife;" "His Money;" "The Modern Minister and His Lord."

Every young minister—and the older ones, too—would profit by a careful study of this book. It may be had from our Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., for two dollars; and no minister will ever regret spending this small amount for it.

During the second quarter of 1927, 221 patients were treated in the hospital at Tunda Station, in the Belgian Congo, of whom 137 were dismissed as cured and thirty much benefited.

THE MEMPHIS CONFERENCE.

The eighty-eighth session of the Memphis Conference has just adjourned. It was held at Galloway Memorial Church, Memphis, one of the strong suburban churches of that growing city. Bishop DuBose presided. His work as President of the Conference is giving universal satisfaction. Of course not every appointment meets universal approval, but everybody accepts the good Bishop's administration as the expression of sincerity and good will.

More than 4,000 additions were reported, although the net gain was a little over 1,200. Some brethren have a mania for pruning the rolls.

We had a large number of visitors—Drs. Webdell and Todd, of St. Louis; Dr. Frank Brandon, Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Dr. Hal Spragins, Rev. C. N. Terry, Rev. J. R. Nelson, and some others.

The evening hours were taken up by the various Boards. I wonder if we can't make a better arrangement by having more gospel sermons preached. The writer heard only one sermon, but he heard a number of good speeches on various subjects. If we are falling down anywhere, it is at the point of evangelism. We are emphasizing the importance of an educated leadership, and I agree most cordially with this idea; but I do not believe that intellectual preparation is the most important need of our leadership, either for our ministers or our laymen. We must emphasize the spiritual preparation and equipment of these leaders or we will lose our places as leaders. A great sermon, born of much prayer and study and experience, will do more good than any address or any one of the many connectional and Conference interests we may present. What our people need most of all is religion. They have been instructed, but they won't do as well as they know.

The next session is to be held in Broadway Church, Paducah. Lambuth College is doing splendidly, and our hospital at Memphis is rendering a great service.

T. W. LEWIS.

FROM THE PELCAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

There are presiding elders and presiding elders, and then Dr. W. W. Holmes. The brethren irreverently call him "Billy." While not in keeping with the dignity of his office as sub-bishop, the familiar title is a compliment, and signifies his brotherliness. And it fits him. He is level-headed, painstaking, and industrious; keeps his eye on all the details of his district; and does not overlook the superannuates. He recently secured railroad passes for the superannuates to attend Conference. These passes were sent him by Mr. Ollie B. Webb, assistant to the president of the Texas and Pacific Railroad, who paid a high tribute in his letter to the "splendid old soldiers of the Cross," whom he was glad to help. Naturally, we old "forgotten men" love "Billy," and appreciate the courtesy of Mr. Webb.

Dr. Holmes recently called a meeting in Shreveport of all the preachers of his district and their wives—mark that! After an informal session in which reports were made about the work, which seemed to be in a good state of prosperity, we were all entertained at a luncheon, served in the dining room of the First Church. It was a chicken pie dinner, which was especially fitting for Methodist preachers, who gave full support to the general opinion that they love chickens. We all thought that whoever made that chicken pie understands the art. It was so good that some of us would really have liked a second helping; but, of course, it would not have been good manners to ask for it. Several after-dinner speeches were made, and good fellowship prevailed all around.

A brother who sat near me (I will not involve him in possible trouble by telling his name) suggested, sotto voce, that we take up a collection to get Bishop Candler an "Episcopal ring," like the one the Mississippi Conference gave Bishop DuBose lately. As my cash was scant, I hesitated to propose it, and his nerve failed him; but we must do something for our Bishop that will keep him in style. Episcopal "rings!" What comes after the ring? A vest worn backside in front and a reversed collar? A crucifix suspended by a gold chain? We'll have to study up along this line. I for one don't intend to be ignorant of these modern ways. I am going to keep up with the procession if I have to trot.

We may have to remind some of the hierarchy of their origin. I was once with Sam Jones in a meeting in Kentucky. There were a great many Christians in the community, and Jones referred to one group of them as Campbellites. This offended them, and they wrote to Jones demanding an apology. This was his apology: "Down in Georgia there is a neighborhood where a man lives who has a trained jackass. He has taught the long-eared little animal to go to mill for him by himself. He puts a bag of corn on the donkey's back, leads him out to the road, points towards the mill, and lets him go. The miller understands it, grinds the corn, puts the bag back on the ass, heads him toward home, and he jogs along to the front gate and brays to let them come and unload him. One day a Negro driving a mule to his buggy met the donkey in the road. The mule was frightened, and it was all the Negro could do to keep him from running away. After the donkey passed, he let in on his mule, and beat him unmercifully, saying: 'You fool, I'll teach you how to be ashamed of your daddy!'" The "Campbellites" had nothing more to say. "Episcopal ring!" Here we go. Good-by Jimmy.

SOME INTERNATIONAL PEACE TENDENCIES IN 1927.

By William C. Allen.

European currencies are gradually becoming more stabilized. Production in Europe is slowly increasing. A more kindly public opinion regarding tariffs and debts is noticeable. Such an economic and financial situation should make for a self-interest that will tend to deprecate resort to war. Big business, excepting dividend-seeking armament and munition concerns, want peace. The Department of Commerce of the United States reports that our net tourist expenditures in 1926 fell only $42,000,000 short of our interest receipts from abroad. Europe, to-day and in the future, will want our tourist money, and we will want our interest returns on foreign investments. This situation constitutes another valid reason for all hands being internationally good. There has been a great increase of American investments abroad. These loans assist in the rehabilitation of Europe. It is stated that the close of 1926, foreign deposits in American banks aggregated $1,443,000,000, and that foreigners also had on deposit with American agents, stocks and bonds of the United States amounting to $1,878,000,000. Such finnacial conditions, outside of moral considerations, should at home and abroad create a demad for the maintenance of peace.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has recently donated $1,750,000 to the University of California for the erection of a dormitory to accommodate 500 men and women students. Provision will be made for 300 foreign students from numerous countries, the balance to be residents of the United States. This "International house" is intended to promote world friendship. Its possibilities are great.

Many college young people's groups have this year observed "Goodwill Sunday." They have emphasized "the need of sympathetc understanding between racial and national groups, and the desire of American youth to live at peace with their fellows." In May eleven universities sent delegates to a convention held at Syracuse University. Dr. William E. Lingelbach, when addressing the 1927 graduating class of the University of Pennsylvania, asserted: "The movement to outlaw war is growing rapidly . . . through sheer force of economic necessity. What is needed is conscientious and intelligent citizenship." Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, President of Stanford University, devoted his 1927 commencement address to Pacific and far-eastern relations. In conclusion he said: "Certainly future generations will not be justified in forgiving us unless we make a gallant attempt to solve the difficulties of the Pacific. We shall call upon the youth of America for that vision, without which we perish."

The doll friendship mission to Japan proved to be a great success. Tokyo dolls sent by the children of America were received in the big theatre. The Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, the American Ambassador, a Japanese child and an American child made the principal addresses.

The Institute of Pacific Relations, held in Honolulu during the summer of 1927, attended by eminent representatives from many countries surrounding the Pacific Ocean, was untrammeled by diplomats. It succeeded in enlarging mutual understanding in that dangerous political economic area. It developed a feeling of friendliness between Asia, America, Australia and New Zealand.

Goodwill organizations throughout the world during the past year have received much consideration. Possibly our own free country, which relatively knows so little of the meaning of war, has in some unhappy instances proved the exception. In the larger countries war-resisters' unions have secured hundreds of thousands of pledges not to participate in warfare or preparation therefor.

The League of Nations has been pushing a propaganda against armaments. It is developing a wide international co-ordination in many ways. Whilst the United States Government does not officially recognize the League, twenty commissions and committees from our country, official or otherwise, have increasingly been influencing its deliberations and policies.

As more is understood about war, its conduct and futility, our jingoes and pacificists are doing some very hard thinking. Day by day during the great war, $215,000,000 each day was destroyed. Day by day members of the different denominations drove their bayonets into the hearts of the boys of their own religious fellowship, urged on by propaganda, much of which has since proved to be false. Improved means of destruction—gas, bombs, submarines, airplanes, machine guns—mean that in another conflict countless millions of men, women and children, mostly innocent, must go down in starvaton, hatreds and ruin. These things frighten men and women as they reflect upon their obligations to civilization and to their own national life. These considerations are creating a demand for the application of judicial or arbitral—in other words, Christian—substitutes for force.

Protests with respect to some of our Latin-American relations, by church and secular papers throughout the United States, have been increasing. The clouding of some of the real issues involved in despatches supporting some of these policies, including new efforts to coerce Mexico—now we may hope to be happily terminated by the recent appointment of a wise ambassador to that country—have all pointed to an awakening international conscience in the United States. There is a tendency to a similar reaction as to the possible injustices connected with what is called imperialism among secular and church groups in England.

Not a few leading church papers of the United States are attacking efforts in our country to militarize our high schools. To illustrate: Dr. Hough, the noted Methodist minister of Detroit, is quoted by the Western Christian Advocate as follows: "Before the war less than 200 officers were engaged in giving military training in our schools. Now there are nearly 2,000. . . . Germany, in its most belligerent days, never gave military training to the boys corresponding to those in our high schools." An increasing anxiety on the part of church leaders of the United States regarding the psychological effect of military training in our schools, upon our national life and the peace of the world, is significant.

The Christian churches of America have been more fully realizing that wars have been neutralizing missionary effort. The feeling is intensified that church bodies must insist that their home government treat non-Christian countries better or the churches will be compelled to withdraw their missionaries from some of the fields they have occupied for many years.

The "Catholic Association for International Peace," with headquarters at Washington, D. C., has this year been organized. Leading clergy and laymen have accepted offices in the new organization. Many Protestant annual meetings have adopted stringent resolutions against sowing the greedy, economic seeds of war, and declaring as to its non-Christianity. The "World Alliance for the Promotion of International Friendship Through the Churches" now has representatives from thirty-one different countries. Leaders of religious thought everywhere are earnest in supporting it. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is successfully pushing the spirit of goodwill at home and abroad.

That leading non-conformist preacher of England, Dr. F. W. Norwood, during 1927, concluded a six months' tour on behalf of peace, in England. He addressed hundreds of meetings. He has reported: "I certainly found a far more responsive public than I had anticipated. . . . The churches are the hope of the peace movement. As religion declines, peace will recede." At his meetings business and church people, army and navy leaders, and many others, joined in forwarding the great cause. Lord mayors and mayors presided at many of these large gatherings.

At the 1927 International Christian Endeavor Convention the President, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, stressed the crusade for peace. In part he declared: "We have tried the way of fear and crime. We have placed our trust in selfish appliances . . . we have learned that Edith Cavell was right, "Patriotism is not enough.' 'I am the way' (the way of Jesus) remains the only alternative."

I have endeavored to indicate how some peace straws are blowing again the whirlwind of military propaganda and development that threatens us. Beyond all economic, physical or political considerations is the outstanding question of the violation of the Gospel of Love promulgated by our Lord. Material arguments cannot meet this larger issue. Shall Christians continue blindly to follow the call of men who, free from personal danger, create political or economic conditions tending to maneuver nations into mutual carnage? Who will courageously tell of the futility of modern warfare? Who will bravely follow the way of Christ? Who will join in the great adventure?

THE LEPERS' CHRISTMAS.

Christmas makes the whole world kin. It is the time when barriers of class and creed and country break down. It is then that we understand more clearly the meaning of the angel's song of "good will" to all mankind. It is peculiarly a time when our sympathies go out to the poor and the sick and the helpless. There can be no group or class anywhere who needs Christmas cheer quite so much as the lepers of the world, of whom there are over two million.

The American Mission to Lepers is supporting work in eighteen different countries in over one hundred centers and leper colonies—including the United States—treating in hospitals and sanitariums about 20,000 patients, besides caring for an immense number of out-patients.

It is performing the modern miracle of healing the horrible disease of leprosy—and thousands have already been cured. The disease may be practically eradicated in a single generation.

But the cultured men and women who have enlisted in this service, becoming exiles among those whose physical and mental condition is almost unbelievable, have ahead of them a task which will require almost super-human effort and personal devotion. At no season of the year is the depression of their task quite so strong as at Christmas time—but this is caused mainly by the poverty-stricken condition and joylessness of those whom they are serving. They have so little with which to make Christmas real.

And so we are appealing to Americans to help make Christmas Day a time of rejoicing for people who almost continuously live in darkness.

Please send a Christmas gift so that our superintendent may buy in bulk, without carrying charges or loss, presents suitable to the climate and the patients' personal need. Please help make Christmas a day of gladness. Make out your check or money order to Fleming H. Revell, treasurer, mark it "Lepers' Christmas," and mail it to the American Mission to Lepers, Inc., 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Signed: W. M. DANNER,
General Secretary, Ameri an Mission to Lepers.

SEVEN DANGERS CONFRONTING BAPTISTS.

By Jeff D. Ray.

1. The danger of teaching tithing in such a way as to make it bald legalism rather than New Testament voluntarism, thus making our gifts smell of bondage rather than of freedom.

2. The danger of our preachers taking the emphasis from preaching and putting it upon managing, maneuvering and manipulating a machine.

3. The danger of talking organization, budgeting, and great denominational programs till we shall expect man-made machinery to produce spiritual results.

4. The danger in these stressful times of giving too much time to denominational gossip and denominational politics.

5. The danger of a superficiality amounting almost to insincerity—talking service and not rendering service, talking sacrifice and not making sacrifice, talking loyalty and not showing loyalty.

6. The danger that out of our perfectly organized Sunday schools we shall automatically grind into our churches large numbers of nice boys and girls utter strangers to a work of grace in the heart.

7. The danger that in our zeal for orthodoxy we shall forget to require that our teachers and preachers shall be men whose moral character is above suspicion as well as men who are sound on the first three chapters of Genesis.—Religious Herald.

(Maybe some of the above dangers confront Methodists also.—Editor.)

THE TENTH QUADRENNIAL CONVENTION OF THE STUDENT VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The tenth quadrennial convention of the Student Volunteer Movement will meet in the Masonic Temple auditorium, Detroit, Mich., Dec. 28, 1927, to Jan. 1, 1928.Three thousand five hundred student delegates are expected, representing nearly all the colleges in the United States and Canada; several hundred students from other lands will be in attendance, together with missionaries, mission board secretaries, editors of the religious press, and others. The grand total will be five thousand —the capacity limit of the auditorium.

Not only will there be missionary speakers in the convention, but Christian nationals of other lands are being invited to present the Christian movement as it functions in their native lands. Dr. Francis Wei, president of Boone University in Wuchang, China, has already agreed to come from England, where he is at present studying in the University of London.

One of the unique features of the convention will be the forum discussion groups in which the students will have the freest opportunity to ask questions of those who have had wide experience abroad, and discover for themselves the answers to questions about missions which perplex them. There will be about thirty of these groups meeting simultneously.

In the afternoons there are to be demonstrations of various methods in missionary education, pageants, poster exhibits, dramatic presentations, international teas and so on. The opporounity to meet people from the four corners of the earth will be unusual.

This convention is the tenth in a long series of great missionary gatherings which have deeply affected the missionary life and that of the churches, and it bids fair to be one of the most significant of all, because of the exceptional conditions which the Christian forces face in the world to-day.—Bulletin.

A HOPEFUL SIGN.

Indications of a nation-wide awakening of concern over the religious situation are noted by Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, widely known author, lecturer, and Methodist preacher, of Richmond, Va., whose extensive travels over the continent have given him unusual opportunities to get at actual conditions. Dr. Pell says that even in communities where three or four years ago the church leaders were so well satisfied with existing conditions that they hardly gave them a thought, people of all denominations will now come together and pack the largest church available to hear an address on the religious situation and what we can do about it. He is hopeful that this manifestation of a healthy concern among the laity will help to check the steadily growing pessimism or heartache over conditions which in some sections is utterly unfitting many good pastors for their best work. Pastors will be interested to know that Dr. Pell is devoting the intervals between his regular engagements to speaking to community-wide gatherings on this subject, and that for this special service for the churches he accepts no compensation.

Looking towards the great evangelistic program to be put on in 1928 among the Mexican Conferences in the United States as well as in all other mission fields, the workers of the Western Mexican Mission are girding up their loins for a great year's work, reports Rev. Joseph Thacker, superintendent of the Western District.

In the market-place at Antwerp, Belgium, stands the old Methodist "potato wagon," which attracts attention of a type of people that usually ignore the Bible and its contents. Mission workers are forbidden by the police to do formal preaching, but they are allowed to recommend their wares (Bibles) just as do the other market-men.

BISHOP DuBOSE'S JUBILEE SERMON.

(Delivered at the Mississippi Annual Conference, Jackson, Miss., Nov. 10, 1927.)

I was born amid the quiet and orderly conditions of plantation life in the Old South. Warwick, the place of my birth, was a middle-sized estate in Southwestern Alabama, about sixty miles north of the city of Mobile. From this early home I was carried by my parents when six years of age to the State of Mississippi, where I grew from boyhood to young manhood. I was baptized in childhood, my parents being my sponsors, and at the age of eight I was definitely born of the Spirit. This experience befell at the hour of the evening meal in my father's house, my father himself being the evangelist. When I reached my thirteenth year I was confirmed in church membership, which membership I hold to have begun in my baptism. At the age of eighteen I was granted the license of a local Methodist preacher and began at once the exercise of that exalted privilege.

My education was acquired chiefly under tutors and at the old Waynesboro Academy, presided over by John West, a master of arts, who had been prepared for his university work by Seth Mellen, who in turn had been trained by Mark Hopkins, of Williams College. As a one-time pupil of John West it has been my boast that I am but three sittings removed from Mark Hopkins and his "log," recalling the familiar saying of President Garfield: "A university is Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and a boy on the other."

In my nineteenth year, being engaged in the work of country school teaching, I was recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection of the Metholist ministry. For the purpose of being received into this relation and to be assigned to a pastorate I attended the session of the Mississippi Conference which met at Jackson Dec. 12, 1877. The official sittings of this body were had in the Hall of Representatives of the old State Capitol, which still stands, a landmark of historic years. I can never escape the fondness of thought that I have a proprietary interest in that ancient structure. Such are the laws of life's associations.

A pervasive gloom marked the opening proceedings of the Conference and continued through the days of its session. Bishop Enoch Mather Marvin, beloved as a man, renowned as a preacher, and then but recently returned from a missionary tour of the world, had been assigned to preside; but death had leveled the tall cedar of Lebanon only a few days before the time fixed for the sitting of the Conference. This melancholy fact and the pauses for tributes to the memory of the dead had been enough in themselves to make the occasion a notable one. It was my first Conference, and the emotions of a youth of nineteen could not have failed under such conditions to yield a peculiar response. The greatness and dignity of the Christian ministry were enhanced to me during those days of memory. I shall ever count it an appointed providence that my itinerant fortunes were launched on the tide that rose with the going out of that apostolic man. The death of the great leaves ajar the gates of mystery.

To occupy the chair of the Conference in the stead of Bishop Marvin came that prince of administrators, Bishop Holland N. McTyeire, filled with joy over the prosperity of Vanderbilt University, only four years before through his personal influence founded and endowed in the name of the church. But the substitute bishop was a day late in arriving, and the Conference elected to the temporary presidency Rev. William H. Watkins, D.D., father of our distinguished brother, Dr. A. F. Watkins, of this Conference. Dr. Watkins was a man of strong personality and impressive bearing whose character and gifts well had adorned the episcopal office itself. As supporters Dr. Watkins had at his right hand a company of men whose names were already written or destined to be written in the larger annals of Methodism. Easily first amongst these in experience and acumen was Charles K. Marshall, the expositive of a type of pulpit oratory which more than one of his younger brethren studied to profit. He was not then an itinerant, but his interest in, and his influence over, the Conference were not less than when he traveled. He kept a fine old-time establishment in the city of Vicksburg, was full of hospitality and genuinely affected toward all his brethren. It was inspiration and refinement of mentality to listen to his conversation and partake of his fellowship. He was witty, satirical, rhetorical in address and passionately eloquent in argument and exhortation. His impassioned movement and impromptu methods often exposed him to the peril of anticlimaxes, and some of these became famous butts of jest amongst his contemporaries; but his limp was always that of a giant. The impression which I received from a tribute paid by him to the memory of Bishop Marvin during the session of this Conference is one of the enduring recollections of my life. Standing beside a supporting column of the audience gallery in the Hall of Representatives, he seized upon the fitness of that architectural member as a simile of the strength and finished work of the subject of his eulogy and cried: "He was a pillar in the house of God's earthly administration; he is now a pillar in the temple on high and no more shall go out, but shall abide in the glory of his presence, who is God over all, blessed forever."

The exact antithesis of Marshall was Richard Abbey, at that time special agent of the Publishing House and a familiar of cabinet officials and senators in the national capital, where he was urging before the Upper House of Congress the indemnity claim of the church for the use and abuse of its printing property by Federal forces during the war between the States. The prospect of recovery seemed small in those days, but the future wrote a history both of success and distress as the outcome of a long-maintained litigation. The Richard Abbey whom I saw and heard at this Conference has continually reminded me of Herbert Spencer, whom he much resembled in physique, mental habitudes, and early training. In England Abbey might have been Herbert Spencer, and in the South of the United States Spencer might have been Richard Abbey. The latter in his book on "Diuturnity" anticipated or paralleled the evolutional philosophy of the Victorian monists and equaled not a few of the exploitations of Spencer in ethics and psychology. He had several other books of clever argument to his credit, no small asset fifty years ago, when the postbellum prostration of the country made the exclusive pursuit of authorship all but hopeless and when such men of the South as Lanier, Timrod, Hayne, John Esten Cooke, and half a hundred others of note were literally pauperized through their devotion to the muses of poetry and history.

Perhaps the only other member of the Mississippi Conference then known as a writer of books was the veteran John G. Jones, historian of the Conference and author of "The Bishop's Cabinet," a sketch somewhat in the vein of "Post Oak Circuit" and which in its days had an almost equal piquancy and popularity. Father Jones was a member of the General Conference of 1844 and the tribal sheik of a score or more of younger members of the Conference, representing the names of Jones, Lewis, Holloman, and others.

The secretary of the Conference was Charles Green Andrews, who might have stood for a statue of Pericles, so Attic-like were his countenance and bodily mold. Nor could the son of Xanthippus boast a happier beginning or a better preparation for life. The son of a wealthy and aristocratic family, Dr. Andrews enjoyed rare educational advantages in youth and emerged a technical scholar of the old collegian order. His sermons were broad based and meditative interpretations of the Word. He lacked a certain blandishment of style, but in a later age this might not have counted so effectively.

The Conference double of Andrews was Harvey F. Johnson. Two men of finer physical presence than Andrews and Johnson could hardly have been brought together from all Methodism. They indeed were brought together oftentimes in debates and parliamentary contests which tried the mettle of both. Their memories abide larger than the circumstances of their day.

A man worthy of this brotherhood and highly reported of as a pulpit orator was W. E. M. Linfield, of Irish extraction, possessing the fervor of his race, and with attainments in theology and homiletics that justified his reputation. He was of the school of Bascom and rolled his discourses down upon the heads of his audiences like an avalanche from the mountain side. He impressed and ministered masterfully in his day.

Besides these, there were a number of men in the Conference noted among their brethren for fervor and effectiveness in the pulpit. Those of particular eminence in this class were: Henderson H. Montgomery, Ransom J. Jones, W. B. Lewis, Edwin H. Mounger, Ulysses B. Phillips, Daniel G. W. Ellis, and James A. Heard. William L. C. Hunnicut, Thomas S. West, John A. Ellis, and F. M. Featherstun were filling or had filled the presiding eldership with distinction. A host of younger men were pressing to the front and to leadership. Hiram R. Singleton was a preacher of seraphic charm and is justly mentioned as the head of this list. Warren G. Black was a theologian and wide-awake student of life and history. He was even then a leader. Beverley Carradine, gifted, impulsive, dogmatic, was in his fourth year and was betraying those qualities which made his after career sadly erratic. T. B. Holloman, clothed with the air of a youthful schoolmaster, was gracious-hearted and loyal. D. P. Bradford was the Asaph of the Conference, with a voice that could have sung the multiplication table. J. M. Weems was a careful maker of sermons and wholly committed to his work. J. W. McLaurin was a preacher of many points of effectiveness, as was also Lyman Carley, father of a present-day editor of gifts and acumen. R. P. Bradley was one of a group of English Wesleyans who came from the mother country to replenish the ranks of our ministry in the days following the depletion of Civil War.

There were also yet others whose faces float before me in the holy hazes of memory. Young men they were, many of whom gave years of loyal service to the Master and his church. Amongst these I affectionately mention the names of B. F. Jones, Clarence A. Powell, M. B. Sharbrough, who once served in the West; Inman W. Cooper, later distinguished as a Methodist educator; Duncan A. Little, younger in service than years, trained as a lawyer, but a good soldier of Jesus Christ. These have all gone to their reward, with the exception of the first-named, my beloved former companion in arms, Benjamin Franklin Jones.

(To be Continued in Next Issue-)

The downpour of rain, morning, noon, and night, did not deter the people in and around Tobe, Japan, from coming to the big tent set up in their midst early in July by the Tent Evangelistic Band. Every night the tent was filled with adults, who listened most attentively to the gospel, even remaining until nearly 11 o'clock one night, as the preacher had to stop in the midst of the services for the downpour of rain to cease so that he might be heard. Some 200 children were enrolled in the Daily Bible School.

All the charges of the Western District of the Western Mexican Mission report growth during the past four years with the exception of the church at Miami, Arizona. About twenty persons were converted here, but had to move away in search of work before being received into church fellowship. Nevertheless, this church overpaid its assessments.

GETTING INFORMATION OUT OF PA.

My pa, he didn't go downtown
Last evening after tea,
But got a book an' settled down
As comf'y as could be.
I'll tell you I was offul glad
To have my pa about
To answer all the things I had
Been tryin' to find out.

And so I asked him why the world
Is round instead of square,
And why the piggies' tails are curled,
And why don't fish breathe air,
And why the moon don't hit a star,
And why the dark is black,
And jest how many birds there are,
And will the wind come back.

And why a horse can't learn to moo,
And why a cow can't neigh,
And do the fairies live on dew,
And what makes hair grow gray,
And then my pa got up an' gee,
The offul words he said!
I hadn't done a thing, but he
Jest sent me off to bed.

HOW JANET SPOILED THE PICNIC.

Janet was not at the picnic at all, so you may wonder how she could have spoiled it for Jessie, who was; but it only goes to show how much more we have to do with other people's happiness than we realize. This is the way it happened that she did not go to the class picnic that bright Saturday.

The very hardest thing in the world for Janet to do was to be on time for anything. She hated to go to bed at night, to get up in the morning, to come down to breakfast just at the right time. And because she was generally late for breakfast she was always in a great hurry when school time came, and there was a great hunt for her books, hat or rubbers, which was apt to end in making Jessie late, too.

At last papa interfered, and declared that Jessie must not wait for Janet in the mornings. She was always ready, and if Janet could not get up in time, she must be late, but Jessie must go on without her. That settled it, and very reluctantly and mournfully Jessie would start when the first bell rang, leaving Janet wildly searching for her belongings, which might be anywhere. And she would come hurrying in to school five minutes late, with a tardy mark against her name, and slip into her seat with a reproachful look at her sister.

"It is Janet's only fault," sighed Miss Margaret, her teacher. "She would be such a good scholar if she could only break herself of the habit of never being on time. Perhaps she may some time, but she may have some hard lessons first."

But nothing could make Janet hurry at the right time, and she went on in her happy-go-lucky way until the day of the picnic at High Spring. This was a beautiful spot about four miles from the village, and Miss Margaret had long been promising to take her pupils for a hike out there some Saturday morning, to picnic and gather wild flowers for the botany class.

One Monday she announced: "We will take our long-planned walk on Saturday; that is, every one of you who has a perfect record for each day of this week. Not a conduct mark, not a tardy mark—" She glanced at Janet, who smiled confidently back. "Good lessons every day, and our picnic shall be your reward."

The girls were delighted. It would be easy to be good with such a goal in view. Janet was as happy as any of them. It happened that she had been promptly on time this morning, having been waked earlier than usual by the barking of a dog in the yard, and it had been so unexpectedly easy to get to school on time that she was sure she would never be late again. If Jessie would only wake her she would jump up at once, and all would go smoothly.

Jessie was as anxious for her sister's record to be perfect as for her own, and she readily promised to call her earlier each morning. So on Tuesday Janet was up early again, and arrived at school much pleased with herself.

"I'll be there on Saturday, Miss Margaret; don't worry," she said gaily on Wednesday.

Lessons were well done, and Miss Margaret began to meditate on the advisability of a series of rewards as an incentive for good conduct. The week wore on. The girls were still doing well. Friday came.

Jessie waked early that morning, and looked across at her sister, sleeping peacefully. Janet had been up later than usual last night, finishing a book she wanted to return to the school library, and she slept soundly. Jessie hated to waken her, but she knew she must if she was to be on time.

"Janet!" she called, "time to get up. This is Friday."

Janet sighed and rolled over. "Leave me alone," she said, without opening her eyes. "It's too early to get up yet. I will soon."

Jessie went on dressing. "Janet," she said presently, "the first breakfast bell is ringing. Won't you get up now? Please don't be late for school this last day."

Suddenly realizing the time, Janet sprang out of bed.

"You might have called me, Jess. How could you let me sleep?"

"I did call you," said Jessie almost tearfully. "Please hurry now, and maybe you can catch up."

But it is very hard to overtake lost time. Janet hurried as much as she could; but she could not find anything she wanted in her nervous haste. Her buttons were coming off, pins slipped from her fingers, her hair tangled, and with all her hurry, breakfact was half over when she came down at last. Jessie's eyes were red, and she was half choking over her oatmeal.

Janet would have rushed off to school without breakfast, but that was not allowed. She forced herself to eat something, remembering that she had not gathered up her things last night, as she meant to do, and would have to hunt for them.

The first school bell was ringing, Jessie must start. She stood hesitating. "Please let me wait for Janet, papa; just this once. I'd rather be late, too," she begged.

Papa shook his head. "There is no reason why you should have a tardy mark because Janet is late," he said quietly.

"Go on, Jessie," said Janet eagerly. "Don't you be late, too."

So Jessie went slowly, with tear-dimmed eyes. Miss Margaret looked up expectantly as she entered, but the brightness faded out of her face as no Janet appeared behind Jessie's little figure. She said nothing, for Jessie herself was only just in time, and school began.

Janet appeared at last, ten minutes late, looking very downcast.

"I couldn't help it, Miss Margaret," she began, from force of habit, and then checked herself.

"Couldn't help being late, Janet? Was there really anything to hinder you?"

"Yes—no, Miss Margaret. I did oversleep, but Jessie called me in time. It was my fault for sitting up to read last night, and being sleepy. I hurried all I could, but I couldn't find my arithmetic."

"And what about your record?" asked Miss Margaret sadly. "I said no tardy marks, you know."

"Oh, Miss Margaret! Must I really miss the hike to-morrow?"

"What do you think, Janet? Am I to break my word? The other girls have kept their records good. Why is not yours perfect, too?"

Janet flushed. "I—suppose I have no excuse, Miss Margaret, for Jessie did call me, and I didn't get up. I guess I must take the consequences. But Jessie must go."

"I am sorry, Janet."

"Yes, I know, Miss Margaret, but it is all my own fault. And I'll never be late again, I promise you."

"I won't go without you," Jessie declared, but this Janet would not allow. "It's not fair for you to miss the fun because I was lazy," she said, and so she stayed at home and made good resolutions, which it is fair to say she kept, about breaking herself of her besetting sin.

Jessie's pleasure in the picnic was completely spoiled; she came home tired and dispirited, and in answer to Janet's questions, could only say:

"It would have been nice if you had been there, but I didn't have a very good time, thinking of you at home by yourself."

Which reminded Janet of a verse in the Bible which says:

"For none of us liveth to himself."

And she determined more than ever that her great fault should never again spoil any one's happiness.—Junior World.

LIFE'S ARITHMETIC.

We have the wisest teacher,
And she has given us this rule
That helps us in our lessons—
You can use it in your school:
Always add a smile or two
When things are going wrong,
Subtract the frowns that try to come
When lessons seem too long.
Then multiply your efforts when
The figures won't come right,
Divide your pleasures day by day
With every one in sight.
Now if you always use this rule
You'll have a happy day,
For lessons then are easy,
And the hours fly away.

—M. S. Van Der Veer, in Youth's Companion.

LOOK TO THIS DAY, FOR IT IS LIFE.

Look to this day,
For it is life, the very life of life,
In its brief course lie all the
Varieties and realities of your existence:
The bliss of growth,
The glory of action,
The splendor of beauty;
For yesterday is but a dream
And to-morrow is only a vision,
But to-day well lived makes
Every yesterday a dream of happiness,
And every to-morrow a vision of hope.
Look well therefore to this day!
Such is the salutation of the dawn.

LUTHER AND THE BIBLE.

Hurd Allyn Drake, in the Presbyterian Advance, tells us that "Luther said that he studied the Bible as he gathered apples. Frist, he shook the whole tree, that the ripest might fall. Then he climbed the tree and shook each limb, and when he had shaken each limb, he shook each branch, and after each branch every twig, and then he looked under each leaf. Let us search the Bible as a whole; shake the whole tree; read it as rapidly as you would any book, then shake every limb, studying Book after Book. Then shake every branch, giving attention to the chapters when they do not break the sense. Then shake each twig by a careful study of the paragraphs and sentences, and you will be rewarded, if you will look under every leaf, by searching the meaning of words."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, our pastor at Minden, La., informs us that his Sunday school gave $50 on Sunday School Day, the amount recently published being an error.

Dr. Henry C. Jennings, publishing agent emeritus of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died on Nov. 9. He was one of the publishing agents for twenty-four years.

Rev. W. J. Wood writes that he has reached his new charge, the Holcomb circuit, where he has received a cordial welcome, and where he is expecting to have a great year.

Rev. J. N. Humphrey, writing from Ratliff, Miss., under date of Nov. 23, says: "We arrived on the Mantachie charge last week and found a royal welcome by the good people of Mantachie."

"The Methodist Visitor" is the name of the monthly church bulletin issued by Rev. L. E. Crooks, pastor at Standard, La. The November issue gives some interesting items concerning the work of the charge.

For the second time in its history of twenty-five years, the Nobel prize for literature has been awarded to a woman, Grazia Deledda, for her book, "The Mother," published in America by the Macmillian Company.

From the Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss.: "Rev. C. T. Floyd, who was appointed to succeed Brother McCafferty as pastor of the Methodist church, comes to us from Moorhead. We extend to him a hearty welcome to our town."

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a copy of the directory of our church at Arcadia, La., just from the press. It is a complete presentation of the membership and officiary of the church. Rev. G. A. Morgan is the pastor.

Rev. Lee R. Sparks, of Zwolle, La., writes: "I am just closing a very successfull year of my ministry. I have enjoyed my association with the brethren of this Conference and solicit their prayers as I enter the Little Rock Conference."

The Legal Conference of the Louisiana Conference held its annual meeting at First Church, New Orleans, on Friday of last week. Dr. Briscoe Carter, Dr. R. H. Wynn, and Rev. R. W. Tucker were the out-of-town members present.

A farewell service was held at Sardis, Miss., in honor of Rev. J. T. McCafferty and family prior to their leaving Sardis for Ruleville, Brother McCefferty's new appointment. The Baptist and the Presbyterian pastors and their people united in the service.

Dr. S. L. Morris, former field secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi, says: "Charles A. Lindbergh is specifically a product of dry America, and is now a blazing example of righteousness and efficiency for the young men of the whole world."

Rev. W. N. Ware, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, writes from St. Clair, Mo.: "We have a nice work here in the Missouri Ozarks and have been cordially received by our people." Brother Ware reports the arrival of a son, Warren Nathaniel, Jr., in his home on Nov. 22. Blessings upon parents and little one!

The students of Grenada College joined the Methodist young people all over the world in observing Nov. 27 as communion Sunday. The students of Grenada College co-operated with the Epworth League of the Grenada Methodist church in observing this and in giving the program. The sacrament was administered by Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. E. S. Lewis, and Dr. J. R. Countiss.

At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. John W. Robertson was appointed Conference evangelist and recommended to the Commission on Evangelism for appointment as a general evangelist at its next meeting. Brother Robertson is ready to make engagements. His temporary address is Steele, Mo., where communications will reach him.

The union Thanksgiving service of the Methodist churches in New Orleans was held at the Louisiana Avenue Church on Thanksgiving morning at 11 o'clock. Dr. R. H. Harper, the presiding elder, was in charge of the service. The sermon was preached by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of Rayne Memorial. A large congregation was present. The offering was given to the Memorial Home for Young Women.

At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference held in Jackson, Miss., a resolution was adopted endorsing a movement to endow the chair of Religious Education of Whitworth College and recommending this as a worthy activity for the Adult Wesley Bible classes. Probably these classes could not find a worthier cause. We are dependent greatly upon the ladies who have attended our church colleges for teaching in our Sunday school, and other leadership.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Jordan entertained the officials of the Methodist church at Crowley, La., at a barbecue supper recently. A fine meal was served, and an interesting program carried out. The social hall of the church, where the supper was served, was beautifully decorated for the occasion. According to the Crowley Daily Signal, a delightful time was spent by those presest. The entertaining of the officials of the church at the close of the year is a yearly custom of Brother Jordan.

The editor of the Advocate greatly enjoyed a call by Rev. Frank Pippin on Saturday of last week. Brother Pippin was a student in the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, during the summer quarter and was a member of one of the classes taught by the editor. Having received his B.A. degree from Emory, he is now completing his course in theology, and at the same time doing the work for the M.A. degree at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., where he is also serving as pastor of a near-by church.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Grenada College during the month of November observed world fellowship in a series of programs at the morning watch hour and at the Wednesday evening prayer service. These programs were directed by Miss Sarah Hodges, who is president of the Missionary Society. The study culminated in a pageant, "One Father of All," given Nov. 20, at the regular Sunday evening service in the college auditorium. The theme running through the pageant was the divergent religions all over the world and the power of Christianity to unite these through the efforts of the Christian church, which was represented by Miss Marie Moore. The grouping of the representatives of the various countries on the stage and the advent of the church among them was very artistic and effective, while the Sunday school choir furnished appropriate music. The service was well attended by the citizens of Grenada.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING SUPERANNUATE FUND.

The following resolution was passed unanimously by the last session of the Mississippi Annual Conference:

"Whereas, the church is entering into the fifth year of the Special Effort of the Superannuate Fund and the Mississippi Conference is lagging in the amount paid to this fund; and, whereas, there is an imperative and pressing need for an immediate effort to raise the amount assumed by the various charges in this Conference, and realizing the worthiness of this claim; therefore,

"Be it resolved, That the Mississippi Conference set aside the month of December as a period of special emphasis culminating with a Christmas offering to this great cause, and that the presiding elders and pastors be urged to give their earnest attention to the securing of the amounts pledged.

"Resolved further, That this is in no way to interfere with the effort that is to come under the direction of the General Board of Finance."

Will you not please announce this to your congregation and take a collection and send it to me or to Dr. Luther E. Todd?

If you have made full payment, take the collection. If you lack one year, urge your people to pay the last payment. The superannuate will get the interest one year earlier. Help the needy.

Cordially yours,

J. M. MORSE.

TRUE OR FALSE, IT'S INTERESTING.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

There is a story afloat that a certain undergraduate, a thoroughly well equipped youngster, tried an interesting experiment recently. He prepared an examination paper carefully. He made it a point to express himself ambiguously. He followed that threadbare school of "incredible dullness" so happily imitated by H. G. Wells and his ilk. He said many things without really saying anything. He mailed this paper to the examiners, expecting to receive a zero and a rebuke. Imagine his utter amazement when he received a most flattering grade, together with a personal letter of commendation and congratulation. Whether true or not, it is interesting. Sham and pretense mark the literature of this day like smallpox pits. Any man who reads much of the trash that is palmed off on an itching public as smart, scholarly, scientific, up-to-date, and likes it, can easily regale himself with "College Humor." There will be others leaning hard in the direction of the bliss of comparative ignorance. Bishop Candler has well said, "It wearies indignation and fatigues disgust."

Will the time ever come when men will be frank, honest, fair, saying what they mean and meaning what they say? Is anything gained by splitting an imaginary hair with an imaginary blade to an imaginary end? We wade in chaff chin-deep to find a grain of wheat. When found it will not sprout. The germ of life is wanting. The King James version of Holy Writ has not been improved upon for most of us. The Man of Galilee has not been surpassed for good English. Poetry and art yet wait the advent of masters equal to those who have gone before. Our boasted knowledge needs be a bit more modest in the presence of felicity of expression and profound thinking already witnessing for God and humanity. Ambiguous verbosity just about describes much that is offered us this day for "our uplift." Multum in parvo has given place to nihil ad rem. Speculation seems more important than assurance.

PLANS FOR WORLD PEACE DISCUSSED AT INTERNATIONAL GOODWILL CONGRESS.

By Charles Stelzle.

Nearly five hundred delegates from forty different cities in various parts of the United States attended the twelfth annual meeting of the World Alliance for International Friendship, which was held in St. Louis, Nov. 9 to 11, inclusive. Preliminary to the meeting of the Congress, itself, sixty-four meetings were held in and about St. Louis, which had an attendance of about thirty thousand. Thirty outstanding authorities on international affairs addressed the Congress, the meetings being held in the Chase Hotel, except the mass meetings on Armistice Day and on the night preceding, these being conducted in some of the largest auditoriums in the city.

The addresses were of a uniformly high order, and received widespread publicity in the local newspapers, the four St. Louis dailies giving from twenty to twenty-five columns per day to reports of meetings—editorials, photographs, and cartoons. Among the principal speakers were Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War; Henry Wickham, editor of the Review of Reviews of London and former editor of the London Times; Prof. Manley O. Hudson, of Harvard Law School; Prof. James T. Shotwell, of Columbia University; Colonel Raymond Robins, of Chicago; Rev. Arthur Pringle, of London, England; Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Christian Endeavor Society; Dr. Joseph E. Cochran, pastor of the American church in Paris, France, and Dr. William P. Merrill, of New York, president of the World Alliance.

The Congress adopted a series of resolutions, approving the Briand proposal, establishing an agreement between France and the United States to "renounce war as an instrument of national policy;" it favored the principle that the United States should not give support to, nor trade with, any covenant-breaking State which might go to war in violation of its previously given pledge to take its disputes to some tribunal of peaceful settlement; it expressed satisfaction with the increasing co-operation of the United States in the activities of the League of Nations, although it did not raise the question of organic membership in the League itself; it urged further negotiations regarding membership of the United States in the Permanent Court of Internatonal Justice; it indicated that the settlement of the complicated question of inter-allied debts was more than a financial problem, and it urged that practical steps be taken further to reduce armaments, calling atten to the fact that we are confronted by "potential armaments in chemical and industrial development," and that the only way to eliminate this potential menace is to abolish the war system itself.

The Congress approved of the "reaffirmation of commercial and industrial enterprises in Mexico and stated that "American investors carrying on commercial and industrial enterprises in Mevico should recognize that such investments abroad are subject to the laws of the country in which they are made;" it expressed gratification at the progress being made by the Chinese people in their struggle for national unity; and deplored " the enactment of legislation making exceptions which discriminate against any nation in the operation of the quota divison." Without raising the question of the expediency of maintaining an adequate military and naval defense so long as the war system lasts, it opposed military training in all public and high schools and all compulsory military training in colleges and universities, except in institutions established for the specific purpose of military education; and the Congress further emphasized the responsibility of all educators "for the early training of our youth for peace by developing in them the spirit of goodwill toward the peoples of all lands." To this end, it was recommended that there be "increased opportunities in our schools for the appreciative study of other peoples and cultures, as well as our own, and of a true perspective of ourselves as a nation in relation to other nations."

One of the noticeable features of the Congress was the holding of a Young People's mass meeting, with an attendance of 3,500, in which Protestant, Jewish, and Catholic Young People's Societies participated, the meeting being held in the St. Louis University, a Catholic institution.

Protection Against Old Age

EXPERIENCE.

By Rev. Frank Pippin.

I am man's interpreter of God; his second faith.

I am the teacher of the ages; counsellor of the wise; condemner of the fool; man's first lesson, and his last.

I am the lens of man's soul through which he views the sunset and the stars.

I am to-day's twilight, to-morrow's sunrise.

I am the succor of to-day, the hope of to-morrow.

I am discipline; those who learn from me pay dearly.

I am life; those who tread my paths will learn of me.

I am the mount of transfiguration on which life changes with the process of the years.

I am the Marathon of the nations, winging my warning message to every homestead.

I am the orchard eternal, from which the centuries have culled their most luscious fruits—love, truth, and light.

I am Experience.

IN MEMORY OF OUR PRECIOUS FATHER, REV. ISAAC L. PEEBLES, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE ONE YEAR AGO.

"One year among the angels, beloved, thou hast been,
One year has Heaven's white portal shut back the sound of sin;
And yet no voice, no whisper, comes floating down from thee,
To tell us what glad wonder a year in Heaven may be."

Only those to whose lips the same cup of sorrow has been pressed can understand the chill that settles over the soul when one stands by the cold, still form of a loving father and knows he would shed his last drop of blood for us; and knows that his heart has ceased to beat.

His study, a place once so cheerful and happy, now is a place sad and lonely; no precious father to smile and tell us how glad he is to see us, and when asked how he felt to say, "Young and happy." He bore his suffering with such fortitude and was so submissive to the Divine Will. We feel that we are nearer Heaven because our precious father is there. We are living each day as he taught us; and his constant prayer was that we may form an unbroken family circle in Heaven. By the help of God we will meet you in that "Land of Unclouded Day."

Words cannot express how we miss him, but oh! it is so comforting to us when we think,

"There is a world above where parting is unknown,
A whole eternity of love,
Formed for the good alone,
And faith beholds the dying here,
Translated to that happy sphere;
One fond farewell, oh! thou most perfect father,
So pure and saintly meek,
You are an angel now, but we are human,
And oh! so strangely weak,
Our hearts can never let you go,
Father, we love you so."

Daughters who love him dearly,

MRS. KATIE LEE MORRIS.

On Sunday night, Oct. 16, 1927, at the family residence, Grenada Boulevard, an angel entered and bore away the gentle spirit of Katie Lee Morris. Katie was a true Christian. She joined the Methodist church at Mount Olivet at 16, and ever remained a faithful member of the same. She was educated at Lexington, and at E. M. F. College, Meridan, Miss.; born Jan. 24, 1886; married to S. P. Morris, May 5, 1910, at the home of her mother, M. M. Lee. She was a devoted daughter, faithful wife, loving sister, a good neighbor; an earnest Christian, and a true friend. She had a smile for every one she met, which showed the sunshine in her heart. She suffered for months, but bore her affliction with Christian fortitude. She leaves a husband; a sister, Mrs. G. Dorrah, of Jackson; two brothers, Messrs. Joe and Lytton Lee; many kindred and friends. Many beautiful floral offerings, expressions of love and sympathy, were heaped about the grave. Her race is run, she has reached the goal. Her memory will ever be sweet to me. We bow in submission to his will that doeth all things well.

RESOLUTIONS.

Died at her home in Indianola, Miss., Thursday morning, Nov. 10, 1927, MRS. CLARA CARTER FAISON, widow of the lamented R. B. Faison

She being a devout and consistent member of the Methodist church, we, members of the Missionary Society, have met and passed the following resolutions of love and respect:

1. Be it resolved, That, whereas, it has pleased God to call unto himself our beloved friend and sister, Mrs. Clara Faison, in her departure, our church, our Missionary Society, the town and community at large have sustained a great and irreparable loss.

2. Resolved, That inasmuch as Mrs. Faison was a woman posssessed of the noblest traits of character, ever patient, faithful, loyal and true, foremost in all good works, ready to throw the mantle of charity over the faults and shortcomings of others, we shall miss her sweet, gentle leadership and shall endeavor to follow her example.

3. Resolved further, That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, commending them to the merciful care of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

4. Lastly, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Society, a copy be sent to the family, to the town papers, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. P. C. Chapman, Mrs. J. D. Smith, Mrs. E. L. Parker, Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my son, THOMAS BRELAND PICKETT, who departed this life three years ago today, on the 6th day of November. You left us so suddenly, but your memory is as fresh to us today as it was when you left us. Our home is so lonely without you. We miss you so much and think of you all the time. We know you are at rest, safe in the arms of Jesus, and we want to join you there. We must live a true Christian life to be with him. We are going to be with him some day where parting is no more. He is sadly missed by

Winnsboro Blue Granite Monuments Maintain Memories

*"Thou turnest man to destruction * * * They are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth."*

How these words have been impressed upon us. There are some losses we will never forget; some memories we will always cherish.

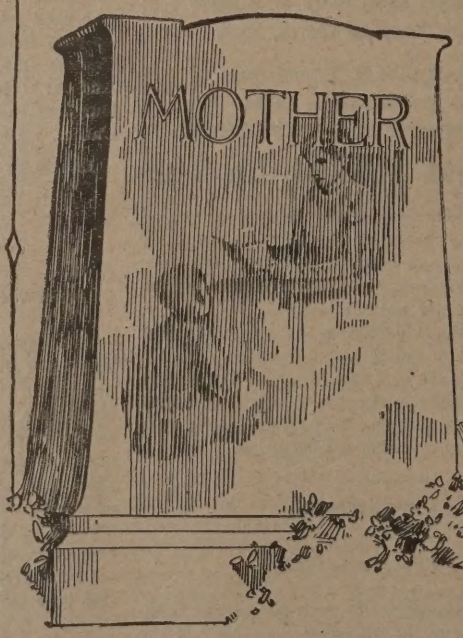
Visits to the cemeteries where graves are marked reveal that many of the markers and monuments are also of few days, some discolored, others cracking and crumbling, as the ravages of time take their toll.

What a consolation to know that Mother's monument has been cut from a more lasting stone—granite—genuine Winnsboro Blue. How the very rock itself brings back the tender memories of her. One can almost see a vision of childhood days in the stone itself.

OF ALL THE GRAY GRANITES,
Winnsboro Blue Granite
"The Silk of the Trade"

stands preeminently the most lasting, the most beautiful and inscriptions on it most legible.

Be sure that you get the genuine Winnsboro Blue Granite. Like other high quality materials there are many inferior substitutes that resemble this granite on first appearance but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.



Write for Free descriptive literature, also for facsimile reproduction of a polished sample of Winnsboro Blue Granite, that you may see its beauty.

When you have purchased a monument specifying Winnsboro Blue Granite write us giving name of your Memorial Merchant, and we will send you a polished Winnsboro Blue Granite paper weight.

THE PRESIDENT'S DECEMBER MESSAGE.

To the Presidents and Members of the Woman's Missionary Society.

My Dear Co-Workers: The fourth quarter of the year 1927 is rapidly passing, so I want to say to you, in the language of St. Paul, "Be instant in season and out of season." Let us look carefully into every phase of our work that we may maintain the record held by our Mississippi Conference for these past years. May we each ask these questions: "Have I met every responsibility to the woman's work? Is my pledge paid in full? Is there still something remaining that I may do to advance God's kingdom?"

We have made an advance during the first three quarters of this year in membership and in our offering. How we should all give thanks and rejoice that this is true! God has called into definite service three splendid young women, who have been placed in Whitworth College in order that they may have the necessary units of credit to enter Scarritt College the coming year. The Nursery at Moore Community House has been opened, and Miss Ellis writes that the work there is moving forward nicely.

The Mississippi Conference goal for the Missionary Voice is 1,200 new subscribers. Will not our agents co-operate with the agent that is to be appointed by the pastor of each church and make a special effort to place the Missionary Voice in every Methodist home? No well furnished Southern Methodist can afford to be without it. The period for the 75 cents offer is extended through February, to cover the January-February period of special cultivation.

We believe that an informed and consecrated Missionary Society solves its problems. Through our Bible and mission study classes we are becoming better informed and hence more effective workers in the kingdom. Through deep personal examination and reconsecration of our lives to God, the "Jubilee" is becoming a realization to many of our women. May we not all study more earnestly the Divine Word and ask for a new in-filling of his Spirit that we may more perfectly do his will?

I cannot express my appreciation too warmly for the splendid work done by each officer, each district secretary, each zone leader, and last but not least, the officers and members of each loyal auxiliary. Your splendid work has borne fruit. Without your loyalty and co-operation our year's work could not have gone forward. Let us, these remaining weeks, meet every obligation and make this the best year in the history of our work.

With the assurance that each of you, in your respective place, will do your part, I am,

Yours for service,
MRS. L. W. ALFORD.

ZONE MEETING AT ATHENS, LA.

The fourth quarterly meeting of zone No. 1, Ruston District, was held at Athens, Nov. 18. Our zone leader, Mrs. W. A. McKenzie, was in the chair, and after silent prayer by the audience, closed the prayer.

Mrs. Ford, of Homer, conducted the devotional, using the twenty-third Psalm. The roll call showed representatives from every auxiliary in the zone.

Miss Winnie Camp then gave us a beautiful poem on "Harvest Days."

Mrs. Hefley, of Homer, gave us the outstanding objectives for which we are to strive in our Jubilee celebration.

Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, of Haynesville, our District Secretary, told us about the Prayer League, insisting that we organize at once.

Miss Frances Mullennix, of Athens, gave us a violin number, and little Miss Roberta Dillon, a Thanksgiving reading, after which the Athens ladies gave an original playlet, "The December Business Meeting," portraying the varied and many excuses of members for refusing to serve on programs and accepting the roll of officer or superintendent; also of the heavy burdens imposed upon the president when members shirk their own duties and responsibilities. This playlet was given with the hope that it might be an awakening to those who are derelict in duty.

Misses Pauline Barnes and Maxine Owens, of Athens, sang a duet.

During the social hour the Athens ladies served refreshments. A most pleasing addition to this was the vocal numbers given by Misses Barnes and Owens, with Mrs. Kittie Watson Hightower, accompanist.

Haynesville was decided on as the next place of meeting. It was with a spirit of love and good will that we bade our guests good-bye, realizing more and more that our zone meetings do much in giving us inspiration for greater zeal in our work.

MRS. J. H. PITTMAN,
Recording Secretary.

CANDLE-LIGHTING AT GLOSTER, MISS.

The Gloster auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society concluded the Week of Prayer program with an open meeting in the church auditorium on Sunday, Nov. 13. Our pastor, Rev. B. M. Hunt, being at Annual Conference, we used the 11 o'clock hour for a candle-lighting service for out-going

INDIGESTION GONE

Tennessean Was Worried Considerably Until, on Advice of An Acquaintance, He Began To Use Black-Draught.

Sewanee, Tenn.—"For several years," says Mr. J. L. Russell, of this place, "I suffered continuously with spells of indigestion. Everything I ate disagreed with me, and I was in a bad way.

"Nothing did me any good until I found Black-Draught. One day a man in a store where we traded told me to try Black-Draught. He said he knew of it relieving indigestion, so I decided to give it a trial.

"In my case it seemed to go right to the very root of my trouble. It straightened me out, and ever since that time, over thirty years ago, I have used Black-Draught.

"When I have a spell of indigestion coming on, I begin on Black-Draught. I take several small doses, in a regular course, and I find it will usually have me well in less than no time. Now I never suffer—I take Black-Draught.

"I also found it fine to break up a bad cold. In the winter time, I always keep a box handy, so when I sneeze, or feel chilly down my spine, I take a few doses of Black-Draught, and that wards off the cold."

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruity laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

At the session of the Annual Conference, the Sunday school work was featured in its relationship to the remarkable success in its Leadership Training Program. Thanks were expressed to those who contributed to the success of the work along this line.

Possibly one of the most remarkable contributions made to the whole program of the Conference Sunday school work this year was the contribution of Mr. P. L. Blackwell, of Newton, Miss. He took a place on four county institute programs and conducted a church institute in the absence of one of the field workers, paying his own way and contributing his own time. Add to this his activity as Superintendent of Missionary Education for the Conference, in which he has been very active, and you have a fine outstanding piece of work.

I have taken occasion to bring this token of appreciation to Brother Blackwell to say that last year the entire Sunday School Board was actively engaged in putting over the program throughout the Conference. With the active support of every member of the Board, the workers will just have to do a better piece of work.

The Conference Board met and practically did its entire work one afternoon. We met the second afternoon, but discovered we had practically finished our work the afternoon before.

There was only one member of the Board absent. What a fine record! The actions of the Board all looked ahead for bigger and better things. This was to be expected when the Board was interested enough to be present.

One of the most radical changes made was in the Honor Roll for Sunday School Day for next year. The Honor Roll will be composed of the names of the Sunday schools instead of the names of the pastors. Every Sunday school sending in 10 cents per member, exclusive of its Cradle Roll and Home Department as reported to the session of the Annual Conference, will be placed on the Honor Roll. They will be placed on the Honor Roll in the order they reach the Sunday School Board's office. No name will be placed on the Honor Roll after Monday before the meeting of the Annual Conference.

A second change was the making of an Honor Roll for the names of the superintendents taking Leadership Training. We set as a goal 200 superintendents taking units of credit of Leadership Training during the year—this is not quite a half. We trust that this can be done.

The Leadership Roll for preachers remains the same.

Other movements will be brought to your attention from time to time. It will be of interest to the readers of this article to know that as you read it there are in session two Standard Cokesbury Schools. Can you not say, "Thank God?" It will also be of interest for the readers to know that there have come through the mail enough requests for training work to occupy the time of the employed staff for a month. We thank God and take courage. We are appreciative of every good word spoken for us and for every good thing done for us.

Pray for the workers as you have never done before. Hold us up to a throne of grace that we fail not to do the thing the Lord wants done.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The observance of Enlarged Children's Week has been very helpful to workers in a number of schools in our Conference, according to the reports that have come in so far. Some workers write that they plan to have the week yet; others say that though the observance was only partial, they found this helpful and plan for a complete observance next year.

Where the homes were visited by the workers, the reports show good attendance at the mass meeting for adults and splendid forward steps made for the childhood and youth of the community. The pageants given have been reported as splendid and inspiring to many.

Among the splendid Forward Steps reported have been: a planned recreational program for the church; the carrying out of the Program of Work in an effort to bring the school to Standard rank; the purchase of equipment, furnishings, workers' library books, song books, etc.; the improvement, cleaning and beautifying of buildings; placing of the Sunday school expense in the budget of the church; organization of parent-teachers' association; of local training classes for active or prospective workers; plans for Cokesbury, Standard and non-Standard Training Classes and Schools. There has been a special emphasis on training for workers and parents in the Forward Steps taken.

To date we have received twenty-five written reports, and have heard of numerous other observances via the grape vine route. All reports should be sent to us right away in order that we may complete our records. Every school observing the week should report the observance—whether it be in part or in full—and should ask for any assistance needed in carrying out the Forward Step selected. Our goal is fifty observances. If the week was observed in your school, see that it is reported promptly.

Schools reporting the observance to date are:

Brookhaven District—Brookhaven, Brandywine, and Rehoboth.

Hattiesburg District—Heidelberg, Richton, Collins, Court Street, Purvis, New Augusta, New Hebron; Bethel and Mount Olive, on the Mount Olive charge; Broad Street, Sumrall.

Jackson District—Learned, Fannin, Bentonia, Edwards.

Meridian District—Central Church.

Newton District—Morton, Forest.

Seashore District—Coalville, Wiggins.

Vicksburg District—Holly Bluff, Liberty.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. W. L. Storment, pastor at Sunflower, is organizing a class and is to use "The Small Sunday School" as a text. This makes the third volunteer to take up the work of teaching. Let us line up the hundred volunteers early in the year. Remember, a man is not limited to one class. "What Every Methodist Should Know" should be taught in a hundred congregations. This would create a new loyalty to our church. It seems to me any man would jump at the opportunity of teaching the people the great, good things about the church.

It is necessary that we fix places and dates of the Standard Training Schools to be held during the ensuing year. This should be done before Dec. 10. We want to work out the courses to be given so the largest number will be benefited. It is our plan to offer the "Materials and Methods" courses to be given at Grenada the first week in June. If we do not have as many as ten to a class, that course ought to be omitted and another given. There is only one way to find out the courses desired, and that is to have those interested write us. We are anxious to give a course on the appreciation and value of music in worship. We have in mind inviting an instructor of national reputation, but we dare not unless we have a number of preachers and musicians intimate that they would like to take such a course. Comparatively speaking, only a few people read these notes, but those who do read them might inform those who do not read and let them express themselves at once. The title of the course we want to give is, "Music and Hymnody." It is not a course in music, but an appreciation of music. I beg you write me your opinion and wishes as to this or any other course. It is high time we were giving a course, "The Home in Society." If we can secure a sufficient number to take the course, it is possible we can secure an instructor. At any rate, let me hear from you as soon as you read this notice.

Minter City heads the list of schools sending in missionary offering to my address at Grenada. This school is not only on time, but a little ahead of time. We are counting on 300 schools this year that will give missionary instruction regularly and send in the offering as soon as taken for our home field and for Europe. This project is our hope for extending the kingdom in our Conference and in Europe. Both fields are needy beyond description. Three hundred schools participating in the Dual Special would assure us of the greatest success we have yet attained. There are four of us at work on this job, and we crave the privilege of helping any school that needs help. Get this phase of our work started and the whole church will feel the beneficial effects.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Thanksgiving season was celebrated in the Alexandria District with a joint service and laying of the corner stone of the Pineville church. The service in the morning was very beautiful, including special music numbers and sermon by the presiding elder, Rev. C. C. Weir.

The ladies of the church served a Thanksgiving dinner to help with the debt on the church building, after which the congregation and their friends met for the laying of the corner stone, at which service Dr. Cleanth Brooks made the address.

This was a big day for the Pineville folk and their friends, and one of great thanksgiving and rejoicing.

A report from the General Office at Nashville in regard to the Home and Parent-Teacher work in our Sunday schools, shows five centers of work in Louisiana: At Alexandria, with Miss Flavilla Bradt as president; Baton Rouge, Mrs. O. L. Tucker, president; Crowley, Mrs. P. A. Bacon, president; Shreveport, Mrs. R. E. Smith, president; and New Orleans, Mrs. A. G. Malone, president, Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, director.

This week we have received Sunday School Day offerings from Elizabeth, Many, and Tickfaw. Mrs. G. W. Nesom, superintendent at Tickfaw, writes that although the contribution from there is small, she feels that God's blessings are with the school, and of this we feel certain.

Rev. H. W. Jordan, pastor at Covington, has just closed his second Cokesbury Training class, with thirteen taking credits, thus making a total of nineteen credits for this year.

Last Sunday morning I paid Glenmora a visit. Rev. A. S. J. Neill, who is a college mate of mine, is in charge of the church there, and I enjoyed every minute of my stay, partaking of the hospitality of the parsonage. Brother W. W. Guinn is superintendent of the Sunday school.

In the November issue of "The Home Field," published by the Sunday School Board of Florida, there is a most interesting article pertaining to the extension program and rural work. Accompanying this is a picture of the log cabin in which Bishop Hay was born, with the following inscription that tells volumes: "No adequate estimate has ever been made of the leadership which the country church has furnished to the world. We must not abandon this field."

Brother P. C. Taylor, of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, in charge of the Adolescent work of the Conference, has sent us the following interesting items:

"The plans for a summer camp are taking definite form and we hope to be able to announce final arrangements in the very near future. Miss Pauline Wynn has been giving us some valuable suggestions and has promised to do all she can to make the proposition a success. We are very fortunate in having her in our Conference to help put over a new enterprise. At our General Council meeting in December, we are expecting to complete the plans and arrangements as to faculty, location, and courses. It is our purpose to get the courses recognized by the General Sunday School Board, that credit may be given those who attend the camp.

"You can't afford to miss it. Begin now to make your plans for the State-Wide Sunday School meeting at Alexandria next spring. It won't be long. We want to make it the greatest meeting the Young People's section has ever had. We expect to have with us on the banquet night the Honorable Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy, newspaper publisher, and Christian statesman. We want every church represented at this great gathering."

Christmas Money for You

Search Your Attic for Fortunes in Old Envelopes

Among the old letters of many families are hundreds of very rare stamps and envelopes. Many have been found and sold for fortunes. Single envelopes have been sold for as high as $6,000, and many have brought upwards of $100 each. It sounds "fishy," but it's true. They are valuable because they are rare. And they are rare, not because there are only a few, but simply because most of them have remained stored away and forgotten, in old trunks, family chests and closets.

Make a thorough search through your attic or store room for such old letters—anything mailed from 1845 to 1865. Fortunes in rare stamps have been found in old trunks which no one ever dreamed contained anything of value. Keep the letters if you wish, but send the envelopes to Mr. Harold C. Brooks, Box 258, Marshall, Michigan, and he will immediately write you, stating their value. In sending them to him you are not obliged to sell unless his offer meets with your approval. Anything not purchased he will return in good order. Mr. Brooks, who is mayor of his city, is a private collector and has paid thousands of dollars for old envelopes bearing stamps. Although the rare issues are especially desired he also buys many of the commoner kinds. Many people in this way are getting Christmas money with very little trouble and no expense.

The advertising manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate has known Mr. Brooks for many years, and you may place fullest confidence in his integrity. On receipt of envelopes he will examine them and report promptly their value. If they are not purchased, he guarantees to return them in good order.

Mr. Brooks states that there are so many different stamps which are similar in appearance he cannot quote values from written descriptions, but must see the envelopes. Furthermore, he is not interested in buying loose stamps or stamp collections, but only the old envelopes bearing postage; so do not cut the stamps from the envelopes. It is not necessary to write dates on envelopes as Mr. Brooks is fully acquainted with all issues even though the postmark shows no year date. Those especially wanted are United States issues, but he also buys Confederate, Canadian, Hawaiian, and certain foreign stamps provided they are on the original envelopes and mailed not later than 1865.

If envelopes are sent in a bunch they should be carefully packed in a cardboard box to protect them from damage while in the mails. If you have reason to believe your envelopes are of special value send them by registered or insured mail. If you have no old letters written during or before the Civil War, show this notice to your friends—especially those whose families have lived in the same home for several generations. Many old families, old banks and law firms still have stored away hundreds of letters, waiting to be burned or sold for large sums. Before destroying such envelopes or folded letters investigate their value. Mr. Brooks' address is as follows: HAROLD C. BROOKS, Box 258, Marshall, Mich.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GIRLS OF SCHOOL AGE LEARN VALUABLE LESSON

Find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Medicine

LOUISE LOUTHAN
ROUTE 2, CHARLESTON, ILLINOIS

From the days of the polonaise to the days of the radio, mothers have given this dependable medicine to their daughters. School girls are often careless. They get wet feet. They overstudy or they tire themselves with too many dances and parties. They get run down.

Many an active girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, has found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is helping her to find better health and energy.

"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

"My daughter was out of school two terms. I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my life and finally decided that she should try it. Three bottles helped her in various ways for the next couple of years."—Mrs. W. E. Gillette, 986 E. 52nd Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have always been sickly, and until I was fourteen my father was very strict about my perfect attendance at grammar school. I have gone to school through hard storms and often taken cold. When I was fourteen I took to my bed and did not get up for eighteen months. Everyone thought I could not live. Just four months ago I began taking your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I could notice a great change almost at once. Now I feel like a new person. I wish all girls would try Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine."—Mrs. C. M. Smith, Union Village, Vermont.

APPRECIATION OF CO-OPERATION IN YOUNG PEOPLE'S REVIVAL.

Dear Dr. Carley: I wish to express through the Advocate my appreciation of the fine spirit of loyalty and co-operation throughout the Conference in carrying out the plans for the Young People's revival. It has been a successful and worthwhile achievement among the young people of Louisiana Leaguedom. I deem it a sacred privilege to have had the opportunity to promote this worthy movement in our Conference, and could not have achieved results without the co-operation of the League officers and members throughout the State. Special appreciation is due Rev. James B. Grambling, our Conference Board president; Rev. Guy M. Hicks, Rev. B. C. Taylor; Mr. Charles N. White, our State Epworth League president; Miss Elizabeth Langford, our new State Field Secretary, and all pastors and Leaguers who assisted in carrying out the suggested plans for our great Young People's Revival.

I am confident that great good has been accomplished and God has been glorified.

Yours for service in his kingdom,
DON E. DULANEY,
State Vice President Epworth League Board.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION OF REV. C. H. STRAIT.

(Rev. C. H. Strait served six years as pastor of the Decatur-Hickory charge, Mississippi Conference. After his appointment to Meadville and Bude at the recent Conference, the Baptist church at Hickory adopted the resolutions given herewith.—Editor.)

We feel confident that Brother Strait's life since coming to us has been a blessing and a benediction to all those who have had the happy privilege of knowing and working with him. He has been unceasing in his labor to build up the Master's kingdom in this part of his vineyard, and his unselfish devotion to his cause at all times has been the means of bringing many of us in closer touch with him.

His loving ministration in times of trouble will ever remain a sacred memory in our hearts. Many a fevered brow has been smoothed, many a broken heart has been comforted, and many a life has been saved for service by his kind and sympathetic work, and his untiring efforts to be of service to others.

Brother Strait has grown in our hearts, and it is with reluctance that we give him up to go elsewhere; but,

Whereas, God has called him to labor in another part of his vineyard; and,

Whereas, we realize that we should be unselfish in the cause of Christ; therefore, be it resolved by the members of the Hickory Baptist church:

1. That we commend Brother Strait as a loyal, faithful servant of God, worthy of the highest confidence and esteem, and we extend congratulations to the fortunate congregation that secures his services, "a tried and true" laborer for him.

2. Brother Strait, as a consecrated pastor, has done this church and the kingdom of God a great service. May the Lord add many years of usefulness to his life.

3. That he will do the work of his new church and the Master in a worthy way.

4. That these resolutions be recorded in the church minutes, and that a copy be given to Brother and Sister Strait.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

missionaries, in which the Young People and Juniors assisted, there being present about forty members and twenty-five visitors.

After Bible reading by the president, Mrs. F. A. McLain offered prayer, and that great old hymn, "The Whole Wide World for Jesus," was sung with feeling melody by Mrs. Ottis Jackson and Mrs. J. C. Lowry. Mrs. George Lynch then gave a historical introduction of the Week of Prayer, and Mrs. W. J. Conerly told the story of our Home Special, "Valley Institute," with telling appeal.

Mrs. Jackson, in her own winning manner, gave us "Palmore," the Japan Special, and the chairman tersely presented "Every Woman to Win Every Woman," and lighted the radiant central candle—the hope of all ages, Jesus the light of the world.

As sweet strains of music pealed forth, the waiting circle of twenty-nine candles sprang successively into light, beauty and usefulness at the call of a loved name and the touch of willing fingers from Adults, Young People's, and children; then a chorus of prayer ascended for the safe-keeping of these, our missionary daughters. A hymn of praise followed the generous offering, and closed the service.

ZONE MEETING, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

The last zone meeting of the year for the auxiliaries in the Northern Brookhaven District was held in the Pleasant Valley church, Oct. 26, 1927.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 a. m., Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, zone leader, presiding.

The devotional service, conducted by Mrs. Clarence Wade, Centerpoint, consisted of reading a parable (II John 15), "an earthly story with a heavenly meaning," which illustrated how dependent God is upon us to carry on his work, also how dependent we are on God. A prayer was offered by Mrs. Bishop, and followed by a song, "Thy Kingdom Is Coming." The visitors were welcomed my Mrs. Byron Barnes, representing the auxiliaries of the Bayou Pierre charge. The response was made by Mrs. C. H. Trawick, of Gallman.

The roll was called and the auxiliaries responded as follows: Crystal Springs, 21; Brandywine, 9; Barlow, 4; Pleasant Valley, 7; Centerpoint, 3; Gallman, 5; Hazlehurt, 16.

Mrs. P. D. Sigler talked of our aims and responsibilities as Christian workers. She said that each worker should aim for a closer walk with God. All are builders of the kingdom and the Christian organization is the best mobilized arm of God. With the many blessings which we receive came greater responsibilities. Each Christian should humbly assume the responsibility, for the glory of life is to serve and not to be served, to love and not to be loved, to give and not to receive.

Following a few words of welcome and encouragement by Rev. Mr. Griffin, the pastor, plans for the preparation of the Jubilee celebration were discussed by Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson. To the Conference historian each auxiliary should send data used in its historical meeting. Then each auxiliary should appoint a spiritual cultivator, who should hold group prayer meetings. She also encouraged family prayer and the reading of Scripture.

Following a beautiful message in song by Mrs. Sam Wood, Mrs. C. W. Crisler told "Why Have Bible and Mission Study in the Auxiliary." Repeating Scripture, such as, "Think We Have Eternal Life; Know ye Have Eternal Life;" "Study to make Thyself Approved Unto God," convinced her listeners at once.

The leader exhibited three copies of the Missionary paper. The first was dated 1908. Another of a later date was known then as the Home. The third was the Missionary Voice of to-day. Much development and improvement was noted. Photographs of several women who have been founders in missionary development were shown along with the papers.

Mrs. B. F. White ably discussed Christian stewardship.

Dr. C. W. Crisler was invited to say a few words.

The Crystal Springs Society presented the play, "Aunt Tildy Learns to Tithe," which was a lesson to all present.

An invitation to lunch was extended. After this delightful repast the meeting adjourned.

MRS. AUGUSTUS V. ZAMA,
Zone Secretary.

THE LITTLE WORDS OF THE BIBLE.

The Bible contains 810,697 words. This is about four times as many as are found in a book of average length. Although so long a book and dealing with the greatest theme that can engage the mind of man, its vocabulary is singularly limited. Only 6,000 different words are used, which is very small compared to the 20,000 employed by Shakespeare in writing his plays.

Not only is the vocabulary limited, however, but the average word in the Bible contains but five letters. Many of the short words in the Bible are, however, full of the deepest meaning and are worthy of earnest study. Such a one is the short five-letter word, "Grace," over which theologians have for centuries waged bitter controversies.

The Oxford English Dictionary defines, "Grace" as: "The free and unmerited favor of God as manifested in the salvation of sinners and the bestowing of blessing. The benign influence which operates in them to regenerate and sanctify, to inspire virtuous impulses, and to impart strength to endure trial and resist temptation."

It is evident that the little words in the Bible must not be lightly passed over and that not only should the Bible be studied as a whole, by books, chapters and verses, but even word for word, lest some treasure be missed.—Oxford University Press.

Starts Hens Laying

Here's a New Way to Get Eggs in Winter. Costs Nothing to Try

A letter from Miss Dama Wright, Vernonia, Ore., has a real idea for chicken raisers who are not getting plenty of eggs. She says:

"Late in October, our fifteen hens were not laying at all. I started giving them Don Sung, and for ten days they still didn't lay. But on the eleventh day they laid thirteen eggs, and it is wonderful what Don Sung has done for our egg basket."

Don Sung, the Chinese egg laying tablets which Miss Wright used, are opening the eyes of chicken raisers all over America. The tablets can be obtained from the Burrell-Dugger Co., 382 Allen St., Indianapolis, Ind. Poultry raisers whose hens are not laying well should send 50 cents for a trial package (or $1 for the extra large size, holding three times as much). Don Sung is positively guaranteed to do the work or money promptly refunded, so it costs nothing to try. Right now is the time to start giving Don Sung to your hens, so you will have a good supply of fresh eggs all winter.

Vol. 22—No. 49. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3678.

Proceedings of the Louisiana Annual Conference

First Day—Wednesday, Nov. 30.

The eighty-second session of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., Wednesday morning, Nov. 30, at 9 o'clock, Bishop Warren A. Candler presiding. The Bishop announced and the congregation joined in singing Hymn No. 222, "Jesus, the Name High Over All," after which Bishop Candler led in prayer. He read a Scripture lesson from the ninth and tenth chapters of the Gospel by Luke, and spoke on the subject of heroism in the ministry. The congregation then joined in singing, "Am I Soldier of the Cross?"

After the roll was called by Dr. R. H. Harper, the organization of the Conference was completed by the election of Dr. Harper as secretary, with J. F. Foster and J. Cude Rousseaux as assistant secretaries, and of R. W. Vaughan as statistical secretary, with J. M. Boykin, R. L. Clayton, and H. B. Hines as assistants. The hours of convening and adjourning were fixed at 9 o'clock a. m. and 12 o'clock noon.

On nomination of K. W. Dodson for the presiding elders, the following committees were elected:

Conference Relations: J. B. Williams, B. H. Andrews, R. H. Bamburg, W. R. Harvell, J. A. Alford, L. E. Crooks, H. W. Cudd, J. T. McVey.

District Conference Records: P. H. Fontaine, F. B. Hill, I. T. Reames.

Memoirs: W. W. Drake, for Mrs. H. O. White; A. S. J. Neill, for Mrs. T. S. Randle.

Sabbath Observance: A. S. Lutz, F. J. McCoy, S. A. Seegers.

A telegram of greeting from Dr. W. L. Duren, for six years pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, was read, and the secretary instructed to make suitable reply.

Bishop Candler formally announced the transfer of Dr. Frank L. Wells from the St. Louis to the Louisiana Conference. Dr. Wells is pastor of the church in which the Conference is being held, and is a most gracious host.

Communications from the Seashore District of the Mississippi Conference and from the Alabama Conference concerning the Seashore Camp Ground property were read and referred to the Board of Education. The report of the Seashore Divinity School was read and likewise referred to the Board of Education. The report stated that the next session of the Divinity School would be held June 19-July 3. The report of the president of Centenary College was read and referred to the Board of Education. Various other papers were referred without reading to appropriate boards and committees.

The resignation of S. H. Meyer as a member of the Legal Conference, of the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School, of the Board of Missions, and of the Memorial Home Board was presented. His resignation as a member of the Legal Conference was accepted, with an expression of thanks for his faithful service, and the other resignations were referred to the designated boards for their action.

R. S. Tinnin, representing the Methodist Benevolent Association, was presented to the Conference, and he spoke briefly concerning that organization.

T. W. Holloman, treasurer of the ministerial flood relief fund, made his final report, and, at his request, the report was referred to a committee for auditing. The Conference voted its thanks to Brother Holloman for his faithful service in connection with this fund.

These reports showed that 2,942 members have been added to the church on profession of faith during the year, and that good progress has been made at many points.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson, General Secretary of the Board of Education, was presented to the Conference, and he spoke briefly but forcefully concerning the contributions church colleges have made to the leadership and work of the church.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, was presented to the Conference.

BISHOP DuBOSE'S JUBILEE SERMON.

(Delivered at the Mississippi Annual Conference, Jackson, Miss., Nov. 10, 1927.)

But the name which stands for the brightest light of all that constellation has yet to be mentioned. Charles Betts Galloway, then twenty-eight years of age, was the host of the Conference, and even then towered against the horizon of the church's future. Having just finished my nineteenth year and having been recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection, I left in Eastern Mississippi the work of a schoolmaster and repaired to the State capital to make the supreme juncture of my life, membership in a Methodist Annual Conference. Quaking with youthful wonder and interest, I knocked at the door of the Methodist parsonage in the quaint little city, and my summons was answered by the young pastor referred to before. From that moment he became one of the two dearest friends of all my life. I wish I could paint the portrait of the Galloway whom I saw that day, the face overspread with the light of alertness and sympathy, the eyes of mastery which had not lost their winsomeness and power when I looked into them for the last time thirty-two years afterwards, and in all but the hour of death, the looks and beard of raven black, the stature built for a model of physical manhood, the brow like Lebanon, the lips alight with unuttered eloquence, and behind it all the heart which beat through pulses destined to express the ideals of the church and of the continent. From that day forward we were as younger and elder brother and labored with all but a single thought in the kingdom of our Lord. It was soon after this that with C. B. Galloway and Embree E. Hoss I sat down in the home of the former to a luncheon which was the beginning of the augment of a friendship which has sweetened and determined the course and choices of my life.

On the second day of the Conference Bishop McTyeire arrived and assumed the presidency. On entering the Conference room I saw him standing at the speaker's chair and in the act of calling the Conference to order. His presence was most impressive, his words measured, and his voice resonant and strong. Being seated near the front, as the proceedings advanced I noticed that the gavel in his hand was fashioned from a particularly fine wood, and later I noted that the same was studded with mother of pearl. It had been presented to the Bishop by an appreciative friend about the time of the founding of Vanderbilt University. In the year before his death he presented this gavel to Dr. E. E. Hoss, then a professor in Vanderbilt University, in token of the presage of his coming entrance into the episcopacy. In 1918, when I was preparing to enter upon what proved to be eight years of episcopal administration in the West, Bishop Hoss pressed the wondrous heirloom into my hands, saying: "This talisman will take the succession of apostolic affection." In 1922 I gave this gavel to Bishop Candler to be placed in the museum of Emory University. I trust that it may remain a token and memorial of the integrity and unselfish loyalty of the Methodist episcopacy.

The missionary anniversary of the Conference fell on Friday night and in the Hall of Representatives. The speaker was Rev. John B. McFerrin, D.D., the then missionary secretary of the connection. It was my first sight and hearing of that prodigy of the ecclesiastical platform. He was then a septuagenarian and justified the title of "Archon." With a frame that might have been a reversion to primeval type, the brow of Vulcan, and a voice like apocalyptic thunder, he swayed the multitude as I have seen few men do. This man lived to contribute to the making of a newer time than the one in which he was born.

On Saturday of the session the daily papers brought telegraphic news of the death of Albert Taylor Bledsoe, editor of the Southern Review. Bishop McTyeire made formal announcement of the event to the Conference, and spoke briefly of the great career which was thus closed. He and the astute editor but a little while before had been engaged in sharp controversy. At the moment I passed in my youthful mind a just judgment upon the generous words of the Bishop, who, as I think I then understood, had been worsted in the controversy.

An official visitor to this Conference was Rev. Linius Parker, D.D., afterwards Bishop Parker, but at that time editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. As he depicted in his address to the Conference the experiences of a church editor I did not dream how much of my own fortune was being told. I had been before my entrance into the Conference a reader and student of the issues of the Southern Review, covering the period from 1870 forward. At that time its editor was freely acclaimed in Great Britain as "America's great thinker." The mention of his name and the tributes paid to his genius stirred my emotions and quickened my imagination, but my widest thought could not have anticipated that the pen which was then surrendered, passing down through a line of successors, should one day, by the church's choice, be committed to my hands. Thus are the responsibilities of life transferred from generation to generation, but not always with equal measure of fitness.

The sermon of Bishop McTyeire on Sunday was a notable one, notable for the absence from it of that very thing which up to that time I had supposed essentianl to a bishop's sermon—rhetoric. The text was the words addressed by the Master to Zacchaeus in the sycamore tree: "Zacchaeus, . . . to-day I must abide in thy house." The sermon was through and through characteristic of the preacher, a sermon such as few men could preach, such as few men would attempt, for in the hands of a mediocre it had failed in the making. But a master in Israel served the tabernacle that day.

The climax of a Methodist Annual Conference, the reading of the list of pastoral appointments, comes as a homely sensation to the veteran and in the near-veteran of the body, but to the Timothies and the John Marks it is the beginning of emotions, and to one on this occasion it became the precedent of a thrill which has not spent itself during the experiences of half a hundred years, whether reckoned from the seat of a probationer or from the chair of the Conference.

In a clear, distinct voice that master of assemblies, Holland Nimmons McTyeire, one of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, read, "Chotard Circuit, H. M. DuBose," and so it stands unchangeable in the record. It nearly as well had been appointment to a mission in Dahomeyland or a parish in the Antipodes. It was removed from my paternal home by the breadth of the commonwealth. This indeed was no great distance, but to my youthful imagination it was scarcely less distant than the great circle of the moon. But what joy, what sense of honor, what inspiration emerged in the thought of being assigned to a "cure of souls," and those dear future parishioners proved to be in unusual need of remedial grace and pastoral instruction. A proud people, clothed in the faded and war-rent habiliments of their former pride, they had been long without direct ministry, and even without seasonal hearing of the Word or administration of the ordinances. No church organization of any such conditions as those which met St. Paul at Athens, at Corinth, and at Ephesus. It was more distinctly missionary territory, but exhibited such conditions as those which met St. Paul at Athens, at Corinth, and at Ephesus. It was spiritual poverty shot through with politeness, culture and utter self-complacency.

Only a sympathetic imagination can conceive of the feeling and situation of an ex-country schoolmaster of nineteen who finds himself the sole spiritual guide, the "parson" of a large community parish, possessed, even obsessed, of the characteristics which I have described. A small chapel, mildewed and somewhat dilapidated, was the radial center of the parish allotted me. But Sabbath after Sabbath the pastor went forth, holding "missions" and giving Bible readings in the parlors of the plantation homes situated along the front of the great inland sealike river. The year had its joys, its sore tests of mind, and its scanty ingatherings, but also its times of refreshing from the Spirit.

My parish at Chotard had also a collateral side which most distinctly impressed and affected my mental habits and ideals. The Yazoo-Mississippi Delta, which describes the body of alluvial lands lying for an indefinite distance northward between those rivers—is one of the most fertile sections of the American continent. In it the fecundity of the Valley of the Nile is reproduced. Here during the decades of the half century immediately preceding the War between the States flourished a feudal planting system under the institution of domestic slavery which produced a type of luxury and civilized elegance nowhere surpassed, if anywhere equaled, during any period of American history. The conditions which followed the War between the States radically altered the aspect of this life situation, but there was still left and survived for a period of years an interesting and important entailment of this older feudal order. In the persisting mansions of the planters remained in many instances the rich furniture, heirlooms, paintings, and bric-a-brac which it was a habit of the families and heirs of these seats to accumulate. In less frequent instances rich and extensive libraries were gathered into these homes. Chotard, a largely undeveloped estate, which gave its name to the circuit, was in the midst of what had been a characteristic link in this chain of splendid estates, with their vast acreages and appointed homesteads. Within a distance of thirty miles might have been counted as many holdings whose farmhouses well could have been assessed as princely. Though much of their dignity was even at the time to which this record relates only a memory, it was tangible and still a source of gratulation and heralded boast.

No more hospitable establishment nor one more politely regulated could have been found in all this region than Villa Vista, the plantation home of Colonel Basil G. Kiger, a Virginian of the blood and a man of the world, but sworn to the courtesies and amenities of his tradition. Under his roof had been assembled a library of classic character and of a wide range of titles. The history of the origin of this library should be more interesting to Methodist people of the South. Mrs. Caroline Gwinn Kiger, the wife of Colonel Kiger, was a daughter of Dr. James Gwinn and niece of Senator William McKendree Gwinn, the latter famous as a California pioneer and author of the first constitution of that commonwealth. These two astute brothers were the sons of Father James Gwinn, an early Tennessee itinerant and an intimate friend of Bishop William McKendree. Mrs. Kiger had inherited the combined book gatherings of her grandfather, the itinerant; her father, himself a book-lover; and her uncle, the distinguished publicist, who during the War between the States naturalized in Mexico and was there given the titles and holdings of a duke by the Emperor Maximillian, of tragic fame. These combined collections, as one can see, made an unusual bibliothique for a private home.

In this home, with access to its treasure of books, the young pastor of Chotard found an unending welcome. Nor was the welcome of the book spirits in their hall of audience less generous than that which was met in the drawing room and guest chamber of the planter's mansion. The standard English poets, essayists, historians, treatises on the humanities, works on science, and discussions in the fields of theology and ecclesiastical institutes, with translations of the classics of other languages, were frocked in the vellum and buckram bindings of this opulent literary store. It was a place in which to revel and grow the thews of Anakim. But this autobiographer deposes not. Every rule fails at last.

However, I must cite an incident of the increment drawn from the two years' use made of this old-time home library. Amongst the church histories and creedal volumes found on the planter's book-shelves was the three-volume "History of the English Reformation," by Bishop Burnett. The reading of this magnum opus proved a toilful and sometimes turgid task. But no exercise of my mind ever returned a larger and more enduring result. Dr. Edward Young, author of "Night Thoughts," in his theologue days applied to a contemporary ecclesiatic for advice as to his private reading. The scholar strongly advised him to read the works of the schoolmen, Thomas Aquinas and Dun's Scotus. This advice, which upon its face appears ludicrous and unbelievable, was followed by the theologue at great cost of time and mental concentration; but the exercise resulted in producing one of the most unique and affluet intellects of the English church. I can make no boastful claim concerning my use of the creedal history of the great churchman. But this I may state with modesty—namely, that when thirty years later the American Methodist churches became involved in a controversy over the revision of the abridged Edwardine Creed, known as the Twenty-Five Articles, and this autobiographer was forced into the lists as protagonist of the anti-revisionists, it was the long-stored-up knowledge gleaned from these ponderous volumes that supplied an effective answer to the demand for revison. I revert to this as a matter of history. The times themselves conspired against revision. It was then too late to write a creed, and the years that since have passed have more than confirmed that judgment. The creedal appeal of the future must be to the naked text of the Canon, to its truth, to its historicity, and to its doctrinal totality. It is well that no new creeds have been attempted. The great historic creeds will remain, but, like the pent-up waters of an overflow reservoir, their tenets must return at last to the mother stream, the word of revelation itself.

During the year 1878 there fell on the land from the jetties of the Mississippi to the middle reaches of the Ohio Valley the historic scourge of yellow fever, the most deadly epidemic of any disease to visit the States of this republic. The young probationer at Chotard and his people were shut up strictly within the limits of their parish, a rigid quarantine being drawn around the entire littoral. During the months of that sad summer death reaped a ghastly harvest in the crowded quarters of the trans-river plantations; nor did the yellow scourge fail to evade the prouder homes of the plantations' masters. Across the somber tides of the wider river the sound of funeral bells was wafted almost hourly, and continuous tidings of death came officially through quarantine cordons; but, with a single exception, the pestilence entered no home or adjacency within the circle of the Chotard assignment.

The autumn of the year brought relief from the plague and a restoration of hope. With the return of the Conference sitting, the people, constituting this novel parish, Protestants of every name, Roman Catholics, and Jews, united in requesting the pastor's return. A second year of service given to this field greatly deepened my affection for those petitioners, as it accentuated their kindness and courtesy toward their youthful spiritual adviser. Through a long and varied experience as a minister of the Word the memory of those my first years of itinerancy has been as the fragrance of a box of spikenard, filling the house of my conscious being.

My fixed abiding during these years was in the home of Mr. William Purnell, a man of chivalrous soul and saintly walk, and Mrs. Letitia Moore Davis, a churchwoman of rare personal grace, who with her choice and beautiful family made me a year-long wecome and one remembered as a peculiarly precious experience of life.

The session of 1877-78 convened in Hazlehurst, a quiet interior town, but rejoicing in fine religious traditions and loyalties. The chair of the Conference was occupied by Bishop John C. Keener, then in the eighth year of his episcopacy and at the height of his intellectual strength. It was my first sight of that remarkable face sachem-like in appearance, with clear-cut features, aqueline nose, and a brow of majestic reach and turn. The intonations of his voice were deep, sonorous, and naturally emphasized the dignity of his presence and the impressiveness of his personality. He was possessed of a genuine versatility, was witty and master of an axiomatic speech, which well served his humor and the quickness of his perception. But his powers best combined and revealed their highest expression in preaching. In exposition, in illustration, in exhortation, and in the effectiveness of eloquently ordered periods he was often incomparable in discourses. At the end of my third year in the Conference an official matter to which I shall later refer brought me into his confidence, and out of the incident grew a mutual attachment which I felt honored to cherish during the remainding years of his great life.

It was at this sitting that two visitors who afterwards became historically prominent in Methodism were first seen by the body. These were Alpheus W. Wilson, connectional missionary secretary, afterwards bishop, and Mrs. Julianna Hayes, the founder and first president of the Woman's Missionary Society. The impression made by Dr. Wilson as preacher and connectional administrator was a presage of the long and unwaning service which marked his after career as a bishop. I distinctly recall the judgment expressed at that time by no less a critic than Bishop Keener himself, who said: "Alpheus W. Wilson is the greatest preacher on the American continent." Very many—a multitude, in fact—have since indorsed the entirety of that estimate.

The session of the Conference of 1878-79 was held in the city of Meridian, then in the bantling years of its happy growth toward metropolitan proportions. The session was presided over by that quaint Irish wit and truly great preacher, Bishop Hubbard Hinde Cavanaugh. By the imposition of his hands I was at this sitting ordained to the office of deacon and by his appointment became junior pastor on the Fayette charge, David P. Bradford being the senior pastor.

The territory then embraced within the lines of the Fayette circuit contained a number of rural churches, their membership for the most part being made up of people of long-established family traditions. Many evidences of former affluence remained, and the average of intelligence and culture was high. The memories of the older citizens of the country were redolent of the eloquence of Sargent S. Prentiss, the renowned orator, and of the leadership of many former worthies in church and State. Lorenzo Dow had had an indefinite residence within the territory of the circuit, and had often preached from the pulpits of its older chapels.

The mid-centry camp meeting spirit also survived, and constant and soulful were the returns of the season of tabernacles and ingatherings. I shall ever be thankful that the beginning years of my ministry befell before the final eclipse of the passion of the Asburian camp meeting.

The period of this year's ministry was to me more a personal preparation and a taking of observation than of official activity in the pastorate. The fact that I was only junior in the pastorate furnished a providentially ordered opportunity for intensive self-development and for a more intelligent address of purpose and powers to the special work of preaching. I was much of the year an evangelist at special and revival meetings. I sought to bring my bucolic messages not only through the bloodtide of a living experience, but also through the consistency of whatever gray matter results may have accrued from reading and study. I have always held that a sermon should be the reflex of the preacher's experience and that an effective experience is both of the soul and the mind. The true sermon is the gospel's message, plus the man who delivers it. The message is worthy of the best the man has to give, all and singly of what he is. These thoughts always have been associated with the year of service spent in that quaint but pleasing handbreadth of civilization known to the Methodists of that day as the Fayette circuit.

The Conference session of 1879-80 was held in the old Crawford Street Church in Vicksburg. During the then closing and the two previous years the pastorate of that church had been served by the beloved Galloway. Many happy influences affecting the first three years of my ministry came through association with this church and its sympathetic and apostolic pastor. It was during the first of these years that both he and his faithful wife were stricken with yellow fever, and each in turn brought near to death. But through what the whole church considered a miracle of providence in answer to general prayer they recovered and were long spared to honor and to be honored by the churches of world-wide Methodism.

In the absence of Bishop Wightman, appointed to preside, but because of serious illness prevented from serving, Dr. Charles G. Andrews was elected to the presidency of the Conference. The vote by which he was preferred was large and was taken by many to indicate his nomination for the episcopacy; but though he was well supported by his brethren, his younger colleague, Galloway, was selected two years later. Between these two there was always a strong tie, and the advancement of the younger man did not estrange his elder brother.

The only connectional visitors of note at this sitting of the Conference were Dr. E. E. Hoss, then president of Martha Washington College, and Dr. John B. McFerrin, at that time serving as Book Agent of the Publishing House. Dr. McFerrin was in great sorrow because of the death of a beloved son. I think it was his last visit to this Southern body. He was now in the decline of his strength and some years afterwards went to a glorious reward.

At this Conference I was stationed at Bimsville, in the northeastern section of the Conference, but in the month of February following I was transferred to the Texas Conference and stationed at St. James Church, in the city of Galveston. It was in connection with this transfer that I came to have that confidential intimacy with Bishop Keener of which I have spoken. He was a man of iron and action, but one in whom the grace of courtesy was as sweet as the honeycomb of Hymettus.

Thus was rounded out the three years of my first connections with this old Conference, a connection to be renewed after the lapse of sixteen years, and to continue through the nineteen succeeding years; so that slightly more than one-half

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

John's Gospel and spoke on the subject of the Incarnation.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read and approved. The secretary read a communication from A. H. Parker, who was detained at home by illness, stating that he was on the road to recovery.

A communication was read from Rev. J. J. Morgan, Southwestern agent of the American Bible Society, Dallas, Texas, stating that the Society would supply Bibles free of charge for distribution among the flood sufferers in Louisiana as far as its funds would permit.

Bishop Candler announced the transfer of C. B. Powell from the Little Rock to the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, who came to this Conference by transfer last year, was presented to the Conference.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education, recommending the raising of a loan on the Mansfield College property in order to meet maturing obligations of the Conference Educational Bond issue, and recommending the appointment of a commission to work out the details of a plan for the consolidation of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, was presented. After some discussion, further consideration of the report was made the order of the day for Saturday morning at ten o'clock.

Dr. Frank Brandon, associate secretary of the General Hospital Board, was presented to the Conference, and he spoke concerning the hospital work of the church. Following him, Bishop Candler spoke briefly on the same subject.

Dr. C. C. Selecman, president of Southern Methodist University, was presented to the Conference and he spoke of the work, resources and needs of this great institution.

The names of the following were called, they were passed in examination of character, they reported their work, and, the committee reporting favorably, they were elected to elder's orders: Dan F. Anders, Don E. Dulaney, J. F. Dring, Guy M. Hicks, Henry W. Jordan, Thos. F. King, Peyton B. McCullin.

Rev. C. C. Miller, in behalf of the preachers of the Baton Rouge District, presented a handsome handbag to Rev. H. N. Brown, who has served the district for four years as presiding elder. Brother Brown made appropriate response.

The report of the Conference Treasurer was received. This report shows that the collections were somewhat in advance of last year.

Rev. C. C. Neal, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, was presented to the Conference and he spoke concerning Haygood College and Paine College. At the close of his address, a collection was taken for the benefit of these schools, amounting to $125. Bishop Candler spoke briefly concerning the obligations of the church to help our colored brethren. The Conference was requested to appoint five trustees to serve on the board of Haygood College, and the request was referred to the Board of Education for nominations.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, the hymn, "Rock of Ages," was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. W. May.

The Woman's Missionary Society held its meeting at 3 o'clock p.m., with an interesting program. The Board of Missions held its anniversary at 7:45 p.m., the principal address being delivered by Dr. Elmer T. Clark, of the General Board of Missions.

Fourth Day, Saturday, Dec. 3—Morning Session.

Conference convened at 9 o'clock, Bishop Candler in the chair. The hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," was sung, after which Rev. C. D. Atkinson led in prayer. Bishop Candler read the parable of the Wise and the Foolish Virgins and spoke thereon.

The Board of Education asked for and was granted permission to withdraw for a special meeting.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read and approved.

The following were passed in examination of character and advanced to the class of the fourth year: J. B. Grambling, C. W. Lahey, L. R. Nease, H. B. Hines. When the name of H. B. Hines was called, his character was arrested on the charge of financial irregularities, but after the Conference had heard the case it decided that his moral character was not involved, and voted for the passage of his character. A. M. Serex was reported as having completed the course of study.

Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League Board, addressed the Conference.

F. C. Cady was granted a location at his own request.

The special order of the day, consideration of Report No. 1 of the Board of Education, was taken up. The board asked for and was granted permission to withdraw the report. Another report was submitted, recommending the Conference to authorize the borrowing of $30,000 to meet maturing obligations growing out of the Educational Bond Issue of the Conference, the loan to be secured by an emergency assessment of $50,000 to be raised by the second Sunday in March, by pledging unpaid subscriptions to the Christian Education Fund, and by such personal endorsments as could be secured. After full discussion, the report was adopted. Following its adoption, Bishop Candler addressed the Conference as to the importance and necessity of adequate support of our educational institutions. The suggestion was made that a collection be taken, and the response was prompt and generous. Mr. T. L. James, of Ruston, stated that he would give a dollar for every dollar raised in cash. At the close of the morning session, it was announced that the total collection amounted to $6468, of which $3588 was in cash. Mr. James said that he would give till the middle of the afternoon to secure additional cash contributions, privately expressing the hope that it would be increased to at least $5000. The Conference expressed its appreciation of Mr. James's proposition by a unanimous vote of thanks.

The spontaneous response to the appeal of this great cause and the liberal contributions of the members of the Conference, both clerical and lay, was one of the most heartening experience the Louisiana Conference has had in many a day.

On motion of the presiding elder, H. N. Brown, the location of A. E. Barrett was moved on the ground of inefficiency. After discussion, the motion to locate was lost. A motion was then made and carried that Brother Barrett's name be referred to the Committee on Conference Relations, for the superannuate relation.

T. D. Lipscomb was granted a location at his own request.

An afternoon session at 3 o'clock was ordered.

A resolution to rescind the action of the Conference last year in favor of the division of the property of the Seashore Camp Ground was introduced by L. W. Cain. A motion to refer the resolution to the Board of Education was made as a substitute to the motion to adopt. The hour of adjournment arrived before discussion could take place, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction pronounced by J. B. Williams.

Afternoon Session.

Conference convened at 3 o'clock, Bishop Candler in the chair. After singing, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," Rev. D. C. Kelley, of the Mississippi Conference, one of our general evangelists, led in prayer. The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

The resolution concerning the rescinding of action of the Conference last year in connection with the Seashore Campground property, which was pending at the adjournment of the morning session, was taken up. Rev. J. T. Leggett, of the Mississippi Conference, present as a representative of the Mississippi Board of Trustees, was invited to address the Conference, and he spoke eloquently and forcefully of the importance of maintaining the Camp Grounds as a place for holding assemblies, Bible school, etc. Upon invitation, Bishop Candler also addressed the Conference. After further discussion the vote was taken and the resolution was not adopted.

The following, after having met all disciplinary requirements, were called to the bar of the Conference, addressed the Bishop, and admitted into full connnection: R. L. Armstrong, J. H. Bowdon, W. H. Royal, B. C. Taylor, G. H. Corry. The Committee on Admissions did not recommend the admission of J. D. Fomby, on account of his state of health, and he was not admitted.

R. L. Clayton, John Rasmussen, J. T. Harris, E. W. Day, and John M. Morris were advanced to the Class of the Second Year.

It was reported that T. G. Stamps, having been found guilty of financial wrongdoing, had been expelled from the ministry and membership of the church.

R. A. Cross, Jr., a student at Emory University, was continued in the Class of the First Year.

The Committee on Conference Relations made its report, continuing those already on the list as superannuates in the same relation, and recommended the superannuate relation for H. W. May and A. E. Barrett. Brother May appealed from the report of the committee and made an eloquent plea to be continued on the effective list. The report of the committee was adopted.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction pronounced by S. J. Davies.

Fifth Day—Sunday, Dec. 4.

The Conference love feast was held at 9 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. Wilson Brown, a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference.

Bishop Candler preached at 11 o'clock to a great congregation, after which he ordained G. H. Corry and J. A. Knight deacons.

Dr. F. N. Parker preached at the evening hour to another great congregation, after which Bishop Candler, assisted by R. E. Goodrich, A. S. Lutz, C. C. Wier and C. C. Miller in the laying on of hands, ordained the following elders: D. F. Anders. E. J. Buck, Don E. Dulaney, J. F. Dring, Guy Hicks, H. W. Jordan, T. F. King, P. B. McCullin.

No preachers having died during the year no memorial service was held.

Sixth Day—Monday, Dec. 5.

Bishop Candler took the chair at 9 o'clock and conducted the devotional exercises, Rev. H. W. Rickey leading in prayer. The minutes of the Saturday afternoon session were read and approved. Bishop Candler submitted the certificate of ordination of the deacons and elders on Sunday. H. M. Johnson, of Haynesville, was granted leave of absence on account of sickness in his congregation.

Rev. L. T. Bradfield was received from the Nazarene Church into the Conference for recognition of orders and immediately, at his own request, was granted a location.

The Bishop resumed the call of Question 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in life and official administration?" and completed the call of that question.

Dr. Cleanth Brooks, in behalf of the preachers and laymen of the Alexandria District, presented $50 in gold to Rev. C. C. Wier, retiring presiding elder, as an expression of love and appreciation. Brother Wier responded appropriately.

Bishop Candler expressed appreciation of the gift of $100 in gold from the Conference on the recent occasion of his golden wedding anniversary.

Governor O. H. Simpson was presented to the Conference and spoke briefly, mentioning the fact that he is an alumnus of Centenary College, and speaking in appreciation of the work of the church. Bishop Candler made appropriate response.

The credentials of J. L. Evans, who had withdrawn from the ministry earlier in the year, were reported as in the secretary's hands. The transfer of L. R. Sparks to the Little Rock Conference was formally announced. The withdrawal of Henry T. Young from the ministry and membership of the church was announced and his credentials placed in the hands of the secretary. It was stated that he had joined the Baptist Church.

It was announced that the collection for the educational interests of the Conference, taken on Saturday, amounted to $6,033.70, of which amount $4243.70 was in cash. Mr. T. L. James, by his generous proposition, will give an equal amount for the cash raised, thus making the total of cash, $8,487.40, and the total in cash and pledges, $10,277.40.

Rev. J. G. Snelling made his reports to the Conference as superintendent of the Memorial Home and as Conference Missionary Secretary.

Dr. W. W. Holmes was authorized to convey the sympathy of the Conference to Dr. R. E. Smith and Rev. J. M. Alford on account of sorrow in their homes.

The Bishop asked the Conference for a contribution to the fund for restoring the room occupied by John Wesley at Oxford University, and a collection amounting to $61.85 was taken.

On motion, the time was extended until the business of the Conference should be completed.

The Statistical Secretary made his report, from which it appears that there was a net gain in membership during the year of 1551.

By the adoption of the report of the Board of Lay Activities, T. W. Holloman, of Alexandria, was elected Conference Lay Leader.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, in behalf of the Lake Charles church and people, extended an invitation to the Conference to hold its next session in that city. The invitation was unanimously accepted.

A gavel was presented to Bishop Candler by Mr. J. A. Mullins, a member of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge. The Bishop made graceful acknowledgment of the gift.

Other reports were read and adopted, as follows: Board of Church Extension; Hospital Board; Committee on Memorial Home; Committee on District Conference Records.

Rev. Dan Kelley, of the Mississippi Conference, one of our general evangelists, was presented to the Conference.

The report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance was read and adopted.

On motion, Dr. W. Winans Drake was requested to prepare a memoir of the late Mrs. J. Lane Borden, widow of a minister, for insertion in the Minutes.

A resolution of thanks to the church and friends of Baton Rouge for their hospitality, and for the many courtesies extended, was unanimously adopted. A collection for the benefit of the janitor of the church, who had performed his duties during the Conference so well, was taken.

The minutes were read and approved, after which Bishop Candler announced a hymn, which was sung, led in prayer, made a few remarks, and read the appointments, and Conference adjourned sine die.

BROTHER PASTOR: Have you realized that your most fruitful field for evangelistic effort is your Sunday school, and that for every young person brought to Jesus Christ and into the Church a whole life's work for the Kingdom is possible?

Write to the General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for its plan of Sunday school evangelism and free supplies.

BISHOP DuBOSE'S JUBILEE SERMON.

of my jubilee of ministerial years have been spent in the Conference which received me to itself in the callowness and inexperience of youth. These have indeed been golden years, years that have brought me face to face with the verities of God, years that have answered to the supreme challenge of human history, and years that for me have never wanted the vision of life nor failed of the inspirations of faith. They have been to me the years of the right hand of the Most High.

I refrain from recounting the events and relationships of my later years. That is for my brethren. They will judge me and the manner in which I have met the opportunities and responsibilities of my commission from the church. After the lapse of fifty years I have returned to be with you for a season of simple confidence and old-time fellowship.

HOW I SHOULD LIKE MY LAYMAN TO LISTEN.

By Harold Lancaster.

Boswell once made a confession to Johnson, to this effect, "Sir, there are times when I have a disposition to stinginess," to which remark his plain-spoken friend replied, "So have I, but I don't tell it." There is a babbling about our own affairs which, if not bordering on the vulgar, at least produces boredom. At the same time it is also true that one of the conditions of every warm and vital human relationship is the occasional ruthless thrusting aside of reticence and the allowing of intimate glances into mind and heart.

A few weeks ago a layman wrote an article in Zion's Herald under the caption, "How I Listen to My Minister." Drummond once told of a man who read the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians daily for three months, and at the end of the period no one would have known him for the same individual. A daily reading of that layman's article for a similar period would work such a profound change in the life of many a minister that his congregation would be compelled to cry, "What hath God wrought!" Because this opening of a layman's heart did so much for me, I am led to open mine in the hope it may mean a little to one here and there.

I want my layman to see in me the good minister of Jesus Christ, but not to expect to find in me the perfect one. Alas! God has none such. Any more than he has any perfect congregations. My layman may think he knows a perfect minister and that there may be some chance of securing him next Conference. If that should work out as he plans, his fond dream may persist through the first Sunday; by the close of the second, however, his new minister may not reveal just my particular faults, but faults he will reveal. In the same manner I may think I know a perfect congregation in which I should have none of the worries that now are mine. I might not find in my new church the same people to distress me, but people to distress me I should surely find. If this realization did not affect my preaching to any great degree, it would at least delay the calling of the furniture van.

Again, I should like my layman to realize that his mood matters when he comes to church. It would help me greatly if I could feel that he comes in the spirit of prayer. I know this is a trite thing to say, that it has been said so often before, but then everything that is worth saying, has. A new spirit would pervade our hour of worship if my layman would feel that he had a share in bringing over our little church the hush of the Almighty. The mood in which he comes to worship may mar that for which I have toiled all week. It has been hinted that the Holy Spirit was given the form of a dove to signify that it was so easily ruffled and put to flight. I wonder if many a worship period, when the heavens seemed like brass, did not find its explanation in here and there unlovely dispositions. On the other hand, places can be filled so constantly with praying people, spiritual forces can be put to work so persistently and mightily, that there the material veil becomes thin. The very walls will gleam with the glory of God. A church so pervaded need have no fear of being supplanted by the radio, for it possesses something that can never be broadcast.

Some time I must tell my layman Ian Maclaren's lovely tale of John Carmichael. John trembled from top to toe when he stood in the pulpit. There was a great gulf fixed between his preaching as it was, and he had dreamed of it. One Sunday morning the elders filed into the vestry. Had they come to tell him they could stand it no longer? The oldest and the kindliest of them all began: "We will ask you to remember when you stand in your place to speak to us in the name of the Lord, that as the smoke goeth up from the homes of the people in the morning, so will their prayers be ascending for their minister, and as you look down upon us before you begin to speak, maybe you will say to yourself next Sabbath, 'They are all loving me.' Oh, yes, and it will be true from the oldest to the youngest, we will all be loving you very much." I hazard a guess that a new spirit was evident in John Carmichael's preaching from that day forward.

Then, too, I wish that when my layman sits in the pew he would abandon the attitude of regarding himself as "Defender of the Faith." Of course, the role of St. George is a worthy one, but there are all manner of foes to attack without the imaginary one of my heterodoxy. At least I beg of him to take a rest from his protecting long enough for us to examine together the implications of our faith for this our day.

Faith is not a flame to be crouched about lest it should flicker and go out, it is a light to light the world. It no more needs defending than does the sun. I find it hard to understand why my layman should regard the fact of a doctor's having graduated from an up-to-date institution as an evidence of fitness to heal and save, and regard the graduation of his minister from a similar training as only making him a more eager wielder of the ax for destruction. I sometimes wonder if he has not become a little suspicious of some things himself, and when I say things which seem to justify that suspicion, he becomes annoyed because—well, there is more of the cat in us with its tendency to lie down and purr than there is of the pioneer ever ready to strike his tents.

Before he allows me to go into the pulpit of his church at all, he has the right to know and ought to know that I am loyal, true-hearted, that the story of my life shows that the will of God is my chief concern. After satisfying himself on these points he must encourage me to say the things God gives me to say. When his thoughts and mine do not agree, there may be a chance that now and then he is in the wrong. Now and then the difference may be due to the fact that I ventured further on some lonely stretch and am telling what I have felt and seen. My layman loves God and the church, and in his love is my delight. I only ask him to be assured that I love none the less.

It would help if he would listen to me in the attitude of one who regards the things with which I deal as the things that matter most. He can say this to me by his presence. I have a tendency to feel that he regards the work I do as being ranked with the easily dispensable things of life, when on the flimsiest of excuses he absents himself from worship. If I am to do my best work, I must feel that my task is the dispensing of the very bread and meat of life.

The layman who wrote the article previously referred to stated that there had been times—times, I take it, when his lights burned low—when he had gone far to hear a sermon from one who he knew would bring back the glow. Is it possible that preaching can be made to mean as much as that to those who enter our church door? God help me to remember, then, that I must concern myself always with the tremendous. Any trifling in hours that might be used to help men to stand up to life is unpardonable.—Zion's Herald.

CHEMISTRY DIRECTS NEW INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION.

"When James Watt perfected the steam engine he unwittingly started an industrial revolution. Watt's revolution started in a tea-kettle; the new revolution is starting with the test-tube," says Gustavus J. Esselen, Jr., in the Magazine of Business for December.

This new revolution, continues Mr. Esselen in the article, "The Next Revolution in Industry," is a chemical one: a revolution in materials and processes. "The future influence of the chemical laboratory on industry—and life—can be appreciated when we stop to consider that chemistry deals primarily with raw materials, and that the per capita consumption of raw materials has increased ninefold since Watt's day."

Out of the problems of the world war, there developed a number of chemical discoveries that, taken together, may be said to be the beginning of the new revolution in industry. "One of the problems of the war was the airplane," says Mr. Esselen by way of illustration. "Another was high explosives. Cordite, the high explosive, and airplane varnishes for waterproofing and tautening the wings both required enormous quantities of acetone. The question arose as to whether the available supply of acetone should be allocated to one or the other. While the matter was still under discussion the chemists came forward with a new process of obtaining acetone through the fermentation of starch materials and relieved this serious situation."

Mr. Esselen, by the use of concrete examples, proves that such discoveries as these made imperative by war-time crises, began the long series of industrial changes which followed.

For example, "every time a gallon of acetone is produced by this new process, two gallons of butanol are formed. While the war was on the only thing to do was to store it, with the hope that some valuable use for it might be found. This use was found in connection with another surplus material left from the war—smokeless powder. By a simple treatment this explosive was converted into the base for the modern automobile finishes, and the liquid butanol, together with a near relative, butyl acetate, were found to be valuable adjuncts as solvents. What this has meant in lowered costs for automobile and furniture finishing, and in increased competition to the paint and varnish manufacturers, is now a well-known story."

This story of the utilization of by-products, together with many other examples, indicates that as industry is organized to-day, its future depends largely on materials and their availability. Mr. Esselen points out that manufacturers using raw materials of which there is still an adequate supply, are already looking for processes by which these materials may be obtained synthetically.

In 1898 the world was startled by the depletion of the nitrate of potash deposits essential as a fertilizer as well as the basis of explosives. Since then, however, several ways have been worked out for abstracting nitrogen from the air until to-day the world is using two and a half times as much nitrogenous material made synthetically from the nitrogen of the air as from the natural deposits in Chile.

Rev. Charles Assaf, missionary to the Syrians in Mississippi, is a native of Damascus, and came to America in 1905. He united with the Methodist church in 1921, and began preaching in 1922, since which time he has brought approximately 1,000 souls into the church.

MY PA.

My pa ain't any millyunaire,
But—my! he's offul smart;
He ain't a carpenter, but he
Can fix a feller's cart.
He ain't a doctor, but somehow
My pa—he allus knows
Just what to do to fix a boy
What's got a bloody nose.

My pa ain't Presidunt—becoz,
He says, he never run;
But he could do it just as well
As any Presidunt's done!
A Presidunt may beat my pa
At pilin' up a vote;
But he can't beat him, I just know
A-whittlin' out a boat!

My pa ain't rich, but that's becoz
He's never tried to be;
He's no 'lectrician, but he fixed
A telephone for me.
My pa ain't never wrote a book,
But I know that he could,
Becoz the stories that he tells
To me are allus good.

My pa knows everything, I guess,
An' I say I don't care
Coz he ain't Presidunt, or rich
As any millyunaire!
Whenever things go wrong, my pa
Kin make 'em right you see,
An' though he ain't President,
Pa's good enough for me!—

RUTH'S NEW FRIEND.

By Alice Wetherell.

"Mummy, I want some one to play with," said Ruth one Saturday, when she was all alone.

"Run out to the garden, dear, and see if you can't find some one," said Mummy with a twinkle in her eye.

"Oh, Mummy, I mean some one who can talk. Molly can't talk." Now Molly was the little "pretend" girl who often came and played with Ruth when she was lonely. Most of the time Ruth loved to play with Molly, but to-day she did want some one who could talk to her.

"Go out to the big tree in the corner of the orchard and play with Molly. Who knows, perhaps Molly may even find a voice some day," said Mummy.

"Molly, Molly," called Ruth, as she went out to the orchard. "Will you come and play hide-and-seek?"

There was a little pause, and then a voice answered, "Yes, let's."

It was really Ruth's own voice that answered, for Molly, being only an imaginary child, had no voice of her own. Ruth had to answer for her.

"You may hide first," said Ruth.

"Thank you," said Molly with Ruth's voice. And the game at once began.

Ruth hid her eyes with her little hands and put her head against the tree.

"One-two-three-four-five," she counted up to twenty-five, so quickly that her words all clung together. Then.

"Ready or not, you must be caught," she called, just as if Molly were a real little girl, and could hear every word she said.

Ruth looked behind the bench for Molly. She looked behind one tree trunk, then another. She even looked behind a pail that lay there on the ground. For Molly, not being a real little girl, could easily hide behind a pail.

"You're behind that other tree. I know you are," at last called Ruth. And then she ran to look.

"Free, free, free," came a call behind her back.

Little Ruth turned quickly and looked toward the tree which was the goal. Could it be that her "pretend" Molly really had a voice of her very own? Could Molly have really come to life just to play with her? She wasn't standing at the goal at any rate. Ruth had half expected to see her standing there when she had turned around.

"Perhaps she went behind the goal, when she had called out 'Free,'" thought Ruth. So Ruth ran back to the tree, but no one stood behind the trunk either.

"I'm sure it must be Molly," Ruth kept thinking, so she called out, "Molly, please come out now that you were home free. I'll hide my eyes again if only you'll come out."

"Free, free, free," came the teasing answer. It seemed from behind another tree this time.

Ruth stood still, not knowing where to look. Of course it was Molly come to life, just as in a fairy tale. But where was Molly now? There were so many trees that you couldn't look behind them all.

"Free, free, free," came a sweet voice, not six feet away.

Ruth didn't say a single word, but stood and listened without moving.

"Free, free, free," came from one part of the orchard. "Free, free, free," from another part. It seemed as if there were a dozen voices, calling one after the other, "Free, free, free."

Ruth was so excited now that she ran up to the house.

"Mummy," she called as she ran, "Mummy, Molly's voice is in the orchard, but I can't find Molly."

Mummy went out to the orchard with her little girl. Mummy hunted behind one tree. Ruth hunted behind another.

"Free, free, free," came the voice again. Then Mummy smiled and began to look on the ground. She looked and looked. At last she called out:

"Come and see your Molly, here beside this tree." And as Ruth came up, quietly, there sitting on the ground beside an apple tree, stood a reddish-brown bird with a white breast spotted in brown. His yellowish throat was throbbing, throbbing as they looked, and his head held high.

"Free, free, free," he said.

"But," said Ruth, "That tiny bird couldn't make all those voices all over the orchard could he?"

"That's exactly what he does," said Mummy. "He makes his voice sound in many different places while he sits just there. His home is likely in the woods just back of the pasture. His very proper name is Wilson's Thrush, but you may call him 'Veery.' That's his nickname."

But little Ruth was having thoughts of her own. "I may call him 'Veery,' but I may call him 'Molly' sometimes, too. For, after all, it may be like the fairy tale. A fairy may have changed my Molly to a bird so that she may talk to me whenever we are playing."—Presbyterian Advance.

THE FAIRY-WHO-LISTENS-TO-LITTLE-GIRLS.

"I'm sick of it all!" said Winnie, throwing (yes, actually throwing) Arvilla Delight on the ground. But she took care that the doll landed in a soft, grassy place, and immediately picked her up and examined her head to see if it were cracked. "I'm sick of playing with this old doll! Don't see why I ever called her Delight. And I'm sick of her old dresses—and my old dresses—homely, faded old things! And I'm sick of this old house, and everything!"

"Winnie, Winnie!" called her little sisters and brothers. "Come and play tag with us!"

"I don't want to!" answered Winnie crossly. "I'm sick of playing."

"Dear, dear!" sighed the Fairy-Who-Listens-to-Little-Girls. "Why can't she be happy, with all the beautiful things she has? Why can't she see that she has them?"

Away off, in another part of the town, was another little girl, who had lived just as many years as Winnie, and hadn't learned to be happy either But this little girl lived in a very different home from Winnie's, and the dresses she wore—oh, they were beautiful little dresses, with embroidery, and lace, and ribbon. Her name was Hyacinth.

Hyacinth stood at a window, looking out on the wide street, where automobiles were rolling swiftly along. She held by one arm a fine lady-doll, in a pink silk gown with a train.

"I'm sick of it all!" grumbled Hyacinth, and she dropped the fine lady-doll to the floor, not caring whether her head was broken or not. For she had plenty of other dolls, and if they all broke, why, there were others in the toy shops to be bought.

"I'm sick of this room, and I'm sick of having no sisters to play with. I'm sick of having to stay in till some one can go out with me. Why can't I play where I want to, like the happy little poor children? And I'm sick of all my playthings, and I can't think of any more to buy."

Her beautiful mother looked in at the door, and saw the scowl on Hyacinth's little white brow.

"Isn't my little girl happy?" asked her mother's sweet voice, and she placed her arm around the child.

"I wish you wouldn't speak to me!" Hyacinth answered rudely. Oh, she was really very cross indeed!

"Dear dear!" again sighed the Fairy-Who-Listens-to-Little-Girls. "Here's another unhappy girl! And with all her beautiful things, too! Now, what can I do for both of them?"

Then she laughed.

"I know," she said, "I'll make them change places."

So she whisked Hyacinth into Winnie's yard, and Winnie into Hyacinth's room, so quickly they didn't know what was happening.

Well, Hyacinth played with the little sisters and brothers, and Winnie played with all the beautiful toys, and both enjoyed it till night came. Then both had a dreadful feeling called homesickness, for each wanted her own home and her own mother.

But the Fairy-Who-Listens-to-Litte-Girls wasn't through with them yet.

She picked them up, and took them both up into a cloud, where she could talk to them together.

"Now," she said, "the best place for a little girl to live is in her own home, because the ones who love her are there, and love is the best thing in the whole wide world."

Both little girls knew in their hearts that she was right.

"And it doesn't make much difference whether a little girl's clothes are fine or not, so long as they are fresh and clean. But it does make a great deal of difference what thought a little girl lets into her mind, and what feelings she keeps in her heart. Now, if I'll take you both home, and not make you stay here in this cold, damp cloud, will you promise me that you'll look for the beautiful things you have to enjoy, and be pleasant and kind to the folks who love you?"

"Yes, oh, yes!" they both promised quickly.

"That's good," said the Fairy-Who-Listens-to-Little-Girls, "for just think how dreadful it would be if they stopped loving you some day—some day when you were 'sick of everything.'"

Both little girls blushed at hearing their own words of the morning repeated.

"Now," said the Fairy-Who-Lisens-to-Little-Girls, "you've given me a lot of trouble to-day, and I don't want you to do it again."

Then she picked them up, and whisked them back to their own homes so quickly they didn't know what was happening until they landed in their own little beds.—Lena B. Ellingwood, in the Presbyterian.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

Eleven young men were admitted on trial, and, according to presiding elders and others, the class represents one of the best ever admitted.

It was a great joy for the preachers to meet several of their fellow-ministers who during the year were reported dangerously ill. With a few exceptions, all were able to report ready for duty.

What a pleasure it is to sing out of a clean and fresh hymnbook! The church was liberally provided with new books.

Among the most cheerful men present were the superannuated preachers. Many claimed they were not "Forgotten Men."

The beautiful, new watch chain worn by Bishop Candler was the gift of Brother C. O. Ferguson, member of the official board of the church in Homer, La.

The Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Shreveport papers were liberal in their space devoted to the Conference. The reports were accurate and complete.

The brethren were glad to welcome Rev. J. T. Leggett of the Mississippi Conference. Brother Leggett delivered a strong address on matters pertaining to the Seashore Camp Grounds.

The entertainment provided the members of the Conference was delightful. Dr. Wells and his committee are to be complimented upon their efficient work.

Many of the preachers came to Baton Rouge in automobiles of nearly every known make—and Fords did not predominate.

Bishop Candler's presidency was all that could be desired. At all times he was courteous, kind and patient. His morning addresses were thoroughly enjoyed.

The Manager of the Advocate was most delightfully entertained during his stay at Baton Rouge in the home of Mrs. Emma Abbott, taking his meals with Mrs. Williams of 211 Church Street.

DEATH OF REV. R. F. COLE.

Rev. R. F. Cole died at his home near Coffeeville, Miss., November 25. Brother Cole was the father of eight children, seven of whom are still living. He has twenty-two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. He also leaves his widow, with whom he had lived for fifty-three years.

Brother Cole was converted early in life and united with the Methodist church. Later in life he became a local preacher in the Methodist church and filled this position in a very creditable manner until his death. Brother Cole had a great faith in God. Like Abraham, he walked by faith. He had but one gospel to preach and that was the Gospel of his blessed Lord.

Brother Cole was a leader in his community. He stood for that which was right and the people followed him. His influence will continue to live in the lives of the people of his community.

Seven ministers came to Brother Cole's funeral to pay their tributes of respect to his memory. He was held in high esteem by his brother ministers. We shall miss Brother Cole, but he had lived a long and useful life and it was time for him to go and be with God.

His pastor,
W. L. ROBINSON.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, president of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., who has been attending during the present week the thirty-second session of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, which met at Jacksonville, Fla., reports that Whitworth College was announced at the meeting as a member of the Southern Association, being the only Junior member from the State of Mississippi admitted this year.

Whitworth College thus becomes an institution accredited not only by the Mississippi State College Commission, but accredited throughout the South, and, indeed, throughout the United States; for work done in an institution which is a member of the Southern Association is recognized by institutions which belong to other regional associations.

In addition to being a member of this great accrediting agency, Whitworth College is also a member of the Southern Association of Colleges for Women, the Educational Association of the M. E. Church, South, and the Ameriean Association of Junior Colleges.

In representing Whitworth College to the Association, President Hawkins reported for the current session 201 students, of whom 134 are taking regular college courses, the remaining 67 being music and other non-matriculate pupils from the Brookhaven community.

The liberal assessment of $10,000 made for Whitworth College by the last two sessions of the Mississippi Annual Conference, gave force to Whitworth's application. The buildings and the library of over 7,000 volumes also were accepted as meeting the requirements for membership. R. H. Watkins, superintendent of Laurel (Miss.) city schools, who was the official inspector of Whitworth College and who visited the institution last week, made a favorable report.

THE CHURCH IS TO BLAME!

By Joseph J. Share.

Bob was not in a very good mood to enjoy a caller, especially when the caller was a pastor. I noticed the unwelcome look and his reticence to enter into conversation.

I had called at the home after learning that neither he nor his wife were members of any church. The wife had been a member in her younger days, but had moved "without letter," twenty years ago. Occasionally she attended church, and the two children were fairly regular in their attendance in Sunday school.

Bob was an industrious fellow, and I coveted him for the kingdom and the church. But now as I sat in his home I could feel a tension.

After several unpleasant pauses in my attempt to keep up a conversation, I somewhat pityingly asked, "Don't you feel very good to-day? There's such a lot of flu around, it—"

"Flu?" he blurted; "no flu for me; I'm mad, just plain mad."

That "stumped" me for a second. I was making a pastoral call, but I could readily sense that this was no time to say "Let us pray."

Instead, I made an attempt to say something soothing, and deplored there were so many maddening things in this trying world. What I said did not soothe him, and he continued, "Yes, sir! I blame the church."

"But why do you blame the church?" I asked feebly.

He spat fiercely into the stove before answering. "I blame the church! Just about three years ago I bought this little house and lot. Recently I decided to buy the vacant lot next to mine, for two reasons. First, I wanted to have room to keep a few chickens, and, second, I needed more room for a garden. I had a chance to buy it when I bought the house. I went to the owner, and to my surprise he asked two hundred dollars more than the price he had previously quoted. I asked, 'Why the big rise?' He up and told me that since then the Immanuel Church had been built in the neighborhood, at a cost of $40,000. Good substantial citizens were buying lots and building, and real estate had made a jump. I thought he was just 'kidding' me. But, no sir! He really meant it. I tried to get the price down. I seemed to want that lot more than ever, but I had to pay two hundred dollars more of my hard-earned savings and—" (I could see he was getting madder than ever) —"the church is to blame!"

Somehow I caught the contagion of his mood, and rising to my feet, clenching my fist, and speaking emphatically, I said, "Bob Blythe, I agree with you, the church is to blame. I know a number of things that have happened since that church was built here, and the church is to blame.

"Ben Krenski, who was making big money out of bootlegging, was fool enough to quit because his little girl one day, when her little arms were about his neck, told him something that she had heard in the Sunday school at that church. He had to get another job that did not bring in near so much money. He had so much time to kill that he began to fix up his little house. He gave it a coat of paint. That made the neighbors' houses look so shabby they had to do some painting, and spent lots of hours and some money; and the church was to blame. To make things worse, Ben Krenski took a liking to the preacher and the church folks. He is not the same fellow he was. The church is to blame!

"There was Ike Adams, kept a grocery store; he did a booming business every Sunday. Somebody got him into that church one Sunday; I don't know how they did it. But one result was that Ike quit the Sunday business and pulled down the curtains so that you could not see even a can of beans. Now he has to make as much in six days as he used to do in seven, and the poor boob is kept so busy that when he goes to church, which he does every Sunday, he can scarcely keep awake. The church is to blame!

"Say, brother, when I think of all these things the church is to blame for I get all 'het up.' Young Joe Jones had a fine job in the dime store. It was a steady job at $15 a week. The store was kept cool in summer and warm in winter, and for two years after he graduated from high school he held on to the job. But one day somebody took him into that church to hear a college president. He told his folks after that he had received a 'vision,' whatever that was. At any rate, he turned down the dime store job and went to college, and the last I heard of him he was washing dishes to earn his meals, and trying hard to be a college president like the one he listened to. Just think of the hard row he will have to hoe before he gets there. The church is to blame.

"There was Buff Gorman. Buff had a glorious time with the gang. True, he got into trouble occasionally, and drew some short spells in the pen. But what glorious times he had; crap games with lots of excitement, considerable hooch and midnight parties. Then they got him among the church folks. Things happened, and Buff now sings in the choir, with a stiff collar on. All the glorious times with the old gang are gone forever, and the church is to blame; and it will be more to blame yet, for they say he has set his mind on being a preacher, and talks of having had a 'call' to the ministry. There was—"

"Say, are you stringing me?" Bob asked.

"Stringing you? What do you mean?" I both asked and answered. "I agree with you the church is to blame. There was Sam Brown's flapper daughter; didn't seem to have any brains at all, but she sure was lively and full of fun The church crowd got hold of her. She, too, said that she had caught a 'vision.' She must have caught something, for she had no more sense than to quit her old school companions, go down to Chicago, and take a special course of training for foreign mission work. She expects to leave all the comforts of home before long and go to India as a missionary. The church is to blame. Jim Smith's boy—"

"Say, preacher, now I know you are stringing me," Bob interrupted. The anger had gone from his face. There was a broad grin stretching from ear to ear; he held out his hand. I grasped it.

"What time does the service begin next Sunday morning?" he asked.

I gave him the required information. Sunday morning arrived. Bob was there; his wife sat by his side. As I sat behind the pulpit our eyes met, we both smiled, and I almost expected him to say, "Are you going to string me again, preacher?"

I did move my lips, and if he interpreted the movement he would surely know that I was saying, "You're here, Bob; and the church is to blame!"—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

HUNGER AND PROGRESS.

"Escape is one of the great thrills we get out of life, and the story of human progress is the story of man's escape from want," says Thomas Nixon Carver, Harvard professor of Political Economy, in the December issue of the Magazine of Business.

The trap in which humanity is always about to be caught, explains Professor Carver, is the combination of two circumstances or natural facts; first, that the natural productivity of a given area of land is limited; and, second, that a "natural" birth-rate always exceeds a "natural" death-rate.

For example, "a limited number of blades of grass will grow without cultivation on any given area. That being true, only a limited number of wild animals can live on that wild grass, and only a limited number of men can live on those wild animals. Consequently, if too many people try to live in that area, there would not be food enough for them all, and want would overtake them."

Dr. Carver further explains that "A given pair, for example, can only die once, making a total of two deaths; but if they live out their natural span of life, and if they do not repress their instincts, they will produce more than two children. If these, in turn, live out their natural span of life and do not repress their instincts, they will produce more than two children per pair, and so on, world without end."

Here then is the problem. "Seeing that only a limited number of men could live on the natural produce of a given area of land, the first expedient for escaping the trap was that of using more land. Much of human history is made up of man's effort to escape from want by spreading out, moving himself to newer and less densely populated areas and later by sending out his tentacles in the form of transportation systems to bring food from wider and wider areas to his densely popuplated centers, as we do in cities to-day. This escape ,however, is not a final solution."

But, points out Dr. Carver, it is also possible to increase the amount of food that will grow on any given area of land. This means work of cultivation, the second extrication to be used by man as an escape from the trap of want. "But this is not a complete escape either, because even though by killing weeds you can make it possible for a larger number of useful plants to grow, and by furnishing them a better seed-bed you can increase their growth, and by the selection of seed you can increase their life-sustaining power, nevertheless there is a limit in any state of knowledge as well as to the productivity of the land.

"Migration and labor are not only the most primitive of the methods of extricating ourselves from the circumstances that bring want; they might, in a special sense, be said to include all the others except birth control."

That much good will came out of the present revolution in China, even though it has failed to reach the end hope for, is the belief of missionaries in that country. It is believed that the Chinese have learned many lessons and that next time they try to establish a national government they will meet with better success. It is probable, however, that there will continue to be war lords in that country for many years to come.

Over 1,100 little Japanese children have borrowed books from the little loan library operated by Mrs. W. R. Weakley in Tokuyama, Japan. One of the favorites is "The Childhood of Jesus," a book which the children find easy to read because it has pictures and large print.

The young business men who make up the student body of Palmore Institute, Kobe, Japan, are very eager and earnest in their study of English, and also many of them show the same eagerness for knowledge about Christianity. Palmore Institue is recognized as the best night school in Japan, and has to turn away hundreds of students each year because of lack of room.

MRS. ADA CLARK WEDGEWORTH, daughter of Banister A. and Susan M. Clark, and granddaughter of the late Rev. T. C. Clark, was born in Rankin County, at Johns, Miss., Nov. 4, 1883, and died at D'Lo, Miss., April 5, 1927. Sister Wedgeworth was the oldest of 10 children; eight are still living. One brother was killed in France during the great war. She was married Aug 2, 1913, to George W. Wedgeworth, of Many, La., where she was teaching school at the time. She leaves to mourn her going away her husband; two brothers, E. J. Clark, of Gulfport, Miss., and Thomas Marvin Clark, of Delhi, La.; and six sisters, Mrs. Ina Hooker, Mrs. Ira Grantham, Mrs. J. C. Lee, Mrs. P. L. Overby, Mrs. J. C. Moore, and Miss Vera Clark. Sister Wedgeworth was reared in a Christian home, where there was a family altar, hence, she early in life came to know and to love the Lord Jesus, and joined the Methodist church when 12 years of age. She attended Whitworth College, and after leaving college taught school twelve years. It was my great pleasure and privilege to know Sister Wedgeworth and to have been her pastor four years at Delhi, La. Her home was a Christian home and abounded with Christian hospitality. She had one room she called "The Prophet's Chamber," and her pastors were often recipients of her abounding goodness. She was faithful to her home, loyal to her church, and true to her Saviour. A good woman has passed to enter into her abundant reward.

Woman's Missionary Society

All communications for this department should be addressed to Mrs. J. E. Brown, Gloster, Miss.

Once more the month of Harvest Day has come.

Let us render unto the Lord a full account.

Let each auxiliary see that no single penny of obligation fails to be brought in.

Let every woman who has accepted allegiance to our King through the Woman's Missionary Society make assurance that the first fruits of the harvest go to him.

"Take heed! Go slow!
Lest our eager fingers pilfer.
Care! A debt we owe—
Yea, even gold and silver."

"What is money, O my friend?
Money is the time you spend
In toil and pain,
In stress of mind and fret of soul
As the recurrent seasons roll
It means the gain
From conflicts with stern earth and air
And the whims of mankind that bear
Hard on you, too.
Think not it is a trifling thing
To handle with a careless fling,
No, money is You!
Your life-blood dear, your effort strong,
All God-given powers that to you belong
In it you pour.
Then place it at a worth-while post
And give it where you love the most
And owe the more."

ZONE MEETING, BROOKHAVEN.

The fourth quarter zone meeting of the auxiliaries of the southern zone of the Brookhaven District was held Nov. 15 at Brookhaven.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 by Brother Hardin in earnest prayer. Mrs. G. A. Hoffman, of Brookhaven, led the devotional, taking as the basis of her remarks the eleventh chapter of St. Mark. In a few well-chosen words she brought out the practical as well as the spiritual side of our lives by living a life of faith and love.

Mrs. R. C. Applewhite, president of Brookhaven auxiliary, gave a very cordial welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. W. H. Hayes, of Monticello.

"How Can We Get Our Women Who Are Already Members of the Missionary Society to Feel a Keener Sense of Their Responsibilities?" was led in a round table discussion by Mmes. Brister, of Bogue Chitto; Boyd, of Wesson; Hoffman, of Boone, and Grandberg, of Brookhaven, each giving practical suggestions.

"How Can We Meet the Needs of Our Young People?" was considered.

There seemed to be some confusion in regard to the merging of the Junior Missionary Society and Junior League. By request, Brother Hardin explained this thoroughly. Then Mrs. Whittington, leader in Brookhaven, and the Junior leader in Norfield, explained each step, much to the satisfaction of all present.

Mrs. J. M. Woods graciouly favored us with pipe organ selections, which were very much enjoyed, after which we adjourned for lunch. At the lunch hour Mrs. Albert Zachary sang.

In the afternoon Brother Snellgrove, of Monticello, led the devotional, using the twelfth chapter of Romans.

We were honored with the presence of Rev. B. F. Jones and Dr. H. G. Hawkins, of Whitworth College.

Dr. Hawkins had a paper read to the audience, stating the proposed disposition of Whitworth College, as discussed at the recent Annual Conference in Jackson.

A study of "Our Common Interests and Problems," by Mrs. Morris, of Norfield, so truly defined that ever great subject that at the suggestion of our Conference President, Mrs. L. W. Alford, the paper is sent to the Advocate.

Mrs. Alford, in her usual gracious and earnest manner, gave us an inspiring address in regard to our work in the year just closed, and looking forward to our greater year—the Jubilee. At the close of her talk, three young girls, of Whitworth College, who have offered themselves for missionary service, were introduced. They are all of the Mississippi Conference—Miss Eleanor Allen, of Biloxi; Miss Bernice, of Wesson, and Miss Nannie B. Davis, of Pascagoula. Each spoke quietly and with deep conviction of her call into God's service. Mrs. Alford spoke words of love and encouragement to each, assuring them that our more than five thousand five hundred missionary women are backing them.

It was a rare spiritual scene, which eternity alone can efface, and Brother Hardin earnestly led in a prayer of consecration—a wonderful closing for our last zone meeting for this year.

Norfield will have the next meeting.

ZONE MEETING, ROCKY SPRINGS.

A zone meeting was held at Rocky Springs on Nov. 3, with ten delegates from Port Gibson, five from Hermanville, four from Utica, seven from Rocky Springs, eight from Cayouga, and three from Burton.

The good people of this community gave the delegates a hearty welcome, and a bountiful dinner was served.

The day was a very profitable one, as well as a pleasant one, and the incidental offering amounted to $5.90.

Officers for the coming year are: Miss Pearl Fisher, Cayuga, chairman; Mrs. C. C. Greer, Utica, vice chairman; Miss Kate A. Drake, Port Gibson, secretary.

MRS. H. H. CRISLER,
Secretary.

ZONE MEETING AT BOLTON, MISS.

The women of the Methodist churches of zone No. 3, Jackson District, held their fourth meeting Thursday, Oct. 27, at Bolton, with Mrs. Jno. Bush, chairman, presiding.

An interesting and instructive program had been arranged, and the beautiful church was tastefully decorated in pretty flowers.

Rev. H. J. Moore, of Bolton, led the devotional, reading Philippians 3.

The welcome address was given by Mrs. Heitman, Mrs. Bush making response. The following auxiliaries were represented: Edwards, Learned, Raymond, Clinton and Bolton, with visitors from Jackson, all giving fine reports of the year's work.

A splendid talk on "Why Help Our Pastors to Carry Out Their Plans," by Miss Mamie Dietric, of Raymond, made us feel a deeper responsibility to our pastors.

"Our Golden Jubilee" was very beautifully read by Miss Margaret Suttle, of Edwards, followed by "The Tenth Jubilee in China," by Mrs. Bush. Mrs. B. F. Lewis, historian of the Mississippi Conference, asked us to elect a historian in each auxiliary at once, and send to her the history of our auxiliary. We were then dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Wood, of Jackson.

After a delicious luncheon served by the Bolton ladies, we opened the afternoon program with "Come, Thou Almighty King," and prayer by Mrs. C. J. Henry, of Edwards. Mrs. Wood took the chair and officers were elected for the coming year, as follows: Mrs. John Bush, of Learned, zone leader; Mrs. J. O. Ware, of Edwards, recording secretary. Clinton invited the next zone

WOMAN COULD NOT SLEEP

Her Mother-in-Law Knew A Remedy

Mrs. Belle Thompson was in a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night and even then did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor. "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I was not the same woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me." —Mrs. Belle Thompson, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.

Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health? If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped others, why shouldn't it help you?

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

At a meeting of the Conference Sunday School Council at Grenada, Nov. 29, the following goals were accepted for the year: Aberdeen District, volunteer teachers, 18; Cokesbury schools, 25; one general institute, one elementary institute; place 30 Programs of Work; one Standard Training School; 80 schools to observe Sunday School Day, the offering, $500; 80 schools to participate in the Dual-Extension, missionary instruction, offering, $1,200.

Columbus District: Volunteer teachers, 15; Cokesbury schools, 15; one general district institute, one district elementary institute; one Standard Training School; 20 Programs of Work placed; 70 schools to observe Sunday School Day, with offering of $400; 70 schools to observe missionary day every fourth Sunday, offering, $1,000.

Corinth District: Volunteer teachers, 25; Cokesbury schools, 25; Programs of Work placed, 20; two district institutes, one Standard Training School; 95 schools to observe Sunday School Day, with an offering of $500; 95 schools to observe missionary day, with an offering of $1,400.

Greenville District: Volunteer teachers, 10; Cokesbury schools, 10; two Standard Training Schools; two district institutes; 30 schools observing Sunday School Day, with an offering of $300; 30 schools observing missionary day, with an offering of $1,000. Programs of Work to be placed, 10.

Grenada District: Volunteer teachers, 15; Cokesbury schools, 15; two district institutes; Programs of Work to be placed, 15; 56 schools to observe Sunday School Day, with an offering of $400; 56 schools to observe missionary day, with an offering of $1,200.

Greenwood District: Volunteer teachers, 12; Cokesbury schools, 12; two district institutes; one Standard Training School; 12 Programs of Work to be placed; 30 schools to observe Sunday School Day, with an offering of $350; 30 schools to observe missionary day, with an offering of $1,000.

Sardis District: Volunteer teachers, 15; Cokesbury schools, 15; to place 15 Programs of Work; two district institutes; one Standard Training School; 48 schools to observe Sunday School Day; 48 schools to observe missionary day; offering for Sunday School Day, $300; offering for missions, $800.

Names of district officers will be given as soon as the organization is completed. The above goals are not to be limited to the figures mentioned. Nor are we to be limited to the few items mentioned. Evangelism, Children's Week, Daily Vacation Church Schools, all are to be promoted with more vigor than eyer before.

We have asked for 100 volunteer teachers. Of that number we have the promise of thirty-five, and three men are teaching.

When in need of a Wall Chart send direct to the office at Grenada and you save time and trouble. Send to the same office for helps in teaching classes.

The reports on the observance of Children's Week must go to the Nashville office this week, and there are at least a dozen schools that have failed to send in the report of their work. A staggering question is, what can be done to secure reports of work done? "Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord negligently."

Our aim for the year is to have 300 schools participating in our monthly missionary instruction and offering for work in North Mississippi Conference and Europe. For the month of November, 41 schools have sent in their reports. We should have at least 100 other schools do as well. Pastors changing and a change in the policy of the Sunday School Board in having money sent to Grenada brings about some delay, but we will get matters straight in a short time. Please see that your school reports regularly.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, we, the members of Refuge church, sincerely regret the loss of our beloved preacher and brother, J. B. Cain, who has been with us for two years, we do now wish to express our appreciation for his faithful and efficient service. We wish to thank him for his wise counsel and great messages.

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, the members of Refuge church, take this means of letting Brother Cain know our love for him; and our prayers will always be for him and his family, that God will bless them in all their work.

And we do hereby recommend him to the churches of Fayette, hoping that they will co-operate with him and help him in all his work for his God and his fellowman.

We pray always for his success, knowing that some day we will meet in heaven, where we will part no more.

Signed: W. W. Howell, Committee.

"THAT WE HAVE NOT SUFFERED HUNGER THIS NIGHT."

Imagine if you can, three thousand children at supper. The meal consists of one cup of hot water containing six raisins, and one slice of bread. One little girl plucks at a teacher's dress and timidly asks if she may have a second piece of bread. The teacher must answer that she is sorry but that is all for to-day. The available funds do not allow for a more adequate meal unless some of the children are turned away to starve. Nobody complains, and at the close of the meal three thousand children stand together with bowed heads and repeat together:

"For the food we have received
Lord accept our thanks,
We give thee praise
That we have not suffered hunger this night."

Thousands of innocent children giving heartfelt thanks for a slice of bread and six raisins! And many in America, the world's richest nation, are inclined to say, "I'm so tired of hearing Near East Relief! Haven't we given enough?"

Perhaps these children are tired of being orphans and living on bread and raisins! Yet they do not complain, these children who are the victims of an adult world's stupidity and greed and lust for place and power that brings about more wars which leave helpless children in their wake.

America has rendered a great service in the Near East. Epworth Leaguers everywhere have counted it a privilege to share in the work of saving these children. Now twenty thousand of these boys and girls have "graduated." That is, they have reached the age of 16 and have gone out from the orphanage to support themselves. These boys and girls are without homes or relatives, and naturally will be subject to many temptations and difficulties. They have, therefore, been organized into Near East officials and with each other that they may thus have some encouragement, counsel and moral support. Thus the value of their years of training in the orphanage is being preserved and these young people helped to act as leaven for good in the community life of the Near East.

"That we have not suffered hunger this night!" There are still thousands of children who know what it means to be devoutly thankful for a piece of bread. The first Sunday in December is Golden Rule Sunday. Epworth Leagues everywhere will observe the day. Why should not every family in every church observe this day? For the good of body and soul, let us substitute bread and milk for our usual heavy Sunday dinner and send the price of that meal and more to feed some hungry child.

THE DEVIL'S BEST TOOL.

"It was announced that the devil was going out of business, and would offer all tools for sale to the highest bidder. On the night of the sale they were all attractively displayed—and a bad looking lot they were: Hatred, jealousy, envy, malice, sensuality and deceit, and all the other implements of evil. Apart from the rest lay a harmless-looking wedge-shaped tool, much worn, and priced higher than any of them. Some one asked the devil what it was.

"That is 'discouragement,'" was the reply.

"Why do you price it so highly?"

"Because," replied the devil, "it is more useful to me than any other tool. I can pry open and get into a man's conscience with that when I could never get near him with any others; and once inside, I can use him with my discouragement in any way that suits me best. It is much worn because I use it with nearly everybody, as few people yet know that it belongs to me and that I use it to achieve my ends."

But the price placed on discouragement was so high that the devil owns it still.—Watchman-Examiner.

AVIATION ADVANCES.

Nothing illustrates better the firm base on which aviation rests in this country than insurance statistics. Here are some compiled by Drs. Lawrence G. Sykes and William B. Smith:

Fifty of the nation's leading life insurance companies, covering policyholders to the extent of $73,276,680,279, place no restriction against participation in aviation.

Fatalities on the transcontinental air-mail route, on which planes operate in all kinds of weather, decreased from three deaths in every 300,000 miles of flying in 1919 to two deaths in each 2,250,000 miles in 1926.

Leading accident insurance companies within the past six months have included clauses in their contracts covering losses caused "by any hazard of aviation." The condition is made, in line with the recommendations of aviation authorities, that responsibility is assumed only when "the insured is riding as a passenger in a licensed airplane, operated by a licensed pilot, upon a regular passenger route between established airports."

Aviation has developed, chiefly under the impetus of private capital, to a point where it now serves millions of people in this country, Drs. Sykes and Smith declare. The mail airways alone, on Sept. 1, of this year, were serving 65,677,209 people.

Evidence of tremendous progress made by aviation is found in the establishment of new airports. By the end of this year approximately one thousand airports and intermediate fields will be in existence in all parts of the United States. More than fifty airports have been recently completed, while twice that number of cities have set aside funds or have begun plans for modern terminals.—Dearborn Independent.

THE TITHER'S SURPRISES.

The Christian who begins to tithe will have at least six surprises. He will be surprised:

1. At the amount of money he has for the Lord's work.
2. At the deepening of his spiritual life in paying the tithe.
3. At the ease in meeting his own obligations with the nine-tenths.
4. At the ease of going from one-tenth to larger giving.
5. At the preparation this gives to be a faithful and wise steward over the nine-tenths that remain.
6. At himself in not adopting the plan sooner.—The Reflector.

"WHY CUBA?"

"Why do we send missionaries to Catholic countries?" This question is often asked by Protestants in the United States, who picture Catholics in foreign countries as thinking, speaking, and acting just as do their Catholic neighbors next door or their Catholic friends who live just up the street. They cannot conceive of the ignorance and superstitions prevalent in Catholic countries in Latin-America or Europe; but Miss Kathleen Bardwell, daughter of the Rev. H. B. Bardwell, president of Candler College in Havana, who has lived a large part of her life in Cuba, can. Therefore, she endeavors to answer this oft-propounded query, "Why send missionaries to Catholic countries?" in her missionary playlet, "Why Cuba?"

There are six characters in this playlet—two Cuban girls, two women, one young man, and a missionary. With one exception, they are dressed in just such clothes as one might see anywhere in America, for there is no typical Cuban dress. One woman is clothed in a dark, one-piece dress, high in the neck and with long sleeves, and tied at the belt with a black ribbon—a very ugly, unattractive costume. The missionary carries a Cuban flag, banner of our little sister republic, home of a warm-hearted and impulsive people, and a Bible, that book practically unknown in Catholic countries.

"Why send missionaries to Catholic countries?" Listen to these Cubans as they tell of the darkness and despair in their souls before the coming of Protestantism and the light. One girl describes a long journey on bleeding hands and knees to the shrine of the Virgin and her sobbing pleadings that she might intercede for her at the throne of grace; now she has learned that bodily suffering is not necessary to appease an angry Deity. The other girl gave hundreds of dollars to the priest and spent hours in prayers to the saints in the hope of releasing her mother's soul from purgatory—her mother who was the purest and best woman she had ever known. "Oh, you who know that your loved ones are with God, consider the suffering of those who are taught that their departed must be tortured in purgatory."

The Cuban woman wears her hideous costume in fulfillment of a vow to the Virgin, who had saved her child from death, for she had been taught that the Blessed Mother would be pleased to see her in such an ugly gown. The second mother was tortured for years by the thought that her child, who had died unbaptized, must be deprived of heaven and spend eternity in Limbo because of her own neglect. She had never known peace until she learned of a Jesus who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me."

The young man had cast aside all religion. Disgusted by the prayers and penances of his mother and sisters, he thought religion only for the weak, until he found in Protestantism a God of strength, that could make a man strong to do right—"the God that Cuba needs."

"Why send missionaries to Catholic countries?" That men and women may realize God's abounding love, his tenderness to little children; that they may be freed from the fears of purgatory and made strong to stand for the right. "Why Cuba?" Why not all Catholic countries?

FROM THE FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: Since my letter to you last week was lost before it ever got to the press, I'm having to combine about three weeks' news to you. I just have so very much to report that I will have to be brief about it if that is possible!

I believe my last letter told of my itinerary in the Alexandria District. I went from there to the Lake Charles District, where I first met with our District Secretary, Merle Whitman, of Lake Charles. Am sorry to say that I found Merle on the sick list, but am glad to report that she is now well. Merle is so very interested in her League work and is accomplishing great things for the Lake Charles District. With the assistance of Elsie Whitman, her sister, who is our assistant secretary, we can expect great results.

I believe that the Lake Charles Senior League is one of the most consecrated Leagues in the State. I wish that all of our young people might know such splendid characters as Merle and Elsie Whitman, Mina Waite, Bernice Steinmeyer, Chester Loveland, and especially Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Wynn. They are "doing things" in their League because of their faith in prayer and Christian fellowship.

I would love to enumerate something interesting about each League in this district, but since I can't, I want you to know that I found splendid Leagues and Leaguers at Vinton, Leesville, Merryville, De Ridder, Crowley, Lafayette, Rayne, Abbeville, and received interesting reports on several others with whom I did not get to meet. You will be interested in knowing that the Leesville League has in its membership a set of triplets that are as fine and pretty as Leaguers get to be!

On my week-end spent in this district, I had the pleasure of attending a house party in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weber. Mr. Weber is better known to our young people as "Daddy Weber." Those who know him learn to love him for the splendid Christian man that he is. Rev. James V. Reid, of Fort Worth, a young people's evangelist and a great inspiration to all who hear him, was also one of the party.

I wish to thank the pastors of the Lake Charles District for their cooperation and splendid leadership given our Epworth Leaguers.

From the Lake Charles District I went into the New Orleans District. I especially enjoyed my travels through these two districts because of the beautiful scenery. Too much cannot be said concerning Southern hospitality. When such splendid hospitality is combined with Christian ideals and principles, that home is indeed blessed, for it is then that we find the kingdom-of-heaven-kindness on earth.

In Houma I had the pleasure of spending the night in our mission school, Wesley Chapel. There I found some splendid boys and girls that are being offered wonderful opportunities because of the splendid leadership of Miss Ella Hooper and her faculty of teachers.

I spent two days in New Orleans with Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cayard. Mr. Cayard is our District Secretary, and is doing a wonderful work for us. His wife, formerly known as Grace Fuqua, is our assistant secretary. We had a very successful meeting at Carrollton Avenue Church of all the chapter officers of the city. The City Union president, Mr. Al Hansen, presided over the meeting.

From New Orleans to Covington I had the pleasure of making a boat trip across Lake Pontchartrain by way of Madisonville. At Covington I found some splendid young people that are anxious to be one hundred per cent Leaguers. Their pastor, Rev. H. W. Jordan, is numbered with our real League-pastors.

On Dec. 11, with the assistance of Mr. Edgar Cayard and several New Orleans Leaguers, we are planning to meet with the Patterson, Houma, and Morgan City Leaguers in a rally at Morgan City. Departmental classes will be conducted during the program.

In the New Orleans District I met with the Leaguers of Patterson, Morgan City, Houma, Covington, and the city Leagues of New Orleans.

I am now in the Baton Rouge District, and hope to complete the district soon after Conference. I will then have completed a tour of each district in the State, after which we will begin preparations for our district institutes.

Remember, Epworth Leaguers, that we are attempting great things and hope to achieve great things in this wonderful organization of ours. We want your prayers and co-operation daily that we might more closely walk "The Emmaus Way" with our comrade, Jesus.

Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

WE'RE THANKFUL ANYWAY.

I joined the Mississippi Conference in 1907, and Brother W. W. Nelson joined one year later, and at the recent session at Jackson we were assigned for the first time to charges in the same county, and, while Brother Nelson will not be able to take his work on account of serious sickness, that the readers of the Advocate will, no doubt, know before these lines are read, we are thankful anyway to those who were responsible for our assignment being in the same county.

We have been assigned work as close together twice before, but this is the first time we were to live in the same county, and we want those who caused the appointments to be made to know that we deeply appreciate it, for as surely as the Holy Ghost separated Barnabas and Saul to a definite work in the long ago, he gave us a specific work to do twenty-four years ago, and until this good day there has not been a single "hitch" between us as we have worked together every consecutive year since. None but God could cause two who are so different temperamentally to labor together so long without some kind of difference that would interfere with soul-winning, and we give him the praise for it all.

I ask special prayer for Brother Nelson. The last year, especially, he undertook too much and worked beyond his strength, and a genuine case of influenza found him without certain powers of resistance, and he is forced to take a much needed rest, for it will be several months before he will be normal. He hopes to be sufficiently recovered to do some evangelistic work during the revival season.

For the present he is at Vancleave, and is to remain there until he recovers sufficiently to move.

Looking straight ahead,
J. A. WELLS.

GOOD MEETING AT ST. MARTINVILLE, LA.

Rev. W. M. Bowden, evangelist, of Dallas, Tex., closed a meeting here in the Methodist church, Nov. 27, 1927. His work was remarkable in this 95 per cent Catholic town. More Roman Catholics attended the services than any previous meeting in the history of the church. Over 5,000 chapters were read in the Bible, even Catholics taking part with great interest. There were seven accessions on profession of faith. The junior chorus trained by the evangelist was a feature of the revival. Brother Bowden is a good preacher and a fine singer. He excels as an organizer. He is a splendid leader. Last but not least, he is the pastor's friend. I most heartily commend him for a successful revival campaign.

A. M. MARTIN, Pastor.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

MOTHER

A Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious, Constipated

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

meeting to meet with them in February.

Mrs. B. F. Lewis gave a review of the mission study book, "The Straight Way Towards To-Morrow," which we all enjoyed. She made us feel the need of the book in our homes.

Mrs. J. C. Wood, our district secretary, followed in a short talk about her work, and the Week of Prayer. The weak and strong points in our auxiliaries were stressed. After singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," the Bolton auxiliary was again thanked for their generous hospitality.

We feel that this has been a great year with us, and that God has made each of us stronger and closer to each other by these zone meetings. We pray that 1928 will continue to give us a broader vision of our responsibilities to God and our neighbors.

MRS. J. D. WARE, Secretary.

ZONE MEETING AT NATCHEZ, MISS.

The last meeting of zone No. 5, Vicksburg District, for the current year met in the Methodist church, Natchez, Nov. 3, Mrs. T. H. Fore, chairman, presiding. The devotional was conducted by the pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis. Every auxiliary in the zone was represented, forty-eight being present.

After reading and adoption of the minutes of the previous meeting, Mrs. Fore conducted a questionnaire on "Conference Minutes," which showed that the ladies of zone No. 5 had been studying and were well informed.

A most excellent paper on "Social Service" was read by Mrs. Porter, pointing out the need of protecting our young people by legislation and by electing to office those who will respect and enforce the laws of our land.

The "Jubilee Plan" was ably handled by Mrs. McKeown.

A delightful lunch was served in the dining room of the church at the noon hour.

The afternoon session was opened by singing "To the Work." Gospel selections were read from John 14 and Luke 9, followed by prayer by the secretary, after which we were treated to a dramatized play, "The Healing Gospel."

Following a duet, "Give of Your Best to the Master," by Mrs. George Healy and Brother Lewis, Mrs. McKeown spoke in behalf of the Wesley Houses, Bible and mission study classes, paying of all obligations by Harvest Day, and urged all to strive to reach the Honor Roll and fall in line with the Jubilee Plan.

Next was a "testimony meeting" on the good we had gotten from the zone system. Nearly every one present had something to say. The consensus of opinion was that we just couldn't tell all the good we had gotten from the meetings—both individually and collectively. We couldn't do without the zone meetings.

Election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Mrs. McNeil, of Washington, chairman, and Mrs. Easterling, of Fayette, secretary.

Our next meeting will be held in Fayette, early in 1928.

FROM FREEMONT, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We are comfortably situated in the little cozy parsonage that is surrounded by a beautiful grove of oaks, free from the soot, hurry and rattle of the congested centers.

We find the work very pleasant and making progress in different ways. Especially would we note the two Cokesbury training courses held in two different churches by Brother Hammandtree the week after Conference, which resulted in some sixteen or eighteen credits being issued and greater interest in Sunday school work.

We have also begun the building of a new church at Hardin's Chapel. This work was planned by my faithful predecessor.

L. B. WIMBERLY.

A LETTER FROM J. G. JOHNSON.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please allow me a little space that I may send a word of greeting to my brethren of the North Mississippi Conference and to my many friends among your readers. There are so many that I would like to write to that time will not permit even the half of them, so I am taking this method of writing all at one time.

I am glad to say that my health is much better, though I am not well. My doctor tells me that I need a complete rest of a month or so; but of course this is out of the question, as I have to make a living and every thing is so high out here, and you have everything to buy—can't even have a garden, as it is to-day, for vegetables to grow. I have not seen a garden since I have been here, so you can see there is no time to rest where there is a living to be made for six.

Last year we supplied the Colorado mission, which was a new charge without a parsonage and the rent more than took up the profit.

This year we are on the Aspermont mission, with a three-room parsonage to live in and a $625 assessment for preacher and presiding elder, but the expense of serving it is not so great, as my fartherest church is only about 18 miles away, which is much better than last year; but you can see I must do some outside work. This Conference is so crowded that it is almost impossible to get in on a transfer unless you can get some one to transfer back to your Conference. I am not sure yet that it would be the proper thing to do anyway, for my doctor thinks now that it would be better for me to yet go to a still higher climate.

These people and preachers out here are wonderful to me and we have learned to love them; but it is not home. We were too old when we came, had been with you too long, and had learned to love you too well for it to be easy to forget. I miss you, brethren. I am a bit homesick, but I feel that I can't come back there and live and I do have a hope of regaining my health out here.

So I just decided I would write you all a love letter through the Advocate and let you know that I still love you and think of you often. I am glad that I can feel that in the 21 years of service among you I made only friends and not one enemy among the preachers and very few among the laity of the church. I feel that all that really knew and understood me were my friends.

Your brother in Christian love,

J. G. JOHNSON.

Aspermont, Tex.

LEAVING—AND ARRIVING.

Dear Dr. Carley: Because I consented to deliver an address to the Lauderdale County Parent-Teacher Association a few weeks ago, I delivered five P. T. A. addresses. Invitations were still coming in when the Conference changed my location.

One of the delightful experiences of the closing days of the Lauderdale and Electric Mills charge was the performance of the marriage ceremony for Mr. J. L. Shumate and Miss Katherine McCormick. In this I was assisted by the pastors of the Baptist and the Presbyterian churches, a fitting close to our pastoral relations.

The night before we left Lauderdale some of the neighbors came in and presented a purse to Mrs. Hunt in the name of the Missionary Society and one to me on behalf of the congregation. These presentations were made in words that moved one's heart, even in the memory. The purses were the most handsome either of us had ever owned, so I suppose we are both now in better condition to receive money than ever before. I suppose the ladies can explain why the Madam's purse was larger than mine.

There are some as choice spirits on the Lauderdale and Electric Mills charge as can be found anywhere.

It was late in the afternoon when we reached the parsonage at Brandon and we found evidences in the dining room and in the pantry that some welcoming hearts and some loving hands had been there. When some of these good people came in again I was able to tell them that I had already found the dining-room and that I had peeped at the table.

I had hardly recovered from unpacking and arranging when I was asked to preach the union Thanksgiving sermon. There are in Brandon Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopal churches.

About ten years ago I preached a commencement sermon at Pelahatchie. A few hours over there today made it evident that the town is increasing both in population and in prosperity.

Our reception on the charge has been all that anyone could ask. I follow good men in this pastorate, and I want to be a worthy successor. Brother Foreman is of great service.

ROLFE HUNT.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

AN ATTRACTIVE CLUB OFFER.

For the first time since the present editor has been connected with the paper, a club offer is being made to extend the circulation of the Advocate. The offer has appeared in the Advocate itself and in separate printed form, and it has been presented to the three patronizing Conferences in connection with the reports of the Boards of Christian Literature. It is this:

The regular price of the Advocate is $2 a year.

In clubs of 20 to 50, the price is $1.50 a year.

In clubs of 50 to 100, the price is $1.25 a year.

In clubs of over 100, the price is $1 a year.

The club offer expires on May 1, 1928.

All names in a club are to be sent at one time in one list, and cash is to accompany the club. Renewals will be accepted on clubs, the subscription being advanced one year from date of old subscription.

This club plan of circulating the Advocate was discussed and adopted by the Publishing Committee at its meeting last October, and it is offered by the authority of the Committee. The plan itself is simple, its details are clear, and the price is as low as could be reasonably expected. It ought to work.

We are not unmindful of the fact, however, that the success of any plan of circulating a church paper depends upon the sympathetic interest and active co-operation of the pastors whose constituency the paper serves. The pastors can circulate the church organ.

This does not necessarily mean that the preacher must secure the subscriptions himself. It means just that in a good many cases; but in many other cases, the preacher can appoint a committee of one or more which, with his encouragement, can secure the club. In some instances, the local board of lay activities would doubtless be glad to have a definite task of this kind to do; and we are sure the board could put it over with a minimum of effort.

There is probably not a pastoral charge in the three Conferences where a club of at least 20 could not be secured by proper effort; in many of them, a club of 50 could be secured; and in not a few, 100 or more could be gotten.

We call special attention to the fact that a club does not have to be restricted to the membership of a single church, but that it may embrace a whole pastoral charge. The logical thing to do, of course, is to try to place a club in each church; but if that cannot be done, the club may be made up from two or more churches.

We suppose all our people know that an offer like this is not made for the sake of showing a profit in the operation of the paper, but for the sake of extending its circulation and, therefore, its usefulness. The most the Publishing Committee can hope for financially is an increase in the subscription list that will enable the business manager to break even on the proposition.

We sincerely believe that an official organ is a necessity for a live and growing church. We do not know of any organization or interest that is deeply concerned about its own growth that does not make use of periodical publicity. Forty-three of the railroad systems of this country maintain pretentious magazines, splendidly edited, printed, and illustrated, for circulation among their employees for the purpose of developing and maintaining a proper esprit du corps among them; every kind of business maintains its official organ, because experience has proved that it has a real value in excess of its cost in promoting the interests of that business. (A few days ago we came across an official organ of the wall-paper industry, published monthly, intended for general circulation and sold at a dollar a year.) We do not suppose anybody feels that the church should not have a paper.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate has been the organ of the church in most of this territory since 1850. It has rendered a great service during that time. It can render a still greater service if its circulation is largely increased. We hope it will gain that increased circulation as a result of the present club offer.

A NEW YEAR.

According to the calendar, the new year begins on January 1; but with Methodist folk a new year begins with the adjournment of the Annual Conference.

All three of the patronizing Conferences of the Advocate have held their sessions, transacted their business, received the appointments—and now a new year is under way. We hope and pray that it may be a good one.

Some preachers are beginning the year with heavy hearts—and some congregations are not altogether happy. Some preachers are heavy-hearted because they did not get the appointments they think they wanted, and some congregations are unhappy because they got preachers they think they did not want. We hope that joy will come to both as the result of discovering that they are better suited in all cases than they thought they were.

If the heavy-hearted preacher will forget his disappointment, keep "a stiff upper lip," and determine that, with the help of God, he is going to do his dead level best this year to make his charge the kind of charge he would have liked to be sent to, we predict that he will have one of the happiest years of his ministry; and if the church that failed to get the preacher it wanted will likewise forget its disappointment and enter heartily and sympathetically into the plans of its pastor, remembering that the interests of the kingdom of God are involved, we venture the guess that it will come to the end of the year in a happy frame of mind. A preacher does not know what his people can and will do until he has given them the best there is in him; and a congregation does not know how good a preacher it has until it has done the best it can do to help him. "We would love each other more if we knew each other better."

A LESSON FROM JAPAN.

Japan is not officially a Christian nation; in fact, it is not classed as a Christian nation at all, missionary activities being maintained in all sections of the Empire. Yet, if an article appearing in a recent secular newspaper is to be believed, Christian nations could learn at least one lesson to their profit from this Eastern people. We quote from the article:

"All dance halls in Osaka and Kobe were closed by police orders a month ago. Japanese youths are just as fond of dancing as those of any other land, and a majority of them are excellent dancers, but the authorities are determined to stamp out the perniciousness that permits the mingling of the sexes to music. Policemen are stationed at the doors of the few dance halls that remain and take down the names of all who enter, while around the dancing floor, at varying intervals, are peepholes through which other police keep censorious watch over all that takes place. This constant surveillance has driven away all but the most daring, and the dance halls are shutting down one after another for want of patronage.

"Japanese houses are not built for dancing, even if a house owner or tenant should dare the indignation of reactionary neighbors and the investigation of the police, should he allow a dance to take place on his soft, mat-covered floors. Whatever dancing is done must be done in public dance halls or the hotels, with police permission, and never continue later than ten o'clock at night. * * * The police permit no student, either youth or maiden, to dance at all in public. Needless to say, Tokio has no cabarets."

The above scarcely needs comment—it speaks for itself. We do, however, call attention to the statement that the authorities are determined "to stamp out the perniciousness that permits the mingling of the sexes to music." Dancing must have been pretty bad in Tokio; we wonder if it is much better here.

A MIDNIGHT REVERIE.

By Arthur Madison Shaw.

There are voices calling to me to-night,
Out of the past;
Speaking good cheer to my soul in its flight—
Out of the past:
Oh, how those voices now ring in my ears,
Kindling my hopes, and allaying my fears,
Dimming my eyes with sweet memory's tears—
Out of the past!

There are faces smiling on me to-night,
Out of the past;
Bringing me vision of holy delight,
Out of the past:
Visions of home, with its comfort and cheer,
The unbroken circle of faces so dear;
Lovely, how lovely, those faces appear;
Out of the past!

Loved ones, I bless you for coming to-night,
Out of the past;
Flooding my soul with heavenly light—
Out of the past:
Soon shall we meet where the bright chorus sings,
Meet where the sound of the dirge never rings,
Singing the anthems sweet memory brings,
Out of the past!

WHAT AMERICA GAINS FROM MISSIONS.

By J. Earnest Fisher.

Does America gain anything in giving to mission work in foreign fields, or is this a one-sided enterprise in which one side takes all and the other gives all? If we took money needed to improve health and sanitary conditions here in America and gave it for that purpose in Korea or some other foreign field, where would be the gain? Or if in order to educate the poor children in Korea we took money that might be used to educate the poor children in America, where would the world gain anything? Some narrow-minded and short-sighted people have looked at missions in this way and have decided to keep all their money at home. This viewpoint is altogether wrong, however. The principle of mutual exchange and mutual benefit works in all properly conducted human relationships. If mission work is carried on as it should be done, then the people in America will not only give but receive real actual blessings, in the form of better health, better economic conditions, a happier and more wholesome family life, as well as richer and deeper intellectual and spiritual life.

Gains in Health.

First of all, America gains in health by contributing to the missionary enterprise, for a pest hole, or a place where all manner of diseases are allowed to run unchecked, is a menace to the rest of the world. This menace becomes greater and more serious as travel and communication become faster and easier over the world. To-day Seoul, Korea, is nearer to Washington, D. C., measured by the time it takes to go there, than St. Louis was one hundred years ago. Thus with all the commerce and freely-moving travel between nations, we cannot afford to permit plagues and diseases to go unchecked without scientific treatment and control in any part of the world. Missionaries carry to these foreign countries the laws of health and sanitation, and under their tutelage diseases are being stamped out so that America and the rest of the world gains in health thereby. An enlightened selfishness, if we have no higher motive, should impel us to give what we can towards the missionary enterprise.

Economic Benefits.

Next, there are distinct economic benefits that accrue to America from participation in the missionary activity. I am not advocating that one should give to missions for the material benefits which he will bring to his country, but I insist that there is a real material benefit. For instance, missionary education has done much in introducing foreign made goods and machinery into Korea. Take the one item of the sewing machine. Girls learn to use these machines very skillfully in the mission schools, and after their return to their homes each one must have a sewing machine of her very own. Therefore, in America more machines must be made, more laborers employed, better wages paid, because the Korean school girls are demanding sewing machines of their own. If we multiply this by the hundreds of other articles of commerce that have been introduced by missionaries and multiply this by the different countries to which missionaries are sent, we will begin to see what an important economic factor missions are in the world.

Other Gains.

In the fields of intellectual, scientific, artistic, and religious advancement, the same principle holds true. In these fields more than in any other, an advancement in one part of the world means a gain for the rest of the world. The training of the people of Korea to develop their latent talents through missionary education and religious enlightenment will probably lead to advancement in literature, art, science, or religion all over the world. In many instances the people of mission lands are contributing much towards a better understanding of the Christian religion; by the reality and depths of their religious experiences, they are making possible a richer and fuller spiritual life for religious people the world over.

In addition to these gains, the greatest gain that can come to the American people as a result of mission activity is a deep and abiding satisfaction that comes from having performed a real human service in an unselfish manner. The Christian missionary enterprise has done more of this unselfish service than any other organization that I know of. Christian people of the world have given of their means, and men and women have gone into all parts of the earth, learned a strange language, and given their lives unselfishly towards making for these foreign peoples a life more abundant. And yet many of these countries to-day still stand in need of those things which only enlighened Christian nations can teach them. It is to give this needed help that the Christian mission enterprise exists.

What Korea Gains from Missions.

Christmas in Korea is a symbol of the benefits that have come to these people from the work of missionaries. Koreans to-day are a healthier people, with a better understanding of the treatment of diseases, because the missionaries came into the land, and about twenty-five Christian hospitals minister to the sick and suffering throughout the land. Thousands of boys and girls are being educated, about 100,000 in Christian schools. Koreans are becoming financially independent by reason of the agricultural and industrial training they receive in mission schools. Women and girls have more freedom, they are more respected by their fathers and brothers and have more opportunities for self-expression than ever before. In the homes there are more conveniences, more happiness, better sanitation, and a more cheerful family life. Hundreds of churches are scattered over the land, where people gather for worship, prayer and study of the Scriptures. There are about 300,000 Christians in Korea, but Christmas will be celebrated by many more people than this, because all Koreans are grateful for the benefits that have accompanied the Christian religion.

IMPORTANT FIGURES AND FEATURES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Benjamin L. Sutherland.

From north, from south, from east, from west the members of the Mississippi Conference streamed through the gates of the capital in the early afternoon of Tuesday, Nov. 8, making their way through devious streets to the old historical Galloway Memorial Church. Here they were met by the entertainment committee and received with hearty Methodist handshakes and abounding Methodist hospitality. What a joyous throng it was! Connectional men and pastors, business men and farmers, men welcoming, yet dreading, superannuation, and probationers up for ordination. Hosts seeking guests, and guests seeking for hosts, with ladies in almost equal proportion to men, lending color and vivacity to it all. Was there ever such another gathering as we find at a Methodist Conference? Its joyous fellowship, its note of victory, its atmosphere of expectancy and its spirit of glad consecration, makes it resemble primitive Christianity more than anything we have known.

The one hundred and fourteenth session of the Mississippi Conference was formally opened Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock by Bishop Warren A. Candler, our Senior Bishop, who announced hymn 137, "How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds." Is there any time during the Conference more moving than the singing of the first hymn? What emotions are stirred, what fires of enthusiasm are kindled within the soul, and the passion for the kingdom of God flames anew within the heart! This year, as usual, the song went "with a swing" as, by the way, all singing does that is led by Bishop Candler. He has greatly endeared the old hymns to our hearts. The brethren of this Conference count themselves fortunate to have Bishop Candler as their general superintendent. For nearly half a century he has been a contributing factor to Methodism and a dominant figure in our great church. No Conference ever dragged through a dreary routine of tediousness with him as the presiding officer. The business of the Conference was interspersed with his characteristic wit that quickened the lagging interest to a high pitch. There were occasional flashes of his humorous ridicule that kept any "pretentious brother" from getting to his feet too often. But for the most part his utterances were marked by an accent of tenderness and heavenly grace.

Never shall we forget his devotional talks at the beginning of each morning session. They were profound interpretations of Christianity. His words come with the authority of original insight and deep innner experience. The high point of his message to the Conference was reached on Sunday morning; when greeted by a crowd that literally packed the church, he made a passionate appeal for a deeper loyalty to Christ and his word. His message was vibrant with the power of the Holy Spirit, and the congregation was deeply moved and made sensible of the presence of Christ. We believe Bishop Candler more closely approaches the Apostle Paul in his ministry and teaching than any other man of our day.

One of the intensely interesting moments in the Conference was when Rev. J. Loyd Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, in striking language and touching sentiment, presented to our honored guest, Bishop Horace Mellard DuBose, in behalf of the Conference, a bishop's ring; and Rev. V. G. Clifford, with appropriate words, in behalf of the Epworth Leagues of this Conference, presented him with fifty dollars in gold. The Bishop responded very feelingly; and, after being presented to the Conference by Bishop Candler, delivered his semi-centennial sermon. This sermon was retrospective, being in the form of an historical address, and was a masterpiece of erudition, pulsing with spiritual life and power, delivered in Bishop DuBose's inimitable style. He made the men who lived and wrought so nobly in other days live again so that we who listened caught the spirit of inspiration that moved such men as McTyeire, Keener, Galloway and a host of others with an unquenchable passion for the kingdom of God. It was a happy hour, and the Mississippi Conference was justly proud of the contribution it made to the church through the life and ministry of Bishop DuBose.

Another outstanding figure at the Conference was Bishop Urban V. W. Darlington, who was the official representative of the General Board of Missions. He completely won the hearts of all who heard him, and made a deep and abiding impression on the Conference by his great preaching. His genial and striking personality and gentle, direct utterances have the effect of reaching the heart and kindling the emotions. His interpretations of the Gospel are simple and his illustrations are taken from his own experience, but they are rich with an inimitable personal charm, and a quickening evangelistic fervor which draws saint and sinner toward the Cross of Christ. He uses the spur of emotion as surely as the conviction of the intellect. The Methodists of South Mississippi hope that when they have to surrender Bishop Candler at the end of this quadrennium they will be fortunate enough to secure Bishop Darlington to superintend this Episcopal District.

Aside from the inspiration brought to the Conference by the presence and through the messages of the three Bishops, special mention should be made of the afternoon sermons delivered by Dr. T. D. Ellis, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, and Dr. Henry T. Carley, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Their utterances were listened to with rapt attention, and frequent comments were heard regarding the high order of their sermons. It is significant at a time when silly people are proclaiming the decay of great preaching that large crowds should be attracted to hear sermons. We are not quite so stupid as to contrast these men of God; each had his own style and each his special message and made his personal contribution to the Conference.

Among the many connectional men who were welcomed visitors was the efficient and versatile editor of the (Nashville) Christian Advocate, Dr. Alfred F. Smith, who was the official representative of the General Board of Finance. Having been the pastor of Galloway Memorial Church for four years his visit was looked upon as his "homecoming" by the people of Jackson and the brethren of the Mississippi Conference. He holds a high place in the esteem and affections of this Conference.

An important part of the spiritual life of the Conference was the early morning prayer meeting, under the direction of Rev. H. A. Wood. Here an atmosphere of prayer and spiritual power was created, making it possible to hold a really great spiritual Conference.

An educational policy of far-reaching significance was projected by the Conference in the adoption of the report and in the provision for the execution of the recommendations of a Special Education Commission. This action included the closing of the Conference Training School at Montrose, and the Port Gibson Academy, after the present session, and the ceding of Whitworth College to Millsaps College, making it a part of the Millsaps system, with certain restrictions which encourage the aspiration of Whitworth to attain the standard of an A grade college. The statesmanlike scope and thoroughness of this action, as well as the unanimity and dispatch with which it was made, indicates that the Mississippi Conference is ready for a forward movement in Christian Education. Dr. Harvey Cox, president of Emory University, who was present when the above action was taken, stated to friends that in his opinion it was a monumental achievement for efficiency in the Conference administration of its educational institutions, and that other Conferences would do well to adopt such a program.

An important item in the report of the Educational Commission was the resolution that the Seashore Camp Ground School as heretofore operated be permanently closed and the larger program for the development of this property be undertaken. It is the dream of Bishop Candler and of the Mississippi Conference to see a Junior College that will be a credit to Methodism erected at the Seashore Camp Ground, making on the Gulf Coast a great educational and evangelistic center for this section of Methodism. It is our sincere desire to have the Alabama and Louisiana Conferences join us in such a program. It will be criminal for the church to let such an opportunity pass and think only of the monetary value of this great property.

This is a rapid and inadequate sketch of some of the important features that entered into the late session of the Mississippi Conference. Yet, perhaps, it will be clear that we had a great gathering, one that will go down in the annals of Mississippi Methodism as an outstanding Conference for all time. This article would not be complete were mention not made of the royal entertainment and true Southern hospitality provided by the genial pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church, Dr. Hal Spragins, and his people, so ably assisted by the other pastors of Jackson and their churches. We are sure that the members of the Conference would gladly vote for a return session in the city of Jackson, with the hope that they might be entertained again in the homes that so amply looked after their comfort this time.

Laurel, Miss.

A SUGGESTION.

The merry Christmas season is on us—that happy time of the year when in remembrance of God's wonderful gift to us in the person of our Saviour our hearts and our purses are poured out without stint or limit. As we run over in our minds whom we will remember this Christmas with gifts, why not include in the number some of our worthy superannuated preachers or their widows? Our church has been shamefully negligent of these old heroes of the Cross, and with many of them the Christmas season will not be as happy as it should be on account of this very neglect. But we as individuals can brighten it for them—and for ourselves as well—if we will send them our Christmas greeting in the form of a check, or money in some other form. You, doubtless, have friends among the number who have been a very great blessing to you and whose friendship you value most highly; would this not be a most happy way to show something of your appreciation of them and their services? Perhaps you are right now making out your gift list; let some of these worthy men and women head that list!

IS IT WISE?

By Rev. J. L. Greenway.

In the economy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the quarterly conference has had an important place. It is a vital part of our ecclesiastical machinery. Its origin dates back almost to the beginning of American Methodism.

For many years this conference was looked upon with much favor and delight by our people, and they planned for the occasion weeks ahead. It was the red letter day in many a rural community and small town. People came for miles in crude conveyances and on foot over bad roads to be present. To them it was the spiritual feast. The entire Sunday was given to religious services, and the presiding elder preached. In those days there was no thought of holding the quarterly conference on Sunday; it was held some time during the week.

Some twenty or twenty-five years ago some presiding elders began now and then to conduct the quarterly conference on Sunday. This custom has grown until, judging from the schedule as published by the presiding elders in the Advocate, nearly one-half of our quarterly conferences are held on Sunday.

The question is being raised by pastors and people if this is best, and some are going farther and questioning if it is right. The quarterly conference is strictly a business session, and this is clearly indicated by the Discipline, Question 4: "What is the regular business of a quarterly conference?" Question 5: "What order of business shall be observed in the quarterly conference?" Question 36: "Is there any miscellaneous business?"(7) "Other miscellaneous business." From these questions, as well as their answers, it is self-evident as to the nature of the quarterly conference. We may answer that it is business pertaining to the church; but, it is business nevertheless, and was so considered by the fathers of Methodism, and they gave the conference its legitimate place by holding it on a week day.

Sunday quarterly conferences are an innovation which has insiduously crept into our churches, like the camel and the miller in the fable. The camel asked to put his nose inside the door, which ended by his getting inside and driving out the miller. At the rate we are going it will not be many years before all our quarterly conferences will be held on Sunday.

In doing this we are departing from the honored custom of the church, as well as doing business on Sunday. We discount the gospel which we preach, and are in danger of displeasing our God. The world is not slow to detect our inconsistency, and it ill becomes us to denounce labor organizations and other societies who meet and do business pertaining to their order on Sunday if we do the same.

The blame for this condition is not wholly with the presiding elders. The laymen must take their share. The plea for lack of time to attend a conference during the week has influenced many a presiding elder to hold the same on Sunday. There is time for almost everything else but to attend to the business of the church of God. Such a plea is futile and will not stand the test. Is it not time to call a halt in this matter lest we be caught in the snare of the devil?

LOWER CRITICISM.

During recent years choice bits of "Lower" criticism appear from time to time.

"Trying to rub out hell higher critics ring the changes on hades, sheol, etc. My pa was a good man and placed his faith in hell. For my pa hell was good enough, and any place good enough for pa is good enough for me."

"Higher critics make me tired talking about Latin, Greek, Hebrew. What did Paul and Peter know about them dead languages? Good old Saint James English was good enough for them, and is good enough for me."

"Time is at hand when all Methodists should stand up for the faith of our fathers, Immaculate Conception, etc."

"The Man of Galilee has not been surpassed for good English."

At least fifty per cent of the above choice bits have appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and with utmost seriousness.

A DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES FOR THE AMERICAN MOVEMENT AGAINST ALCOHOLISM.

By Ernest H. Cherrington, General Secretary, World League Against Alcoholism.

Personal liberty is least where there is no law and no government. It is greatest where the strongest prohibitions are enforced against anti-social acts.

The beverage liquor traffic is not a necessary evil. Such a thing is impossible. If it is necessary, it cannot be evil; if it is evil, it cannot be necessary.

Reforms are evolutions, not revolutions, and the final test of every reform in the interest of human welfare is not whether it is easy or safe or opportune or expedient, but whether it is right.

The first necessary legal step in the suppression of any social evil is to deprive that evil of the sanction of law and the protection of government. Thereafter, such an evil must defend itself in the open, since it cannot longer hide behind the flag of government and law.

The greatest experiment in social welfare in the modern world is the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The prime objecive of the national prohibitory law is not "to make men good by law." It is to protect society at large from the anti-social acts of those who insist upon demonstrating that they will "not be made good by law."

National prohibition of beverage alcohol is in harmony with the highest purpose of law, namely, "to make it easy for men to do right and difficult for men to do wrong."

The degree of enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment is not a test of the principle of prohibition; it is a test of the ability of free government to effectuate itself.

Experience has demonstrated that prohibition, with enforcement at its worst, is infinitely better than legally sanctioned beverage alcohol with regulation at its best.

Strictest enforcement, however, will not guarantee the permanency of prohibition; that can come only through observance of the law by the people because of their belief in and devotion to the principle which the law is intended to express.

Legislation and enforcement alone can never solve the beverage alcohol problem. That can be done only as enlightened public opinion is translated into law and conduct; and quickened public conscience is expressed in administration of and acquiescence in such law. Therefore the ultimate realization of the temperance reform depends primarily not on legislation but on education. The most important factor in the movement against alcoholism is not the next general election, but the next generation.

Final success in moral and social welfare can be achieved, not by fighting on the defensive, but only by keeping the offensive.

The most important function of organized movements against alcoholism is not direct action in legislation, enforcement and the realm of politics. It is rather indirect action by the dissemination of truth and the creation and organization of public sentiment.

Successful prohibition in the United States will not only serve the best interests of America, but it will serve the rest of the world, which awaits the outcome of the great American adventure.

Moreover, by international co-operation, American prohibition forces will help to keep the international liquor inteersts busy defending themselves in other lands rather than to permit those interested to concentrate on the effort to nullify and finally destroy prohibition in America.

The most significant fact in the modern world, indicative of the future trend of the movement against alcoholism, is that the human factor in modern industry has been transformed from the unskilled laborer of yesterday whose principal asset was human muscle, to the highly skilled workman of to-day whose absolute requirements are, not human muscle, but keen eyes, quick wits, steady nerves, and clear brains. Beverage alcohol, therefore, is doomed because it belongs to a slower and a lower civilization.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The sessions of the Annual Conferences for our church are about completed for this year. The toil, anxiety, and problems, the parliamentary struggles for mastery and decision of subjects of weight and importance to the progress of God's kingdom as we view it, are for a season settled—Conference is over. The captains and kings depart. Only the princes are left. I mean the pastors of the districts and charges. With many of these, it is blessed to receive; with others the least said the better. Go to it, Beloved; after all, you are the arch upon which the door of this visible temple rests. The welfare of the church, all her interests—missions, education, evangelism, service of all kinds—depend upon you more than upon any one man, or set of men. You are the key man, and this means you will have doors to open, gates to unbar, fields to enter.

Open that compendium of law, order and religion, the Discipline, and study anew the duties of a preacher in charge. To my mind these give him all the liberty, initiative and privilege, and just a bit more, that any man needs. A minister of another churchh once called me an ambassador in bonds, implying, I thought, restraint upon my ministry. Once in the history of the church of God, a glorious old apostle thus named himself, and in these bonds wrought so mightily for truth and righteousness as to win for himself an immortal name. Prison walls hold few martyrs now-a-days, but wholesome restraint and wise guidance are good for any man. Most rebellions I have known sprang from wrong motives. It is to the wise promise is given to shine in the firmament like stars, and understanding and wisdom are handmaids.

The superannuate! Long and patiently has he endured the toil, struggle, and burden of the church. Now, like a retired athlete, he is in the grand stand watching the game, until in a few years he will make the great touchdown. Beloved, of the old guard, be true, be loyal, be brave. God has been good to us through the years; he will not fail us now, nor will the preachers and people desert us. There are too many ties, woven through the years. Real manliness is a virtue and grace even in old age. Deliver me from the preacher, young or old, who cringes, pauperizes, and makes the fatal error of thinking his attitude is Christian humility.

Something more I wish to say, and say it with emphasis—Quit exploiting the superannuates. They are not lone, lost, forgotten men. Whoever coined that rot about forgotten men may have meant well, but had the wrong viewpoint. The preachers of an elder day are enshrined in the memories of as faithful and true set of men and women as walk the earth to-day. And you are not hastening the day of the coming of a full and fair support for them by exploiting them as paupers. Sentiment and sympathy may be tremendous factors in raising this much debated fund for their sustenance, but there are fairer and better motives to which one may appeal. If the guerdon is worth the wearing, it is worth the bearing, and may the old guard bear it manfully, truly and with a courage born of faith through the few remaining years.

PRIZES FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Three Awards of $100, $65 and $35 Offered for Papers on Race Relations.

The Commission on Interracial Co-operation, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., announces the offer of three cash prizes of $100, $65 and $35, respectively, for the best papers on the subject of race relations submitted by students of Southern colleges during the present school year. According to the announcement, contestants will be free to choose any phase of the subject, but, other things being equal, preference will be given to practical suggestions of prevalent conditions and attitudes, with suggestions for their improvement. Further information as to the contest, together with suggestions as to topics and sources, may be had from R. B. Eleazer, Educational Director, 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, Ga.

From the Methodist hand-cart, which is set up Saturdays in the market place of Antwerp, Belgium, there were sold during the past year ninety-three Bibles, 223 New Testaments, and other portions of the Scriptures.

The Home Circle

SHE AND I.

On a certain happy Sunday
In an autumn afternoon,
We went walking by the river—
She and I;
Where the rushes were a-quiver;
And they hummed a lisping tune
As the water swishing swiftly
Bent their slim resilient stems,
When we walked down by the shore-sands,
She and I.

On that afternoon of Sunday
In that autumn long ago,
It was settled that our lives with youth aglow
Like the water and the rushes
In glad symphony should sing
Through our lifetime through all seasons,
Winter, summer, fall and spring—
She and I.

Now the snows of age are falling
And the wintry winds are chill;
Where we walk the way is icy;
Yet we have the same old thrill,
As when hand in hand we loitered—
She and I—
In that afternoon of autumn,
In the forenoon of our life;
When we talked and walked that Sunday,
She and I.

And we're talking yet, while roaming
In the red horizon's gloaming—
She and I;
And the disappearing twilight
Holds already points of starlight,
While we watch for heaven's searchlight,
She and I.

—J. D. Gillilan.

THE PROMISING FISHES.

One morning while Julie and her neighbor Jacky were visiting Julie's grandpa and grandma in the country, a letter came from the city.

"Your big boy cousins, Tom and Nathan, from the city, are coming next Friday afternoon to visit us until Monday," grandma told Julie. "They say they wish to go fishing on Saturday at the Ten-Mile Bridge."

Not long after that, Julie was saying to Jacky, "Tom and Nathan like to tease, but no matter what they do to us, we must not care."

When the big boys came they found that they could not tease their little cousin Julie or her friend Jacky.

Then the big boys did something that was surprising. They said that if Jacky and Julie would help them dig angleworms for bait, they could go fishing, too.

That evening by lantern light, Julie and Jacky helped dig bait until they were so tired they could hardly keep awake.

Next morning when they came downstairs they were surprised to find grandpa and grandma eating breakfast.

"Where are the boys?" Julie asked.

"They must have gone fishing before daylight," grandma answered.

"They said we could go fishing, too!" Julie wailed, with tears in her eyes.

After breakfast Jacky found two short willow sticks on the back doorstep. A string was tied to each stick, and at the end of the strings were bent pins.

"And here's a note!" exclaimed Julie. "You read it, Jacky." Jacky slowly read aloud:

"You little kids may go fishing, but not with us. The place for you is the meadow brook! Ha! ha!"

Julie was the first to laugh.

"Let's forget the boys and catch some promising fish," she said to Jacky. "You know that grandpa told the boys the fish promise to bite today. I have thought of another kind of promises for fishes. It is a new game."

Several hours later the two children returned carrying a big whitefish on a strong stick. Their eyes were shining.

"We caught our big fish in the queerest way!" Julie exclaimed.

"Will you explain?" demanded grandma.

"It was Julie's idea," Jacky began. "She said for us to cut all kinds of fishes out of all kinds of paper and play we caught them. So we did it. Remember the gay-colored tissue and the crepe paper? Well, Julie made ruffles of it and sewed on the ruffles for fins and tails, and we had the most fun. We wrote something on every fish except the newspaper ones, and of course they were printed all over. We wrote fish promises. We made the queer fishes promise all kinds of things, and we tied our fishes to the poles."

"We laughed so loud," Julie piped in, "that the real fisherman heard us. He was driving home and stopped to let his horses drink in the brook."

"When he saw our strings of fishes," Jacky went on when Julie stopped for breathe, "he said, 'How'll you trade? I'll give you the only whitefish I have left, and it is a beauty, if you will give me your two strings of fishes for advertising purposes!'"

"And away he went," finished Julie, "with our paper fishes flutteriing in the wind on the back of his wagon. He said that he would have all the folks in town laughing to-morrow."

When Tom and Nathan came home in time for supper, the only bites they could report were mosquito bites.

"Never mind," said grandma, "we have fresh whitefish for supper."

"Where did you get it?" asked Tom.

"Julie and Jacky caught it."

Until grandma called the family to the table, the big boys were obliged to listen to a serenade under their window, where Julie and Jacky were singing at the top of shrill voices:

"Get your wishes
With promising fishes,
Take a bent pin
And drop it in.
Ha, ha, ha-ha,
He, ha, ha-ha!"

After supper, when the boys had heard the whole story, Julie and Jacky began to sing again, until finally grandpa said with a twinkle in his eye:

"Come, come, Julie and Jacky. Don't you see that the big boys can't stand a little teasing."—Frances Margaret Fox, in Zion's Herald.

THE TERROR OF THE NIGHT.

By Wilbur Long.

Largest of our native birds of prey, the great horned owl is the nemesis of all small nocturnal folk, as well as the lovers of the daylight hours which are so unfortunate as to be without shelter at nightfall. With a wing spread sometimes exceeding six feet, and a total length from head to tail of two feet or more, this huge marauder cruises about on silent wings, ever on the lookout for a victim.

The owl's downy feathers are so constructed that the bird is enabled to fly swiftly and swoop upon its prey silently as a snowflake. Almost the whole side of the head is ear, so that the slightest scratch of claws on bark, or snap of twig under the unwary feet of rat or rabbit, is heard for fifty yards or more. The great destroyer hovers over like a shadow, fierce yellow eyes glare about, sharp claws reach down, and the unwary one is borne away to feed the hungry young, with only a few tiny drops of blood, or some drifting feathers to speak of tragedy.

The great horned owl may be known at once by its great size, its dark brown color and the conspicuous tufts of feathers over the eyes. The word "horned" is a misnomer, for the "horns" are mere ornaments, having no relation either to horns or ears. The claws are an inch or more in length, hard as steel and sharp as needles. The legs and toes are completely feathered. The characteristic facial "disc" or group of feathers about each eye is well developed, and gives the bird a very wise appearance.

The haunt of this bird is thick woodland, with open fields or sloughs close by, where rabbits and other small wild life are plentiful. Almost every patch of woodland has a pair of these birds, and if near a farm house, they often pick up unwary chickens roosting in trees or bushes.

The nesting season begins very early, about the middle of February, and the young, characteristic of the young of most birds of prey, stay in the nest about two months. Three pure white eggs are deposited in a hollow tree, if a suitable one can be found, and if not, a hawk's nest is appropriated.

Aside from man, the great horned owl has but one natural enemy—the common crow. Let him venture out by day, and be spied by a crow and almost immediately a mob of the black ruffians gather about. Frequently a hundred or more are in the mob, and the clamor can be heard for miles on a quiet day. The poor owl is driven from one place to another, vainly trying to escape his tormentors, until night falls once more and the hunted becomes the hunter. This antipathy of the crow for the owl is shared by all birds, and has never been explained satisfactorily. The crows rarely touch the owl, but do seem to annoy it to distraction.

This bird is sometimes called the "hoot-owl!" and is a very proficient hooter, but not so good as the barred owl. The sound is not loud, but fills the woods, and is almost impossible to locate. It seems near and yet far away, dimmed by great distance. I once watched two of the birds hooting, and though they were less than thirty yards distant, the sound seemed to come from a half mile away. It was early in the evening, and twilight in the woods. The big birds sat on a branch, silently twisting their heads this way and that. Suddenly one bobbed forward like a rooster crowing or a turkey gobbling, and the ghostly sound rolled through the woods. They sat motionless for a few seconds, waiting for some animal or bird to move and betray its presence. Then the performance was repeated. After five minutes of this, the two detected my presence and flew away.

The species has a wide range all over the eastern half of the United States, but is nowhere very plentiful. Food consists of almost any kind of small wild life caught napping, but cotton tails seem to form the largest part of its living. Rats, mice, small birds, chickens, and even larger game are occasionally taken. With the ever-increasing army of hunters and the cutting of the woodland in which it makes its home, the great horned owl is yearly being driven back. It is a noble bird, but will be unable to adapt itself to the settled community, at least in this country where there are so many sportsmen.—Our Dumb Animals.

"TIME OUT."

That Pesky Preposition.

The Society for Pure English offers this dialogue as a warning against the careless use of prepositions:

Sick Child: "I want to be read to."

Nurse: "What book do you want to be read to out of?"

Sick Child: "'Robinson Crusoe.'"

Nurse goes out and returns with "The Swiss Family Robinson."

Sick Child: "What did you bring me that book to be read to out of from for?"—Epworth Herald.

May: "I'm so glad you like it! Mother says chicken salad and strawberry tarts are the only things I make correctly."

Dolly: "Which is this, darling?"—Exchange.

THE APPOINTMENTS.

In keeping with our custom, we are printing in the Advocate this week the appointments of our three patronizing Conferences for the convenience of many who like to have all the appointments available. Several changes have been officially made since the adjournment of the Conferences, and these, as far as we have knowledge of them, will appear in the list instead of the appointments as originally made. We suggest that this issue of the Advocate is well worth preserving for future reference.

CHANGES IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

We have been informed by Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, that the following changes have been authorized by Bishop Candler since the adjournment of Conference: Rev. J. B. Williams will remain at Coushatta; Rev. R. F. Harrell will remain at Many; Rev. Alonzo Early will go to Belcher.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE DIRECTOR OF SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT.

At the request of Dr. Luther E. Todd, General Secretary of the Board of Finance, Bishop Candler has approved the appointment of Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, as Louisiana Conference Director of Superannuate Endowment. Brother Cain is attending the meeting of the Conference directors in St. Louis this week.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor, has 3,166 members.

Rev. J. S. Maxey, of the Duck Hill charge, North Mississippi Conference, has our thanks for two subscriptions, recently sent in.

Judge Percy Bell, teacher of the Big Brothers Bible class at Greenville, Miss., delivered the Elks' memorial address at Jackson, Tenn., on Sunday, Dec. 4.

Rev. W. B Alsworth, writing from Tylertown, Miss., says: "We are delighted with our charge. The people have been unusually kind in receiving us, and we look forward to a great year."

Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., of Lake Charles, La., were in New Orleans a day or two this week, having come down for medical attention for Mrs. Doss. Brother Doss paid the Advocate office an appreciated call while in the city.

Mr. J. W. Dean, 232 West Forty-second Place, Los Angeles, Calif., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says he enjoys reading it and that he likes to keep track of the "fellers" in Louisiana and Mississippi.

The Advocate extends sincere good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Walsworth, of Jonesboro, La., who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Oct. 10. May the richest blessings of heaven continue to be their portion!

Rev. W. G. Francis, superintendent of the Old Men's Home, Jackson, Miss., is requesting every Sunday school in Mississippi to make a monthly contribution to the support of the Home. Fifty-eight old men have been cared for during the past twenty-two months.

At the recent session of the Virginia Conference, Rev. Olin Ray, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, was moved from Petersburg to Onancock, in the Eastern Shore District. Brother Ray reports that he is among fine people. The country reminds him of the Mississippi delta.

Rev. Carroll Varner, writing from Tupelo, Miss., says: "I have been given every assurance of the whole-hearted support f the church in the year's work ahead of us. The new elder, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, preached for us Sunday morning and held the first quarterly conference that afternoon, and made a very fine impression upon these folk. We shall expect the victory this year."

Dr. W. Winans Drake, pastor at Ruston, La., in driving home from Conference at Baton Rouge, had a near serious accident. In trying to avoid a car that turned abruptly in front of him, his car was overturned, and Mrs. Drake and Mrs. V. H. Spinks, who were in the car, were painfully hurt. At last account, both were recuperating nicely.

REPORT OF BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

As set forth in the Constitution of the Board of Lay Activities in Chapter XI of our book of Discipline, the General Conference has directed the work of our Board along four main lines: the promotion of the payment of the Benevolent Claims, Christian Stewardship, men's work through the Wesley Brotherhood, and co-operation with the other agencies of the church.

We are glad to report encouraging progress, and to call attention to the following features in our plan for action during the Conference year:

The Benevolences.

In view of the responsibility placed on the Board of Lay Activities, together with the bishop, presiding elders and pastors, for the promotion of full payment of the Benevolent Claims, we earnestly commit ourselves to the position that:

The assessments, General and Conference, constitute a sacred and abiding obligation.

The Benevolences should be provided for in cash and pledges as soon as practicable after the session of the Annual Conference, and at least half of these claims paid before the session of the district conference.

As far as possible these funds should be sent to the Conference Treasurer, and through him to the various Boards monthly as an integral part of the local church budget.

That Boards of Lay Activities unite with the bishop, presiding elders, pastors and the other boards of the Conference in a co-operative effort to inform our entire membership of the needs represented in our Benevolent Claims, and to promote systematic and proportional giving to the great causes represented in the assessments, with a goal of 100 per cent.

We pledge our special efforts in support of missions and the provision for our superannuates.

We request the continuation of a Commission on Benevolences as organized at the last session of the Conference, and the appropriation of $800 for literature.

Christian Stewardship.

It is our conviction that the practice of Christian Stewardship is one of the fundamental needs of our church, and that too much emphasis cannot be placed on the educational agencies of this phase of our work. To this end we strongly urge the organization and furnishing of the Stewardship Committee in each local church as provided by the Discipline, and recommend that the month of December be observed as a special period for intensive Stewardship cultivation and emphasis.

The Wesley Brotherhood.

We commend the Wesley Brotherhood as an agency for promoting Christ's kingdom among men through fellowship, prayer, personal testimony and aggressive evangelistic work, and urge its organization in every church where practicable.

Methodist Layman.

We consider the Methodist Layman, our official organ authorized by our last General Conference, our strongest and most effective agency for promoting lay activities and carrying forward the work of our Board. Therefore, we urge unusual effort to extend its circulation to every member of the lay organization, and one additional subscription for every family in the Conference. Your Board has assumed the obligation of one subscription for each active preacher and each superannuate in the Conference. We pledge our support to the Conference and General Organ.

Organization.

We realize the need of exercising prayer and care in the selection of all lay leaders and chairmen of committees, and earnestly appeal to our presiding elders and pastors to use every possible effort to entrust all lay boards and committees in their work, with emphasis on the Pastor's Cabinet. We desire to co-operate heartily in the maintenance of a Pastors' School, and have elected a representative of our Board and made an appropriation for the conduct of a class in Stewardship and Lay Activities. We respectfully request the continuance of the same appropriation for the expenses of the Conference Board in the discharge of their work.

We desire to express our deep appreciation of the splendid address and other service rendered during this Conference by Dr. Harvey W. Cox, President of Emory University and Lay Leader of the North Georgia Conference, who came to represent the General Secretary and Board of Lay Activities.

We desire, also, to record our sincere appreciation of our presiding bishop, our presiding elders, and pastors in all of their labors, especially in their sympathetic attitude and active co-operation in our lay work.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) J. M. SULLIVAN, Chairman.
J. C. WOOD, Secretary.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to the church public that Rev. T. G. Stamps, pastor of the Methodist charge at St. Francisville, La., was tried on Nov. 25, 1927, for immorality in financial transactions, the trial being continued until Nov. 30 at his request; that he evaded trial, but was represented by counsel; was found guilty and expelled from the ministry and membership of the church.

I feel impelled to give this notice because he has used his ministerial standing to borrow money extensively and has hurt the church and ministry by his conduct.

Presiding Elder in 1927 of the Baton Rouge District, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

MAINTAINING THE GLOW.

By Dr. George H. Morrison, Glasgow.

"Maintain the spiritual glow."—Rom. 12:11 (Dr. Moffatt).

All of us have hours in the interior life when we are conscious of the glowing spirit. Our hearts burn within us as we journey. Sometimes these hours reach us unexpectedly; sometimes after periods of prayer. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and so is every one born of the Spirit. But when such hours come the inward life grows radiant, and "flowers laugh before us in their beds," and in the light of heaven we see light. In such hours we learn a great deal more than we ever gained from unillumined study. In such hours heaven is very near, and the golden ladder is set "at Charing Cross." In such hours, as by unseen fingers, the veil is taken from the face of Scripture, and the Word, that was marred more than any man, now shines on us as altogether lovely. We have caught the spiritual glow. We are in heavenly places with Christ Jesus. There steals on our ear the distant triumph song. We behold Satan as lightning fall from heaven. Such glowing hours of spiritual warmth and radiance, come with greater or lesser frequency to everybody who is stepping heavenward.

But the great difficulty in the interior life is to maintain that spiritual glow. The problem is not to catch it, but to keep it. Seasons come when we are overwrought, and when the keepers of the house do tremble. We may have overdriven "our brother the ass," as St. Francis used to call his body. Or it may be, in the providence of God, that for long days we have to take our journey through a dry land where no water is. It is easy to lose the glow in such experiences. It fades into the light of common day. The Bible loses its fragrance and dew. Heaven recedes; we miss the golden ladder. And yet the divine command is laid on us, poor unstable mortals though we be, that our duty is to maintain the spiritual glow. It can be ours in spite of feeble health. It can be ours whatever be our temperament. It is not given for rare or precious moments. It is meant for every mile of the long journey. And just there the difficulty lies, of maintaining, through dark and dreary days, the radiance and the warmth of hours of insight. He who does that is victor. Having done all, he stands. He "makes a sunshine in a shady place." In weakness he is strong. And we may be certain that when God commands a thing he never mocks us with impossibilities. When he commands he gives the power to do.

For what we must always bear in mind is this, that the spiritual glow is not a luxury. If it were that, and nothing else than that, it would never reach us as a divine command. There are tasks that no man will accomplish unless he is gifted with a glowing spirit. There are victories that call for radiance. They never can be accomplished in cold blood. To come victorious out of this present life, unembittered by its tears and tragedies, is beyond the compass of the stoic heart. "No virtue is pure that is not passionate." The song of the Lord must sound above the sacrifice. For the campaign of life we need the song, just as surely as we need the sword. Those who have conquered and are robed in white do not flash the glittering sword in heaven. They sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. That is why the inspired volume bids us to maintain the spiritual glow. It is not that we may be happy all the time. It is that we may be triumphant all the time. There are valleys we shall never cross unscathed, there are temptations we shall never master, without a certain glow within the soul.

Now it is just there that we thank God afresh for the unspeakable gift of the Lord Jesus. To love him gives the glow. Nobody ever has a glowing heart because he is ordered to do certain things. Paul never found that his big heart was glowing when he struggled to obey the Ten Commandments. But when these commandments are incarnate in a living Lord whom we can love, then obedience is set to music. Love is the fulfilling of the law. Love is law translated into melody. Love laughs at difficulties, just as it is said to laugh at locksmiths. And when, right at the center of our being, there is real love for him who died for us, cold and heavy obedience is gone—it is replaced by the spiritual glow. Thus to continue glowing is to continue in the love of Christ. It is to live in the experience of his great love for us, and in continual response to that experience. The one way to maintain the spiritual glow is to maintain fellowship with Christ, and that is possible for everybody. Every day we may open our hearts anew to receive the Holy Spirit. We may begin each day, however dark and dreary, by saying "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." So maintaining, through heavenly supply, our loving personal fellowship with him we maintain (and yet not we) the glowing heart.—Selected.

Protection Against Old Age

GOING ON THE ROCKS.

In a thick fog on Saturday night, Oct. 22, the Coos Bay, a lumber steamer, while passing out of the Golden Gate, ran onto a rock near Land's End on the San Francisco side, and was practically ruined. A few days after the accident we saw this large steel freighter, valued at half a million dollars, with this great hole in her side in which the rock was fastened as if it grew there, and so securely did it bind the vessel that the incoming tide did not seem to move her a hair's breadth.

We do not know what was the cause of the trouble; the courts are determining that. Some say one thing, and some another; and some of the chief officers attribute the crash to a confusion of fog whistles, and a strong set of flood tide which swept them off their course because of their slow speed.

There was a lighthouse right near, and it was constantly throwing out its great, white beam of light like a one-eyed Cyclops. For some reason, whether it was the fog or neglect, those on the ship did not seem to notice this danger signal, which would have told them so dramatically of the dangerous rocks.

However, there was the lesson before us: shipwreck. We thought of St. Paul, who had the fear which amounted almost to an obsession that after having preached the Gospel to others he might be a castaway. There are lots of things which will put a man on the rocks, but none will do it quicker than a weakness which causes a man to fall for the lusts of the flesh manifested in an unclean life.—Pacific Christian Advocate.

Just as the evening shades were lowering there came an angel messenger to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Marshall, of Batesville, Miss., and said, "God has need of your oldest darling son and he must come up higher." Oh! how hard to part with him. Oh! how we did need him and wish the Heavenly Father would spare him just a little longer; but no, he must answer the call and leave us here to weep for him, but not as those who have no hope, for our precious son said, "Mother, you know how bad I want to get well, but if it is not God's will, I am not afraid to die." Praise God for a life beyond the grave and a home in Heaven. Our son, PICK MARSHALL, JR., was born Aug. 21, 1900, and left us for his eternal home Oct. 23, 1927, leaving behind to weep and wait, father, mother, and one little brother, besides other relatives. He was fatally injured in an automobile wreck, but lived four weeks amid great suffering before his death. I must say he was the sweetest and most patient sufferer I ever saw, never murmuring or complaining. I feel that I have given to God and Heaven a precious jewel, and I am praying that he will reward me by giving me grace and wisdom to rear my other little son up just as I should and enable me to be instrumental in saving other people's girls and boys. Funeral services were conducted at the family residence by our pastor, Brother A. T. Clanton, assisted by Brother Lee, Brother Thrailkill, and Brother Roberson. Interment was in Batesville cemetery. He is gone but not forgotten. No! no, mothers never forget their children I am sure my darling son is in heaven, waiting and watching for me, and I promised him I would meet him there, where "no grief shall know the heart, and never shall a tie be broken."

His mother,
MRS. WILL MARSHALL.

LYMAN SUMMERFIELD WIDNEY, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., died Nov. 10, 1927, in Birmingham, Ala., in his eighty-fourth year. Mr. Widney was a member of Corinthian Lodge No. 190, F. and A. M., and was a resident of Baton Rouge, New Orleans, and Biloxi for sixty-five years. He is survived by a wife, four daughters and two sons. Mr. Widney was known and loved by many "old time" Methodists in Baton Rouge and New Orleans. He was a devoted husband and father, a man of sterling qualities, a sincere friend—in fact, an example of true Christian character.

A FRIEND.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased our Father to remove from the scene of his earthly labors our brother, NATHANIEL TERRY WAX; and,

Whereas, Brother Wax has been a faithful official of the Amory Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the greater part of the period of existence of the church and has shown his love for the church as an institution founded upon the bedrock of faith in Almighty God and our Lord Jesus Christ;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the service of Brother Wax in behalf of the Master while here upon earth renders it fitting that some memorial of his going should be entered upon our records;

And, be it further resolved by the Board of Stewards and members of the quarterly conference of the Methodist church of Amory, Miss., That we, as a church, while grieved at his passing, yet glory in his life of service and faithfulness while here.

Be it further resolved, That we extend to the family of our deceased brother our sincerest sympathy, commending them to him to whom we all look up in trust and faith for all things which come to us, with the knowledge that he will be to them the same comforter as to our brother in his going.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this quarterly conference and a copy furnished the family of our departed brother.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NEW ADDRESS.

Please note, Mississippi Conference, a change in the address of our Conference Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, to Poplar Springs Drive, Meridian, Miss.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE.

"Christmas is Coming." Have you read the beautiful Christmas number of the "Voice?" And didn't you read between the lines on the very first page, a call to "Christianize Christmas?" I did, and I'm offering the following suggestions to help you do it. There are our three Wesley Houses. Money is always acceptable; but as to special needs:

Miss Ruth Heflin, of the Wesley Community House at Biloxi, writes: "We are anxious to make our Nursery an A1 Nursery according to the rules of the National Federation of Day Nurseries, so our most 'Needy Needs' are things for it, such as constructive toys, weighing scales, small elevated bath tubs and hobby-horses."

Miss Adaline M. Peeples, of the Wesley Community House at Meridian, states: "The work at the cotton mill is irregular, and our people, most of whom are very poor, are in very trying circumstances. Please keep the work before the women of the Conference. Our greatest need is winter underwear and cooking utensils."

Miss Sallie Ellis, of the Moore Community House, also at Biloxi, writes: "For some time we've been praying for money to fix up our two front rooms. The floors and woodwork need painting and we need a table and small rugs."

As the weather gets colder, demand for clothing grows greater, at all three Houses. And the reports of boxes are coming in very slowly. Then there are the holiday needs. It has been suggested that some societies might like to have the names of some children, that they might get and wrap special gifts for them. These names would be gladly sent by any of the workers upon application.

Let us not be selfish, but let us make this anniversary of Christ's birthday one that he'd enjoy, were he to return, and may we hear his words: "In as much as ye have done it unto the least, ye have done it unto me."

Yours for Christianizing Christmas,

MRS. W. T. HEGMAN,
Mississippi Conference Superintendent of Supplies.
Holly Bluff, Miss.

GRAND CANE ZONE MEETING.

One of the best meetings of the Grand Cane zone this year was held at Naborton, La., Nov. 1, at 2:30 o'clock. Zone leader, Mrs. R. S. Walton, presided.

While Naborton is small, it was not lacking in cordiality, which was bountifully extended the guests. The little church had many beautiful arrangements of autumn flowers, but best of all was the musical treat prepared for the visitors. A full orchestra, with Miss Des Fuqua at the piano, rendered several sacred numbers.

Mrs. Marcus Ford, of Mansfield, led the devotional, and Mrs. Guy Wimberly, of Logansport, read a paper on "The Bible as a Missionary Book." Mrs. Bradshaw, of Mansfield, discussed, "What Missionary Training Are We Giving Our Children?" then Mrs. W. H. Price, of Logansport, gave a brief review of "What Every Methodist Should Know."

During an intermission refreshing fruit punch was served.

Mrs. Chaffin, of Grand Cane, gave an inspiring talk on "What the Missionary Society Should Mean to the Pastor," followed by "The Life of Miss Maria Lang Gibson," reviewed by Mrs. B. H. Bennett, of Logansport. Mrs. Fultz, of Naborton, and Mrs. W. D. Perry and Mrs. J. R. Cromwell, of Logansport, contributed to the program with well executed solos.

There was an attendance of fifty-three. Naborton enjoyed the distinction of having a full attendance of members, besides a number of visitors from surrounding communities.

The next meeting will be in Grand Cane, early in next year.

A free will offering was taken to defray incidental expenses, the balance to be sent to the State Rural Worker.

MRS. R. S. WALTON.
Logansport, La.

ZONE MEETING AT RULEVILLE, MISS.

The fourth missionary meeting of zone 3 convened in the Methodist church of Ruleville, Miss., Friday, Dec. 2. Zone president, Mrs. E. C. Stansel, called the meeting to order, and the last verse of the nineteenth Psalm was repeated in unison, and "O, Zion Haste," was used as opening song. Mrs. J. E. Coleman was elected secretary in the absence of Mrs. Barksdale, zone secretary.

Mrs. Bounds brought a beautiful message of welcome, to which Mrs. McKeithen, of Drew, cordially responded. The morning devotional was conducted by Brother Storment, of Sunflower. Brother McKeithen led in earnest prayer.

Brother and Mrs. McCafferty, our new pastor and his wife, were introduced to the meeting by Mrs. Thomas.

Reports of auxiliaries were made as follows: Doddsville, Drew, Blaine, Ruleville; Ruleville Young People, Sunflower.

General discussion on co-operation with P. T. A., Civic League and other helpful organizations. Missionary round table discussion was held and interesting facts and missionary information brought out. Mrs. Lee McLain, of Blaine, delighted the audience with a beautiful song message, accompanied at piano by Mrs. Walton, of Ruleville.

"Why Should I Carry a New Religion to the Orient," as presented by Mrs. McKeithen, of Drew, brought to us our opportunity, our obligation, our privilege of carrying to the Orient the Christ who has so blessed our lives and our nation. "How to Get Every Woman in Our Church Into the Missionary Society" was discussed. "Echoes from Foreign Fields" were given by different auxiliaries, bringing new items of interest from foreign missionaries. "Why Should We Have Zone Meetings?" was discussed, also the all-day session of zone meeting, with all-day session favored.

Mrs. Kimmeran brought the thought of sending a Christmas box of old toys to the Orphanage, with recommendation that each Missionary Society plan to send a box.

The election of zone officers was called. Mrs. Geo. Sledge, of Sunflower, was duly elected as chairman, and Mrs. Barksdale, of Blaine, secretary. Drew's invitation of the next meeting was gladly accepted.

The meeting adjourned for the noon hour, and ladies departed to the beautiful new community house, where a lovely luncheon was graciously served and thoroughly enjoyed.

Minutes of the meeting were read and approved. A rising vote of thanks was given the splendid women of Ruleville, and the program was ended with prayer by Brother McCafferty, in which he specially remembered our sick friends, Mrs. Dickerson, Dr. Davis, Mrs. Davis' sister, Timmon Henry, missionary in China.

OUR COMMON INTERESTS AND PROBLEMS.

By Mrs. R. C. Norris.

When we make a new friend, if we should stop to ponder and wonder why we chose her for a friend, we would soon see that we found a common interest between us. So, at a meeting of this kind, we sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts in Christian Love; The fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above," and when we meet with one great common interest,

No Worms in a Healthy Child
All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color which indicates poor blood and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion and act as a General Strengthener to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the Child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c.
A package of Grove's Liver Pills is enclosed with every bottle of GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC for those who wish to take a Laxative in connection with the Tonic.

Mother!
Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.
When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.
Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.
Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

The Conference minutes will show an increase in Sunday school membership of over 1,000, with eighteen new Sunday schools.

* * *

The Conference Board elected the following staff of Conference Superintendents, all of whom are volunteer workers except two:

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Executive Secretary and Conference Sunday School Superintendent.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary.

Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Elementary Superintendent, Shreveport.

Prof. R. E. Smith, Adult Superintendent, Centenary College.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, Teacher Training Superintendent, Alexandria.

Dr. W. W Drake, Missionary Superintendent, Ruston.

Mr. T. W. Holloman, Superintendent Administration, Alexandria.

Mrs. R. E. Smith, Parent Teacher Work, Shreveport.

Rev. Guy Hicks, Vacation and Weekday Religious Education, New Orleans.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, Adolescent Group Superintendent, New Orleans.

Rev. H. L. Johns, Superintendent of Evangelism, New Orleans.

Miss Pauline Wynn, Associate Superintendent, Adolescent Department, Lake Charles.

The General Sunday School Council will meet in Nashville next week. The Louisiana Conference Board elected the following representatives to this meeting: W. W. Drake, chairman; C. D. Atkinson, A. K. McLellan, B. C. Taylor, Guy M. Hicks, H. L. Johns, Mrs. R. H. Harper.

Rev. Guy Hicks writes: "I do not see any possible way of making the trip to Nashville at this time, with the move to New Orleans ahead of me. We have to move during the first part of this coming week. We cannot get off sooner and the 'new preacher' here will want to come in at that time. I am sorry I cannot go, for the experience would mean so much to me. I do appreciate the honor of being selected to go more than I can say."

* * *

The date of the Louisiana Conference Council is Thursday, Dec. 29, at Alexandria, at 10 a. m. The membership of this Council consists of the Conference Board members, presiding elders, Conference and district staff members. This meeting will be the fourth Conference Council we have held in Louisiana Methodism. The first meeting was during the Mansfield State-wide Conference; the second at Winnfield, and the third last December during the holidays in Alexandria. This Council should mean to Louisiana Methodists what the General Council means to the whole church. Rev. W. W. Drake was elected president of the last Council meeting, with Professor H. W. Rickey, Louisiana College, as secretary.

* * *

The Sunday school workers in our Conference will be interested to learn that the date for the State-wide Conference has been set, April 10 and 11, Tuesday and Wednesday following Easter Sunday, at Alexandria, in the new Educational Building. Rev. F. N. Parker has been invited to give the Bible messages at the 1928 Conference, and is to give us a definite answer within a few days.

* * *

The staff committee on Vacation Church Schools of the General Board is working out a plan to send out a capable person to make some field contacts, and we hope this field worker will reach our Conference, as we have vacation schools, and need for more.

* * *

Dr. Cleanth Brooks, Alexandria, was elected to take the place of Dr. Taylor, of Baton Rouge, as a member of the Conference Board. We regret that Rev. H. E. Pfost, on account of sickness, was not able to attend all of the meetings of the Conference Board at its recent session. The following lay members were present: Mr. J. H. Carter, Mr. A. McGuirt, Mr. A. M. Mayo, Mr. T. W. Holloman. We regret that the other lay members, Mr. S. M. Collins, Mr. W. D. Caldwell, Mr. D. B. Talley, Dr. F. C Wren, were not able to be with us.

* * *

The minutes will show an increase this year in Conference collections. This means the Sunday school cause gets its quota of the increased budget. A pastor of the Conference said it was the first time in thirty-two years he was able to report Conference collections in full. The increased interest in Conference collections is due to work of the Board of Lay Activities and team work of presiding elders and pastors.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Since the last letter each District Workers' Council has met. These meetings were very fine indeed, and there was a very large attendance at each of them. There was a very optimistic spirit and a determination to make the work this coming year better and more far-reaching.

The District Institutes were set as follows:

Vicksburg District, Crawford Street, Vicksburg, Jan. 31, 1928.

The Meridian District Institute, at Enterprise, Feb. 2, 1928.

The Jackson District Institute is to meet with the Glendale church, Feb. 7, 1928.

Brookhaven District Institute, at Norfield, Feb. 9, 1928.

Seashore District Institute, at Saucier, Feb. 14, 1928.

The Hattiesburg District Institute, at Petal, Feb. 15, 1928.

The Newton District Institute, at Decatur, Feb. 16, 1928.

The Elementary District Institutes are meeting at the same time and places, and we are hopeful that these meetings will be well attended and that we can go from them to a greater year's work.

A goal of $3,500 was set as the objective for Sunday School Day during this Conference year. If we can realize this amount of money, it will mean we will have an opportunity for larger service and more aggressive field enterprises.

A goal of $1,000 a month was to be our average missionary offering; last year we averaged $750 a month. This month we have approximately $625. We always have a let down after Conference—last year our Conference month was $721 and our next month was $450. This year our Conference month was $1,081, and our month after Conference is in proportion much lower than last year. We trust that there will be a most active interest among the Sunday school workers, that the Mississippi Conference shall do a good part by the work in Europe.

We planned to hold twelve Standard Training Schools, and we have tentative requests for eighteen. This will be a wonderful advance if we can accomplish it. It will be more than wonderful if we can have the student body in each of these schools to justify their continuance.

* * *

We set as our goal 100 Cokesbury Schools. One school has been held, and we have requests for eighty-two more to be held. This is almost twice as many as we had last year. We are hoping that we will be able to accomplish this in due season.

* * *

At this time it is fairly early, but we are more than anxious to have every Sunday school in the Conference checked. Those schools which desire to rank are advised to be checked as soon in the spring as possible, and then as soon in the fall. We have found that the oftener the schools were checked the sooner they became ranking schools.

* * *

We are more than anxious that there be a group of men in each district capable and prepared to check Sunday schools. We are planning now for this matter. Those of you who will help us and desire to help, please let us know right away and we will help you become approved.

* * *

Those churches which have not observed fall Clean-Up-Fix-Up Day we trust will do so right away. Fix the windows, the doors, the stove and stove-pipes, get a supply of fuel for fires, and make all arrangements so that all will know they are to be comfortable at your church any time they may come.

* * *

An order for the Sunday school literature for next quarter should be sent in now. During the Christmas time it is easy to forget; and if for any reason you have failed to do this, let your order be forthcoming as soon as you read these lines.

* * *

There has never been a time in the last ten years that more and finer cooperation has come to me as at the beginning of this year. These kindly acts make the Superintendent feel very grateful and most hopeful for a geater and better year.

Pray earnestly for the work.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We are aiming to place 100 Programs of Work in the schoools that are using them. The day a school faces this plan of extending the kingdom, that school will begin to go forward. When in need of a Wall Chart or an interpretation of this program, write me. Send twenty-five cents for the Wall Chart; all other literature is furnished free of charge. Read Jeremiah 40:10.

The initial steps have been taken for standard schools at Grenada, Sardis, Corinth, Okolona and West Point. Any community that wants a school should find out how many churches are willing to co-operate and how much they are willing to do to make the school a success. The General Board and the Conference Board will use every dollar placed at their command for these schools. The number of schools planned is far in excess of the money that these boards have entrusted to them. The communities where schools are to be held are expected to make up this deficit. Personally, I think it best for the schools that want to train their leaders to pay the larger part of the bill. Let every school take an offering the fifth Sunday in January for training schools and remit this amount to your presiding elder, and he will use this money for training schools.

Only three districts have District Elementary Superintendents. I have written and have made personal appeals for these volunteer workers, and will keep at it until they are secured. The main task for the district superintendent is to hold a District Institute and help check up schools and departments. We are planning to hold fourteen institutes during the year. We must begin early and work hard to get this work done. The big task of the paid workers is to secure the help of volunteer workers. Never forget it. "The permanent redemptive forces of the community are the resident forces." "The field is white unto the harvest. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Lord, teach us to pray.

The list of volunteer teachers is growing. These volunteer teachers will do well to seek the guidance of the Spirit as to the place they are to teach. It is impossible for your employed workers to find all the places where teaching is wanted. Try the Lord by praying unto him to open the way for you to teach, the time, place, and everything connected with the work. Let go the world; let go your way and let God work his way.

Rev. F. F. Coggins has a class of twenty-seven at Cedar Bluff and Pheba. He and his two classes are having a great time studying together. The revival fires are being kindled, fires that will continue to burn until these communities will be wrapped in a flame of holy light. "Burn on, O fire of God, until all the dross is burned away."

Rev. W. L. Storment is hard at it in Sunflower. He is teaching his people the better way of extending the kingdom. This intimate, constant touch of heart-to-heart teaching is bound to bring great results. Come on, ye hundred men and women, and let us kindle fires that will sweep over the entire Conference. Get on fire and some one else will catch it.

Rev. J. V. Bennett at Belzoni is rejoicing over the progress his leaders are making. They are reading, praying, catching on fire to the end that the Lord may be known and loved in that community. Great blessings are in store for us if we reach up and accept them.

A LETTER FROM REV. J. C. JACKSON.

Dear Brother Carley: By the appointments of the Mississippi Annual Conference which closed on Nov. 14, was terminated two years of very pleasant service with the good people of the New Augusta charge, Hattiesburg District.

The charge consists of four principal appointments—New Augusta, McLain, Beaumont and McCullum. At each of these places there are those who are earnest in the work of the church. The parsonage is at New Augusta, and I think a more pleasant place to live could hardly be found. In the way of upright, high-class citizenship, few places will average up with New Augusta.

Upon our reutrn from Conference the people were kind enough to say that they were sorry to see us go! On Monday night, prior to our departure for our new field of labor, the good ladies of the town extended to us, and especially to Mrs. Jackson, a farewell party, at which we were showered with many lovely gifts. It was a time of inspiration, making it easier for us to go, feeling that we were leaving behind the love and good will of those with whom our lot had been cast the two past years. We shall seek to show our appreciation to the good people there by being more earnest and faithful in our Master's service in the days which are ahead of us.

We are now domiciled here at Vancleave, in two rooms of the old parsonage. Brother Nelson, the much beloved pastor of last year, and family are still occupying the new parsonage. He is on his bed sick, not being able to move as yet; his condition will require some time for him to recuperate entirely. Therefore he has taken the superannuate relation since Conference.

We find the folks of the Vancleave charge to be very cordial to us thus far, and we shall seek to show our appreciation by faithful services.

J. C. JACKSON, P. C.

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION.

Dec. 9, 1927.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, Houma, La.

Dear Mr. McCoy: We read with much regret in the Times-Picayune of Dec. 6 where you have been transferred to West Monroe. We want you to know that when one who has done so much in his community is called away we cannot refrain from expressing our sorrow. It is our loss and West Monroe's gain, and we trust that in your new field you will be as successful as you were in Terrebonne.

Your congregation, your church, your friends among all classes are the finest testimonials that you have made good.—When you first came to Houma and Terrebonne you started in a small, humble way with only a handful of your denomination; to-day, you have a fine congregation, and a church building that would be a credit to any small city such as ours.

We wish we could do something to keep you here; but since that is impossible, we are going to wish you Godspeed in your new field, and trust that your work here will be an inspiration and stepping stone to greater accomplishments in your chosen life's work.

Sincerely yours,

MERIDIAN LEAGUES HOLD EFFICIENCY INSTITUTE AT CENTRAL METHODIST CHURCH, NOV. 28—DEC. 2.

The first Epworth League Efficiency Institute for Meridian and vicinity was opened at Central Methodist Church on Monday evening, Nov. 28, at 6 o'clock. The attendance was fine, the registration was easily worked out and the program began on time.

On the first evening Central Church served lunch, a social hour was enjoyed, and the classes began at 6:45. After the study classes Miss Ada Mae Partin directed a demonstration social. After the social the departmental classes met. The same routine was followed each evening of the Institute. One of the Meridian churches served lunch, a social hour followed, the study classes met. Each evening the program was varied by the addition of interesting speakers. On Tuesday night Miss Lillian Nobles, missionary to China, made an address. On Wednesday evening Dr. D. L. Mumpower, of Nashville, but formerly medical missionary to Africa, gave a very interesting address on our work in Africa. On Thursday evening Rev. Robert Selby delivered an address on "Personal Evangelism," emphasizing the need of personal workers.

A novel feature of the Thursday night program was the presentation by Miss Lilybec Phillips and Miss Ada Mae Partin, on behalf of the Epworth League Union, to the members of the faculty some tokens of their appreciation.

A wedding ring was presented to Dr. D. L. Mumpower. The committee said that this was given in order that the young ladies might know that in spite of his youthful appearance he was married, and he would not be annoyed by their attentions.

Dr. A. F. Watkins was presented with a grasshopper and ant sandwich as an appropriate token of his interest in Dr. Mumpower's narrative of the Africans eating grasshoppers and ants.

Mrs. A. F. Watkins, because of her beautiful personality, was presented with a corsage bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Addie Greely was presented with after-dinner mints as a token of the right touch that she added to the lives of the League.

Dean Hawkins was presented with a gavel with ribbon in League colors as a symbol of what he means to the Mississippi Conference Epworth League.

Others presented with tokens were: Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, who was given a horn with the admonition, "Verily, he that tooteth not his own horn, same shall not be tooted." Rev. Mr. Jones and J. C Chambers were each presented with a kiss (candy) as an expression of appreciation of their sweet dispositions.

A special feature of Friday night's program was the celebration of the birthday of Mr. J. B. Pearson. This was the main feature of the lunch given by East End church. A special table had been prepared on which was a birthday cake decorated with candles, and Mr. Pearson sat at the head of the table and had as his guests all of the members of the faculty.

The certificates for one unit of credit were given at the close of the final class period. Fifty-three persons received one unit of credit on their Christian Culture diplomas.

After the awarding of credits, a consecration service was conducted by Dean W. D. Hawkins. During the service quite a number gave their testimony, expressing the joy that came to their hearts as the result of being a Christian and also gave an expression of what the Institute had meant to them in training them for more efficient life service. The speaker made an appeal, using as a basis the words of St. Paul, "I am determined to know nothing among you save Jesus and him crucified." During the singing of the hymn, "All the Way My Savior Leads Me," an opportunity was given to all those who meant to consecrate their lives to Jesus and go forth in his service. The response was unanimous, every one coming forth, shaking hands and pledging their lives anew or for the first time to service for Jesus Christ wherever he might call them.

Thus ended one of the best and most successfully conducted Epworth League Institutes held anywhere. It was the unanimous opinion that this should be made an annual affair

LOUISE AND HOLLY BLUFF CHARGE PLANS WORK.

The officials of the Holly Bluff and Louise charges had a very interesting meeting Friday night, Dec. 2, at Holly Bluff, Miss. After a very bountiful and enjoyable supper the meeting was called to order by Rev. I. H. Sells, who acted as chairman.

J. B. Barrack, of Louise, was elected secretary for the meeting. Mr. Sells made a very interesting talk on "Enlisting the Church Membership in the Work of the Kingdom." He made several good suggestions, which were adopted by the cabinet. They are as follows:

1. We should, in each church, perfect an organization that will reach the last man and woman in each community. This will be done through committees and visitations.

2 A definite educational program should be adopted. Stressed getting church papers in as many homes as possible. Arrangements were made to publish a parish paper.

3. An effort should be made to observe the calendar of the church. For instance, December is known as "Stewardship" month; January and February are to be known as "Missionary Cultivation," etc.

4. The church as a whole should support each organization of the local church, such as the Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society, Wesley Brotherhood, and Epworth League; and hold a Daily Vacation Bible School at least two weeks in the summer.

5. There should be a widening of the programs of the church to reach the people in every walk of life, social as well as spiritual and educational.

Several laymen of both churches made speeches, and the outlook is good for the following year. The meeting adjourned with a prayer by Mrs. Hegman.

TUCKER MEETING AT INDIANOLA, MISS.

The George Tucker evangelistic party closed their last meeting for the year of 1927 at Indianola, Miss., Sunday night, Nov. 27. The meeting was city-wide, with the pastors and members of all the churches of the city cooperating. It was most successful, there being numerous additions to the churches, hundreds of reconsecrations and the establishment of over fifty family altars. The Tucker party is now planning its work for 1928, and will open their first meeting on Jan. 15. During 1927 they held meetings in Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

"The work of the Master," to carry out fully his plans, and to be used as a great instrument in his hands—"It is fellowship like to that above."

For any local organization, which covers every Missionary Society, to function properly there will always rise problems, which must be discussed and thrashed out before they can be solved. There will be links that need to be strengthened; there will be strong links that have become worn and need to be mended; there will be missing links that are too small and need enlarging. So this is our aim in discussing "Our Common Interests and Problems." As the year of Jubilee is at hand, shall we leave all spiritual cultivation to the higher officers and expect it to reach down and permeate through our own little organizations? No, we must each and every single member of the great Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, live and breathe in the spirit of prayer, and then our local auxiliaries will feel the year of Jubilee is really at hand.

To enlist every Methodist woman in our auxiliary as a regular attending member, who pays her dues and gives freely of her time, talents and money, who studies and reaps the benefit of our study classes, serves on programs and learns to carry "The Good News," and is a committee for the betterment of her church, her town and her home, to my mind, is the outstanding problem of every local auxiliary. There is no better place for the lukewarm average Methodist woman to get on the road to learn the "Abundant Life," that she should know, than the Woman's Missionary Society.

In selecting officers for the coming year, is there not a great problem confronting us? Are you prayerfully considering the energy, the time, the talent, the tact, the ingenuity, the spiritual life, the influence you are calling into service? Have you this at hand and are you preparing to use each in the right place?

Are we as auxiliaries sponsoring and promoting our Young People's and Children's organizations as we should? Are we interesting ourselves in the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of to-morrow, which are our young girls of to-day? Do we co-operate with their superintendent in all their socials, aid with their problems, and sympathize in their discouragements? Do we realize that the life and growth of the young people of the Mississippi Conference is in the hands of the adult auxiliaries? Surely this is our common interest. It is our problem.

Do we as members of the Woman's Missionary Society go about our meetings, our tasks, our responsibilities, as we would a professional position? This would mean, if we are to have a meeting at 3 o'clock, anywhere from five to ten minutes in the meeting room meditating on our work before time, instead of from five to sixty minutes afterwards. Would we go about our work in our calling in life just to get by or through with the task? The great professional world has so much competition that professional women of to-day are just what they should be. There is so much competition on the part of Satan with Right to-day, that we must be just as alert and wide-awake at our task as the professional woman is about hers. Are we afraid of our undertakings and shy off and leave them to others whom we deem better fitted to do things, or do we attack our new responsibilities as carrying out the will of God? Are not these problems that confront each auxiliary?

So, in conclusion, I summarize "Our Common Problems and Interests" as I see them in our Woman's Missionary work at this time. If we, as individuals, feel the Jubilee preparation as that of "Individual Spiritual Cultivation" this great problem is solved; if we enlist every woman in our church as an active, fruit-bearing member—a second great problem is solved; if, in electing officers for the ensuing year, we prayerfully place the woman to her place—the third problem is solved; if we, as women, realize our task of keeping alive Young People's and Children's organizations and hold that work as part of our task—the fourth problem is solved; if we go about His will, as we pray for it to be made known to us, as part of our great life work—all problems that confront our auxiliaries will vanish away.

"If we work upon marble,
It will perish;
If we work upon brass,
Time will efface it;
If we rear temples,
They will crumble into dust;
But if we work upon immortal souls,
If we imbue them with principle,
With the just fear of God
And the love of fellow-man,
We engrave on those tablets
Something which will brighten all eternity."

ZONE MEETING, VAIDEN, MISS.

On Friday afternoon, Nov. 25, the zone meeting convened at the Vaiden Methodist church. The meeting opened with hymn, "O, Zion, Haste," and Rev. Mr. Murff, of Kilmichael, conducted the devotional. Rev. Mr. Hunt, pastor of Vaiden church, led in prayer.

After the reading of the minutes of the Kilmichael meeting the reports were had.

Three churches were represented: Winona Adult Society, 4, and 1 from the Junior Society; Kilmichael, 5 Adults; Vaiden, 12 Adults, 3 Young People's, and 6 Juniors.

Miss Mary Sweatman, of Winona, gave a splendid report from Winona Adult Auxiliary. Mrs. McDougal made a good report for the Junior Society. Mrs. Foust's report from Kilmichael Adult Society was very good—they now have a Young People's Auxiliary, and are hoping to organize a Junior Society in the near future.

"Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love," was sweetly rendered as a duet by Misses Mary Walta Stuckey and Etelka Stephens, of the Vaiden Young People' Society.

Mrs. Gee gave the report of the Vaiden Adult Society, followed by a reading, "Vespers," by Dott Vaiden, of the Junior Society of Vaiden, which was greatly enjoyed

Mrs. W. H. Conger, of Winona, gave, in her usual pleasing manner, a splendid talk on "Our Mission Fields." She covered the entire field in a very able way. Song by Vaiden Juniors.

Information as to the sending of reports to the Conference secretaries, given by a delegate from Kilmichael.

Mmes. Smith and Gee sang a beautiful duet.

Meeting closed by using song, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Winona was selected as the next meeting place.

MRS. NORWOOD, Chairman.
MRS. J. C. BENNETT, Secretary.

AN EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION.

Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Smith, having been assigned to another pastorate by our Conference, we all realize that none but a selfish interest would prompt us to attempt to retain him, when a broader field, with perhaps greater opportunities is open to him. Therefore we accept the call which severs our relations as pastor and people with heartfelt sadness. The four years of faithful service rendered by him to this church have been greatly blessed in upbuilding our church, increasing its membership and creating feelings of Christian fellowship and good will among other denominations. For his ministering to the temporal wants of the poor, and the spiritual needs of all, for the tender solicitude and earnest sympathy which have always brought him to the bedside of the sick and dying, for his efforts in behalf of the education of the masses, and for his exertions to ameliorate the condition of suffering humanity at all times and under all circumstances, the members of this church and the people of this town and the whole county owe him a debt of gratitude which they can never repay. In parting our kindest wishes will ever go with him, and we recommend him to the charge to which he is to minister as one worthy of their full confidence and highest esteem.

Board of Stewards: R. R. Liddell, president; J. E. Briggs, vice president; Mrs. W. H. H. Lewis, secretary; A. C. Puffer, J. S. McDonald, J. G. Geoghegen.

THROUGH ADVICE OF NEIGHBOR

Woman Tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A neighbor advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which she said had helped her so much. So I bought a few bottles and tried it out. It sure helped me wonderfully. I felt much better. My work was no longer a dread to me. If I hear of any one who is troubled the way I was, I will gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to them and I will answer any letters in regard to the same."—Mrs. Bertha Meachan, 910 Center St., Lansing, Mich.

"I had been sickly ever since I was fifteen years old. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I got so I could do all my housework and I am in good health."—Mrs. Marie K. Williams, Ketchikan, Alaska.

From Michigan to Alaska, from Maine to Oregon and from Connecticut to California letters are continually being written by grateful women recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Compound is made from roots and herbs and for more than fifty years has been helping to restore run-down, over-worked women to health.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found a way to save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by making this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap, but it has no equal for results. It gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A DAY.

There was a Day.

It was nearly two thousand years ago.

Jesus was born on that day.

Jesus was born of a Jewish maiden, in a manger in the town of Bethlehem.

Some strange things happened before the child was born. An angel announced to her that was to be his mother that the child she should bear would be great, that he should be called the Son of the Highest, that the Lord God would give him the throne of his father David, and that of his kingdom there should be no end. The angel said also to his mother that her son to be born would have a divine paternity.

And it happened as the angel had said.

Some strange things happened when the child was born.

Some shepherds who were watching their flocks by night saw an angel, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them. And the angel spoke to them, telling them about the birth of the babe in Bethlehem and telling them that he was a Savior, Christ the Lord. And then a great multitude of the heavenly host appeared, praising God and proclaiming a message of peace on earth and good will toward men. And the shepherds went to Bethlehem and found it as the angel had said.

And another strange thing happened. Some wise men from the east saw a star, which went before them and led them to Bethlehem where the child was; and when they saw him they worshiped him and gave him kingly gifts.

We know very little about his boyhood. His father was a carpenter, and the boy probably learned his father's trade.

When he was twelve years old his parents took him to Jerusalem to the feast of the passover; and while there he met with the learned men in the temple and amazed them all by his understanding of what they said and by the questions he asked them.

The only other things we know about the boy are that he increased in wisdom and stature and that he grew in favor with God and man.

When Jesus was about thirty years old we hear of him again.

A man named John was preaching and baptizing people, and Jesus came to him to be baptized. And when he was baptized, the Holy Spirit rested upon him, and a voice out of heaven said, "Thou are my beloved son." The voice was the voice of God.

Jesus had a hard time. At the very beginning of his work among the people he had to face and fight the real battles of life—bodily comfort, the love of power and glory, a presumptuous dependence upon power other than his own.

He won the battles.

Then he began his ministry. He preached the love and mercy and justice of God. He warned sinners to repent, lest they be lost forever. He told all the people to believe what he said, to accept him as the Son of God and their Savior. He taught them things they had never heard before—and all he said was with a tone of authority and of infinite compassion.

He performed miracles.

Some people believed him, accepted him for what he was, and followed him; but not many did.

A strange thing!

Most of the leaders in the synagogue and the chief men among the Jews not only did not believe him—they were jealous of him and opposed him in every way they could.

Finally they decided to get rid of him.

So they arrested him, tried him, and convicted him.

Then they crucified him. They thought that was the end of him.

Foolish thought!

This Jesus was more than a man—he was the Son of God, God incarnate.

Death could not put an end to him. The grave could not hold him.

So he arose from the dead. He actually came forth from the tomb and comforted his disciples and stayed with them about forty days, still teaching them wonderful things and showing God to them. When they saw him, they saw the Father.

God could be born like men and he could die like men and he could be buried like men—but, being God, he is superior to all the incidents of human experience. So the grave could not hold Jesus.

There is a Day.

It is now.

It is Jesus' birthday.

Jesus was born nearly two thousand years ago, and we are celebrating his birthday NOW.

It is the miracle of all ages!

He was dead—and yet he is alive; and alive for evermore.

This is the wonder, the beauty, the joy, the miracle of it, that this Jesus who was born nearly two thousand years ago is still alive, that he still has power and authority, that he still works miracles and saves men from sin and death.

This is his birthday.

He is our Lord and Savior.

We worship him to-day.

WHO WILL BE THE FIRST?

According to the special club offer authorized by the Publishing Committee for circulating the Advocate, there are four groups of prices:

1. For single subscriptions or clubs below 20, the price is $2 a year.

2. For clubs of from 20 to 50, the price is $1.50 a year.

3. For clubs of from 50 to 100, the price is $1.25 a year.

4. For clubs above 100, the price is $1 a year.

These club limits are very definitely fixed. The other day a brother sent in five subscriptions and asked that they be accepted at the 20-club rate—$1.50 a year. It cannot be done. It takes at least 20 subscriptions, sent in at one time, the money accompanying the order, to get that special rate.

Another brother sent in his personal subscription, enclosing $1.50, and seemed to expect to be put down for a year's subscription. It cannot be done. It takes at least 20 subscriptions, sent in at one time, the money accompanying the order, to get the $1.50 rate.

And so with the other clubs—the conditions must be met in order to get the special price.

Now who will be the first to send in a club of 20 subscriptions? Who will be the first to send in a club of 50 subscriptions? Who will be the first to send in a club of 100 subscriptions?

A club does not have to be made up in a single church—it can be made up from the whole pastoral charge. There is hardly a pastoral charge in the three patronizing Conferences from which at least 20 subscriptions cannot be secured. It will take an effort, of course; but the good accomplished is certainly worth the effort.

There are many charges from which a club of 50 or more could be secured, with the proper effort.

Speaking off-hand, we should say that there are at least twenty churches that could secure clubs of 100 or more, with proper effort.

Who will be the first to send in a club?

A CHRISTMAS PRAYER.

We open here our treasures and our gifts;
And some of it is gold,
And some is frankincense,
And some is myrrh;
For some has come from plenty,
Some from joy,
And some from deepest sorrow of the soul.
But thou, O God, dost know the gift is love,
Our pledge of peace, our promise of good will.
Accept the gift and all life we bring.

CHRISTMAS, A WORLD FESTIVAL.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

"It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth
To touch their harps of gold;
'Peace to earth, good will to men,
From heaven's all gracious king';
The earth in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing."

On that solemn midnight centuries ago, when the Babe of Bethlehem lay cradled in the manger, the angel choir sang the first Christmas carol—the Christmas message of peace and good will. Since that night when the Bethlehem shepherds watching their flocks by night listened to the angels' song, the Christmas message has gone round the world, and now in Orient as well as Occident, in the frozen north and lands burned by tropical suns, the Christmas carols are ringing, telling the story of the Christ that's born for aye.

Christmas, the one and only world festival! Christmas, the birthday of the King! No other festival, whether Christian or non-Christian, has appealed to young and old alike in practically every land and every clime as Christmas has done. Not even by Christians is Easter, the other great Christian festival, universally observed; and of the non-Christian festivals, few have gone beyond national borders. But year by year the observance of Christmas is widening, and in nearly every land under the sun the Christmas trees are lighted and Christmas gifts are given in his name.

What is the charm about Christmas? What is the appeal that brings about its observance in ever widening circles as the years go by? "First of all," declares Dr. S. H. Wainwright, of Japan, "it enshrines a matchless story; second, it marks the high tide of good feeling among men, the season when the spirit of kindness is born anew in the human heart. No hate can live in a heart that has been swept by the Christmas tide." And in far-off lands of the Orient as well as in our own home land, the boundless tide of peace and good will comes sweeping in at Christmas, carrying before it all hatred and discord and strife.

Let us wander down the Ginza, the main street of Tokyo, Japan, as the Christmas season draws near, and watch the preparations that are being made for the celebration of the great Christian festival. See the great numbers of Christmas trees that the people are buying, not only for the churches, but also for home celebrations; look at the many signs of Christmas in the stores and shop windows; and if there were windows in the Japanese homes, we could see in many of them much stirring and bustling in preparation for the joyous festival. The Japanese people love the home Christmas celebration, and along with Santa Claus, the tree, and the gifts, they have a program of songs and recitations by the children. The missionaries have had little to do with this widespread adoption of Christmas by the Japanese, the observance of the Christmas festival having been largely a growth among the people themselves. Christmas has indeed come to Japan to stay.

The first Christmas tree, so far as is known, ever lighted in the ancient city of Soochow, China, founded 500 years before the birth of Christ, is now a stately cedar, growing in the yard of the former home of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Park in Soochow. This tiny Christmas tree with roots intact was set up by Dr. and Mrs. Park for their baby daughter, and after the Christmas season was over it was carefully planted in the yard outside, where it thrived and grew. Years later, the tree, gaily decorated, hung with electric lights, and bearing an illuminated star on the topmost bough, served as a living Christmas tree for the children of this same daughter. And very early on Christmas morning as the students from the Christian schools passed from door to door singing their Christmas carols, the lights were turned on and the living Christmas tree, topped with the shining star, shone forth with a rare radiance in that far-away non-Christian land, just as the sweet voices of the carolers began their hymns of praise.

What of Korea? Will Christmas be celebrated in the land of the Morning Calm? Watch the people thronging the Christian churches throughout the land and listening to the Christmas programs of songs, recitations, and plays. So popular are these programs that attendance must be limited by tickets, and usually the Christmas plays have to be repeated two or even three times. In the cities where there are Christian schools, groups of students singing the Christmas hymns go through the streets until midnight; and again in the early morning the sweet Christmas carols may be heard. Thus will Christmas be celebrated by the 300,000 Christians in Korea, but many, many others will either consciously or unconsciously share in the great Christian festival—the thousands of boys and girls who have received a modern education in the mission schools, the thousands of men, women, and children who have been healed in mission hospitals or by Christian doctors, the thousands who are enjoying the improved economic conditions, the results of Christian teachings—all these will take part in the Christmas joy because they have shared in the benefits that have followed in the wake of the Christmas message of peace and good will.

Stroll down the street at Christmas time in Brazil and stop in the shade to avoid the broiling heat of the mid-summer sun as you watch the Santa Claus in the neighboring show window, garbed in his regulation red suit, with imitation snow on him and about him, in this land where the snow never falls. To-night Christmas carols will be sung and Christmas trees lighted while the fans on every side seem to fan hot blasts from a furnace upon you. Christmas with its carols, its lighted tree, and snow-covered Santa Claus is not native to Brazil, but was imported into this southern hemisphere by the English and German residents from northern Europe. To Brazilians Christmas is a quiet religious ceremony. A replica of the manger is set up in the church with wax figures to represent Mary, Joseph, the Christ Child, even the shepherds and the animals, and all day long devout Catholics stop to say a few words of prayer and make the sign of the cross—and for them Christmas is over. Only in the evangelical churches are there Christmas trees and gifts for the children, but Brazil as a nation takes little notice of this.

No Christmas gifts and no Christmas stockings in Cuba! Even the turkey is lacking, for roast pig is the dish of honor at the feast always eaten on "Noche Buena" (good night), as Christmas Eve is called. Devout Catholics go at midnight to their favorite cathedral to attend the "Misa del Gallo," or rooster mass. Santa Claus is not popular in Cuba, for there are no chimneys for him to come down, and the gifts are given, not at Christmas but on the 6th of January, which commemorates the coming of the Wise Men with their gifts to the Christ Child.

Christmas in Mexico begins several weeks before Dec. 25, with the celebration of "Las Posadas," or the entertainment of Mary and Joseph on their way to Bethlehem. The pilgrims, Mary and Joseph, are represented by wax figures which are placed on a donkey, and the attendants sing a sacred song as they walk alongside. The procession stops before an appointed house where a shrine has been prepared, and the pilgrims are taken in and placed on the shrine and a number of prayers said. After the religious ceremony, the rest of the evening is given over to social features. In the patio are hung the pinatas (large earthenware jars filled with candy, fruits, and nuts), and the different guests are blindfolded and given a long pole with which they try to strike the pinata and break it so that the guests may enjoy the contents thereof. After this game dancing follows, and continues to an early morning hour. On Christmas Eve the nativity is celebrated in much the same manner, the Christ Child being attired in a gorgeous robe furnished by the person known as the godmother. The religious ceremony may be held either in the church or the home.

It is Christmas Eve in Poland, and one by one the different noises of the city cease; the streets are deserted; even the street cars stop running for thirty-six hours, for all the people have gone to their homes to celebrate the "Vigilia." The Polish household gathers in the dining room, and the Christmas feast, the same kind that has been served on Christmas Eve in Poland for many generations, is eaten together. Then the tree is lighted, and gifts are given to all, including the servants. Afterwards the people go to midnight mass in the church. Protestants in Poland, instead of holding the midnight service, sometimes have an early service at about 6 o'clock on Christmas morning. Lighted candles are handed to each one as he enters the church, which is lighted entirely by the Christmas candles' glow. As the day breaks the candles slowly fade, and when the sun rises in all his splendor the service is over.

For a long time in Belgium Christmas was little known, as it was sandwiched between two other great national festivals—St. Nicholas's day on the 6th of December, when the children receive gifts from the venerable saint, dressed in the purple and golden glory of a Roman church dignitary, and New Year's day, when the grown-ups exchange greetings, presents, and kisses. Only in recent years has Christmas begun to be noticed in Belgium, and this is due to the Protestant influence. To-day among Belgian Protestants the word Christmas is a magic word. It electrifies them all. Weeks before Christmas the little children of the Thursday school come with their scissors, needles, thread, paint brushes, and materials, and their busy little fingers fairly fly as they fashion the flowers, the garlands, the baskets, and the stars for their own church Christmas tree. Grown-ups come with gifts for the poor and warm garments that they have made for the sick and suffering. The choir practices some beautiful Christmas hymns and even the children learn the Christmas songs. Everybody is busy, everybody is happy getting ready for the great event, for to the Belgians a Christmas tree teaches a much clearer lesson than a sermon or a song. At last the great day arrives, and eager little children are standing outside the door at 2:30, although the festival does not begin until 5 o'clock. First, the Christmas message is told in song and story, and then the curtains are darwn and the wonderful tree appears. How beautiful it is! And how fine the decorations look! The children tremble with delight when the simple gifts are laid in their hands. After Father Christmas has given out all the gifts, several strangers in the audience rise to speak a word of thanks. A benediction is said, and young and old go forth joyous and happy because on this day centuries ago a Child was born.

Christmas trees, Christmas trees everywhere! In Czechoslovakia Christmas would be unthinkable withot a tree. For weeks the markets have been filled with the Christmas trees and mistletoe. Only the holly is lacking, for it is not grown in that country. But Czechoslovakia has one thing at Christmas that is not found anywhere else in the world—the famous braided Christmas cake. Not a single family in the whole land must be without this at Christmas time. Czech children do not hang up their stockings at Christmas, but on St. Nicholas day, and he fills them with goodies. But the bogey-man goes around with St. Nicholas, and while the saint gives out presents the bogey-man hands out a thrashing if the children are not careful. Christmas in Czechoslovakia is sacred to the family, and after the wonderful feast is eaten on Christmas Eve, the family join hands and sing the grand old hymns of Huss or Luther, as they gather round the lighted Christmas tree, on whose branches hang gifts for everybody, even the cat, the dog, the goat and the goose. And at midnight the solemn tones of the church bells call them forth to midnight service.

Thus in every Methodist mission field, even in darkest Africa, the message of the angels will be broadcast again at the joyous Christmas season, and hastening onward is the time

"When peace shall over all the earth
Its final splendors fling,
And the whole world send back the song
Which heavenly angels sing."

NATION-WIDE BROADCAST OF CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

A national radio song service on Christmas Eve, in which the whole country is invited to join in the singing of carols, has been arranged under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches with the co-operation of the National Religious Radio Committee.

It is the first national broadcasting program to be sponsored by the Federal Council. The National Religious Radio Committee, which is composed of prominent representatitves of various Protestant communions, was initiated by the Federal Council to enable the churches to make a more effective and nation-wide use of the radio.

"This Christmas service is an indication of the immense possibilities of the radio in awakening and cultivating interest in religion," said Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, chairman of the committee. "It is expected that similarly impressive services will be sponsored from time to time, especially in connection with the great religious festivals which are so dear to the hearts of all the people. The participation of church people of many communions in all parts of the country in services such as these should go far in developing a sense of their spiritual unity."

Leading stations of the country will carry the broadcast, including WEAF, New York City; WGY, Schenectady; WJAR, Providence; WFI, Philadelphia; WCAE, Pittsburgh; WTIC, Hartford; WWJ, Detroit; WHAS, Louisville; WSB, Atlanta; WTAG, Worcester; WYR, Buffalo. It is expected that other stations will also co-operate in the program.

The service begins at 10:30 p.m., and continues until midnight of Saturday, Dec. 24. "Every one," states the program, "is invited to join in singing the old familiar carols as led over the radio, thus uniting in a great nation-wide chorus of praise and joy on Christmas Eve."

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, will conduct the program. Following the "Pastoral Symphony" from "The Messiah," played on the organ, Dr. Macfarland will offer the prayer. The music is directed by Channing Lefebvre, organist and choirmaster of Trinity Church, New York.

After the carols Dr. Cadman will give the message, which, followed by chimes at midnight and the singing of "O Come All Ye Faithful," will close the service.

The program in full follows:

"Pastoral Symphony" from "The Messiah," organ.

Greetings by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president, Federal Council of Churches.

KEEPING CHRISTMAS.

It is a good thing to observe Christmas Day. The mere marking of times and seasons, when men agree to stop work and make merry together, is a wise and wholesome custom. It helps one to feel the supremacy of the common life over the individual life. It reminds a man to set his own little watch, now and then, by the great clock of humanity which runs on sun time.

But there is a better thing than the observance of Christmas Day, and that is, keeping Christmas.

Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people, and to remember what other people have done for you; to ignore what the world owes you, and to think what you owe the world; to put your rights in the background, and your duties in the middle distance, and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellowmen are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to their hearts, hungry for joy; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to life; to close your book of complaints against the management of the universe, and look around you for a place where you can sow a few seeds of happiness—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and the desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want, without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts, and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

And if you keep it for a day, why not always?—Henry Van Dyke.

A THOUGHT FOR CHRISTMAS TIMES.

Grandmother's Maxims.

"Every good and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights."—James 1:17a.

Health: Health is a gift from God and it is a sin to waste it by failure to take proper care of our bodies.

Parents: God's most precious earthly gift to children—failure to respect and honor them is sure to bring disaster.

Time: This, too, is a gift from God, and whoso wastes it will later bitterly need what he wastes, Time is wasted when improperly used.

Work: This, too, is a gift from God, and he who fails so to se it misses God's blessing that comes from it.

Play: This gift from God is meant to be used only at the proper time and not at the expense of duty.

Money: The most abused gift that God has given us. When used only for selfish ends, it becomes a curse. To use money only for self and for our "own" is to dishonor God's gift. Dare not to return to God, directly for his work, less than one-tenth of all that we may earn or that may be given us. Anything less is an insult to him. All money gifts should be made in prayer to be sure that they are given for his glory.

Talents: Whatever talents we may possess are directly given by God, and whoso fails to use those talents for his glory will find them as stones of burial in the day of reckoning with God.

The Greatest Gift of All: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.——John 3:16.

What Does He Ask of Us? Romans 12:1: To present ourselves unto him as living sacrifices.

A GREAT HOME, A GREATER OWNER.

By James H. Felts.

Recently the home of Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., was destroyed by fire. Perhaps there was no home in the South more replete with priceless treasures. A card to the writer contained so beautiful a reference to this tragedy that I am presuming to make the following comment:

The card: "Thanks for visit. Friendship more precious than any home!"

This is a rich man's philosophy.

The poor man's philosophy is found in the gospel of Luke: "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease."

The poorest man in the world is the wretch who has nothing but money. The richest individual known is the man whose friendships are constantly multiplied. Even Lazarus was much richer than Dives. Character is the one imperishable asset.

It is good to have life's comforts, even luxuries. It is fine to be able to purchase without stint, surround oneself with "creature comforts." Thank God for every real man who has made himself and the world better and happier because of his material substance. No san man despises the ability that makes honest money. But let us not forget those things that are beyond all price.

Greenwood, Miss.

The English Language College at Warsaw, Poland, enrolled 1,266 students during the past year. Among this number are representatives from practically all professions and occupations, namely: Physicians, nurses, professors, students, engineers, architects, lawyers, singers, actors, journalists, painters, business men, State employees, etc. This school is largely responsible for the good feeling towards the work of the Methodist church in Poland.

A POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Point of personal provilege, please. On Dec. 8, there appeared in the Commercial Appeal a news (?) item which quotes me as saying, "Anybody who says he believes the Bible from cover to cover is a liar," and other statements just as erroneous. The whole article as it relates to me is a gross misrepresentation. I said no such things as were attributed to me in that article. Nor have I ever believed or taught such things.

The Daily Commonwealth of this city, under date of Dec. 10, and the Commercial Appeal of Dec. 11, carried corrections. But those libelous statements were given to the Associated Press also, and I find that many people who read that erroneous statement have not seen the corrections. That is the reason for this letter.

I have never felt like boasting of any good in me, there is so little of it—but I do love God and believe his Book. Why such statements should be made about me is hard for me to understand, especially since, as I have been told, the party furnishing the article is a prominent Methodist of a very select group. What good could possibly come of it? I am persuaded that every devout believer in the old Book that read that article was grieved.

I will not undertake to explain it, but I remember that my Lord had some very religious folk after him. They hung around to try to entangle him in his words. They wounded him deeply and finally crucified him. I can pray with him as he bled for them and for me, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

I want to say again to all the brethren that I love God and believe his Book and have the abiding evidence according to that Book that I have passed from death to life. "I love the brethren." The letters and expressions of love and confidence that continue to pour in with every mail from my brethren cheer and comfort me. And out of this unusual experience I am taught a valuable lesson that shall be a faithful monitor to me "not to believe everything I hear or read in the newspapers about a brother until thorough investigation proves it to be true—and then to be charitable."

With love for all and bitterness to none I can join at this Christmas season in the song of the angels, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace among men of good will."

A LETTER OF APPEAL.

It has recently been called to our attention that the Rev. E. G. Kilgore, 1473 Snowden Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., a former member of the North Mississippi Conference, is in a distressing condition financially. He has a wife and four children. Two of them are able to do some work. He has no home nor household furniture, but must rent both.

Several years ago, Brother Kilgore located in order to do evangelistic work. He was very successful for a number of years, when sickness and infirmity of age rendered him almost helpless. Not being a member of any Conference, he has no claim on the Superannuate Fund. So he is left without resources in the midst of a city of comparative strangers. He was a very effective man in his younger ministry and a good provider for his family. He is a kinsman of our lamented Bishop Kilgo.

We bring this appeal for help of our brother, not as a matter of charity, but of obligation to our brother in his need. We appeal to the old friends of Brother Kilgore and to all who desire to help relieve the immediate distress of a faithful, worn-out veteran of the church.

Send any help direct to Rev. E. G. Kilgore, 1473 Snowdon Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., or to either of the undersigned. Thank you.

REV. E. S. LEWIS,
Presiding Elder.
Rev. J. R. COUNTISS,
President Grenada College.
REV. J. H. HOLDER,
Pastor, Grenada.

Grenada, Miss., Dec. 15, 1927.

ADJUSTMENTS IN APPOINTMENTS.

The following appointments have been approved by Bishop Candler: Brookhaven District, Scotland charge, J. M. Metcalf; Newton District, Montrose charge, D. E. Vickers.

Bishop Candler dedicated our church at Crystal Springs Thursday evening, the 15th. Three of the former pastors were present: W. B. Jones, J. A. Moore, and J. G. Galloway. Notwithstanding the bad weather, the church was filled with a happy and attentive congregation. Bishop Candler brought them a great message. Brother L. E. Alford, the pastor, and his loyal people are to be congratulated in this achievement of paying off all indebtedness the first month of the Conference year.

The Brookhaven District Missionary Institute will be held at Brookhaven, Jan. 11, 1928. We hope to have Bishop Darlington with us at that time.

The District Sunday School Institute will be held at Norfield, Feb. 9, 1928. The program of this institute will be announced later.

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

GRFENWOOD DISTRICT MEETING.

The Sunflower Methodist Ministerial Association and the Greenwood District stewards met in the First Methodist Church in Greenwood, Miss., on Dec. 8. Rev. L. P. Wasson, the new presiding alder of the Greenwood District, preached a most excellent sermon. He based his discourse on passages taken from the first part of the book of Joshua. At the close of the sermon Brother Wasson said that he did not want a single preacher in the district to feel that he was under his elder, but that he himself wanted to stand beside each preacher and on the same level to work to promote the progress of the kingdom of our Lord and Master.

At the close of Brother Wasson's sermon the Association elected Rev. Walter L. Storment president for the ensuing year, and Rev. James T. McCafferty, secretary.

Brothers McKeithen, Brown, and George, the program committee, presented for the meeting on Tuesday after the second Sunday in January, the following program:

1. 10 a. m., sermon by Rev. E. R. Smoot.
2. "Your New Year's Resolutions and How to Keep Them"—general discussion.
3. "What Can Be Done to Cement the Greenwood District Into a Stronger Brotherhood and How to Project This Spirit Throughout the Whole Conference." Discussion to be led by S. C. George, H. D. Suydam, and James T. McCafferty.

4. "The Financial Plan Used on Our Charge"—general discussion.

The next meeting of the Association will be held in our Belzoni church, with J. V. Bennett, pastor-host.

At this place in the program the Association adjourned to the lunch room of the church, where the ladies of this church served us a real good dinner.

Our pastor-host, Rev. James H. Felts, was toastmaster. Brother Felts was at his best, and soon had everybody feeling perfectly at home. Several of the brethren proved themselves to be good after-dinner speakers. Rev. G. C. Gregory began the speaking, and after quite a number had spoken Rev. E. R. Smoot, for the Association, thanked the ladies of the First Methodist Church of Greenwood for the splendid menu served. Brother Smoot said the right things in the right way in an appropriate and eloquent speech.

After dinner the district stewards met and made the appropriations of the Conference claims to the various charges of the district. I have never seen district stewards make appropriations more fairly and receive them more heartily than these stewards of the Greenwood District.

Our meeting was made sad by the report that Cedar Canon, the beautiful home of Mr. J. R. Bingham, had burned at 11 o'clock, the night before our meeting. The burning of this home was not only a loss to Carrollton, Mr. Bingham's home town, but to the entire district. The books, manuscripts, pictures and antiques, the gatherings of a lifetime, went up in the flames that consumed the home. Many of the gatherings of this scholarly man cannot be replaced. There is coming a time when they will be greatly missed. Our hearts go out in sympathy to Brother Bingham and his family.

JAS. T. McCAFFERTY, Secretary.

MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

By Bishop John M. Moore, Secretary.

The College of Bishops met in Jackson, Miss., Dec. 14 and 15, instead of Dallas, Tex., on Dec. 16, as had been previously arranged. The bishops decided that, since they were to be in attendance upon the meeting of the Missionary Council on Dec. 12 to 14, it would save time and expense to hold their meeting immediately upon the adjournment of the Council. This was done.

Three bishops were absent: Bishop Mouzon, Bishop Ainsworth and Bishop Dickey. However, Bishop Dickey did arrive just at the close of the business of the College. The church will rejoice in the great improvement in his health. Bishop Ainsworth arrived from the Orient with Mrs. Ainsworth on Dec. 4, and went at once to Battle Creek for rest and general recuperation. He is not ill. Bishop Mouzon was detained at home by pressing duties.

Bishop Candler presided at all the sessions under the new rules of the College. From the end of this meeting to the end of the next May meeting Bishop Denny will be the president.

Bishop Denny was chosen to represent our church at the Tercentenary Commemoration of the founding of the Reformed Church in America, to be held in New York in June, 1928.

Mr. Jo. B. Morgan, Jr.; Rev. George Stoves, D.D., of Nashville, and Rev. J. T. McClure, of Ardmore, Okla., were confirmed as members of the Book Committee to fill the places made vacant by the death of Mr. Jo. B. Morgan, Sr., the chairman of the committee; by the removal of Rev. E. P. Anderson from Nashville, and by the resignation of Rev. C. D. Bulla, D.D., who has become an associate editor of Sunday school literature.

Bishop McMurry was appointed to prepare the memoir of Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix, who died Nov. 11, 1927.

Mr. B. A. Whitmore, one of the Publishing Agents, was chosen treasurer of the Wesley Memorial Fund which is being collected to aid in paneling the room occupied by John Wesley as a Fellow in Lincoln College, Oxford. The amount being collected is $2,000.

The next Ecumenical Conference of Methodism will be held in 1931. The Bishops extended an invitation to the Continuation Committee to hold this Conference within our territory, the place to be selected by our members on this Continuation Committee. Those appointed from our church as members of this committee at the last Ecumenical Conference were approved by the Bishops. The Bishops on this committee are Cannon, Beauchamp, Ainsworth and Boaz.

Rev. J. Earl Crawford, D.D., was heard in behalf of the Laymen's Conference to be held Aug. 19-26, 1928, at Lake Junaluska, and of the proposed Stewardship year for 1929. Both of these interests were indorsed.

Rev. W. G. Cram, D.D., and Rev. J. W. Perry, D.D., were heard in behalf of the Evangelistic Campaign for 1928. The campaign was heartily indorsed, and the Bishops will give the movement their full support. Bishops Candler and Moore were appointed to prepare a statement to the church upon this important matter.

The following resolution relative to the Superannuate Endowment Fund was adopted:

"Whereas, the General Conference of 1922 gave the Board of Finance authority to project a Special Effort to raise $10,000,000 for Superannuate Endowment, beginning in 1924 and continuing for five years;

"And, whereas, the General Conference of 1926 approved this program and extended the time for completing this task to include all the quadrennium of 1926-1930;

"And, whereas, the Board of Finance at its annual meeting of 1927, adopted a plan for a clean-up campaign to raise the quota balances of the charges by the time of the meeting of the General Conference in 1930, which plan has been approved by the College of Bishops and by the Annual Conferences at their meetings of 1927; therefore, be it resolved:

"First, That we now reaffirm our conviction that this cause should have the special attention and loyal support of the entire church, as called for under the plan above referred to, looking to the successful completion of this important work.

"Second, That we urge the presiding elders, pastors, and lay members of the entire church to give this matter their most fatihful and enthusiastic support during the period (March, April and May), which has been agreed upon as the time for securing the cash and deferred payment subscriptions to cover the charges' quota balances.

"Third, That we pledge ourselves anew to do whatever we are able, in our respective Episcopal Districts, to give impetus to this most worthy movement."

The two Conferences in Oklahoma have taken action twice in indorsing a proposal to assume joint ownership and control and support in the Oklahoma City University, an institution of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Some questions have arisen as to the legal basis of these actions and as to the methods to be pursued in accomplishing the end sought. Bishop McMurry, Bishop Boaz and Bishop Moore were appointed to confer with the General Board of Education looking to the settlement of all the issues involved.

Bishop DuBose and Bishop Denny were appointed to prepare a statement to the church upon the importance of our church papers.

The following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That it is the judgment of the College of Bishops that a probationer in an Annual Conference, appointed to one of our institutions of learning as a student outside of the bounds of his Annual Conference, and used by the bishop in charge of the territory in which he resides as a student as a supply pastor for the Conference year, is eligible to have the time which he serves as pastor counted on his time required for admission into full connection and for deacon's orders."

The reports of the bishops indicated a prosperous condition of the church.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

He was the speaker at the commencement occasion of a great university. He quoted St. Paul as saying, "money is the root of evil." This ingenius apostle was far too wise for saying such an absurdity. He did say, "The love of money is the root of all kinds of evil." A prominent preacher once said to me that the Lord could not trust him with much money, and no doubt there are many like him. Covetousness is a blighting sin. It blinds, narrows, stunts characters. It represses and strangles the noble emotions of the human heart. One of the hall marks of true greatness is a knowledge of the best and wisest use of money.

Never before in all history did the church of the living God own and control as much wealth as in this day, and the people called Methodists have their full share. Some one needs to do some plain talking or writing concerning the money question in our church, and by the grace of God I proceed to say a few things, I hope as a warning and perchance as a wholesome lesson. The numerous calls, assessments, drives, movements, hardly give our preachers time to breathe the pure air of spiritual life and liberty. Some of these preachers say little and think much, especially when these money obligations begin to rise like ocean tides, and flood the fields of his wonted or rather rightful activities. The laymen—are they so called because the thing is laid upon them?—come to the preachers' rescue because they love him and the church. Yet sometimes they come like Shakespeare's schoolboy went to school. Let me be plain again. It is "simply killing" to the paramount principles in the kingdom of God to allow the material—Paul called it carnal—interest to overshadow the spiritual. A mere truism, you may say, too apparent for statement; yet, like creeping paralysis, it comes upon some churches unknown, but deadly in its results. Our Lord had much to say concerning money, but much more concerning his kingdom as it stands related to human salvation.

The heart of man is so constituted that it must have an object upon which it may center its affection. Heroes and hero-worship is the dominant fad of men to-day. Admiration for deeds of daring, bold adventures into realms known or unknown, reckless and unproven experiments in civil government, and even in church polity, have an amazing fascination for many; and to such a degree that this becomes an obsession, controlling, directing, absorbing their life and thought. Lindbergh challenges our admiration, but he protests against men and women going wild about him, and having hysteric spells so as to lose their poise and balance. His modesty should by all means teach these extremists a wholesome lesson.

Study history, and you will see that in those periods in which nations were hero worshipers, they were not especially given to the worship of Almighty God. Cromwell and his crowd, for instance, were little inclined to her worship. Men, to them, were puny creatures compared with the greatness and splendor of God. A demi-god in the end is apt to be a demi-devil. When his kingship, Nebuchadnezzer, wanted men to worship him he was turned out to grass for a season, and was afterward restored to normalcy and a healthier state of mind. When Nero and some other august rulers of Rome tried the same game the empire hastened to decay. When John bowed down before his fellow-servant to worship him, that redeemed spirit sounded the keynote of all true adoration—"Worship God."

BUSINESS AS A CHRISTIAN CAREER.

By G. Franklin Ream.

What is to be said for the young man who knows that his talents do not warrant the investment of his life in some form of distinctly recognized Christian service? Is it true that business careers are essentially secular and that they offer no opportunity for the young man with business ability who desires Christian motives to control in his life work?

For a long time the emphasis of many well-meaning persons has been upon the accepted forms of Christian service in which all of one's time is given to the service of the church, and the impression has become widely established that all other pursuits are less Christian and may be entered only by those who make partial dedication of their lives.

A new day, however, is dawning in the consciousness of the leaders of the church and those who counsel with young people. It has been brought in by that great modern Christian vision which understands that all society, all honorable human activities and pursuits, and all progress in the economic world and in the social world have a real part in the Christian program for humanity.

From this viewpoint every pursuit which is honest may be directly or indirectly related to the Christian program. Therefore the young man who sells groceries or the man who makes bricks may be serving just as sincerely and with motives as completely Christian as the man who crosses the seas to preach the gospel to the heathen.

The modern student world does not yet fully realize how great is the need in the kingdom of God for Christian laymen. Before that kingdom can advance far, the business order of the present day must be Christianized, and in the accomplishment of that task strong Christian men capable of transforming it from within will be an immeasurable Christian force. Books have been written about it from without. Ministers have preached forceful sermons.

Transforming the Business Man.

Occasionally some idealist has undertaken a demonstration, and all these are useful to a certain degree, but they are not nearly so effective as the actual everyday business transformations which are made by the man who does it, not for gain and not from pious pretense, but from the honest conviction that from the standpoint of every-day Christianity it is the thing to be done. It is this kind of solution that is bringing great benefit to the problems of labor and socal difficulties and all forms of ecomonic strife.

The chief embarrassment is that there are as yet so few men with force of character and vision sufficient to join in a powerful Christian nucleus. As soon as such a group can be gathered in the chief forms of business, Christianity will no longer be open to the common criticism of impracticability and the church will not seem far removed from the problems of everyday life.

The outstanding need, therefore, is to multiply the number of strong men who give themselves to the Christian solution of the problems in the business world; but this will require training. No weak or unskilled man can hope to make any definite contribution in a matter which has been halting the progress of society for so many centuries, therefore this must not be considered as in any sense a compromise with what some persons would think is a more difficult Christian task.

In the whole Christian program there is no undertaking which will require more prowess, more heroic initiative, and more ability to stand alone against great odds than the transformation of the modern business pursuits according to the Christian principles.

This is a new days also for the laymen in the affairs of the organized church. Only a little while ago all the responsibility of leadership and almost all of the attainment of ends rested in the hands of the minister. Now conditions are vastly different, and changes which are bringing about the prominence of laymen are still continuing.

Laymen are now organized in the great movements among all the denominations throughout the country. They are throwing the force of their school of business organization into missionary enterprises, benevolent work of all sorts, the modernizing of church plants and church progress, the promotion of enterprise in civic righteousness and national morals.

Fellow-Laborers in the Church.

Their powers and resourcefulness are now so completely recognized that no significant modern movement is undertaken without their counsel and full support. Churches are now taking them into their deliberative and lawmaking bodies, and the layman is standing shoulder to shoulder with the minister and the whole modern outlook of the church.

The new day is equally upon us in the local church. The layman is no longer the man who sits idle and silent. He is a fellow-laborer in every local Christian issue. He understands that his church is to be a real force in the social community, fostering every world improvement, pushing every new enterprise that is for the betterment of the town and assisting the church to relate itself in some helpful fashion to every form of the community life. Here he is finding abundant opportunity to use his initiative, his genius for organization, and his money.

Every wide-awake pastor is an eager fellow-laborer, and together they encourage many others to assume lines of service that call for their larger ability.

Emphatically this is the day for the Christian business man, and if any young man is persuaded that his greatest talents lie along the lines of businesss, he should not hesitate to use those talents in an uncompromising Christian fashion.—The Methodist Layman.

I AM TO-DAY.

I came to you this morning.
I came fresh from the hand of God.
I am called To-day.
I am clean and white.
If you touch me with soiled fingers, my beauty will be marred.
A noble thought will glorify me.
A kind word will halo me with brightest light.
A deed of love will connect me with eternity.
A cheerful smile will gild me with the colors of dawn.
Soon I will be Yesterday.
If you use me well and wisely, I shall become a beautiful, green spot in your life, where memory will fondly linger.
Misuse me and I become a hideous, deformed thing which men name Regret.
Your Master and mine says: "Son, go work today in my vineyard."
I am To-day!—E. C. Baird, in the Christian Standard.

THE HOLLY FAMILY.

The Plea of the Holly.

Years to grow
In sun and snow—
Minutes to wither and die—
O, let me live,
Beauty to give
To all who pass me by!

The best-known member of the family is our beautiful, big holly, ilex opaca. With its glossy, dark-green foliage and brilliant berries, it is one of our most attractive trees, certainly our finest evergreen. It occurs in almost every part of the State, along streams and on the rich slopes, and adds much to the beauty and brightness of our winter woods. But the berry-bearing trees are threatened with extinction, they are so recklessly cut for Christmas decorations.

The tree is shapely, usually forty to fifty feet high and six to ten inches in diameter, but occasionally as much as 100 feet high and two feet in diameter.

The leaves are alternate, two to four inches long, and armed with sharp spines. They are thick and glossy, and persist for about three years.

The flowers are very small, white. The staminate and pistillate flowers are borne on separate trees, which is unfortunate, as the trees with berries are much more attractive. The scarlet berries, borne in close clusters, cling until spring.

The bark is light gray, mottled, smooth, with occasional wart-like excrescences on old trees.

The wood is light, tough, close-grained, and white. It is valuable for use in cabinet work, interior finish, and in turnery. Many of the largest, finest trees have been cut for the market.

This tree is difficult to transplant, but when once established, does well in cultivation. There are some fine specimens growing on lawns in the State.

Probably next in popularity comes Youpon, or Cassena berry (ilex vomitoria), the little cousin of the holly. It is a small, compact evergreen, with tiny leaves, and glistening red berries. Single specimens are quite handsome. If planted close and kept cut back, it makes a beautiful hedge. This shrub occurs in almost every part of the State.

The idea of a deciduous holly is a little hard to grasp, but we have two in Louisiana. Winterberry (Ilex decidua), is a large shrub, or small tree, which grows in low, rich ground. The bright red berries are clustered thickly on the stem, and after the leaves fall, make a brilliant display in the winter woods.

Mountain Holly (Ilex montana), one would never suspect of being a holly at all. The pointed leaves somewhat resemble those of wild plum. Only the bark is typical of the family. The beautiful, translucent, red berries are borne in graceful sprays, but are not as lasting as those of other species. The leaves fall early. This shrub is rare in Louisiana, occurring only occasionally in the sand hills.

There are probably one or two other species of holly in the State, but are rare and local in distribution.—Louisiana Division of Forestry.

EVERY MAN'S FRIEND.

By John Paul.

The song of the angels we're learning to sing;
The same glad refrain to the nations we bring
Of peace and salvation and hope among men,
And tidings that all a new life may begin.

The hope of the nations is still in our Lord,
And great is the host that now wait on his word;
The ether is throbbing with praise to his name;
His wonderful mercy forever the same.

The poor of all peoples, the sick and the sad,
Can join with the wealthy, the healthy and glad,
In worship and honor to every man's Friend,
The Author of pleasures that never shall end.

The Home Circle

ON GOING HOME FOR CHRISTMAS.

He little knew the sorrow that was in his vacant chair;
He never guessed they'd miss him, or he'd surely have been there;
He couldn't see his mother or the lump that filled her throat,
Or the tears that started falling as she read his hasty note;
And he couldn't see his father, sitting sorrowful and dumb,
Or he never would have written that he thought he couldn't come.

Are you going home for Christmas? Have you written you'll be there?
Going home to kiss the mother and to show her that you care?
Going home to greet his father in a way to make him glad?
If you're not I hope there'll never come a time when you wish you had.
Just sit down and write a letter—it will make their heartstrings hum
With a tune of perfect gladness—if you'll tell them that you'll come

THE STORY OF THE LOAF.

Mary was standing by the kitchen table watching her mother deftly knead bread. "May I make a loaf all by myself some day?" she asked.

"Do you think you could make a loaf of bread all by yourself, darling?" was mother's reply.

"Why, yes, mother," said Mary. "I have watched you so often that I know just how to do it, and I am nearly nine years old, you know."

"Very well, daughter, some day you shall try to make a loaf all by yourself."

A few weeks later a letter from grandma called mother away from home for a day or two, and Mary became a proud housekeeper. "Now," she said to herself as she hung up the tea towel after wiping the cups, "I'll make a loaf of bread and surprise father."

But when she went to scoop some flour out of the flour barrel, she found the barrel completely empty. There was nothing to do but to go to the grocer's.

"Good evening, Mr. Smith. Did mother order flour?" Mary inquired as the grocer turned to wait on her.

"I am very sorry," replied the grocer, "but I am just out of flour. I won't have any until the miller sends it."

Mary looked quite disappointed as she walked up the street. But presently a light sprang into her eyes, and she quickened her steps saying: "I'll go to the miller and get some flour from him."

She knew exactly where the tall mill stood on the outskirts of the village, for she often watched the dusty millers throwing the bags of flour into the big drays or loitered to listen to the noisy machinery inside. But to-day the wheels were still, and the usually busy miller stood with arms folded in the doorway.

"Good evening, Mr. Miller," said Mary. "I have come to see if you will send me a little flour. The grocer has none, and I want to make a loaf of bread."

"I am very sorry," said the miller, gazing curiously into the eager little face. "I have no flour, and I can't make any until the farmer brings me some wheat to grind."

After thinking the matter over for a few seconds, Mary looked up brightly and asked: "If I get some wheat from the farmer and bring it to you, will you grind it into flour for me?"

"Inded I will," said the miller.

But the farmer had to refuse her also. "It is too bad," he said; "I have no wheat ready to be ground." And, pointing to a field near by, he added: "That wheat will be ready in a few days, but it must drink in more sunshine and rain before it will be ripe enough to cut and thresh ready for the miller."

Mary turned toward home a very disappointed little girl. "What a lot of people have to work together, and how long it takes just to make a loaf of bread!" she thought.

As she was passing the miller's cottage the miller's wife came to the door and called out: "Are you the little girl who came to the mill to buy some flour?"

"Yes," said Mary. "I wanted some to make a loaf of bread to surprise my father."

"Well," said the kind woman, "I have a little flour left in my barrel and will give you enough to make a loaf."

"Oh, thank you!" cried Mary. "I will return it when we get ours."

At luncheon the next day when father helped himself to a slice of fresh bread he exclaimed: "Fresh bread and mother away! Where did it come from?"

Mary's face was a picture. "Guess, father," she said.

After mentioning several of the neighbors, he cried: "Surely you didn't make it!"

"Yes, I did," she replied in a joyous voice.

"All by yourself?" questioned father.

"No-o-o," said Mary. "I used to think I could do it alone, but now I know I can't. The grocer and the miller and the farmer, and oh! so many people as well as the sunshine and the rain and the wind have to help."

"Yes, indeed," said father, "and we must not forget that above it all and back of it all is God, the Creator. We must love and serve and thank him.

"'He sends the sunshine and the rain;
He sends the harvest's golden grain;
Sunshine and rain, harvest of grain;
He's my Friend.'"

WHAT BOYS SHOULD BE.

First: Be true—be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read—he had better never learn a letter of the alphabet, and be true and genuine in intention and in action rather than being learned in all science and in all languages, to be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach the boys that truth is more than riches, more than culture, more than earthly power or position.

Second: Be pure in thought, language—pure in mind and body. An impure man, young or old, poisoning society where he moves with smutty stories and impure examples, is a moral cancer; a plague spot, a leper who ought to be treated as were the lepers of old, who were to cry, "Unclean!" as a warning to save others from the pestilence.

Third: Be unselfish. To care for the feeling and comfort of others. To be polite. To be just in all dealings with others. To be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for aged and things sacred.

Fourth: Be self-reliant and self-helpful even from very childhood. To be industrious always, and self-supporting at the proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable, and that an idle useless life of dependence on others is disgraceful.

When a boy has learned these four things, when he has made these ideas a part of his being—however young he may be, however poor, however rich—he has learned some of the most important things he ought to know when he becomes a man. With these four properly mastered, it will be easy to find out the rest.—Home Arts.

WHAT THE CLOCK SAYS.

What does the clock say, loud and clear,
Up by the mantel high?
Hark! only two wee words I hear.
While snug in bed am I.
The whole day long it sang "tick-tock!"
Now it has changed its tune, this clock.
"You're good! You're good!" it seem to say
When I have been quite good all day.

What does the clock say, loud and clear,
When lips have learned to pout?
How it should know I'm bad is queer.
I'm puzzled to find out.
And yet, when all the house is still,
A voice the whole room seems to fill.
"You're bad—quite bad," I hear it say;
Who told it I was bad that day?

THE TASK OF THE CHRISTMAS DAY.

'Tis a beautiful time when Christmas comes
All up the street and down,
For hearts alight make faces bright
When Christmas comes to town,
Neighbor and friend in gladness meet,
And all are neighbors dear,
When the Christmas peace bids evil cease
In the holiest day of the year.

The fair white fields in silence lie,
Invisible angels go
Over the floor that sparkles hoar
With the glitter of frost and snow.
And they scatter the infinite balm of heaven
Wherever on earth they stay,
And heaven's own store of bliss they pour
On the earth each Christmas Day.

'Tis a beautiful task our Christmas brings
For old and young to share,
With jingles of bells, and silvery swells
Of music in the air.
To make the sad world merry awhile,
And to frighten sin away,
And to bless us all, whatever befall,
Is the task of Christmas Day.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

A CHRISTMAS FANCY.

When the great sun has gone to rest
Behind the hills that hide the West,
And the lamplight in our living-room
Looks like a yellow flower in bloom,
Then I run over to the door,
Though I can't see much any more
Because the world outside is black;
But, spite of that, I don't come back
Until the lights shine in the sky.
My mother says they're stars, but I Think she is wrong; I'm sure I see
The candles on God's Christmas tree!

—Elizabeth Scollard.

There came a little Child to earth
Long ago
And the angels of God proclaimed his birth,
High and low.
Out in the night, so calm and still,
Their song was heard,
For they knew that the Child on Bethlehem's hill
Was Christ the Lord. —Selected.

O Thou loving Christ-child,
Bless us, each and all,
By the quiet fireside,
In the stately hall.

Crown our lives with service,
Light our hearts with cheer;
Guide us, guard us, keep us,
Through the coming year!

THE MEETING OF THE MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The second General Missionary Council met in Jackson, Miss., last week, convening on Monday night and adjourning Wednesday afternoon. The Monday evening session was in the nature of a welcome from Jackson to the Council. Governor Murphree was to have delivered an address of welcome on behalf of the State; but on account of the serious illness of his wife he was not able to be present, his place being taken by Mr. J. S. Love, Superintendent of Banks of Mississippi. Mayor Scott spoke in behalf of the city, and Rev. J. L. Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, spoke in behalf of the Methodists of Jackson. Appropriate responses were made by Dr. J. E. Wolfe, of the Holston Conference; Dr. S. P. Wiggins, of the North Georgia Conference, and Dr. W. G. Cram, General Missionary Secretary and president of the Council. The Scripture lesson for the evening was read by Rev. Robert Selby, presiding elder of the Meridian District, and the prayer was offered by Bishop H. M. DuBose.

The regular sessions of the Council began at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, with Dr. Cram presiding, and Dr. F. S. Love, of South Carolina, acting as secretary. All the bishops were present, except Bishops Ainsworth, Dickey, and Mouzon. A telegram was read from Bishop Ainsworth, who has just returned from the Orient.

Dr. Cram, in his opening address, made it very clear that the Board of Missions does not intend to go any further in its financial operations than the church authorizes it to go. By Jan. 1, 1928, the present indebtedness of the Board to the banks will have been liquidated, and no further loans will be negotiated. The Board will keep within its income.

Addresses were delivered during the sessions by the following: Bishop W. B. Beauchamp; Dr. F. S. Onderdonk, superintendent of the Western Mexican Mission; Bishop Sam R. Hay; Dr. E. H. Rawlings, one of the secretaries of the Board of Missions; Dr. O. E. Goddard, one of the secretaries; Dr. H. W. Cox, president of Emory University; Bishop James Cannon, Jr.; Dr. J. W. Perry, one of the secretaries; Bishop John M. Moore; Dr. Arthur J. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Birmingham; Bishop U. V. W. Darlington. Dr. Plato Durham, of Emory University, delivered a devotional address at the opening of each session.

The Missionary Council is a new organization in the church, having been authorized by the Memphis General Conference. The first meeting was held in Louisville, Ky., last December. We had the privilege of attending that session, along with the other editors of the church, as we did this one. It is our conviction that this annual gathering of the missionary workers of the church, along with the bishops and others interested in this great work, will be definitely and tremendously helpful in promoting the missionary interests and activities of the church. It is a time when the great missionary motives are studied afresh; when the forces at work at home and abroad both for helping and hindering the work are carefully examined and evaluated; when the terms of the Great Commission are emphasized and applied to conditions in hand; when the inspiration of past achievements and of present opportunities is brought to bear upon the mind and heart; when, through prayer and meditation, the presence of God is made very real to those upon whose shoulders rests the responsibility of the missionary task; when plans are carefully made and studied for bringing to the whole church the realization of the need and of the means of meeting the need. Every Annual Conference is represented by its own members of the Council; all the bishops are present, and other connectional officers and visitors. From the Council there should go out—and we believe there will go out—an inspiration and influence that will reach to the uttermost boundaries of the church.

A findings committee was appointed at the beginning of the session whose report we expect to give in the next issue of the Christian Advocate. The committee was composed of the following: Bishop H. M. Dobbs, Dr. J. W. Moore. Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Dr. D. M. McLeod, Dr. A. C. Millar, Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Dr. J. W. Perry, Dr. R. F. Bryant, Mrs. K. C. Childress, Dr. T. D. Ellis.

The city of Jackson was a most hospitable host to the Council, and the citizens showed every courtesy possible. As much so as any city we know of, we think Jackson can be called a Christian city. It can have no greater honor than that.

THE SOUTHERN METHODIST PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The Southern Methodist Press Association, composed of those engaged in producing the periodical literature of the church, held its annual meeting in Jackson, Miss., during the meeting of the Missionary Council. All the Conference organ editors were present except Dr. E. O. Watson, of the Southern Christian Advocate. The following officers were elected: President, Dr. A. C. Millar, of the Arkansas Methodist; vice president, Dr. Carlton D. Harris, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; secretary-treasurer, Dr. M. E. Lazenby, of the Alabama Christian Advocate.

The members of the Association were the recipients of two courtesies that will linger long as pleasant memories. The first was a banquet given them at the Edwards Hotel on Tuesday evening by the Chamber of Commerce, with members of the local newspaper fraternity as co-operating hosts. The banquet was arranged for by Mr. L. E. Foster, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and presided over by Mr. Edgar H. Bradshaw, president of the organization. In addition to the editors and other newspaper workers, several visitors were present, including Bishops Denny and Moore, and the honored Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Mississippi. On account of limited time, few speeches were made; but a specially forceful address was made by Mr. Frederick Sullens, editor of the Jackson Evening News, who had just returned from a tour of Western cities, where he had spoken under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The Association was especially fortunate in having as part of the program beautiful musical numbers by Mrs. H. R. Shands and Mrs. L. E. Foster, whose talent is outstanding in a city of gifted artists.

Jackson is really a remarkable city. It has had almost phenomenal growth during the past ten years; yet it has not been of the boom variety, but substantial and enduring. It has many beautiful paved streets, both business and residence, and a number of office buildings that would do credit to a city ten times its size. Its present population is in excess of 40,000, and it is growing all the time. It is a city that puts first things first—religion, morality, intellectual development; and we believe it is this fact that makes it what it is today.

The second courtesy that will linger long in the memory of those who were present was the luncheon given on Wednesday by President D. M. Key, of Millsaps College, and members of the faculty. A fine meal was served in the spacious dining-room on the campus, which was thoroughly enjoyed, along with the fellowship of the occasion.

Millsaps now takes rank as one of the great institutions of the church. In faculty and character of student body it has no superior in the territory it serves—if in any other territory. In a recent educational survey of the State, conducted under the auspices of the State Department of Education by Dr. M. V. O'Shea, of the University of Wisconsin, Millsaps was given a higher rating than any other institution in the State.

The student enrollment this fall is 453; teachers, 22; property value, $660,000; endowment, $920,000; indebtedness, nothing.

The outstanding need of Millsaps at this time is for additions to its physical plant. A campaign is under way for $600,000 to meet this urgent need. The Methodists of Mississippi can do no finer thing than to supply at once the funds for the urgent requirements of their great college.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens requests us to announce that his address is 2900 Prytania Street, New Orleans, La.

Rev. J. L. Nabors writes: "We are delightfully located on our new charge the Corinth circuit, and are well pleased with everything."

Rev. A. A. Simms, Wiggins, Miss., requests us to state that he has a set of the Pulpit Commentary, in good condition, for sale at a special price.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson has been given a cordial welcome to the Gallman charge, Mississippi Conference, for the fourth year. The outlook for the new year is encouraging.

The many friends of Rev. William Schuhle, of Kentwood, La., were glad to welcome him during the closing sessions of the Louisiana Conference. Brother Schuhle was kept from attending the opening sessions on account of sickness.

"Here at Istrouma the folks have been most kind in fixing up parsonage within for 'the mistress' comfort.' The people show a fine spirit, and the field looks encouraging." So writes Rev. J. W. Booth, our pastor of Istrouma church, Baton Rouge, La.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, the newly appointed presiding elder of the Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, has reached his field of labor and is actively at work. In sending in his quarterly conference announcements, he states that a great year is in prospect—if another flood does not come. The people are interested in the activities of the church.

The Rev. S. L. Riggs, our pastor at Cedar Grove La., and his wife escaped serious injury when their automobile was struck by a reckless driver near Natchitoches while on their way home from Conference. Their car was considerably damaged.

While both were bruised and considerably shocked, these devoted servants of the church are able to be about their loved employ.

Rev. and Mrs. John S. Sutton have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Alice Chapman, to Mr. Ross Henderson Moore, at the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., at noon on Monday, Dec. 26. The Advocate extends all good wishes to this fine young couple in advance of the happy event.

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Byrd and family will sympathize deeply with them and their son-in-law, Mr. Ernest Martin, in the death of their daughter, Mrs. Lettie Byrd Martin, who passed away at the Baptist Hospital, New Orleans, on Tuesday of last week. The remanis were taken to Mt. Olivet cemetery, on the Satartia charge, in Yazoo County, Miss., for interment.

Rev. W. W. Nelson writes: "Please announce through the Advocate to my many friends that I am recovering from my attack of the 'flu,' and will be able in a few days to move to Bay Springs, Miss. I want to thank the good people of the Vancleave charge for their loyalty to us during the past year. The Lord has been good to us, bless his name! We have never been more kindly treated, especially when we were sick. May the Lord bless the good people for their kindness to us. Brother Jackson has been on the charge for some time, and I think he is making a good start. I trust all the people on the charge will rally to him and that this will be the best year in the history of the charge thus far."

THE ROYALTY OF BETHLEHEM'S BABE.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The birth of Jesus in Bethlehem was not the beginning of the life of our Lord. He was and is the Eternal Son of God, who "being in the form of God grasped not at equality with God as for a prize, but made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross" (Philippians ii:6-8).

No one but he ever chose to be born into our world, and through his voluntary birth, he was made flesh and dwelt among men, that he might make them to be "partakers of the divine nature" (I Peter 1:4). He became the Son of Man that men might become the sons of God.

His incarnation looked forward to his crucifixion because its purpose was the salvation of men through an atoning death.

In the deep destitution of his birth was foreshown the death pains of his cross; and he walked all the way from Bethlehem to Calvary under its shadow. He was born to die; and his death was as voluntary as was his birth. Wherefore, he said: "As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep, therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down and I have power to take it again" (John x:15-18.) When one of his Apostles sought to defend him against his foes and by force save him from death, he rebuked this mistaken act, and said, "Put up again thy sword into its place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword. Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?" (Matthew xxvi: 52 and 53). Not for lack of protective resources submitted he to arrest and trial and execution by the hands of men.

If he had come to set up an earthly dynasty, force would have been the appropriate instrumentality to establish and maintain it; but in the spiritual kingdom of his redeeming grace it had no place; and in the very nature of the case it could not have. Hence, he said to Pilate: "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now my kingdom is not from hence" (John xviii:36).

In the sweet royalty of immaculate purity came he among men, and with the august majesty of a heavenly King he dared all that death could do, triumphing over the grave as the veritable Prince of Life. Freely came he into the earth; freely he walked in it, determining the way and the length of his course; and freely he fixed the days he would tarry in the tomb. Surely such freedom is the mark of the most truly kingly Man who ever appeared in our sinful and sorrowful world. He came to redeem it; and upon his great redemption rests his right to rule it. To this end was he born; to this end he lived; to this end he died; to this end he rose from the dead "because it was not possible that he should be holden of it" (Acts ii:24). Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior" (Acts v:31). His throne is erected upon his saviourhood; and his crown, once a crown of thorns, has turned to many golden diadems. "On his head are many crowns" (Revelation xix:12), "and he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings and Lord of Lords" (Revelation xix:16). He reigns in power because he "speaks in righteousness, mighty to save" (Isaiah xiii:1).

On the birthday of our King it behooves us to magnify his royalty, and to bow in perfect submission to his royal will. This was the dominant note in the song of the angel to the Shepherds on the hills of Bethlehem: "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the City of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord" (Luke iii:10 and 11). At the heart of the faith of the Wise Men of the East was the royalty of him whom from afar they came to worship: "When Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, behold, there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his Star in the East, and are come to worship him" (Matthew ii:1 and 2). His lowly birth in no wise restrained their trustful adoration. Beneath the disguise of his infancy they discerned his divine kingliness, and upon him bestowed gifts such as it was customary to devote to kings only: "When they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary, his mother, and fell down and worshiped him; and when they had opened their treasures, they offered unto him gifts, gold, frankincense and myrrh" (Matthew ii:11).

In like spirit should we fall down before him in adoring love. No gift that we can bring to him will be too good for him, however large and rich it may be. The gift of the undivided loyalty of our hearts is that which pleases him best and honors him most.

With Dr. Holland we may sing in fervent love:

"There's a song in the air!
There's a star in the sky!
There's a Mother's deep prayer,
And a baby's low cry!
And the star rains its fire while the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King!

"There's tumult of joy
O'er the wonderful birth,
For the Virgin's sweet boy
Is the Lord of the earth.
Ay! the star rains its fire while the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King!

"In the light of that star
Lie the ages impearled:
And that song from afar
Has swept over the world.
Every hearth is aflame, and the beautiful sing
In the homes of the nations that Jesus is King!

"We rejoice in the light,
And we echo the song
That comes down through the night
From the heavenly throng.
Ay! we shout to the lovely evangel they bring,
And we greet in his cradle our Saviour and King!"

The rule of this King in the cradle must in the end extend wherever man is found, and it must abide forever. He sets aside all the limitations of space and time in the sweep of his redeeming love and saving grace.

At his entrance into our world we see him reposing in helpless infancy upon his Virgin Mother's breast. At the end of his manifestation in the flesh we find him asserting universal sovereignity and claiming all power: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you all the days, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew xxvii:18-20).

With his unlimited presence and undiminished power among his followers, he is establishing his royal claims and asserting his regal prerogatives. As Jean Paul Richter says, "Jesus being the holiest among the mighty and the mightiest among the holy, he has lifted with his pierced hands empires off their hinges, turned the stream of the centuries out of its channel, and still governs the ages."

"Let every kindred, every tribe
On this terrestrial ball
To him all majesty ascribe
And crown him Lord of all.

"O that with yonder sacred throng
We at his feet may fall.
And join the everlasting song,
And crown him Lord of all."

GOOD PREACHING COMMENDED.

Editor Advocate: The great majority of our Methodist ministers do not seek much publicity, as the consciousness of a duty fearlessly well done is satisfying unto them; and yet now and then they are entitled like any other leader, either political or social, to a word of commendation.

On last Sunday, Dec. 11, at the morning service at the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, I immensely enjoyed a magnificent and practical sermon by the pastor, Rev. J. B. Peters

The reverend gentleman took his text (and, by the way, it was a good one, well suited to the first Sunday of the new Conference year) in Nehemiah iv:vi: "So built we the wall . . . for the people had a mind to work."

After the exposition of the Scriptural text, the preacher made a very practical application of it, took his aim, unloaded his "automatic" and never missed the mark he had in his vision.

"Unity of Purpose," "Opposition to Work Well Planned," and God always finding "Willing Servants to do His Work," were the three divisions of his discourse.

Under the sub-head of "Unity of Purpose" the "automatic" of the minister reached as far as the race track. "If there was unity of purpose amongst the Christians of New Orleans, there certainly would be an end to racing," said he. The other two sections of his discourse were spoken in "an ungloved sort-of-way;" and no doubt good results will follow the exhortations of Brother Peters if we take head thereunto.

The choir, by anticipation, fulfilled the first point of the sermon, "Unity of Purpose," by rendering delightfully in "unison" some harmonious church music.

The Christ of the Indian Road

By E. Stanley Jones

"It is hardly too much to say that Dr. Jones restates in his simple, direct words the Christ of the Gospels. This is why this little book is being quoted everywhere—in sociology and philosophy classes, on lecture platforms, from the pulpits, on street cars, and at dinner tables. This little book touches the reader as, many centuries ago, must the first readers of the epistles of that great missionary Paul have been touched in the little church at Ephesus, for it brings the same message."—Good Housekeeping. Adventures with Christ in Latin America

By Bishop George A. Miller

"Primarily the author is a Christian missionary and there are not many sentences in the volume which do not bear witness to that fact. But he has done no little thinking on matters that are not usually associated with the preaching of religion and so he throws a great deal of light, first and last, on conditions and tendencies in Latin America and our attitude toward and our relations with our co-dwellers on the Western Hemisphere."—The New York Times. The New Soul in China

By Bishop George Richmond Grose

"Here is a small book with a big message from a missionary statesman. Bishop Grose's stirring statements founded on years of experience and observation will be read by thousands with great profit. His fine understanding of the present situation in China will do much to clear up misconceptions."—International Journal of Religious Education. Net, $1.00, postpaid.

RETURNING PASTOR "POUNDED."

Dear Dr. Carley: The Advocate is always a cherished weekly visitor to our home, and we like, now and then, to take advantage of its columns to express a deserved appreciation which finds a warm place in our hearts.

We had the pleasure of returning to the good people that we served last year. On our return, we were greeted with a pounding and a most cordial reception of our people, which made our homecoming a delight. We have had the pleasure of having a new people "pound" us, and we have had the sweet pleasure of having the people we were leaving behind "pound" us but to have the people you have served and are returning to, "pound" you and greet you with a heart full of glad welcome is the most satisfying pleasure of it all because of the deeply inlaid significance. We had a successful and a happy year last year, and we are anticipating greater things this year. While our congregation is small, it is a great people, and they manifest their love of God by revealing the glory of his kingdom. Invoking the blessings of God as we follow the leadership of his Spirit into greater depths of love and greater heights of glory, and with our hearty endeavors for the Advocate,

Faithfully,

H. B. HINES, P. C.

FROM FULTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The last Conference sent us to Fulton, Miss. So we have moved and settled down to business. We found a nice parsonage, and the good women had everything in order when we arrived, and they gave us a royal reception. Such a supper! just wish you could have tasted it. Then the pantry had enough groceries to last us more than a month. For all these things we are very grateful. We could not find words to express our appreciation for this kindness. We have a very fine people to work with, and we are looking forward and praying for a great year in this field.

My prayers and kindest regards for the Advocate. Hoping you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year,

Sincerely and fraternally,

R. G. A. CARLISLE.

AN APPRECIATION OF REV. AND MRS. J. F. WALTMAN.

After serving as pastor of the Jonesboro church for the past two years Brother Waltman moved last week to Dubach, to which church he was appointed for the coming year.

Our church has been honored in having Brother Waltman as pastor. The church membership has grown considerably as a result of his labors, and we can truly say that his godly life and fearless preaching have lifted his people to a higher plane of Christian living. In all our great church, there is not a man more consecrated to the Master's service than he.

While with us Mrs. Waltman built up a strong woman's Bible class, and under her teaching the Sunday school lessons were splendidly presented. Being in her class was a privilege.

The people of Dubach are blest in having these dear people for the coming year.

Brother Dring comes to us from Athens, and is already endearing himself to the people by his strong, winning personality. We are sure that he and his splendid family will prove a blessing to Jonesboro.

MRS. FRED CALLAWAY.

AFTER TEN YEARS.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am on my way—after ten years it seems queer to be on the move.

On last Sunday I preached the last time for the people of Houma. The Presbyterian pastor, Rev. J. N. Blackburn, and his congregation came out and worshiped with us. It was a great day. It is hard to say good-bye; in fact, we did not say good-bye, but au revoir, which is easier said, and means "for the time being."

Praying that the year 1928 will be the best in all churches for the advancement of the kingdom,

Fraternally yours,

F. J. McCOY.

FROM CALHOUN CITY, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: Just a few lines from Calhoun City. We arrived here on Nov. 15, and found a hearty welcome, with dinner at the Martin Hotel. The good ladies were arranging things at the parsonage and filling the pantry.

We are delighted with this work and find the people loyal and ready to cooperate with us in any way that will advance the interest of the church.

We are looking forward to the greatest year of our ministry, Wishing you and all the readers of the Advocate a Merry Christmas, I am yours truly,

E. C. DRISKELL, P. C.

FAREWELL TO APPRECIATED PASTOR.

On Monday evening, Dec. 12, the Earnest Workers' Bible class of the Algiers Methodist church gathered at the parsonage for a farewell party to Rev. J. C. Rousseaux and family. Though hearts were sad at parting, goodwill and cheer prevailed throughout the evening. After appropriate gifts were made, games were played, songs were sung, and dainty refreshments served.

The guests expressed themselves in wishing happiness and success for this family in their new field at Morgan City. For four years Rev. J. C. Rousseaux has been pastor of the Algiers Methodist church, and his people are sad at parting with him. What is our loss is the gain of the Morgan City church.

MRS. THOMAS A. RHOADES,
Secretary, the Earnest Workers' Class.

A HOPEFUL BROTHER.

Ef you asked him, day or night,
When the worl' warn't runnin' right,
"Anything that's good in sight?"
This is allus what he'd saye,
"Well, I'm hopin'."

When the winter days waz nigh,
An' the clouds froze in the sky,
Never sot him down to sigh,
But, still singin' on his way,
He'd stop long enough to say:
"Well, I'm hopin'."

Dyin', asked of him that night
(Sperrit waitin' fer its flight),
"Brother, air yer prospec's bright?"
An'—last words they heard him say,
In the ol', sweet, cheerful way:
"Well, I'm hopin'."

That famous traveler, quaint old Marco Polo, has preserved for us the beautiful Old World story of the "Feast of Whiteness" in the following rose-leaf tale:

"This strange country is called Cathay, and the ruler thereof is one Kublai Khan, a mighty warrior, who, by reason of his strong will and trusty sword, has made himself lord of the whole land. His government is both wise and just, and is administered to rich and poor alike, without fear or favor. On the king's birthday the people observe what is called the White Feast. Then are the king and his court assembled in a great room of the palace which is all white, the floor of marble and the walls hung with curtains of white silk. All are in white apparel, and they offer unto the king white gifts, to show that their love and loyalty are without a stain. The rich bring to their lord pearls, carvings of ivory, white chargers, and costly broidered garments. The poor present white pigeons and handfuls of rice. Nor doth the great king regard one gift above another, so long as all be white. And so do they keep the king's birthday."

Surely we cannot let these ancients outstrip us in loyalty and devotion. How do we keep our King's birthday? And where is the White Gift—the gift which has in it no thought of self, the gift which, is solely for love of the King? Our lists abound in love for kindred and friends. Is the King's gift there, over which we may say, perhaps, "Not gold, nor frankincense, nor myrrh—only a little gift, a pigeon, a handful of rice—but it's white, dear Lord, all white?"

ZONE MEETING AT NETTLETON, MISS.

(We wish to express special pleasure in the receipt of this report from the North Mississippi Conference, the first copy from them to reach our desk.)

The fourth zone meeting of zone No. 2, Aberdeen District, of the North Mississippi Conference, convened at Nettleton, Dec. 1, 1927. We were met at our cars by ladies of the hostess society, and were given a very warm welcome, although the weather was freezing cold. After we had thawed ourselves, the meeting was called to order by our faithful chairman, Mrs. Mullins, using hymn No. 2. Brother Shaw, of the local church, read the Scripture lesson from John's gospel, and made helpful remarks on the value of friendship. Prayer was offered by Brother Young, of Shannon.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll was then called, and reports given from Amory, Antioch, Greenbrier, Tranquil, Smithville, and a new society on the Smithville charge. Grady's Chapel, Fulton and Prairie Memorial Societies were not represented. Of the six societies that reported, there were 263 members enrolled, and forty-eight present. There are approximately 170 ladies in these churches who are not members of the Missionary Society.

Mrs. Mullins, in giving her report, thanked the different societies for their co-operation, and expressed herself as having received a blessing from her year's work.

"Work, for the Night is Coming" was sung, after which Mrs. Cowley, of Amory, read a paper, "Paying Investments," showing the results of our efforts as Missionary Societies in building God's kingdom on earth.

Brother and Mrs. Shaw, of Nettleton; Brother and Mrs. Young, of Shannon; Brother Pearson, of Smithville, and Brother Hammontree, our Sunday school worker for Monroe and Ittawamba Counties, were introduced by our District Secretary, Mrs. Price.

We then adjourned for lunch, which was served cafeteria style from a long table in the rear of the church; hot coffee and chocolate made the bountiful spread even more delightful.

The sweet tones of the piano pealing the air of that lovely hymn "Majestic Sweetness Sits Enthroned," called us from a happy social hour back to our afternoon session. After Brother Oakes read I Cor. 13, and Miss Martha Rye led in prayer, Nettleton presented, very effectively, a beautiful pageant, "Harvest Day."

Mrs. Price gave a short talk on the Jubilee celebration which is to be held next year. She urged that each member sign the pledge to pray daily for the celebration.

One of the inspiring features of our meeting was the presence of so many preachers. They were all given an opportunity to make a few remarks. Each one complimented the work being done by the women.

Mrs. Mullins and Mrs. Stone were unanimously re-elected to their respective offices of the zone. With words of appreciation for her untiring services as zone chairman, Mrs. Price presented to Mrs. Mullins a beautiful Bible as a love gift from the rural societies.

Mrs. Baker, of Amory, speaking for the zone, thanked the Nettleton Society for their hospitality, the good lunch, the lovely music and flowers, which had made the day so happy and pleasant.

The Amory Society invited the zone meeting to be held with them some time in February, and we were dismissed with a special prayer for an elderly lady member at Tranquil who was very sick.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated!
Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sunday School Council of the Methodist church is in session at Nashville this week. This Council is composed of all employed persons engaged in religious education—that is, all who desire to become members The Council does a vast deal toward shaping the policies of the church in the matter of making Jesus Christ known to our constituency. It would require much time and space to tell all it does.

From the Mississippi Conference the following are in attendance: Rev. John C. Chambers, Conference Superintendent; Miss Maggie May Jones, Conference Elementary Superintendent; Mr O. C. Hull, Extension Secretary; Rev. C. A. Bowen, chairman of the Conference Sunday School Board. From the North Mississippi Conference: Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Conference Superintendent; Rev. E. G. Mohler, Extension Secretary; Rev. J. H. Holder, chairman, Conference Sunday School Board; Rev. A. T. Clanton, Superintendent Sardis District; Prof. J. E. Stephens, of Millsaps College; Miss Helen Swisher, of Grenada College Miss Martha Du Berry, Director of Religious Education of Tupelo church; Miss Pauline Wynn, Director of the Religious Life of the Methodist girls at M. S. C. W. This is not Miss Wynn's official title, but it describes her work.

This body of men and women composing the Council lays its hands upon the very foundation of the life of the church. Twenty-five years from this time the results of the work will be clearly demonstrated.

As to the workers in the North Mississippi Conference, permit me to say, we are giving all that is in us for the furtherance of the kingdom We crave the privilege of co-operating with you who are officially in charge of the church, and we likewise call upon you to support us in this work—give the support you would like to have were you in the position we occupy.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

This present session of the General Workers' Council is the best in every way we have ever attended. It is going to be a most fruitful meeting in furthering the cause of religious education over the whole church.

The attendance upon this session of the Council is larger than we have ever had, and we are welcoming a large number of new members into our body.

One of the things which has impressed us on this trip to Nashville is Searritt. It was our privilege to go out to the college and meet the Mississippi girls there. It would take entirely too much space to tell all about the new building. It is as beautiful as a building can be, and makes one very happy and glad to look upon it and know that it is ours and for our young people. Dr. Cuninggim deserves a great deal of credit for the development of Scarritt. The student body is a fine, happy-hearted group. Our prayers go out to them, and we trust that each one who reads these lines will pray a blessing upon Scarritt and its student body.

The topics of discussion this year have been very vital indeed. It is still too early to say what the final outcome of the session will be, but it is safe to predict that it will be in advance of anything done up to this present time.

The unity of the group at this meeting is most refreshing in its unity of spirit and purpose.

The "Elementary Teacher," from the first of January on, will be a magazine for every worker with children both in the large and the small schools. The January number is an excellent number and will prove of permanent value to any elementary worker. It is hoped that every Sunday school will furnish its workers with this magazine.

The "Workers' Council" is being greatly improved, and will have a much larger ministry to the Sunday school workers. Every worker should have this magazine.

It is with the hope that each worker in the Mississippi Conference will have a happy, happy Christmas and all good things for a New Year.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The writer is at the General Sunday School Council, with the following members of the Conference Board: Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary; Rev. W. H. Giles, Secretary; Rev. B. C. Taylor, Conference Adolescent Superintendent, and Miss Pauline Wynn, Associate Adolescent Superintendent. Mrs. R. H. Harper, chairman of the Elementary Council of the Louisiana Conference, was in attendance upon the General Elementary Council last week.

* * *

Mr. Taylor and Miss Wynn succeeded in getting full co-operation of the adolescent representatives of the General Board in their plans for the Statewide conference at Alexandria, April 10 and 11 and Older Girls Camp to be held at Lake Arthur, August 1-15. Mr. O. S. Gates has given consent to be present at our conference in April.

* * *

Dr. W. W. Drake, chairman of the Conference Board, was not able to attend the General Council meeting, due to an auto accident en route from the Baton Rouge Conference. He writes that he has sufficiently recovered to be about his work and that Mrs. Drake is showing satisfactory improvement, and that he hopes to be at the Conference Council in Alexandria, Dec. 29, with representatives from the Ruston District.

* * *

At the recent meeting of the Conference Board at Baton Rouge it was decided that the membership of the Conference Council should be composed of the members of the Conference Board, Conference staff, presiding elders, and district staff officers. The conference will open at 10 a. m. and close at 3 p. m. Dinner will be served at the First Methodist Church. Communications from the leadership in each district indicate an interest which will insure a good attendance.

* * *

I am glad to report we will have several of the General Board staff at our State-wide conference in April. We extend a hearty welcome to Dr. J. Callaway Robertson, who represents the Adult Department. Mr. Sensabaugh and Mrs. Court have been invited and will give us definite answers soon. Dr. F. N. Parker, who has had charge of the Bible Hour at this Conference, writes: "As things now look, I doubt if I shall be able to come, on account of the dates at the end of my winter quarter and the opening of the spring quarter."

* * *

The writer has been shown special hospitality by Prof. Tom Carter and Dr. Fitzgerald Parker, both Louisiana men.

OLD CANE RIDGE.

By Hanson Rowan.

To-day I visited a place
That brought back hallowed memories to me;
In fancy there I recalled many a face
That I would love once more to see.

But the angels in heaven called them.
And one by one they went—
Souls that went back to heaven,
For to us they only were lent.

As I stood where old Cane Ridge stood,
The church out in the wildwood,
And thought of church and folks, I shed tears—
That meant so much to me in after years.

In fancy, I saw the massive oaks,
With nails and horseshoes, where
The horses driven by good old folks,
We youngsters would hitch with care.

Beneath the oaks, so big and tall,
Stood a church with whitewashed wall;
Inside were seats that were painted brown;
Outside were tables for "dinner on the ground."

We did not have music such as they have to-day,
But we had men and women that really knew how to pray;
The preacher did not look here and there,
But would say, "Sister Mary Watkins, will you lead us in prayer?"

There was one who meant so much to all—
When in trouble on Sister Ollie Watkins we'd often call;
Among the good members I see her face.
To me no one will ever take her place.

Aunt Katherine Millsaps and Esther Jones, too,
Were to be classed with the selected few
Who were living monuments to right and God,
And now lie buried in the old churchyard.

There were some noble men,
Who knew how to forgive our meanest sin,
Whose characters were taken from the mould
Of gallant gentlemen and knights of old.

Notley Hanson, Willis Watkins, Judge Millsaps,
Were men of sterling worth, we knew,
And many a day will elapse
Before we'll find men like them in the new church pew.

But the old church is torn away,
The massive oaks were cut for wood.
And with faltering footsteps I turned away
From this sacred spot where I stood.

LIGHT ON CHINA.

"What's the Matter in China," by Elmer T. Clark, S. T. D., LL.D., Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

This volume is an attempt to set forth in simple and popular form the facts about the tangled political situation and the civil wars in China. Its purpose is not to make original contributions for students of the subject as much as to enlighten the average reader as to what the present turmoil in the Far East is all about, so as to give him a background for intelligent reading of the magazines and newspapers which feature Chinese affairs from time to time. It is not a mission-book, save as the problem of missions enters into the Chinese situation. The author has had admirable facilities for his work. The Methodist church has a hundred highly trained representatives in various parts of China, and their reports constitute a source of data inaccessible to other writers. The price of this volume has been fixed at 25 cents in order to give it a tremendous circulation.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, the author of "What's the Matter in China," is Assistant Secretary of the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in charge of the production of educational literature. He is also a member of the faculty of Religious Education at George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn. He has for many years been engaged in literary work of an educational, social, and religious nature. During the war, he was European correspondent for the St. Louis Republic and the New York Tribune, and as such covered all the Allied countries and the various armies in the field. Since the war, he has been connected with the Boards of the church in the production of literature. He is the author of a dozen volumes on social, religious and missionary themes.

CRAVING FOR EXCITEMENT MEANS LIFE FAILS TO SATISFY.

To the eagerness for locomotion there is a sad side. The craving for excitement means that life itself has failed to satisfy. We run after what we have not got, and we run away from what we do not like. If we exaggerate the heroism of the airman, it is because there is other heroism that we have ignored. We abandon our vision of the Best, and we find that the second best, the third and fourth best, are but empty substitutes for the soul within us. It is Christ, and only Christ, in whom all things are to be seen in a true proportion. If there be a false value attached to peregrinations by air, by land, by water, it is because, failing adequately to worship him, we have yet to discover the place where we can abide.—Exchange.

To win the Orientals in California to Christ is no easy task, for as soon as an Oriental becomes interested in Christianity the Buddhist forces use every means in their power to win him back to the old religion.

The women of Cuba cling to the Roman Catholic church largely because of its social power, and because they feel that such occasions as baptisms, weddings, etc., cannot be made proper social functions without the aid of the church.

FROM THE FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: It is hardly possible to believe that I have finished a survey of the eighth and last district. Now for a few holidays and Christmas.

Although I did not meet with a few of the Leagues in Baton Rouge District, I reached a large number of them. I am indeed proud of the progress that some of these Leagues are making. A number of them are in rural communities and on circuit charges, but they are trying to be standard Epworth Leagues. I think that we should take our hats off to the Leagues in the little rural churches that are so faithful in spite of their lack of working facilities and trained leadership.

I met with the Epworth Leagues of Kentwood, Amite, Bogalusa, Franklinton, Hammond, Frost, Springfield, Natalbany, Wesley Chapel, Ponchatoula, Baton Rouge, Keener Memorial, Istrouma, Zachary, Clinton, Denham Springs, Live Oak, and Walker. At most of these meetings the pastors were present with us. The District Secretary, Wilda Addison, of Hammond, assisted me just splendidly in my work in this district. When possible she went with me to a number of the meetings, which was, of course, a great help to both of us.

From Nov. 30 to Dec. 5, I attended Conference. Since this was my first time to have the pleasure of being at Conference, I enjoyed it immensely. While at Baton Rouge I was entertained in Mrs. A. G. Cook's home. The Leaguers are all quite familiar with Grace Cook, who was formerly our State treasurer.

On Dec. 3, which was Epworth League anniversary night at Conference, we Epworth Leaguers had charge of the service. With Brother Grambling's assistance we presented the program of Epworth League work, from the Epworth Junior Society on through all the departments, and organizations to the General Conference Board. I'd like to take this opportunity of again thanking those who served on the program for their splendid contributions.

On Dec. 11, we held an afternoon rally at Morgan City and organized a new Union for the Leagues in that section of the New Orleans District. Patterson, Houma and Morgan City Leagues were represented. Officers for the Union were elected. It was decided that the Union would meet on the second Sunday of last month in each quarter. Their next meeting will be in March, and will be held in Houma, at Wesley Chapel. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cayard and Mrs. Robt. Jackson went to Morgan City with me and gave valuable assistance in conducting the program of the evening.

By the time this letter reaches my Leaguers, you will be very busy preparing for Christmas. I want to wish all of our young people the very happiest Christmas and a prosperous New Year. I trust that you are not forgetting the real meaning of Christmas. Oftentimes our thoughts of costly gifts, big dinners, fireworks, and a big time together cause us to forget the One whose birth we love to pay tribute to. We even forget to spell Christmas in the proper way, and in our haste we spell it—"Xmas." Had you ever thought that this way of spelling the beautiful name takes "Christ" out of it and makes him "an unknown quantity?" Surely we do not think of Christ as the unknown quantity. No matter how rushed you are in your Christmas preparations, please don't spell that beautiful name with an "X." Remember him whom the Wise Men brought their gifts to and let him be the unseen guest at your home and in your heart.

As Epworth Leaguers I trust that you are planning to bring cheer to the unfortunate, happiness to those in sorrow, and a helping hand to those in need.

If you are carrying on some definite program during the holidays we would like to know about it. Write us and tell us how you observed Christmas.

The State officers join me in wishing each of you a very Merry Christmas and the best of New Years. As comrades of the Emmaus Way may the year 1928 find you abounding in love and Christian fellowship—one with another.

With every good wish, I am,
Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

News Items.

Remember, Epworth Leaguers, that the first Sunday in January is Quiet-Hour Covenant night. Have you ordered your covenant cards?

On Jan. 8, which is Epworth Era night in Southern Methodism, our campaign for new Era subscriptions will be launched. We want 15,000 new subscribers. Louisiana's quota is 345. The quota for the districts is as follows: Alexandria, 50; Baton Rouge, 54; Lake Charles, 44; Minden, 48; Monroe, 20; New Orleans, 37; Ruston, 38; Shreveport, 54. If the Era is not in your home, it should be. Let's subscribe on Jan. 8!

On Dec. 26-30 the annual Presidents' Conference will convene in Birmingham. Ala. Your Conference Board president, State president, field worker, and Union presidents are all entitled to attend. A number of important issues concerning the program of Epworth League work will be taken up. When the delegates from Louisiana return, we hope to bring to our Leaguers a greater knowledge of Epworth League work.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Greetings, Hi Leaguers: Please let this be a personal message to each of you. I just wish I could slip into every League in our Conference and hear the reports. It seems quite a while since I heard from the different Leagues. I'd be so glad if the secretary of each Hi League would write and tell me about her League. Won't you do this? Just a personal letter to your Superintendent telling her about your own League and its problems.

What about your Standard of Excellence? Are you keeping it right up to date? December is to be our Standard of Exellence month, and by the end of the month we want every star in its place.

I want to serve you in the very best way I can. Nothing makes me happier than to be working with Leaguers; so won't you make me happy by using me?

Let's not become discouraged, but always remember that Jesus is ready to help us. Remember Gal. 6:9.

Yours in his service,
BERTA NALL.
Mississippi Conference Hi League Superintendent.

THE DUTY OF BEING RICH.

It is a duty to be rich. It is a duty to desire power. It is a duty to provide ourselves with treasure bags. But the treasure bags, power, and riches that we are to go after must be of the sort that God approves. Most men want riches of another sort. The Lord Jesus used a strong word in characterizing the man who chose his own riches, calling him, "Thou fool." Our Lord said, "So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." Thus Christ taught that it is a duty to be "rich toward God," and anything else is folly. In the same discourse the Lord said, "Seek ye the kingdom of God," and "provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not" (Luke 12:31, 33). He gave the reason for all this in the words, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." He urged the seeking of real riches, which would be protected by God himself, in the heavens, "where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth." God provides the fire and burglary insurance against any loss there. Christ wants our hearts to be in God's safekeeping, as well as our riches, so he tells us where to deposit our riches. When we have thus become wealthy, we may have Paul's confidence, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him" (II Tim. 1:12).—Sunday School Times.

More than thirty students in the Songdo Higher Common School, Songdo, Korea, were baptized and joined the church during the past year.

efficient leadership of Mrs. E. L. Calhoun, who has served most faithfully as our president for the past two years.

We have made an advance in membership and offering. We are becoming more efficient workers because of our Bible and Mission Study work. The loyalty and co-operation of the officers and members have helped our work to go forward.

For the past months our Society was divided into circles, and as a result of this work the amount of $45 was received as a donation for December.

We want to do better work in 1928.

ZONE MEETING AT SPRINGHILL, LA.

The second meeting of zone No. 1, Minden District, was held in Springhill on Nov. 26, 1927.

The morning session was held at the Methodist church. Our zone leader, Mrs. W. H. Martin, called the meeting to order at 10:30 o'clock.

Roll call showed the following attendance: Alden Bridge, 8; Cotton Valley, 4; Springhill, 10; Plain Dealing, 7.

The following was the order of business:

"Why the Zone Meeting," Mrs. W. H. Martin; Bible lesson, by Mrs. Mullin, Springhill.

Mrs. A. M. Wynne gave the introduction of the mission study, "A Straight Way Toward To-Morrow," and Mrs. Taylor gave the dream of Mrs. Platt, the author, so impressively that we were held spellbound.

Solo, "When I Think of His Love for Me," by Mrs. J. F. Giles.

Collection for rural work, $9.50.

"Seven Reasons Why We Should Belong to the Foreign Missionary Society," Mrs. J. L. Northcutt.

Discussion topic: "Why the Social Service in Our Societies," by Mrs. Moody, Cotton Valley.

Each auxiliary was given a work to report on at next zone meeting: Alden Bridge, to organize Benton; Plain Dealing, to organize Walker's Chapel; Cotton Valley, to organize Bethel; Springhill, to organize Blocker's Chapel.

We were dismissed at the noon hour by Brother Pfost and invited to the home of Mrs. J. F. Giles. Here we felt the good old Southern hospitality. The ladies had prepared a delicious course luncheon, which was beautifully served by the young ladies of Springhill. After luncheon the meeting was called to order by the leader.

First on the program at afternoon session was a song, "I Love Him," by Mrs. Giles and Mrs. D. G. Tyler, the others joining in on the chorus.

Quiz on Standard of Excellence, by Mrs. J. F. Giles. As ex-State secretary for four years, she urged that we send our reports on time.

"Six Reasons Why We Should Organize a Young People's Society," by Mrs. J. B. Turnley.

"Why the Children Should be Organized," by Mrs. Pfost, of Springhill.

Voted: Alden Bridge to have the next zone meeting, the date to be set later.

Song, "Somebody," sung by Mrs. Giles, Miss Clarice Tinniman, and Brother Pfost, accompanied by Mrs. D. G. Tyler.

This brought to a close a very pleasant day for those who had the pleasure of attending. We had a much larger attendance at the afternoon session than at the morning session.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

IN DAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Women Prepared Their Own Medicines

The wise pioneer women learned to gather, in woods and fields, the remedies the Indians used. From the rafters of colonial houses, hung great bunches of dried roots and herbs. From these, in times of sickness, the busy mother brewed simple and powerful remedies.

From roots and herbs, Lydia E. Pinkham, a descendant of these sturdy pioneers, made her Vegetable Compound. The beneficial effects of this dependable medicine are vouched for by hundreds of women.

Mrs. Wm. Kraft of 2838 Vinewood Ave., Detroit, Mich., saw a Pinkham advertisement in the "News" one day and made up her mind that she would give the Compound a trial. At that time she was very weak. "After the first bottle," she writes, "I began to feel better and like a new woman after taking six bottles. I recommend it to others and always keep a bottle in the house."

Mrs. Gust. Green of 401 Lincoln Park Boulevard, Rockford, Illinois, found herself in a condition similar to that of Mrs. Kraft. "I was weak and rundown," she writes, "but the Vegetable Compound has helped me and I feel better now. I recommend it to all women who need more strength."

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ANOTHER YEAR.

With this issue, the Advocate closes another year of its long, honorable, and, let us hope, useful career as a servant of the church. Established in 1850, it has made its weekly visits to thousands of homes throughout Mississippi and Louisiana during the seventy-seven years since then, with perhaps slight interruptions during the Civil War. It is old in service; but not in spirit. It has endured hardships, carried burdens, had its struggles; but it has had many friends, it has experienced the joy of service, and it rejoices today in the feeling that it still has a place in the hearts of those to whom it goes. It thanks God for these friends and prays the richest blessings of Heaven upon them; it craves new friends, with the hope that it may serve them as it has served the old. And as it looks to the future, it says, with Little Tim, "God bless us every one."

THE MISSIONARY INSTITUTES.

As will be seen from announcements of Conference Missionary secretaries and presiding elders, the period of missionary institutes in preparation for the free-will offerings to support our missionary work, is at hand. It is hard to overestimate the value of these gatherings, and we hope that every one who can possibly do so, especially those whose specific duty it is, will attend them. The church is not simply making a gesture toward giving the gospel to the world—it is seriously and earnestly trying to fulfill the Great Commission. These institutes are a very definite part of the effort of the church to do its work. They furnish information, inspiration, and business-like suggestions and instructions for carrying out the program of the church. Just at this time they are the most important thing on the calendar of the year's work.

THE REAL QUESTION.

The real question at issue in connection with the Eighteenth Amendment at present is not whether its enactment was wise, or whether intoxicating liquor is an evil, or whether prohibition is desirable; the real question is whether or not the Government of the United States is able to enforce a law that is an organic part of the Constitution, made such by an overwhelming majority of the legislatures of the States, whose business it is to pass upon constitutional amendments. The prohibition law is the law of the land; can the Government enforce its own laws?

Very closely related to this question is another one as to the attitude of good citizens toward their Government: Is he a good citizen who openly disregards and flouts any law himself and sanctions its violation by others?

Every good citizen has the right to advocate and work for the repeal of laws that he thinks are not right, provided he does it in legitimate ways; but no good citizen will deliberately violate the law simply because it does not suit his personal convenience. Such disregard of law means the development of the spirit of anarchy.

And for a Government to confess its inability to enforce its own laws means that it is losing its power to function. It is high time for good citizens to show their loyalty and for the Government to exercise its authority.

"HOW CAN I USE THAT?"

The following is from the Imperial Type Metal Magazine, a publication of the Imperial Type Metal Company:

"One of the greatest business geniuses of his country has always made a rule of asking himself regarding everything he sees, hears, or reads: 'How can I use that?'

"His factory, which covers several acres, is most efficient, and in it you will find ideas at work which have been gathered from every part of the world. Does this man read a good epigram? He has over a hundred frames scattered through the factory in which fresh epigrams are posted each week. * * * Experience is of no value unless we translate what we read into life itself."

The above incident deals with a big business man in a big business. We imagine the man is a big man because he tries to learn all he can and makes use of what he learns; and his business is a big business, we likewise imagine, because it is constantly strengthened by the infusion of new ideas and new methods.

What is good for the ordinary business by which men make their livelihood is probably good for the business of the church. Men can continue to do the same old things in the same old way year after year, and get results. But we wonder if greater results could not be accomplished if we would keep our eyes and ears open all the time for suggestions, and constantly ask ourselves, "How can I use that?" The really big man is constantly trying to find better ways of doing things.

AN ADDRESS OF THE BISHOPS.

To the Pastors and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren:

The College of Bishops is fully awake to the importance of the general and Conference organs of the church, as media of religious information, adjuncts of our denominational boards and administrational agencies, and as channels of evangelistic teaching and influence. Nor are we less impressed with a sense of the need for the improvement and strengthening of these publications than of a plan for increasing their circulation and widening the field of their influence.

We are committed to the program of good literature. Every interest of the church is dependent on the church paper as a means of publicity. Every local and Conference program of necessity finds first aid in the Conference organ. But the official paper has an even larger use. The secular tendencies of our times have drawn the minds of our people to secular daily and weekly newspapers, which, though they may serve a useful end, can never take the place of the church press. Much other literature which is ephemeral and whose tendencies are hurtful can best be offset by the religious newspaper. The church must be awakened to the evil effects of irresponsible publications lest faith be undermined and public and private moral standards be set at naught. As a church we are compelled to confess that too long we have neglected to give full emphasis to our appointed means of publicity and indoctrination in the authorized church paper. Some of our most needed Conference organs are having a struggle for existence. Except a few that own their own printing plants, none has any support other than the income from subscriptions and advertising. Practically all of them must have the aid of Conference assessments.

After due consideration of this matter, we are persuaded that our people, whose heritage in publishing plants and denominational literature has made them great and strong, should give the early months of 1928 to an effort to increase the circulation of our general and Conference organs as the only means of accomplishing the ends of improvement in the publications themselves and securing the enlargement of their spheres of usefulness. We must not permit a generation to grow up in the church to be ignorant of the piety and intelligence of our fathers. No agency of the church can contribute more directly to this end than the religious newspaper, nor can any agency be more helpful in the creation and exemplification of a living evangelistic zeal and service.

We beseech you, therefore, brethren, help these editors, who in patience and sacrifices are seeking to maintain our Methodist standards and the high ideals of our faith. Let our pastors bring the cause of the general organ and their Conference organs to the attention of their people and thus put them in the way of becoming acquainted with the institutions and administrations of our Methodism.

"THAT HE MAY BE ALL."

By Laura M. White.

How fragrant is the life that's spent
In kindly deeds and loving ways,
Content for God alone to know,
Nor seeking aught of human praise.

In lowly paths, in simple tasks,
With Christ, the Lord, to walk each hour;
A channel cleansed and open kept
Through which may flow the Spirit's power.

No thought of self, for Christ alone
All praise sought and given;
Communing thus with my dear Lord
Would make of earth a heaven.

A SKETCH OF JACKSON METHODISM FIFTY YEARS AGO AND BEFORE.

By Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader of the Mississippi Conference.

No nobler or more heroic group of men have ever lived than those who have adorned the Christian ministry, and none have been more consecrated, self-sacrificing, and effective in labors of love and achievement than the Methodist ministry, nor women more loyal and helpful than their wives. Some have risen to prominence as Christian statesmen, pulpit orators, educational leaders, or pioneer missionaries, but the great body of them project their lives of faith and devoted service into a world of spiritual need to become a leavening agency for future generations. In Paul's words to Timothy, when he says, "the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also," we may get some idea of the relation of the laity to the minisry. Throughout the history of the church there have been noble-hearted men and women of the laity who have appreciated the sacred responsibility of the ministry and the magnitude of its task, and have desired to be faithful in co-operation, even to the extent of teaching others also. Fifty years ago Methodist laymen who felt disposed to do evangelistic work under the call of God usually found a place in the local ranks. Today many thousands of laymen are rendering efficient evangelistic service in co-operation with the ministry under the plan of the church. However, the local preacher still has an important place and may be a vital factor in the ongoing of Christianity.

In 1808, just nine years after the assignment of Tobias Gibson as missionary to the Natchez Country by Bishop Asbury, and his organization of numerous Methodist societies in the southwestern area of Mississippi Territory, and just five years after Lorenzo Dow offered his watch for a lot in the town of Washington, which he deeded to the people for a Methodist church, John Ford moved from South Carolina and settled on Pearl River. It may be said of our locality at that time that, "where you now sit, the Indian hunter wooed his dusky mate and the wild fox dug his hole unscared." Robert Williams was then serving as third Governor of the Mississippi Territory under appointment of President Thomas Jefferson. Four of Mr. Ford's sons became Methodist preachers, and one of them, Thomas Ford, organized the first Methodist society and built the first Methodist church in Jackson.

In 1808 the Methodist Societies of the Mississippi District belonged to the Western Conference, and that year the preachers of this section were compelled to make a tedious trip through "the Wilderness," across the States of Tennessee and Kentucky, and an additional forty-five miles into Ohio, in order to reach the seat of the Conference held at Chillicothe. The Mississippi District, as shown by the appointments of that year, was fully represented by the Natchez, Wilkinson, Claiborne, Opelousas, and Washita circuits, and remained a part of the Western Conference until its session at Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 1, 1811, when it became a part of the newly organized Tennessee Conference. By authority of the General Conference which met in New York City May 1, 1812, the bishops determined to organize the two Territories of Mississippi and Louisiana into an independent Conference, to be called the Mississippi Conference. With a membership of ten preachers, the first session was held at Spring Hill, Jefferson County, Miss., in the private residence of Rev. Newet Vick. The appointments at this Conference were embraced in two districts—the Mississippi District, composed of Claiborne, Natchez, Wilkinson, Amite, Pearl River, Tombigbee, and New Orleans circuits, and the Louisiana District, composed of Rapides, Attakapas, and Washita circuits.

The following year, on Nov. 14, 1813, the second session of the Mississippi Conference was held in the private home of Rev. John Ford, in Marion County. This hospitable home had been a rallying-place for Methodism, and at this time Thomas Ford, whose labors were destined to mean so much to Methodism in Jackson and Hinds County, was about twelve years of age. It was yet three years before Mississippi was created as a State.

Quickly following the Choctaw Cession of 1820, when Pushmataha and his Indian warrors ceded to General Jackson and General Hinds, as representatives of the Government, a large tract of land now embracing more than ten counties, the "New Purchase" was organized into Hinds County. By legislative act of Feb. 12, 1821, the selection of a permanent seat of government centrally located, to be known as Jackson, in honor of General Andrew Jackson, was authorized. The report of the commission was approved and the town of Jackson laid off at Le Fleur Bluff, on the west bank of Pearl River, where a French trading station had been established some time before by Lewis Le Fleur. There was no religious organization of any denomination in the capital until 1836, though there was an occasional sermon by a transient minister. In 1836, at the proposal of Rev. John G. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, Thomas Ford was sent as a missionary to this field, with the undertstanding that he would devote at least two Sabbaths each month to Jackson. The only available place for preaching was a small two-story building known as the State house, located at the northeast corner of Capitol and President Streets. Through the efforts of Mr. Ford a good congregation was secured, a church organized, and since the year 1836 Jackson has been on the regular list of appointments. The membership of this young organization, though small, was composed of zealous Methodists, as evidenced in no small part by their liberality.

The following year they laid plans for building a brick church. By an act of the Legislature, approved May 13, 1836, lot No. 13 North was set aside for religious purposes, and divided into four squares to be sold by the Auditor whenever any denomination paid $500. In 1838 the price was reduced to $50. This is the date of the erection of the first Methodist church in Jackson. The edifice faced south, fronting on Smith Park, and stood on the same corner lot occupied by the second, and also by the third and present church. This first edifice was completed in 1838 during the pastorate of Dr. C. K. Marshall. Reservation was made in the church for slaves, and a noted slave character, "Uncle Jeff," served as janitor and rang the bell most faithfully for half a century. Mr. Ford settled on a farm about ten miles west of Jackson, where he lived until his death, about fifty years ago.

The first important meeting to be held in this church, for which the completion of the building was no doubt hastened, was a convention of the members of the Mississippi Conference in 1839 for the purpose of celebrating the Centenary of Methodism. At this meeting, on Aug. 7, it was decided to honor the Centenary of Methodism by establishing a college as near the center of the Conference as seemed practicable. At the ensuing session of the Annual Conference C. K. Marshall, the second pastor of the Jackson church and an eloquent speaker, was appointed canvassing agent, and a committee appointed to decide upon a suitable location. Within a few months Dr. Marshall reported some donations of land, and scholarship subscriptions amounting to $76,000. It was decided to name the college in honor of the occasion, and in 1841 Centenary College was located at Brandon Springs, in Rankin County, twelve miles east of Jackson. Its early history was closely associated with Jackson Methodism. Three or four brick buildings were erected, the brick having been made at the location, and the outline of the foundations of these buildings may now be partially distinguished. Dr. Thomas C. Thornton was the first president of Centenary College, and in the fall of 1841 the first session opened with sixty boys in attendance. The following year the attendance was one hundred and seventy-five, and a law department, the first in the State, was organized, a medical department being also contemplated. Dr. Thornton resigned in 1844 and was succeeded by the Hon. D. O. Shattuck. The attendance continued to be encouraging, but there was a growing conviction that a mistake had been made in the location. Of the first and only class that was graduated from Centenary College while it was located at Brandon Springs, Mr. Leonard Magruder, of Sharon, was valedictorian, and the father of our Mr. R. K. Jayne was salutatorian. In 1845 a very attractive and advantageous offer came from Jackson, East Feliciana Parish, La., where the College of Louisiana was located. This resulted in the removal of Centenary College to that place in 1845, where the Methodists acquired the old Louisiana College property, and where it had a long and noble history. It was still within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference until 1894, when the Conference boundary was made to conform to the State boundary of the Florida Parishes, and the Mississippi Conference passed a resolution surrendering to the Louisiana Conference all of the rights and interests it had in the college. About a decade later the institution was moved to Shreveport, where it is now rendering a great service to Methodism. Bishop John C. Keener, who manifested an intense devotion to Centenary College, was for many years president of its Board of Trustees, and five prominent members of the Mississippi Conference, each of whom served as pastor of the Jackson church during the period of the first building, became identified with the college either as president or member of the Board. Those serving as president were W. H. Watkins, C. G. Andrews, and W. L. C. Hunnicutt, and as trustees, Charles B. Galloway and W. B. Lewis. Bishop Galloway resigned as a member of the Board when he was elected president of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College. Dr. W. H. N. Magruder, a prominent Methodist layman and educator, was a member of the first faculty of Centenary College, and then served as a trustee the remainder of his long life, thus giving to the college nearly sixty years of continuous service. Dr. A. F. Watkins and Colonel W. L. Nugent were both graduated from Centenary College.

The congregation of the Jackson church grew and prospered until rudely interrupted by the maneuvers and activities of the hostile armies of the Civil War.

The church was used as a hospital and by sewing women and also as a base of hospital supplies for the Confederacy, and for this reason became a special target for the guns of the enemy. One hole made by a cannon ball just above the pulpit was visible to the congregation for many years. All the early records of the church were destroyed. Two names survive of those who first joined the church after its organization: a gentleman and his wife named Finucane, who became very loyal Methodists and whose home was noted for its hospitality.

During the period from 1850 to 1877 many noble souls graced the membership of this church. For the first two decades of this period Thomas Green, Collin S. Tarpley, and Judge W. L. Sharkey were the bone and sinew of the church organization. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Green were both devout souls, loyal to the church and untiring in its work. He was superintendent of the Sunday school for twenty-five years, and Mrs. Green taught a class in the school. The first Sunday school ever organized in Jackson was in the Methodist church, and the mother of Mrs. Charles B. Galloway was a member. For a number of years Mrs. Thomas Green and Mrs. W. J. Brown faithfully did the collecting of the funds for the church for the relief of the poor. Mrs. N. E. Barr, mother of Mr. T. P. Barr, was the only woman in the church at that time who would pray in public, and her prayers were noted for beauty and fervor. She conducted a weekly prayer meeting at her home. Judge W. L. Sharkey, of whom mention has been made in connection with the activities of the congregation, was chief justice of the State High Court from 1832 to 1850, and Bishop Galloway referred to him later as the Chief Justice Marshall of Mississippi jurisprudence. He was made provisional governor of the State after the close of the war, and died in Jackson in 1873. The Sharkey home stood in the center of what is now Poindexter Park, and the estate embraced much of the tract beyond the Park. The widow, Mrs. Minerva Cage Sharkey, continued active in the church, was a teacher in the Sunday school, and it was she who later made possible the building of the second church structure at that time by a gift of some shares of stock that sold for $5,000. Minerva Avenue is named for her. Among others who were outstanding for their activity in the Jackson church fifty years ago should be mentioned: Captain and Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Colonel and Mrs. W. L. Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Van Hook, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Whiting, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Barr, J. Wallace Lester, Mrs. Susan Ledbetter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Manship, Mrs. W. J. Buck, Mrs. Mary Swann, H. H. Hines, Richard Hardy, George Green, Link Brown, W. J. Brown, Jr., Dr. Harrington, and others. About 1875 Mr. Th mas Green resigned as superintendent of the Sunday school at the close of his twenty-fifth year of service in that office, and was succeeded by Col. W. L. Nugent, a distinguished lawyer who had recently moved to Jackson, who served continuously for twenty-five years as superintendent. He was also president of the board of stewards, and in other ways rendered a large service to the church. Mrs. Nugent is still an active and useful member of the congregation. Captain J. P. Stevens was for a time secretary of the Sunday school, and taught a large class, in the membership of which were for some years seven Chinamen. The home of Captain and Mrs. Stevens was always open to Methodist preachers, and they enjoyed taking advantage of its gracious hospitality. Mrs. Stevens was a daughter of Mr. Thomas Green, and though in her eighty-sixth year, is still an active member of the congregation, and to see her tripping along the street, one would take her to be much younger. About 1850, Major Ethelbert Barksdale, the prince of editors, moved to Jackson to take charge of "The Mississippian," and after the war became editor of "The Clarion," the conduct of which brought him great reputation as a journalist. He was a member of the Confederate Congress twice, and fifty years ago was serving as chairman of the Democratic State executive committee. His family were identified with Jackson Methodism, and Major Barksdale joined the church at the last service held in the original Methodist church by Bishop Galloway during his second pastorate in Jackson.

Among the regular members of the choir fifty years ago were: Professor and Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Van Hook, Miss Hattie Van Hook (Mrs. Howard), Miss Molly Green (Mrs. Shelton), Miss Emmie Green (Mrs. Will Stevens), with several others. Mrs. W. L. Nugent sometimes sang in the choir and played the organ in the absence of the regular organist. Professor White, whose wife was the organist, conducted a school for boys in Jackson. Mrs. Will Stevens died only very recently. Mrs. Molly Shelton is a member of the present congregation and still active. Mrs. Howard lives in San Antonio, Tex. Recently, in Galloway Memorial Church, Mrs. Shelton and Mrs. Will Stevens, both of the choir of fifty years ago, delighted the congregation by singing very sweetly together one of the old hymns. Mrs. Van Hook lived to a ripe old age and passed away recently, as did Mr. Jim Brown and Mr. T. P. Barr. Mrs. Hadie Buck and Mrs. Mary Swann did valuable work in the Sunday school, and Mrs. Buck still lives to take active interest in the church. Some families of this congregation have worshiped in all three churches: Galloway, Stevens, Shelton, Buck, Brown, Patton, Nugent, Green, Voigt, Hemingway, Barr, Van Hook, Black, Manship, Lusk, Tapley, Fletcher, Gray, Howell, Swofford, Knight, and others. Fifty years ago there was living near Jackson a local preacher named Vincon, who held many revival meetings and accomplished a vast amount of good. At the same time there was an earnest layman in the congregation named Swofford, a blacksmith, who was familiar with Methodist hymns and fond of singing. Often the two went together, one to do the preaching and the other to lead the singing. After a number of years they were called familiarly Moody and Sankey.

On the board of stewards of this church fifty years ago were: Thomas Green, H. H. Hines, J. P. Stevens, W. L. Nugent, Richard Hardy, T. P. Barr, and W. A. Whiting. Mr. Green was president and Mr. Hines secretary. None of these men are now living, but the widows of three of them are active members of the present congregation: Mrs. Sidney Stevens, Mrs. W. L. Nugent, and Mrs. T. P. Barr. The list of former pastors who have served this church is as follows:

Thomas Ford, 1836-1837; C. K. Marshall, 1837-1838; E. R. Porter, 1838-1839; S. W. Speere, 1839-1840; James McLennon, 1840-1841; Ben A. The Conference of fifty years ago was presided over by Bishop H. N. McTyeire, who came to take the place of Bishop E. N. Marvin, who had died on Nov. 26, just nine days before the Conference was to convene. Bishop McTyeire was a day late in arriving, and Dr. W. H. Watkins was elected to preside over the Conference for the first day. W. B. Hines was closing a quadrennium as presiding elder of the Jackson District. Charles B. Galloway was completing the fourth year of his pastorate of Jackson charge. The membership of the Mississippi Conference at that time was 21,871. Now it is above 72,000.

Fifty years ago the largest church in the Jackson District was Sharon, with a membership of 360; the second largest in the district was Yazoo circuit, with 330; and the third in size was Jackson, with a membership of 225. To-day the membership of Galloway Memorial Church is about 1975, an increase of more than 800 per cent. The report from the Sunday school of this church fifty years ago showed a membership of 282. To-day the Galloway Memorial Sunday school has a membership of nearly 1,700.

In the Conference held in the Jackson church fifty years ago there was an applicant for admission into the Conference by the name of Horace M. DuBose. He was received. When the appointments were read five of them were as follows:

Browssville circuit—W. B. Hines.

First Church, Vicksburg—Charles B. Galloway.

First Church, Jackson—W. H. Watkins.

Chotard circuit—H. M. DuBose.

To-night we rejoice that Bishop Horace M. DuBose is our guest.

I am glad to announce that we are to have with us for each of the Misionary Institutes Bishop U. V. W. Darlington. This alone will be a guarantee of a splendid program, one that no one could afford to miss. Of course it goes without saying that all are invited to attend the Institute in their presiding elder's district, but it is especially urged that all the pastors, Sunday school superintendents, presidents of Epworth Leagues, presidents of Woman's Missionary Societies, Lay Leaders, and "as extra special," that the chairmen of the Missionary Committees, with all the members of the committee, be present. I hope every one will work and pray to make these Institutes the very best we have ever had.

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

Dr. John Paul, president of Taylor University, Upland, Ind., is to spend the first half of January in New Orleans. His address will be St. Charles Hotel. He will devote half time to rest and half time to finishing his volume on "The Life and Times of Bishop William Taylor." Dr. Paul, who is a native of Louisiana, is in his sixth year as president of Taylor University. The value of the school's plant and resources has more than doubled during his administration.

Colonel John T. Axton, Chief of Chaplains of the Army, is being retired from active service on account of physical disabilities incident to the service. In connection with his retirement, the Secretary of War paid high tribute to Colonel Axton for the service he has rendered in promoting the religious welfare of the soldiers. Colonel Axton has accepted a position as chaplain of Rutgers College.

THE CONFERENCE DIRECTORS OF SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND.

St. Louis, Mo., December 14 and 15.

By C. Wesley Webdell.

Upon the call of Dr. Luther E. Todd, Secretary of the Board of Finance, the Conference Directors of Superannuate Endowment met in St. Louis, Mo., on Dec. 14 and 15. The meeting was called for the purpose of deciding upon a plan of campaign that would best reach the whole church in the matter of raising the charges' quota balances.

These directors, one for each Annual Conference, were chosen with much care. The bishops, on the recommendations of the Conference Boards of Finance, made the appointments. These were picked men. They were chosen because of their interest in this cause and their ability to direct such an undertaking. I have not seen a group of men whose keen minds and willing hands impressed me more favorably.

One of the most noteworthy and encouraging things about this meeting was that the attendance was nearly 100 per cent—thirty-seven of the thirty-eight Conference directors being present the first day. This was all the more remarkable, considering that Christmas was so near and that some of the brethren had not yet moved to the charges where they were appointed at the recent Annual Conferences. Such a response at such a time reveals the tremendous interest these men have in the important work committed to their leadership. Their minds have truly gripped the justice of the Forgotten Man's claim, and they are determined that the church shall have a real chance to meet this claim.

Judging from my observation of these directors, in their earnest and faithful consideration of this matter, I predict that the year 1928 will show the finest response for Superannuate Endowment that has yet been given in any year.

The morning session on Dec. 14 was called to order promptly at 9:30, and after devotional services were conducted by Rev. W. L. Clark, of the Kentucky Conference, an organization was perfected with the following officers: Rev. B. M. Blackham, of the Virginia Conference, chairman; and Rev. Robert A. Clark, of the Memphis Conference, secretary.

The roll was called by Conferences, and the following responded:

Virginia, Rev. B. M. Beckham; Kentucky, Rev. W. L. Clark; East Oklahoma, Rev. R. B. Moreland; Louisiana, Rev. L. W. Cain; Western Virginia, Rev. A. E. O'Dell; Memphis, Rev. Robert A. Clark; South Georgia, Rev. Isaac J. Tyson; North Mississippi, Rev. A. T. McIlwain; Alabama, Rev. R. R. Ellison; North Alabama, Rev. Wm. E. Morris; North Texas, Rev. O. T. Cooper; Southwest Missouri, Rev. R. F. Campbell; Northwest, Rev. J. H. Dills; Central Texas, Rev. W. B. Andrews; North Georgia, Rev. Pierce Harris; West Oklahoma, Rev. John R. Abernathy; Northwest Texas, Rev. M. S. Leveridge; North Carolina, Rev. J. M. Daniel; West Texas, Rev. H. E. Draper; St. Louis, Rev. C. W. Tadock; Little Rock, Rev. John C. Glenn; Upper South Carolina, Rev. B. Rhett Turnipseed; South Carolina, Rev. S. O. Cantey; Texas, Rev. J. W. Mills; Western North Carolina, Rev. Carlock Hawk; Baltimore, Rev. H. L. Hout; Mississippi, Rev. J. M. Morse; Tennessee, Rev. T. C. Ragsdale; Illinois, Mr. S. W. Barnes; Arizona, Rev. Julian C. McPheeters; Louisville, Rev. J. G. Akin; Florida, Rev. W. A. Cooper; Holston, Dr. James N. Hillman; North Arkansas, Rev. H. L. Wade; Missouri, Rev. Robt. C. Holliday; Denver, Rev. Franklin R. Poage; Pacific, Rev. S. M. Cheek.

After the roll call, Dr. Todd presented a carefully prepared plan for consideration and adoption as a basis upon which each director could proceed with his work.

For almost a quarter of a century I have been reading and studying plans and programs for drives, campaigns, etc., prepared by boards and various church leaders, but none of them surpassed this in simplicity and adaptability to present conditions in the church. As a proof of the merit of the plan presented, it is enough to state that it was unanimously adopted after a few minor changes were made.

When every Conference has been organized according to this approved plan, and the work directed by men possessed with the spirit of these able leaders, and all of us are working at the job at the same time, results will be achieved that will rejoice the heart of the entire church. Why not? Sister denominations have made a touchdown and kicked a goal on this thing, and what they have done Southern Methodists can do and will do.

At 11 o'clock Dr. Todd conducted the directors to the photographer's studio where a picture of the group was taken. At first I asked myself, "What has this to do with deciding upon a plan for a successful campaign?" Then suddenly the significance of the "picture-taking" dawned on me, namely, "Todd wants the people to see the faces of these directors, while they are also feeling the pull of their spirits." That is good psychology, for all of us work better under any leadership when we are able to visualize the personalities of our leaders.

At noon the directors were escorted to the First National Bank of St. Louis, which is the depository of all money received on quotas for Superannuate Endowment. In the vaults of this great institution, the Board also keeps the securities of the fund. This visit pleased the directors immensely, and it furnished them with first-hand knowledge of the Board's systematic and safe handling of the securities. That visit to the bank will doubtless be the text of many good sermons on this fund. I would like to preach on this text myself.

Next, the directors were conducted to the offices of the Board, in order that they might see how the business is being conducted, how the records are kept, and know from personal observation about the innner working of this splendid organization. They were most favorably impressed,

EVERY-MEMBER CANVASSERS, FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, BATON ROUGE, LA.

The group of workers pictured above, brought to a successful conclusion the every-member canvass at the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge. They began their work at 1:30 o'clock on Sunday, Dec. 11, and at 5:30 o'clock made their first report to the pastor, Rev. Frank L. Wells, D.D., in the Adult Bible class room. The result of the first afternoon's work was a total of $14,000 in signed pledges. During the week they increased the amount to $20,000.

The workers were divided into two divisions, under the leadership of two colonels, and under each colonel were six teams, each under leadership of a captain.

They took for their slogan: "Love and Loyalty Will Lift the Load." In making the canvass they used the following "Step-up Plan:"

For Every Member.

A Voice says—

"Sit down, my friend, and give a few minutes to the thought of your church."

"Your church means to you
Hallowed memories of childhood days
A Christian home
Training in Sunday school and church
Christian citizenship
The winning of souls
Religious education for self and children
A place to worship God
Fellowship with Christian People."

"Sit down, my friend, and give thought to your church."

"What can you do for your church in return for the blessings you have received? There are several things.

Here is one:

You Can Join in the Step-Up Pan.

The Step-up Plan is simply this—every member raise his present pledge a little. We could then cover our budget every week and pay all our expenses every week—if each of us would step up one step.

Here are some Step-Up suggestions: Those giving 5c a Sunday step up to 10c; those giving 25c step to 35c; those giving 50c a week step up to 65c or 75c; those giving $1 step up to $1.15 or $1.25; those giving $1.50 to $1.75, etc.

Now ask yourself this question, "Can I not raise my pledge one step?"

One step up will not be hard for any of us, but it will count a great deal if we all do it.

Without funds enough to cover the budget our beloved church could not do its work. The budget covers current expenses and benevolences, and is necessary to keep our doors of service open.

Ours is a great democratic church. No assessments are made on any one. You decide your own pledge. Decide to step up. The church counts on you.

We must. We will. Each one raise last year's pledge One Step Up.

"Love anl loyalty will lift the load."

Together with God we can do this thing.

Think it over—do your best.

and did not hesitate to express their satisfaction in terms of grateful appreciation. Some of their remarks overheard by me may be of interest, as follows:

Dr. O. T. Cooper, presiding elder of the Dallas District, North Texas Conference, said: "The business system employed in the Special Effort Department is thorough, modern and efficient. The last detail is adequately provided for, and with painstaking care and accuracy. The church is to be congratulated upon the well-kept records and safe business methods used."

Rev. R. F. Campbell, of the Southwest Missouri Conference, remarked: "The Special Effort Department has the most complete and wonderful account system I have ever seen. I believe this Board, with its small office force, is doing a larger volume of business at less expense than any business institution I know."

Rev. B. M. Beckham, of the Virginia Conference, said: "To-day I have had the opportunity to inspect very thoroughly the offices of the Board of Finance, the methods by which the work is done, the depository of the Board, the vaults in which the securities and other important papers are kept. I am deeply impressed with the manifestation of caution, economy, prudence and business-like methods used. There are 19,000 accounts of our churches, kept in such a manner that a full report of the smallest church can be made at a moment's notice. I discovered that every employee is under bond, which is another evidence of good business judgment. Every detail of the office management is of such character as to inspire the utmost confidence."

Dr. J. W. Mills, presiding elder of the Houston District, Texas Conference, made the following comment: "The accounting system is organized and managed in a manner to inspire confidence. Every penny collected, invested or expended, has its full story told. Each claimant is known and remembered. The efficiency of this office compels admiration and praise. This trip of inspection was a revelation to all of us."

During all this round of inspection, the morning meeting was still in session. At this time, 1 o'clock, adjournment was taken for lunch. It was suggested that so far as practical the directors lunch in groups, as effected by Conference Organs, so that matters pertaining to the respective groups might be discussed.

The afternoon session was called to order at 3 o'clock, and there was a general discussion of the plan proposed by Dr. Todd. A few minor changes were made and then the plan was unanimously adopted as a whole.

At the afternoon session the following resolution was offered and adopted:

"Whereas, it is reported that the General Epworth League Board intends to have every Epworth League Chapter, if possible, put on a pageant during the month of March, 1928, in behalf of the Clean-Up Campaign to raise the Charges' Superannuate Endowment quota balances; therefore,

"Resolved, That we as Conference Directors of Superannuate Endowment, express our appreciation of this action and offer our services as directors in aiding the General Epworth League Board in accomplishing this objective."

At 5:30 o'clock a motion was made to adjourn, to meet again at 6 o'clock for a fellowship dinner served to the group.

Following the dinner, Dr. Beckham, the chairman, made an appropriate talk and then opened the meeting for general remarks. Directors from all over our connection rose in their places and spoke with enthusiasm concerning the helpfulness of the conference. Every word uttered was one of purpose and determination to carry on.

Not a minor key was sounded during the sessions. All the discussions and speeches were optimistic. It was one conference where old General Pessimism was "persona non grata."

Just before the final adjournment of the night session the following commendatory resolution was offered, signed by Rev. W. A. Cooper and Rev. Robt. A. Clark, and it was unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

"Resolved, That we hereby express our high appreciation of the faithful and efficient services of Rev. Luther E. Todd, Secretary of the Board of Finance, for his painstaking and diligent efforts in working out the details of the plan for the Clean-Up Campaign for Superannuate Endowment."

The benediction was then pronounced and this prophetic conference became history. The concluding chapter of this story will be written in deeds.

Thursday, Dec. 15, was set apart by the Secretary of the Board for personal conferences with any of the directors who desired further information on the plan for the campaign. About twenty-five of the directors took advantage of this opportunity, and the day was spent in profitable conversations on the subject.

So it happens that the Conference Directors of Superannuate Endowment have been duly appointed; they have met two days in earnest council and decided upon ways and means to proceed with the work; and they have returned to their homes full of enthusiasm and determination to do everything in their power for the success of the movement.

In due time the directors themselves will place in the hands of the pastors a folder giving the approved plan of the Clean-Up Campaign in detail. When the pastors receive this folder, I am sure they will agree that the plan adopted is not only remarkable for its simplicity but potent enough to do the work for which it was designed.

CONCERNING THE CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Will you permit me to say a few words concerning the Conference collections? I heard a leading layman say that if a preacher did not bring up the Conference collections in full it was a proof that he was lazy. I also heard a leading preacher say if a preacher did not bring up the Conference collections in full it was because he did not try.

A study of the statistics for the past three years, 1924, 1925, and 1926, will reveal this fact: Out of the 123 pastoral charges that reported a shortage on Conference collections in 1926, only four out of the number reported in full in 1924, and only two in 1925. And out of the thirty-nine pastoral charges that reported in full in 1926, thirty-three reported in full in 1924, and thirty-five in 1926; and thirty-one of the thirty-nine have changed pastors in the past three years. And of course equally as large per cent of the charges that reported behind have changed pastors if not larger. So the real cause must be in the charges. I think we should put the emphasis where it belongs.

I asked the layman who said the preacher who did not bring a full report was lazy, what he was basing his judgment on; he said he had traced some men through the minutes, and they had never brought up a full report. Now, as I was in this class, and have been preaching twenty years and have never brought up a full report, "as yet," I plead guilty to the charge of "being lazy" and "did not try." But in these twenty years I have never been assigned to a work that had paid the claims in full the previous year, nor, as far as I was able to find out, had ever paid the claims in full. And every charge that I have served in the last twenty years in the Louisiana Conference (and I have served quite a number), reported behind in 1926, without a single exception. See? I pride myself on one thing: In these twenty years I have never failed to report more on the claims than my predecessor, though small sometimes.

Now, just to show, I will give my record for the past three years also: The charge I was assigned to in 1924 had not reported anything; I reported $180. In 1925 the charge reported $25; I reported $121. In 1926, the charge reported $50; I reported $205 in 1927, and this charge reported only $130 the last three years. I have been returned to this work. I am going to do my best and try to report everything in full this year.

There may be some silght mistakes in the above figures, as the district has been changed in the three years above mentioned.

Somehow, I feel it is an injustice to us preachers who have to fill these places. I feel our preachers are a faithful, loyal bunch of men. Of course, excusing myself.

A LOUISIANA ITINERANT.

"A GREAT HOME. . . ."

Referring to the generous words of Brother Felts, I was at my daughter's home in Greenwood when Pastor Felts and Presiding Elder Wasson called twice, finding me absent both times. Appreciating their brotherly spirit I used a photo of Cedar Canyon, and meant to write, "Friendship more precious than any house"—regret that I wrote "home;" the distinction is worth emphasizing. My hat is off to Brother McCafferty and to many others.

BISHOP DARLINGTON AT BAY SPRINGS.

On Jan. 8, 1928, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington is to dedicate the beautiful little church that is situated in the little "city set on a hill," Bay Springs, Miss.

This is to say to all former presiding elders, the present one, and all former pastors, that you have a cordial invitation to be present. As many other pastors as can do so, you, too, will have a hearty welcome. Pray for us, and come along and be with us.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Aberdeen District Methodist Ministers' Association met at Okolona Thursday, Dec. 15. Rev. S. M. Butts, who has been appointed by the program committee to preach the 11 o'clock sermon, not being present, Rev. W. M. Young gave a very forceful message on "The Doctrines of the Church," which was full of information and inspiration. Long may he live and preach.

The visiting ministers were entertained at luncheon in the homes of the members of the Okolona church.

The business meeting was called by the president, Rev. J. J. Baird, at 2 p. m. Rev. W. C. Beasley led in prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The program was read, followed by the election of officers for the ensuing year, who are as follows: J. J. Baird, president; E. M. Shaw, vice president; R. T. Hollingsworth, secretary and treasurer. Motion was carried to the effect that in the future both laymen and lay women be invited to attend the business meetings of our Association as well as the devotional meetings.

At this time the presence of our new presiding elder, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, was noted, and he, upon invitation, addressed the Association. Following this Mrs. Broyles was introduced. Prayer was offered for Rev. J. A. Biffle, who was very seriously ill in the Tupelo Hospital.

A resolution was adopted, thanking Rev. F. M. McGee and his good people for the splendid entertainment.

The next meeing of the Association will be held at Verona.

THE LEGAL EXECUTION OF WOMAN.

By Rev. J. T. Weems.

When each of two of the greatest nations in the World War executed a woman (we heard a great deal about one of the executions, very little about the other), the thought of these executions sent a chill of horror through my soul. These women had dared to violate some rules which were displeasing to the military powers and were killed. Another sad fact of these executions was the fact that the leaders of these nations were men who were products of the greatest institutions of learning in Europe.

Time passed on. A woman and a mother was put under the death penalty in England. Be it said to the credit of the women of England that they rebelled. They tried to save her from death, but the Home Secretary of the British Government, in whose hands were the powers of grace and mercy, refused. The woman went to her death.

To-day in America several women, mothers all of them, stand in the shadow of legal execution. I do not know how others feel about it, but it tears my soul with deepest anguish and horror to think of it. Furthermore, I regard their execution as a cruel heartlessness that is not necessary. Personally, I will not be a party to it in my own heart, but I will cry against it with all there is in me.

It is high time that all thoughtful men and women look closely into this matter of capital punishment in all its phases. The world has not yet found out all truth in the moral realm, it has not yet exhausted or measured up to the vision of God and man as revealed in Jesus. Any person who has closed his personality to a conception of a gentler and nobler humanity closes his life to an incarnation of God. "Not my will, but thine, be done," must become the foundation of all moral progression of man.

Capital punishment is one of the left-overs of the past which have come down to us. Man came into dawn of history with this weapon in his hand and the passion to use it in his heart. The common man values capital punishment as a means of justice. I have talked to them, I know their minds on this subject. But alas! a closer study reveals the fact that it is not an agency for justice in crimes already committed, but rather of vengeance. It is possible that it is an agency of justice in the prevention of crimes, but it cannot be an agency of justice in the punishment of crime. Let us take an instance. My brother kills your brother. Justice, you say, demands his life. His life is given. What is the result? The curse of suffering is increased and more hearts are made sad. The illegally killed man is not brought back, but a feeling of vindictiveness and a desire for vengeance is satisfied in some degree in the hearts of those who lost a loved one. And this, men call justice. On the other side there is a mental agony, both on the part of the condemned man and his loved ones, which makes life a torture. No, the word justice here is a joke, a burlesque. Vengeance has paraded long enough in the garb of justice. Let us be candid enough to admit the truth here. It took me thirty-seven years to see it, but I see now. We can wreak vengeance by taking a life for a life, but not create justice. It is the eye for an eye and the tooth for a tooth of the days of old, dressed up in pious garments in this day and time.

Capital punishment has but one moral leg on which to stand; she has but one plea to make to organized society for her existence. That plea is this: the killing of the offender will prevent other people from doig the same thing. The offender must be made a vicarious sufferer in the behalf of the innocent who would be killed if the lawbreakers were not killed. I see some ground for this contention, but the ultimate and final foundations of the moral universe are mercy and love. Mercy and love are God's attitude toward you and me. Can this not be carried over in our relationship the one to the other? Do we execute and kill in love and mercy? No, we shut our hearts to mercy and love, for if they were there, there would be no refusal to exercise mercy. I know of nothing so heartless, so cruel, so far removed from love as society hunting down her criminals and then denying them the life which they crave. A life demanded is the result of the condition of heart. No man can say that it was love that has stained the pages of history with the killing of the helpless. No, it was not love, but passionate hate.

Then again, think of the refined torture of the legally condemned to death. "How cruel," society cries out to the murderer, and proceeds to become just as cruel, if not more so, by taking his life. Take the case of the mothers who are condemned to death. What a heart-breaking problem for society! To me, the tragedy in this lies in the fact that society is not heart-broken over such heartlessness. We are not showing the depths of soul-agony which we should feel if we were as deep-souled as we should be. Oh God, what a picture! The homes of these little ones wrecked by the loveless lives of their mothers, our erring sisters who have gone astray. And now a loveless society is preparing to pay them off in their own coin, by showing no love, no mercy. And when it is done and these motherless young ones look into the face of one dead parent, by society's decree must soon look into the dead face of the other, and some will call this justice.

You mothers, you women, let your voices be heard. Teach men that their greatest development is in becoming God-like. Mercy and love are the most stable foundations upon which society can rest. Throw a cordon of love around these who are now under sentence of death. Our Governors have the power of mercy. Demand life imprisonment instead of death. Write the Governors of those States where the courts have decreed that men and women shall die a cruel death. Write Governor Smith, of New York. In his State criminals are waiting to be led to the death chair, among them a mother. The time is short. "Sentiment," cry some. Well, my brother, trace the history of love and sentiment through history and you will see it has been and is God's best angel to man.

"OLD LANDS—EVER NEW."

By Rev. Arthur Madison Shaw.

Have you read Dean R. E. Smith's book, "Old Lands—Ever New"? If not, you have one rare treat "coming to you." I bought it because I knew Dr. Smith to be one of the most discerning Bible students, and one of the most virile Bible scholars in this country. Also, because I had found him a keen and appreciative observer—just the kind of a man to make the most of a Mediterranean cruise and a tour of ancient lands. I anticipated good reading.

Well, the book surpassed my highest expectations. I am not attempting to review it. In fact, while I read it closely, the reading has been too hurried to enable me to do it justice. I can only direct attention to two or three outstanding features, which make it the best book of its kind that it has been my privilege to read.

First, the author saw the lands visited; saw them in bulk—so to speak—and in detail. It is not old stories newly told; but a new story of an old world. There is no flat and dry "description," nor platitudinous moralizing; but—he just allows you to see with his clear vision the scenes of perennial interest and irresistible charm, in lands whence our noblest ideals and holiest revelations have come. With him you actually visit Athens, Joppa, Nazareth, Damascus, Jerusalem, Bethlehem—and the cities and fields of Egypt.

Second, all this panorama is seen through the medium of poetic interpretation, and against a historic background that sets the dead past pulsing with life. Standing on a hill in Galilee, in the vale of Jericho, or "on Jordan's stormy banks," the author's sweep of vision will take in a dozen historic places, and his richly stored mind will summon out of the shadowy past titanic men, whose connection with the particular place the reader had long since forgotten. How those old worthies come trooping before the eye of the mind! And the author gives just enough play to the imagination to recreate old scenes, and make old personalities live and speak.

Third, all is so simply said and so plainly delineated as to make it a book that, at once, charms the ordinary reader, and reveals the true scholar. The high school girl or boy can read it, understand it, and enjoy it. The working man, the business man, and the housewife, will be instructed, entertained, and spiritually edified by it; and the scholar will go back to it again and again, for both light and inspiration.

Yes, I read it rather hurriedly; and then the pre-Conference rush came on, and I had not time to write or speak of it—not even to write Dean Smith how wonderfully it entertained and inspired me. But, I laid it down to be taken up again soon—and thenceforward, many times. For it is not just another of the innumerable frothy books of travel; but a real and invaluable contribution to the literature of the "Old Lands" that are "Ever New."

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS—AN ACROSTIC.

No epoch happening on the earth,
Enhances as the Savior's birth,
Worshipful and worthy is our King!

Oblations from our hearts we bring.
Round his footstool sing his praise,
Laity and clergy, their voices raise.
Ether wave on Eolian harps play,
And joy fills our nights and days.
No grander theme for tongue or pen,
Supreme in a world that ne'er shall end.

Christmas greetings! helpful friend,
Hearty wishes to you I send.
Remembering what a blessing you are,
In various homes you shine as a star.
Sending your gleams of light and truth,
To comfort the aged, and to guide the youth;
In three Conferences you are revered and blest,
And stand as a peer among the best;
Newspapers, magazines and books,

And are read with pleasure round our ingle nooks,
Deep in our hearts your impress stays,
Valuable friend of our neediest days.
O, may you live a long time yet,
Carrying the discourse of Olivet,
And may thousands in years to come,
Through your influence be gathered home!
Each year we live, we clearer see,

God's leaven working to make men free;
Remember this my valuable friend—
Eternal joy you will surely win.
"Enter in ye faithful," the Savior said,
"The joy of thy Lord," the feast is spread;
In amazing numbers you'll gather your sheaves,
No sad regrets, no withered leaves.
God bless you now and forever, and aye.
Sincerely your friend, Mrs. A. F. Calloway.

Oxford, Miss., Christmas, 1927.

"You remember that watch I lost five years ago?" said Twitter.

"Yes," said his friend.

"You remember how I looked high and low for it? Well, yesterday, I put on a vest I had not worn for years, and what do you think I found in the pocket?"

"Your watch—splendid!"

"No. I found the hole it must have dropped through."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

A CHRISTMAS GOOSE.

It was Tuesday afternoon, just a week before Christmas, and Jack and Teddy and Joe were down on the bank of the mill stream catching drift-stuff for firewood to surprise mother.

"Get a good pile of it," Deacon Porter sang out to them, "and then I'll take my team and haul it home for you!"

So the three little fellows worked away with all their might and main until it was almost night.

"We might as well go home now and come again tomorrow," said Joe. "I'm hungry's forty bears, and oh, Jack, what's that in that little cove there? See! he's dove now. There! there he is again!"

It was a great, gray-backed bird with a flat bill. In an instant Jack was all excitement. His cheeks burned red, and his eyes were bright as stars.

"It's a wild goose!" he cried. "Oh, boys, if we can only catch 'im! He's just what we want for Christmas! Head 'im off, Joe! The water ain't deep! We can catch him!"

Oh, dear, what a time! Into the water they all three went, floundering and splashing about like so many porpoises.

"There—there he rises. No, he's dove again!"

"There he is, there he is! Look out, Joe; don't let him get by you."

"Teddy, Teddy, grab him! Oh, see that now!"

"He'll get away! Ja-ack, I say!"

"I've—I've got 'im!" cried Jack triumphantly.

And sure enough he had—fast by the legs—poor, frightened goose! Jack carried his prize out of the water, holding it tight in his arms, and home they all went to mother, to tell the story over and over.

"I b'lieve," said Teddy, earnestly, "I b'lieve God put that goose there a-purpose for our Christmas dinner, 'cause he knew we wouldn't have any."

"Pooh, n-nonsense!" said Jack. "What a boy you are, Teddy!"

"Less why didn't he fly away then?" persisted Teddy. "Gooses can fly."

Sure enough! But the reason was pretty soon found out.

"His wing's hurt," said Jack. "Somebody's shot him and hurt his wing. That's why he didn't fly!"

"Poor thing!" said mother, pityingly. "Suppose we try to cure it."

So she got some warm water and soft cloth and bandaged up the hurt wing as well as she could; and the boys made a pen, with water and a box of straw in it.

"We'll keep him there till the day before Christmas," said Jack, "and get him good and fat. I just hope his wing'll get well."

It did get better very fast. In a day or two they had to hitch the big gray fellow to keep him from flying over the pen and away. He began to grow tame, and he ate "like a pig," Jack said.

"He'll make a nice dinner," said he. But Joe and Teddy said never a word. Somehow, they didn't like to talk about Christmas dinner. Mother smiled to herself when she saw the way the wind was blowing. I think she didn't feel very sorry.

"Jack," she said after breakfast, when the day before Christmas had come, "if you're going to—"

Jack knew what she meant. He went out slowly, with a very sober face. Joe had gone on an errand. Teddy, drawing pictures on his slate, by the window, didn't look up. He didn't even when the door flew open a minute after, and Jack burst in again, but his cheeks were rosy-red.

"Oh, mother!" Jack cried, "he's gone! And I'm so glad! I couldn't have killed him, mother. If he'd always been a tame goose, maybe I could; but I couldn't kill him—poor, wild thing! It would seem just like stealing something. I'm glad he's got away, mother."

Teddy looked up then, beaming like a star.

"That's for 'cause we let him go, Joe and me did," he said. "We'd rather have 'tatoes, Joe and me would, so we let him go."

"Oh, Teddy." cried Jack, with a laugh.

"Dear Teddy," whispered mother, with a kiss.

So their Christmas dinner had flown away, and not one of them felt a mite sorry. They wouldn't have had time to feel sorry long anyway; for pretty soon came a rap at the door. Mother opened it.

"Here's a nice fat goose for your dinner to-morrow," said Deacon Porter, "and a squash, and a turnip or two, I guess. Oh, yes, and this little kettle full o' cranberries. We've got more'n we need up t' the house, and it'll be quite a favor if you can use 'em. Morning to you."

And off the big wagon rumbled again.

How pleased they all were. "Oh, mother," cried Jack, "how did he know about our goose?"

"Oh, I don't know!" said mother, wisely. "It is Christmas time you see, and that is when all kinds of good things happen."—Woman's Home Companion.

WHAT THE CHILDREN LEARNED.

"I don't want to wear my rubbers!" Ethel grumbled.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The duck puts its little red rubbers on when it walks in the soft, cold mud."

"I don't want to practice my music!" complained May.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The locust has worked hard at the scales ever since it was old enough to know how. Now it can sing from low z to high z and back again without uneven notes."

"I don't want to stop to wash my hands," said Ned.

"Why-ee," said grandpa. "The ant stops and cleans up whenever it gets soiled. Its feet are covered with hairs that make them a good brush, and it lets not a bit of dust stay on its body."

"I don't want to help in the garden!" and Ray pouted.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The worm helps Tom every day, for as it crawls along it turns the bit of dirt over and over with the queer little hooks on its body, and that keeps the ground nice and soft."

"I don't want to fill the wood-box full of wood," declared Ted.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The bumblebee goes steadily from one blossom to another, and never stops until its honey bags are quite full of honey."

"I don't want to take this note to the village," said Jack.

"Why-ee!" said grandpa. "The pigeon carries messages for a long, long way; they are tied beneath its strong wings."

And what do you suppose those little children did?

They sat right down by the lilac bush and promised each other that they would not grumble any more; they were so much ashamed to find that the duck and the locust, the ant and the worm, the bumblebee and the pigeon were all better natured than they.—Gertrude W. Fielder, in the Youth's Companion.

A GRANDPA FROM THE HILLS OF ARKANSAS.

By Dr. R. S. Satterfield.

He might be described as a "typical native." But I do not choose to so classify this man, lest I should offend a group of Americans I highly esteem. He belonged to that older citizenry of the Ozarks—unsophisticated but honest, generous, patriotic, religious.

This Grandpa of the hills had been to Hot Springs "trying to get rid of rheumatiz." In that he failed. His stiff and drawn limbs made it difficult for him to wend his way out of the spacious, convenient, and truly beautiful Missouri Pacific Railway station at Little Rock, Ark., and down the long flight of steps to board the Fort Smith train. His luggage, carried in a gunny sack over the left shoulder and resting on his bent back, was a further encumbrance.

This full-bearded, patriarchal old man was plainly embarrassed and afraid. It would be futile in this limited space to start in to describe the crowd with which he moved toward the gate when the train was called. Suffice it to say that it was late December and, with other home-goers, there were scores of college boys and girls. To many in the crowd, he was only a "funny old man." Others smiled sympathetically, but it was left for a Missouri Pacific trainman to be the Good Samaritan.

I, carrying heavy grips, was the only one behind the old man when he reached the gate. "Take your time, sir," said the gateman as he took the bag from the stooped shoulders and bent back that were entitled to relief after eighty-odd years of burden carrying. The old man leaned heavily upon his strong cane and held tremblingly with the left hand to the railing as he slowly descended the stairs to the waiting train. The kindly words of the gateman at his side fell upon dead ears, for this grandpa of the hills was afflicted with deafness and dim eyesight as well as with "rheumatiz."

The flagman took the bag at the foot of the stairway and, assisted by the conductor, helped the old man on the train. . . .

Several hours passed. The usual connection and boisterous greetings had taken place when a group of college young people disembarked at an Arkansas town. A "motley dozen" took their places and the train pulled out. Again we were running at full speed, when suddenly the brakes were applied and the train quickly brought to a standstill, reversed and backed about two miles to the station. For what?

Our grandpa from the hills had curled upon a back seat, resting his weary head on his bag of personal belongings. He was fast asleep. His tangled, bushy hair and long white whiskers, stained with tobacco juice and matted for lack of care, matched quite well the tattered gray hat and gunny sack. The fact that this town was his destination had been overlooked. . . .

As they assisted this grandpa from the hills off the train and into the waiting-room of the station, the conductor and flagman could not have been more gentle or kinder had he been their own father, visiting them for the first time in many years, at this Christmas season.

A few passengers complained of delay; but in our hearts most of us joined heartily in the statement made by a woman passenger: "That is what I call service. The richest or most noted man in all the land would receive no more consideration and painstaking service at the hands of these railroad men than they have given this poor, ignorant old countryman from the hills."

The Siberia-Korean Mission, established in 1920 by the late Bishop Lambuth, shows after seven years of missionary effort 1,564 full members, 3,793 adherents, 292 probationers, three daily Bible schools with 290 pupils enrolled.

If one enters unexpectedly during the evening into the homes of the members of the Flemish Methodist church in Antwerp, Belgium, he will usually find the family grouped around the table reading or listening to the reading of the Bible. They are all former Catholics.

Editorial

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Advocate is sincerely grateful to the many friends throughout its patronizing territory who so kindly sent Christmas greetings and good wishes for the New Year. They were every one read with deep appreciation.

"I'd be lost without the Advocate, as I've read it ever since I learned to read," writes Mrs. Mamie B. Abney, of Pioneer, La.

The Epworth League of Batesville, Miss., through its "Goodfellow Fund," is doing the beautiful thing of sending the Advocate for a year to two widows of preachers.

Rev. S. N. Young and family have been cordially received on the Saucier charge, Mississippi Conference, and they find an encouraging outlook for the year.

Dr. U. G. Foote, at one time pastor of Rayne Memorial, this city, for four years, is visiting his sons in New Orleans. He preached at Rayne Memorial on Sunday, Dec. 18. He is now a member of the Kentucky Conference.

Mrs. C. T. Partee, of Silver City, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate. says: "My father, Dr. H. H. Hill, was one of the first subscribers to the Advocate when the paper was organized."

A choir of the Y. W. C. A. of Whitworth College made a tour of the campus just before the Christmas holidays, singing Christmas carols just outside the dormitories. This is one of the beautiful customs that have grown up at Whitworth.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District; Dr. N. E. Joyner, Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, and Dr. Briscoe Carter, pastor at Ponchatoula, La., were appreciated callers at the Advocate office recently.

Dr. W. H. Park, for forty-five years a medical missionary in China, died at his home in Hawthorne, Fla., on Dec. 4, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. His wife was a sister of Bishop W. R. Lambuth.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Mississippi Conference Lay Leader, has been attending the meetings of the district stewards in the interest of the work among the laity. The outlook for the program of lay activities is encouraging.

Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Galloway had as their guests at a 5 o'clock dinner on Thursday, Dec. 15, Bishop W. A. Candler and Revs. W. H. Lewis, L. E. Alford, W. B. Jones, and H. G. Hawkins, at their home in Crystal Springs, Miss. These brethren were at Crystal Springs for the dedication of the church.

The editor regrets not being in the office on Saturday of last week when Rev. R. L. Clayton called. Brother Clayton did a fine work on the Denham Springs charge last year, and was appointed to the Patterson and Jeanerette charge this year.

Brother W. B. Cook, Crystal Springs, Miss., R. F. D., has been a reader of the Advocate for sixty-four years. He has missed only two quarterly conferences in forty-five years, and is still an active official member of the church. Blessings upon him!

On Sunday evening, Dec. 18, a special Christmas musical program was given at the First Methodist Church, Corinth, Miss., consisting of appropriate musical selections and readings. Mrs. W. L. Stroup is the organist, and Mrs. Garnett Lanning is director of the choir. Rev. A. T. McIlwain is the pastor of this fine church.

Miss Ruth Evans, youngest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Evans, of this city, was married to Mr. B. F. Stevens on Christmas Eve. The ceremony was performed at Rayne Memorial Church, Dr. J. B. Mitchell officiating. The father of the bride was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, now a useful local preacher in New Orleans. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy couple.

The editor of the Advocate greatly enjoyed recently visits from Dr. A. W. Plyler, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate; Dr. E. V. Cole, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate; Dr. Carlton D. Harris, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, and Dr. B. V. Switzer, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Roanoke, Va. All these brethren were en route to or returning from the Missinoary Council.

Rev. H. W. May, who was granted the superannuate relation at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, writes: "Please announce that my present plan is to spend the winter at the home of my daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hawsey, Sunny Side Plantation, Ethel, La., post office. I will be pleased to aid any brother at any time or place where such aid as I can give may be needed, without money or price."

Rev. J. C. Wasson, Route 7, Lexington, Miss., writes: "At the recent Missionary Council, held in Jackson, Bishop Candler changed my appointment from the Drew circuit to the Acona circuit. The people of Drew circuit are a fine people—it was a great delight to me to be their pastor. The people of the Acona circuit are a fine peope—I am delighted to be here. Christian fellowship is always good. I have never found any other fellowship like it."

By a mental lapse, we stated last week, in our write-up of the meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association, that Dr. Carlton D. Harris, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, was elected vice president of the organization. We should have said that Dr. J. M. Rowland, of the Richmond Christian Advocate, was elected vice president. Making such mistakes ourselves, we are inclined to be somewhat lenient with other mistakes we run across from time to time.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINDINGS, MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

1. At the very outset of this report your committee believes that we should recognize the hand of Almighty God in the success that has attended the efforts of our church to retire a great debt, and at the same time to maintain its work on an efficient basis both at home and abroad. Notwithstanding droughts in some sections and unparalleled floods in other sections, our membership contributed to the cause of Missions approximately $2,500,000 last year. Of this amount, about $800,000 was free-will offerings for the Maintenance Fund. Because of this liberality, our General Board of Missions has been able to pay all of its bank obligations, which, at one time, amounted to the stupendous sum of $1,600,000. The debt that bade fair to cripple our enterprises is now a matter of history, but better by far than this, notwithstanding r volutionary outbreaks in China, God has shielded our workers from harm, and they have been able to return to the fields which they were forced to leave by governmental mandate. Despite the excitement attending these Nationalistic movements, our church continues to grow in numbers and in influence abroad. Surely God has been gracious to us.

2. There are, however, some factors that give to us great concern. We regret to say that our people are not fully prepared to meet the present world emergency. The evils of the nations can be overcome only by that church which possesses an international mind and heart. It gives us pleasure, therefore, to note the large number of study classes that have been organized, and we rejoice at the unparalleled circulation of "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions." We urge the immediate formation of new study groups, using for their text Dr. Perry's excellent book, "New Tasks for New Times." In bringing about this better habit of mind, the Missionary Voice is a publication whose larger circulation will be of immense value to our church. We, therefore, sincerely hope that its circulation may soon reach the hundred thousand mark which has been set as a goal by its editor. The Good Samaritan first looked, before compassion was aroused, and, as a result, his ministry began. Our people must be made to see world conditions before they will have the heart to help.

3. A number of speakers at this Council have told us of the growing restiveness of our foreign members because of the control of their church by ours and of their hope for a speedy autonomy. This condition is natural and is but another indication that our preaching has not been in vain. It is well for us to remember that American Methodism was scarcely well organized before it began an agitation for independence of the mother church. But fifteen years elapsed between our church's founding and its independence. The fullest opportunity should be given to our brethren in foreign lands to express their own religious lives in institutions for whose management they are primarily responsible. Whilst recognizing that self-determination is a right which we would not dispute, yet because of our affectionate regard for our brethren we express the hope that some form of corporate relationship with the Mother Church may be evolved, which, whilst it will not fetter their self-expression, will still preserve a relationship that has been to the Mother Church a source of joy and satifaction. Whatever the result of this issue may be, our prayers and love will still follow our children, and we will wish for them success in all that they undertake for the Master.

4. The insignificant gain in our membership last year should send us to our knees in prayer for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. We commend most heartily the "International Revival Movement," and pledge ourselves to use our utmost endeavors to raise the Maintenance Fund to a million dollars, in order that $50,000 may be available to finance this movement in our own country and that $100,000 may be spent abroad; but money alone will not bring the revival we need. We, therefore, call on our ministers to project in their church evangelistic services to help freely their brethren and to call their churches to special prayer that God may again come to us in Pentecostal power.

5. Whilst we find much in the situation both at home and abroad to challenge our efforts, yet we do not believe that the times warrant a pessimistic spirit. Through Christ we can do all things. Let us then go joyfully and confidently to our tasks, knowing that our God is with us and victory will attend our efforts.

YOUR HEAVENLY FATHER KNOWS.

Your heavenly Father knows how to answer a prayer without doing violence to nature or any of nature's laws. An earthly father knows how to go and get what his child needs. He does not violate any laws of nature in doing it. When a child cries for bread a mother knows how to go to the cupboard and get the bread. If there is no bread there, she knows how to mix up the flour and the milk and the other ingredients, and how to build the fire and how to put the dough in the oven and bake it. Then she knows how to go to the ice box and get the butter, and how to go to the cupboard and get jam to spread the butter and jam on the bread and give it to a hungry child. She has not violated any law of nature in doing it. She has utilized the laws of nature in the accomplishment of the result desired. If an earthly parent knows how to give good gifts to her children without violating any law of nature, you may be sure that our heavenly Father knows how to answer the prayers of his children without violating any law of nature. Every act of free will is a miracle as far as the realms of physics and chemistry are concerned. You may be sure that our Father is not dead and is not paralyzed. He knows how. This answers for me the first objection to prayer.

God Knows What.

Your heavenly Father knows what. Children ask for many things that are not good for them. Parents know when to say "no." They also know when to give something else that is better. Mr. Moody told about taking his little girl into the city to buy a doll. As soon as they got off the train she began asking about the doll. As they walked along the street they passed a little store, and the child saw a cheap little China doll in a window. She cried, "Oh, Papa, get me that." He told her no, they were going to find a nicer doll, but the little girl cried and pleaded and begged, and finally Mr. Moody gave in and bought the cheap, ugly China doll. After a while they came to a beautiful store with a thousand lovely dolls.

Protection Against Old Age

In the window there was one with real hair, beautiful face, pretty clothes, and eyes that would go to sleep. The little girl dropped the China doll and went wild over the beautiful doll in the window." "No," said Mr. Moody. "That's the doll I was going to get you, but you insisted on having the other doll, so you must just pick up your little China doll and come along. After this whenever your daddy tells you 'no,' you will believe that he knows best."

Sometimes we give to our children and give them what we know is not the very best, in order to teach them a lesson. My baby boy crawled around to the bathroom and watched me as I shaved. He cried for the lather brush. I would not let him have it. He continued to cry. Each morning he would come and cry for the lather brush. He could not understand it was not good for a baby. In order to teach him a lesson I finally gave it to him. He stuck it in his mouth and smeared it over his face and got the soap in his eyes, and then he cried. He never wanted the lather brush after that.

Your heavenly Father knows what to give his children. You need not fear to come to him with all your needs and all your desires, for he knows what. He will never give us anything that is not for our good. This solves for me the second difficulty.

God Knows the Right Moment.

Your heavenly Father knows when and when not. Jesus illustrates this idea with several parables: that of the unjust judge who cared neither for God nor man, but who granted the poor widow's request, lest by her continued coming she irritate him. Our God is no crusty, conceited judge, bothered by a persistent and pestiferous widow. He is our Father, and he knows when. If he delays in answering our prayer, there is a reason.

Jesus illustrates the same idea by the story of the man who had gone to bed. A neighbor came, waked him up, and asked for the loan of some bread, saying that a friend had come to see him, and he had no bread to set before him. The man in bed answered that it was impossible to get up and accommodate him. He had made a pallet in front of the door, had put the baby against the door, and could not open the door without waking up the baby. Perhaps the baby had the colic; they had had a hard time getting it to sleep. He does not want to be bothered any further. But the man outside continues to call and to knock, and finally the man inside gets up and gives him the bread. Our father is not like this man who was disturbed by a neighbor. Our Father knows our needs. He knows how to answer them. He knows when to grant our requests. If he delays, there is a reason.

I do not forget that there are many unanswered prayers in the Bible. That is to say, the answer was not what was wanted or expected. The answer, however, was what was for the best. Paul prayed that the thorn might be removed from his side. He repeated the prayer, but it was never answered by the removal of the thorn. God gave him something better. He gave him grace to bear the pain. Jesus prayed that the cup might pass away. But it did not pass. What if it had passed? Are you not glad that it did not pass away? Monica prayed that her boy might not go to Rome lest he should fall under the influences of that wicked city and be lost. But he went to Rome, fell under the influence of the preaching of a great man and was saved.

Our Father knows when and when not and what and what not. Let me refer again to the case of my deacon. It was his longing heart's desire that his wife and children might be a blessing to the world, and help in the work of the great church that he devotedly loved. As I stood by the open casket, I put my hand upon the shoulder of his little boy and said, "Now, son, you must play the man." I have seen that family grow in grace, in Christian experience, and in usefulness. Who shall say that our Father has not done all things well? My Father knows when and when not. This solves for me the third difficulty in connection with prayer.

Our Father knows. When finally we enter the heavenly heaven we shall find that all our prayers have been answered in our Father's own best way. "When ye pray, say Our Father." Your heavenly Father knows.—J. E. Dillard, D.D., in the Watchman-Examiner.

MR. JOHN TURNISPEED, the subject of this memoir, was born July 18, 1878, in Carroll County, Miss. He died in Memphis, Tenn., at the Baptist Hospital on Oct. 10, 1926. He was buried the following day in Spring Hill cemetery in Grenada County. Funeral services were held in the parental home in Holcombe. He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Turnispeed, of Holcombe, Miss.; two brothers, Mr. Preston Turnispeed of Memphis and Mr. Philip Turnispeed of Itta Bena, Miss.; Mrs. R. A. Minter and Miss Olivia Turnispeed, also of Holcombe. Mr. Turnispeed was the eldest of seven brothers, four of whom had preceded him to the grave. Our deceased brother joined the church at Spring Hill at the age of fifteen. At the time of his death his membership was in Glendora Methodist church, Glendora, Miss. He took a temperance pledge when just a lad. It was never broken. Mr. J. S. Equen, his employer at the time of his death, held him in highest esteem. He remarked that he was the best man that he ever knew. He was a most considerate son. His aged father and mother are sorely bereaved. In riches of grace, may they await the happy reunion.

C. L. ROGERS, Pastor.

On October 30, 1927, we laid to rest in the Frantam Chapel cemetery, near Eros, La., all that was mortal of MRS. EPSEY BURKETT, widow of Rev. P. Burkett, for many years an honored supply of the Louisiana Conference. Gentle hands heaped up the mound and laid the flowers beside the spot where eight years before the body of the beloved husband had been buried; then kindred and friends moved silently away to leave them alone beneath the shade of the tree amidst scenes familiar to them in the years past and gone. She was born in Pike County, Alabama, Dec. 19, 1846; moved with her parents to Butler County when a small girl; was converted and joined the church in early life; was married to Rev. Philip Burkett Nov. 26, 1865. With her husband she moved to Bienville Parish, La., in 1878. She was the mother of seven children; only two live to mourn her death—Mrs. W. L. Burkett, of Eros, La., at whose house she died, and Robert Burkett of Texas. To them belong the heritage of her long and useful life. The funeral services were held in Frantam church by Rev. D. Fordham and the writer.

West Monroe, La.

On Dec. 3, 1927, at 7 o'clock, the soul of little ELAINE WARDELL wafted itself back to God who gave it. Little Elaine was a beautiful child, with a lovely disposition, and when visiting in the good home of her parents, her winsome ways won our hearts, and we learned to love her so much. Little did we think as we pressed the good-bye kiss on her little brow and looked into those beautiful blue eyes that it would be our last meeting here; and if we did not know we could meet her again, it would be harder to bear. On hearing the sad news, we asked God for understanding that we might know why he had dealt as he had, knowing him to be a loving, compassionate Father, and our thoughts were turned to John, fourteenth chapter, verses 2-3. We knew then that he was preparing that promised mansion for that father, mother, and so he just stooped and plucked the beautiful little bud to bloom in heaven, beautifying the future home for them. What a beautiful home that will be to those dear parents, and how much easier for them to reach heaven now! As little Elaine stands in the door beckoning them to come, let's all not grieve as those that have no hope, but be going to her as she calls. May we realize that each day finds us nearer that home, and ever be ready.

Her uncle and aunt,
REV. AND MRS. B. H. WILLIAMS.
Taylorsville, Miss.

In the early morn ere the stars had gone down there came a knock at the door of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Peterson; an angel entered and carried to the heavenly home their darling little daughter, VENELDA. She was born March 7, 1924, and died June 22, 1927. Three short years she lived, though God took her for his own, yet fresh from the dew of life's morn, she was too tempting a bud for the Reaper to pass, for he had need of her and transplanted this flower to a more beautiful garden. To mourn her loss she leaves father, mother, one sister, and two brothers, and many near kindred and friends; but we must not weep, for Christ has said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God;" and I fancy I hear her singing, "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," with the other angels, as she used to sing to us in her sweet baby voice.

"But we give you back to him, darling;
You were only loaned us a while,
And our lonely hearts will miss you,
Down to life's last long mile,
And I think when we, too, reach the portals,
And clasp you again to our breast,
We will understand why you left us,
And we'll say, 'Our Father knew best.'"

Grandfather,
REV. LOUIS FAYARD.

Rarely does the Heavenly Father give to earth so choice a spirit as MARGARET FAYARD, who, on Sept. 27, 1927, slipped away from earth to her heavenly home. Thoughtful of friends, schoolmates, and loved ones, to whom she was so devoted, her dying declaration, "I love everybody," was indeed in keeping with the two great commandments of love and service. Margaret was born Sept. 7, 1908, at Woolmarket, Miss. She joined Coalville Methodist Church in her girlhood, and was a faithful and devoted member to her church, Sunday school and League. She was sick but a short time. Her parents and friends stood by her day and night and ministered to her every need. The physicians labored with skill, her schoolmates and teachers offered up special prayers, and anxiously waited for her recovery, but the Heavenly Father had need of another flower to bloom in his garden.

"O! not in cruelty, not in wrath,
The Reaper came that day,
'Twas an angel visited the green earth,
And took the flower away."

She was a lover of music and singing, and shortly before death she sang several hymns, her favorite being, "The Old Rugged Cross." She was loved by all who knew her, as was attested by the large attendance at her funeral, by the many expressions of her friends and schoolmates, and by the beautiful floral offering that silently spoke of her life. Weep not, dear mother, father, sisters, brothers and loved ones, for she is not dead but simply sleeps; and,

"How sweet it will be, in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and with harps in our hands,
To meet one another again."

REV. LOUIS FAYARD.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were offered and adopted upon the passing away of H. O. Thrash, which occurred November 24, 1927, at DuBois Mill, Lake, Miss., a faithful and lovable member of the M. E. Church, South:

Whereas, It has pleased God to call unto Himself our beloved brother, H. O. Thrash, and in his departure our church and Sunday school and Missionary Society, of which he was a faithful member, have suffered an irreparable loss;

Resolved, That we tender our deep sympathy to the bereaved family and commit them to the loving care of our Heavenly Father.

That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our church, its Sunday school and Missionary Society, and a copy of same be sent to the family, also a copy to the papers of Scott and Newton Counties, with a copy to the Christian Advocate.

MR. JOHN KNOX DUNN.

The subject of this sketch, John Knox Dunn, was born in Durham, N. C., on July 10, 1868, and died in McComb, Miss., on October 24, 1927. At a very early age he removed with his parents to Wall Hill, Miss., thence to Jackson, Tenn., where he spent the years of his young manhood. Afterward he lived in Water Valley, Miss. For a number of years he was a faithful employee of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and later he moved to McComb City, where he spent twenty-seven years of his life.

On October 15, 1895, Brother Dunn was happily married to Miss Lexie Lewis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steven A. Lewis, who then resided in New Orleans, La.

About two years after his marriage he was soundly converted and united with the Methodist church in Jackson, Tenn., where he and Sister Dunn were living at that time. He ever referred to the fact that it was through the godly example and influence of his consecrated companion that he was led to know the Savior and to ZONE MEETING, MAGEE, MISS.

The regular meeting of the northern zone of the Hattiesburg District was held at Magee, Friday afternoon, Dec. 9, with representatives present from Collins, Williamsburg, Mount Olive, and Magee.

Mrs. E. L. Walker, the newly elected chairman, called the meeting to order, and Mrs. J. L. Carter, of Mount Olive, led the devotional, reading John 10:1-10 as a basis for a helpful talk. She urged the women to strive for a larger personality and a more abundant life that shall be shown by service in the different avenues of the Master's work.

Those present answered to roll call by quotations on service.

The chairman brought a cordial welcome to all and an earnest message in which she set forth some aims for the coming year.

A solo, "My Task," was beautifully sung by Mrs. Bernaman.

Mrs. D. A. McIntosh of Collins, talked on the Jubilee, giving a helpful discussion on the origin and purpose of the Jubilee year.

Reports from members of the different auxiliaries were encouraging, and showed that every department of the work is being carried on by all.

Special mention must be made of the fine work being done by Williamsburg, which is a comparatively new auxiliary.

A very inspiring paper, "Render Him the Fruits of Their Season," was read by Mrs. W. M. Williams, of Magee.

A most happy suggestion which she made to the ladies is that the Hattiesburg District send its District Secretary to the Council meeting in 1928. The suggestion was received with enthusiasm, and this zone meeting went on record as endorsing the movement to send the District Secretary to Nashville. It is very much hoped that the whole district will co-operate in this most worthy plan.

And why shouldn't the other districts adopt the plan and let us have all the District Secretaries of the Mississippi Conference at the Council meeting?

After the conclusion of the program, the Magee ladies served a delicious plate lunch.

We return home from these zone meetings with a feeling of closer kinship to our zone co-workers and a deeper desire to be of real service to the Master.

The next meeting will be held at Collins.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Conferences in the Western Division.

The Executive Committee and the Building Committee of the Eliza-Stephens-Remme Hall will hold a joint meeting early in January to make further plans for the erection of this building so dear to the hearts of the women and so essential to the progress of the missionary development at this time.

It is urged that each contributing Conference in this project send its quota to the treasurer, Mrs. R. F. Ellis, 104 College Street, Fayetteville, Ark., by the first of January that the work may proceed.

The Jubilee Assembly must be accommodated. The missionary women have undertaken this task. They will not fail.

BISHOP AINSWORTH CALLS FOR AN ADVANCE.

"Advance! Go forward! The time for a new day of march in Methodist missions has come." This is the message of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, just returned from China, in describing the need of the spread of the gospel among the teeming millions of the Orient. "No longer must we expend our thought and our energies in merely trying to hold our trenches. The day has arrived when we must go forward. All conditions among Oriental millions call for a new enlistment of American Christianity in their behalf."

Bishop Ainsworth is calling upon the church to participate in a world-wide program of missionary expansion, first, for the good of the church herself; second, for the salvation of the millions who have never had the opportunity to hear the name of Christ; third, for the protection of the world against the flood of devastating ideas that emanate from centers where the teachings of Christ are unknown.

"Especially ought the friends of Christ to be friends of China to-day," says Bishop Ainsworth, "for in a little while China is going to change the center of gravity of the whole world movement. If we set up among them the program of Jesus now, it will not only save them from destruction, but probably save us and the whole wide world as well. In the face of such a challenge Methodism must advance. The time for a new day march has come."

MOTHER!

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

As we write, the Christmas mail assures us we are in the midst of the Christmas spirit, and the time of "Good Will" remembrances.

* * *

We turn from Christmas Day to New Year's Day, and if we gave him more room and first room in our hearts, all the days of 1928 will be "new days," for he has the power to make "all things new."

* * *

Thursday, Dec. 29, has been set aside by the Conference staff and the Conference Board as Council day in our Conference, and we hope that the Conference and district leaders will be represented at Alexandria, the place of the meeting.

* * *

On Sunday, Dec. 18, we held a District Council meeting at Alexandria and had with us our new presiding elder, Dr. A. S. Lutz.

* * *

Mr. B. D. Talley, of Bogalusa, district secretary of Baton Rouge District, writes:

"I am sorry I could not be at Baton Rouge. I wanted to take up with you the matter of a Standard Training School for Bogalusa. I fear that I cannot be at Alexandria on Thursday, Dec. 29; if I can be there I will notify you a little bit later on.

"I am sure we are to be congratulated that the Conference retained you and Brother McLellan in office for another year.

"In thinking about the Standard Training School for Bogalusa, plan it so that one of the courses can be for the one-room type Sunday school, and we can take in some of the little towns around us."

* * *

Our office force now consists of: Miss Nannie L. White, office secretary; A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary; C. D. Atkinson, Conference Sunday School Superintendent. It is a pleasure to have our Sunday schoo workers call at any time.

* * *

The first Training School of 1927 was held at Opelousas, March 20, through 25th. The pastor, Rev. D. B Boddie, writes that he is anxious for another one, and he will attend the Council meeting next week.

* * *

We note with interest that the January issue of the Workers' Council is full of good suggestions as to the place of "Evangelism" in our Sunday school work. We will be glad to send to any of the pastors or superintendents our literature on this subject upon request.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

As we grow older, the burdens become heavier; the more work we do, the more we see to be done; as we near the end of the road, the more severely are we tested. The tests are to make us sure of the foundation upon which we are standing. The nearer we draw to Jesus Christ and the more we love and suffer with him, the more bitter and sharp are these tests. While we have a few days of quiet and rest, may we come face to face with him, may the Holy Spirit open our eyes that we may behold him in the beauty of his holiness and in that light may we see ourselves in all our weakness and imperfection. Are we willing to look upon one of the characteristics of Jesus and thus take our measure in respect to the rare and beautiful virtue of humility? Here is the test: "It is never to be fretted, or vexed, or irritated, or sore, or disappointed. It is to expect nothing, to wonder at nothing that is done to me, to feel nothing that is done against me. It is to be at rest when nobody praises me, or when I am blamed or despised." "Oh, but that is impossible," most people would say. Not impossible for God. He lives that kind of life. And when we have let him put us so really low down as to be out of the way, he will live that kind of life, his own life, in us moment by moment triumphantly. We must be not only low down on the ground, but actually buried, to let him bring it to pass. Not until through surrender and faith we have let Christ accomplish the death of the self, can he do this, but then he does it instantly. Humility is nothing less than Christ. There is no such thing as humility while there is any active trace of self left. We must be dead to the world if we live in Christ. "Deep humility we find the mark of every master mind."

Any pastor who desires to see the Christ spirit living in his people will use every means possible to bring this about. One way is to teach missions. The pastors are required by the church to see that this teaching is done. As colaborers we are required to send such literature as is needed for this purpose to some reliable person in the congregation that all the people may be taught the things of Christ. How can the people know unless they are given the information? How can the information be given unless we have the name of the person to whom this literature should be sent? There are three persons who could send these names, the pastor, the presiding elder, the superintendent of the school. Our list of the chairmen of the missionary committees is very incomplete. Help, please help us make this list of chairmen complete.

As soon as the holidays are passed we want to send to each superintendent in the Conference a pocket memorandum. This little book will give many items a superintendent would like to have at hand. The superintendents who desire this book free of cost may drop me a card and the book will be sent by return mail.

Christmas and New Year greetings to all who labor in behalf of the childhood and youth of our land.

MY EXPERIENCE IN REVIVAL WORK.

Dear Brother Carley: I have served as Conference pastor and Conference evangelist. I was recommended by the North Mississippi Conference for general evangelist, but mother's illness hindered my attending at the time. I have since done loyal revival work, not as an "independent"—there are no such preachers in the Methodist church—but as an ordained preacher "in good standing" on invitation of our pastors. I have assisted in numerous Mississippi towns, and in Louisiana, and in many towns in Oklahoma, Texas, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas, etc.

Some meetings resulted in seventy-five and one hundred additions. In great tent and camp meetings doubtless hundreds were saved. In all my revivals including thirty-six in Corinth District, thousands have been converted. District evangelism is the best way evangelists can be used by the church. Workers go from one meeting to another until the whole district is filled with divine power. We think Corinth District leads the church in some respects. We hold the old-time revivals, and do constructive work. Many family altars are erected. Many become tithers and church workers. We preach the Bible as written; use no clap-trap methods, no hobbies, believe in countless blessings. The support of pastors is often increased voluntarily. I have known it doubled at some places after revivals. An intelligent Bible revival of pure religion is what every church needs. I have had many powerful meetings in good towns, but my greatest revivals seem to be in the smaller stations, partly mission city churches, circuit towns, etc. The Lord makes them "blossom as the rose." My labors give satisfaction, as the same pastors have my help again and again. Am fond of pastors, and the results of my work please them.

My younger preacher brother, Rev. J. H. Bass, was a faithful pastor of the North Mississippi Conference. He fell on sleep in the yard of his parsonage home at Mt. Pleasant, Miss., Oct. 21, 1927. We had been together in many great meetings. I shall keep him with me in heart, and continue doing his work and mine as near as possible, till I fall in the battle of faith, and go home to meet him at Jesus' feet, to part no more forever.

I love to save souls so much that I would be willing to pay for the pleasure of doing the work. The good part is my meetings never close, but continue developing the church after I have gone. Winter is a fruitful time for revivals.

No charge for service.

Yours to serve. Rev. 3:20.

W. D. BASS.

P. S.—My saying, "No charge for service," puts the matter of compensation on absolute free-will basis. My spirit burns to save souls, in which work I have great success.

ZONE MEETING AT WISNER, LA.

Zone Three met on Wednesday, Dec. 7, at Wisner. The new leader, Mrs. J. H. Preston, of Mangham, presided. The opening song was "More Love to Thee, O Christ." Mrs. Preston conducted the devotional, reading the 13th chapter of Corinthians, and making an impressive talk on "Love, the Greatest Thing in the World."

Mrs. Prickett, of Winnsboro, the efficient secretary, called the roll and good reports were given by representatives from Mangham, Winnsboro, Gilbert, Beouff Prairie, Buckner, Sicily Island and Wisner. The absence of Little Creek was noted with surprise and regret, for it is the very first zone meeting that Little Creek has not been well represented.

Mr. Sheffield and Mrs. Knott gave us a musical number, violin and piano, for which we gave a rising vote of appreciation.

Our new district secretary, Mrs. Pollard, from Monroe, was with us, and talked on the Council and our work in general, and although sorry to lose Mrs. Worthington, we feel sure that we have a most capable and enthusiastic secretary, and together, she and our new zone leader are going to see to it that we know more and more about our work.

Mrs. Meekam, of Wisner, sang sweetly, "I Will Go."

Mrs. Graham, president of the Wisner Auxiliary, gave "Some Women's Reasons Why we Do Not Attend Zone Meetings." Others gave whys of not attending Auxiliary meetings.

Mrs. Rickey talked on the Jubilee Year and its object.

We were dismissed with prayer by Rev. A. D. George, after which we enjoyed a pleasant social hour, during which Mrs. Kadel, Mrs. Pennybaker and other Wisner ladies served sandwiches and coffee.

Zone Three will meet next at Gilbert. REPORTER.

Because of the new rating recently given by the department of education of the State of Texas to Wesleyan Institute in San Antonio, our Methodist school for Mexican boys, graduates of this school can enter any college or university in the State without examination.

The attendance in the new Methodist church at Pizen, Czechoslovakia, is very fine. Practically all seats are occupied at every service, and on Sunday morning and evening people often stand throughout the entire services.

WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION TO CARRY ON EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

Frantic efforts of the French wine interests to finance a political drive in the United States to modify the Volstead act to permit the manufacture, sale, and particularly the importation of wine, will be met by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union by an educational campaign to show the actual effects of wine on the French people.

Wine does not induce temperance in France, but has given France the questionable distinction of leading the world in alcoholism. Half the French railroad accidents are caused by the alcohol poisoning of engineers or others employed in railroading. Since the war alcoholism has increased alarmingly in France, the French Academy of Medicine recognizing officially that wine drinkers graduate to drinks with a higher alcohol percentage. No desire for these stronger drinks would exist if it is true that wine drives out a taste for spirits.

The happy smiling "LaBelle France" of the idealists has a dark shadow in the misery caused by millions of wine drunkards, whose wives live in squalor and filth and whose children live half fed, half clad and half educated.—W. C. T. U. Bulletin.

When the Methodists first went into Mir, Poland, the Greek Orthodox priest openly preached against them, declaring that all those who attended the Methodist services would be cursed with their descendants unto the fourth generation. He openly summoned the people to go to the meeting place and smash the windows with sticks and stones, but the policemaster sent a policeman as guardian, and the services went on quietly.

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the valuable properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real healing power as there is in this home-made cough syrup, easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A LETTER FROM MISS LOUISE PRESTON.

Dear Mississippi Conference Leaguers: It does seem as if I've forgotten "my first love," doesn't it? But don't you dear people ever believe that I will, for I won't; your big place in my heart is as warm with love as it ever was.

I have been quite busy this summer and fall. Now, that may sound funny, coming from some one who hasn't anything to do but stay in bed—but it's the truth—I have so much to do that time simply flies. My Life Service work is quite heavy, and I am as enthusiastic over it as ever. The Volunteers who were here for the State banquet came out to see me, and I enjoyed meeting those to whom I had been writing. The Volunteer Band of the church here came out one Sunday afternoon, and brought their lunch, which they ate, picnic fashion, in my room—in order that they might go from here on to the church. I did enjoy the little program and the fellowship with them so very much.

The Hi Leaguers came to me for material and suggestions for their Thanksgiving program, which I was delighted to be able to give them. Then last week I planned their Consecration Service, and the leaders came out for "conferences," so that I simply felt as if I were at home again, doing active League work. These young people are lovely, and most of them are very much interested in the work, which makes it a joy to work with them.

Oh, yes! And I went to an afternoon tea, two doors away, at which I was one of the honorees. I said "went," I meant, "was carried"—for papa and a neighbor simply picked my recliner, me and all, up and I traveled palanquin style. For three hours I met folks, and talked, and had a great time, which didn't tire me in the least—but, I'm still at 77 pounds!

It's very cold here, but the sun is shining and the day is lovely. The heating problem out here is quite a big one, since the houses aren't built for cold weather, and the fireplaces aren't either. If wood were not so costly, one could afford to use enough to keep warm with a fireplace—but it's $11 per cord, a cord being about one-fourth of what we'd get back home, or less, and being so dry, it burns like kindling. We and several neighbors have had to seal the fireplaces and put up little stoves, with which we manage very well. So I guess I won't freeze to death anyway.

Hurrah for the Louisiana Conference! I'm so glad that a "Luzianne" lady is helping to keep that Luzianne Coffee advertisement off the League page. What a time I used to have with it—and once I actually made it move onto the Woman's Missionary page (they always have so much news!) Now, if my Mississippi Leaguers will rally to Frances' support, and the North Mississippi Leaguers will come on in, too, we'll be able to keep it off and make that truly our page. I want to give a cheer, too, for the Mississippi State Teachers' College Leaguers. That's fine!

Out here Mr. Cheek edits a bulletin, "The Chaparral," which I help to wrap and mail, so I feel as if I'm in the "editorial" business anyway. The Pacific Advocate serves so many States and Conferences that we don't seem to feel as chummy with it as the dear old New Orleans Advocate gives us the privilege of feeling.

Two other exciting things have happened—I received my Standard Training Course diploma, and am starting in to work for the blue seal. Brother Foreman, if you read this—they gave me credit for that awful examination I took on "The Pupil," ten years or more ago, at Silver City, with you as teacher. Honest, I did better on the others, I made A-plus on them, and I'm not boasting, either, so don't tell what mark I made on the first one, please. The second exciting thing: I actually saw a colored person! My brother-in-law called to me to "Look, quick!" and there was a Negro boy going past. My, he looked natural, only he was almost too well-dressed to look like a Mississippi Negro (except on Sundays!). I had not seen one before, nor have I seen one since, and I miss the good colored folks, who were always so willing to wait on "Miss Louise."

Before I give you a little message, I want to thank those who have written me such kind, sweet letters. I appreciated every one of them, and want to thank, especially, Mrs. Dilsworth and a lady in Hattiesburg, who wrote me from Brookhaven—I can't recall the name, unless it were "Mrs. Gilmore." I wish all of you would write me.

I was casting about in my mind for a message to give you, and this sweet prayer of a young Christian girl came to my mind: "Lord, fill me to overflowing. I cannot hold much. But I can overflow a great deal." I guess that Christianity (I know it), like happiness, "was born a twin," and doesn't do us much good unless we share it with others, the more, the happier. So let's let God's love have an outlet in us, and overflow through us in loving, practical service to others.

Did I give you the "keep sweet" message last New Year's? Anyway, it is worth repeating, and will make the coming year worth much to us and to those with whom we are associated, if we will only keep it in mind, and strive to live it:

"Throughout the year, why not keep sweet; no frown ever made a heart glad; no complaint ever made a dark day bright; no bitter word ever lightened a burden or made a rough road smooth; no grumbling ever introduced sunshine into a home. What the world needs is the resolute step, the look of cheer, the smiling countenance, and the kidly word—keep sweet!"

And to make this possible

"Begin the year with God!
No friend like him!
And should the unknown year
The valley dim,
Open before thy gaze,
With him in sight,
Surely the darksome way,
Shall end in light!"

Wishing each one of you a very, very, merry, merry Christmas and a happy, useful New Year,

LOUISE PRESTON.

P. S. The Conference twins are fine and dandy!

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

To the Leaguers of the Mississipp Conference.

As the Christmas time draws near, our minds and hearts naturally turn to those, our friends and loved ones, whom we love; to many of us that means Epworth Leaguers; especially Epworth Leaguers of the Mississippi Conference. I have just been thinking what a fine thing it would be if one could meet each of you face to face, on Christmas or New Year's morning, and wish you a Happy Christmas or New Year. Since that is entirely impossible, I am asking Miss Frances for enough space in her column to allow me to extend to you my Christmas greetings and a wish for a happy New Year.

The year just coming to a close has been a good one for us in many respects; to some Epworth Leaguers it has been the best year of their lives, because during the year they have made a complete consecration of their lives to the Master, and therefore it has been a happy time for them.

As we look back over the year 1927, we are made to feel both sad and happy almost at the same time; sad because we can see so many neglected opportunities for service; so many little deeds of kindness that we failed to do, a chance here and there to let our lights shine, but we kept them under the bushel. But here and there along the way you can see the places where you planted a flower; sowed some seeds of kindness; gave a smile instead of a frown; held a candle to some wavering foot to help them over the rough places; and now you see the flower in full bloom and the seeds of kindness have multiplied until there is a great harvest because of the little seed you planted. And when I see the harvest, how I thank my Father for Epworth Leaguers who are doing their bit to make the world a better place in which to live!

We are thinking of giving, too, at this time, and no doubt you have made long lists of people for whom you wish to prepare little gifts, and you are sorry you cannot give to all you would like to; but there is One whom I trust you have not failed to include among those to whom you would give—that One who nineteen hundred and twenty-seven years ago "so loved the world" that he gave to us the greatest Christ-become a member of the church.

He served faithfully and acceptably in various official capacities and was usually an usher during the church services. Many will recall the pleasant word of greeting and warm handshake with which he welcomed them into the "House of the Lord." At the time of his death he was a member of the Board of Stewards of Centenary Methodist Church of McComb.

The brief space allowed for this article will not suffice for an adequate appreciation of this good man's life as I knew him. To this writer he stood forth a prince among men.

Tall, erect, handsome, he was sure to attract attention in any circle in which he moved. Amiable in disposition, courteous and affable in manner, he could but be admired by those who knew him. Charitable and patient with the faults and foibles of others, he was scarcely ever heard to speak unkindly of any man. He believed that men needed words of encouragement and praise father than criticism and censure. He was an optimist and strove ever to keep his face toward the sunrise of the better day which he was always confident was just ahead.

Brother Dunn was successful in business, but his honesty and business integrity stand out unquestioned. He was trusted by his associates and dearly beloved by his employees. In the midst of worldly success and prosperity he never forgot his duty to God, his church or to his fellow-man—he gave cheerfully and gladly of his means to the calls of the church, the poor and unfortunate around him. His home life was beautiful. Although unblessed by children, yet the affection which existed between Brother Dunn and his faithful companion was so tender and constant as to impress all with its genuineness and sincereity. Sister Dunn remains behind to mourn the going away of one of the truest of husbands, yet with the comfort that she neglected nothing to make his life happy.

His last moments were touchingly characteristic of his unselfish life. In the absence of Sister Dunn, who at his earnest request had gone to visit the beloved pastor who was ill, he went to the home of a neighbor and asked permission to carry one of the children who was crippled to the hospital where she might receive expert treatment. It was while conversing with the family that he was suddenly stricken and without regaining consciousness he slipped away into the presence of Him who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me;" "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord." These words are written by a friend and former pastor. PAUL D. HARDIN.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, Rev. J. W. Booth, pastor, and Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder, have so faithfully and efficiently tended their respective assignments in the Master's work among us, and their untiring service has been an inspiration and great help to this board of stewards and the membership of this church; therefore,

Be it resolved, That they each be affectionately thanked and commended for their faithful service and devotion to this congregation; and wheresoever they be called to serve in the future, may the divine guidance of God continue to direct them.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY, FEB. 12.

The annual observance of Race Relations Sunday—the sixth since its inception in 1923—will take place this year on Feb. 12, when thousands of churches, Sunday schools, Y. M. C. A.'s, Young People's Societies, and other religious groups will focus their attention on the problems of race. Especial emphasis will be laid this year on penitence and prayer for the complete suppression of lynching and mob violence in America. In issuing this call the Federal Council's Commission on Race Relations points out the fact that in the last forty years more than four thousand persons have been put to death by mobs in this country, and that crimes of this character, though less numerous than formerly, are still of frequent occurrence.

A pamphlet containing topics and suggestions for the observance of Race Relations Sunday can be had for five cents a copy from the Commission on the Church and Race Relations, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City. Other pamphlets on the subject may be had without charge from the Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation, 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, Ga.

mas gift of all time; and there is only one gift acceptable to him, that is ourselves. And I am praying that this might be a joyous Christmas for you, because it shall be made a time when we will rededicate our lives to him.

The year is gone, and our records have been made, and we cannot go back and do those things we left undone, nor can we undo those things we wish we had not done; but we shall have a New Year before us, a new page upon which to write our records; and I am earnestly praying that with all of you, it will be a better year even than the best you have ever had; better because of more opportunities for service; more opportunities for doing good; and that the Master will give us grace, courage and strength to do more for him. And I am asking that you offer a little prayer for me. I am proud of the work you have done in the Epworth League during 1927; but we can do even better in 1928 if we will "present our bodies living sacrifices unto him."

Wishing again for you the happiest Christmas time you have ever known, I am, Your servant,

J. H. WEEMS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EVER READY UNION.

On Dec. 11, the regular monthly meeting of the Ever Ready Union was held in Minden, the hour of 3 having been set for the meeting. Despite the very inclement weather, about fifty were present.

The devotional program, led by Miss Aileen Hyslop, was as follows:

1. Songs.
2. Prayer, Rev. L. I. McCain.
3. Scripture reading, Miss Hyslop.
4. Vocal solo, Miss Clara Fowler.
5. Piano solo, Miss Sara Ratcliff.
6. Vocal duet, Miss Jennie Searles, of Minden, and Miss Timberton, of Springhill.
7. Song and League benediction.

The meeting then went into a business session, presided over by Mr. Paul Cassells, Union president. Reports were received from the three chapters represented on the commuion service, Minden being the only one to have partaken of same. The Epworth Era Night program was discussed; announcements about the pageant, "The Light," was made; the district secretary again called attention to the different points of the James B. Grambling loving cup award. The following chapters answered to roll call:

Bethel, 4; Minden, 25; Springhill, 21.

Springhill chapter deserves special commendation, since the Leaguers have the farthest to go, and fifteen of these were Hi Leaguers, in charge of their very efficient counsellor, Miss Eris Monzingo. Rev. H. E. Pfost, their former pastor, also accompanied them. Rev. Mr. Pfost is now pastor at Plain Dealing, which was selected as the next place of meeting, to be held Jan. 8, 1928.

Following the business meeting, the young people retired to the Junior room of the church, where delightful refreshments were served by a group of Minden boys and girls.

MARY SEARLES.
District Secretary.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

NO WOMAN CAN KEEP HOUSE EFFICIENTLY

Without Good Health

MRS. FRANK DINDORE
823 PIERCE AVENUE, LANCASTER, OHIO

Four Walls Can Make a House, but it takes a Woman to Make a Home

To be a successful homemaker, a woman must guard her health. When mother is not well, the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences, as these women did, the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lancaster, Ohio.—"For ten years after my marriage, I had poor health. I was on a visit to my sister in Utica, Michigan, and she had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Her husband got me a bottle and I took it and felt so much better that I got a second one. Now, whenever I feel run-down I take the Vegetable Compound and soon feel all right again. I have had three little girls in the last six years and do all my housework, sewing, washing, and ironing. My time is pretty well taken up, but I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs. Frank Dindore, 823 Pierve Avenue, Lancaster, Ohio.

Sturgis, Michigan.—"I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and have recommended it to others. I took it to give me strength before my baby was born. I would have to stop work and lie down sometimes all the afternoon. I felt as if I did not care whether anything was done or not. I got tired out so easily. One day I found a little book on my porch and that night I showed it to my husband and he went down town and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has helped me so much that I was soon able to do my work, and when my baby was born, my nurse, Mrs. Forbes, said it was the easiest birth she had ever attended. I will be more than pleased if I am helping someone else by giving my testimonial."—Mrs. Edward Persing, 208 Surprise Ave., Sturgis, Michigan.
